Hamilton, March 20—George Lynch Staunton, KC, one of the Kinrade family solicitors in an interview today, roasted the authorities for the way in which the inquest has been conducted. "What," he asked, "does it aid the administration of justice in holding such an inquest. Why did not the detectives go to the girl quickly and get the whole history of her life privately instead of hanging her to a lamp post and shouting questions at her for the whole world to hear, casting all kinds of insinuations, so that every half baked intellect in the country can form half-baked suspicions. A coroners jury cannot try any person," added Mr. Lynch Staunton, "and I say that the American sweat box system is one hundred times more just, humane and decent than this system of inquest. Why, Dreyfus, over whose trial, England and France almost came to war, was treated like a king, compared with Florence Kinrade."

Mr. Lynch Staunton intimated that he would make those who had cast this blot on the family name "sit up."

The consensus of opinion about the month's adjournment of the inquest is the authorities are completely in the air.

WOULD NOT BE LEGAL SAYS SOLICITOR

For Trust Commission to Reduce Request on Council as Had Been Proposed

City Solicitor Hall has advised the Finance Committee that it would not legally be safe for the City Trust Commission to reduce their demand for 1909 by $3,500 as had been proposed. As a result of this advice negotiations with the Commission in this connection will be dropped.

A letter from the solicitor on this question was read at the meeting of the committee yesterday and it was decided to drop the matter.

WOMAN FINED BECAUSE SHE LEFT HOUSE WHERE SCARLET FEVER PATIENT WAS

An interesting case was tried by Magistrate Dumble at the police court this morning. A resident of the north end appeared for his wife who was charged with leaving a house where there was scarlet fever, and mingling with the public before the time specified by the medical law, was up. A young child in the house was ill with scarlet fever and the next day after the house had been placarded the mother, accompanied by the patient had gone out on the street. She had been warned by a policeman but had gone out again. The woman's husband told the Magistrate that she had received permission from the attending physician, but when the doctor was called he said, that although he gave the woman permission to go out on the street with the understanding that she was not to mingle with other people, he did not say that she could take out the child.

The Magistrate said that it was a serious offence, which should not go unpunished and imposed a fine of five dollars to be paid within ten days.

C. W. PATTERSON GETS $1000 OF HIS COBALT MONEY BACK

Justice Clute decided to-day that Charles W. Patterson, of Toronto, was entitled to repayment of $1,000 he invested in Cobalt mines.

William Duncan, of Peterborough, sued as a codefendant and with Whittom was declared to have been guilty of no misrepresentation and the case as against him was dismissed.

The defendants, Patterson claimed, represented they owned Cobalt mining claims and sold him a quarter interest for $1,000.

He claimed to have discovered after that the claims were no good, nor did Whittom own the claims.

He sued for return of the $1,000 and for damages.

Mr. Duncan took the stand.

"Why did you not tell Mr. Patterson that the deal between you and Whittom had fallen through?" asked counsel for plaintiff.

The witness could not well say.

"What did you know about the mine anyway?"

"Well, I know Whittom lost it through some default and that he is suing for $60,000 those in Peterborough that got it," said the witness.

He admitted that he had given Whittom a cheque for $1,000 when he and Patterson agreed to buy part of the mine.

"This cheque was afterwards torn up. I stopped payment with the Dominion Bank by wire and then took the midnight train down to Toronto to get the money so no one else could get it," said Duncan.

It happened, however, that the cheque for $1,000 that Patterson gave, was cashed immediately.

Justice Clute decided that Patterson was entitled to recover $1,000 from Whittom, but he could not associate Duncan with any misrepresentation.

The last of the course of lectures recently held at the Normal school was given last evening by Inspector J. L. Hughes, of Toronto, on "The Old Training and the new." In spite of the snow storm a large crowd composed mainly of teachers and students, gathered in the Assembly Hall and listened to the interesting and instructive lecture. The audience received the speaker's witty illustrations with uproarious mirth and it is safe to infer that Inspector Hughes will be long remembered by those who heard him.

After the lecture Principal Walker entertained Mr. Hughes, the Normal school staff and a few others, and refreshments were served in the dining room of the school.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH WILL BE FORMALLY OPENED NEXT SUNDAY

Rev. J. P. Wilson of Lindsay Will Preach and Rev. Geo. McCulloch Will Perform the Dedication Ceremony

St. James' church, the new house of worship for the Methodists in the south end of the city, will be formally opened next Sunday, when the services will be of a very interesting nature. Rev. J. P. Wilson, a former pastor of George street church will preach at 11 a.m. and p.m. Rev. George McCulloch of Omemee, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference, will dedicate the church at the close of the morning service, and will preach at three o'clock in the afternoon. Collections in aid of the building fund will be taken up at the three services.

On Monday evening a public meeting will be held. Tea will be served in the basement from 6 to 8 o'clock, and afterwards addresses will be given by several of the city ministers, and there will be a good musical programme. Mr. Roger Manning, of Toronto, and Mr. Dowsey will assist in the latter. The admission will be 25 cents.

The new church is a handsome structure. It is 42 by 66 feet and presents a handsome exterior and interior view.

ADVISE COUNCIL

To Let the Tax Rate Remain at 19 1-2 Mills—Finance Committee Met.

The Finance Committee held a meeting yesterday afternoon and decided to recommend to the council to stick to the 19 1-2 mill rate of taxation for 1909.

As it has been found that the City Trust Commission cannot reduce their request by $3,500, the appropriations for the committees will have to be cut back to the original amounts if the rate is left at 19 1-2 mills.

Mayor Best and Ald. Gillespie were in favor of a 20 mill rate.

Ald. Bradburn moved and Ald Phelan seconded that this committee recommend that the bylaw fixing the rate at 19 1-2 mills as passed at the last meeting be amended as far as the appropriations were concerned, and that the rate remain the same.

Ald. Morrow presided at the meeting.

Going to Moose Jaw.

Mr. "Wat" Butcher, manager of the West End hockey team and the star pitcher of the ball team, left yesterday for Moosejaw, Sask. He has a farm of 160 acres near Moosejaw and will reside there in the future.

His many friends in Peterborough are sorry to see him depart and wish him every success in the West.

THE COMPLICATIONS IN THE "COME BACK TO ERIN" MATTER

The trouble in which the "Come Back to Erin" company became embodied has excited quite an interest in this city, and it was an unprecedented thing for a local audience to get their money back when the management of the company refused to allow the continuance of the play. The difficulty arose, as will be remembered, out of the management of the show refusing to allow the performance to go on because Mr. Turner had been instructed by Mr. Small to retain $100 out of the proceeds of the matinee and night performances to pay for a printing bill.

The action of the company in putting in a counter claim against Mr. Turner for damages for the seizure of scenery and loss of time, arises out of his keeping the scenery, which he has still at the opera house. He did this because the "Come Back to Erin" manager called off the play, and told those in the audience to get their money refunded.

The local management's share of the box office receipts was $60, and the scenery was taken over and held because this was not forthcoming on account of the audience getting its money back.

Chas. Mack, who played the leading part in the show, is held responsible for the printing bill of $100, (which had to be footed by Mr. Small personally. Mack has gone to the States, but if he comes back to Canada action to recover the $100 will be taken against him.

EVIDENCE AGAINST ALCOHOL

Workers in the interests of prohibition in Peterborough are constantly hearing the argument that it is unfair to the moderate drinker to deprive him of his privilege for the sake of those who indulge too freely. It is also frequently said that alcoholic liquor in some form is a great help, if not a necessity, to laboring men and others engaged in various industries demanding the exercise of certain mental faculties. These contentions are fully answered by the article of which a brief synopsis is here given.

Experimental Evidence

In McClure's Magazine for March appears an article under the above heading. For over twenty years leading physiologists and psychologists in Europe have been at work accumulating accurate experimental knowledge regarding the effects of alcohol on the human system. The article in question is prepared by Prof. H. A. Rosanoff, Director of the Chemical Laboratory of Clark University, and Dr. A. J. Rosanoff, one of the physicians of Kings Park State Hospital, Long Island, N.Y. It covers the whole ground of the experiments, and deals with the effects of alcohol on all the human faculties, beginning with purely muscular efforts and extending to the most complex mental phenomena. The article is one of the most valuable contributions to the temperance literature of the present day.

The bulk of the experiments to which reference is made, and from which conclusions are drawn, were performed in the laboratories of Dr. Emil Kraepelin, Professor of the Science of Mental Diseases at the University of Munich, in Germany. Professor Kraepelin, who has for years been recognized as the leading authority of the world on mental diseases, began a series of investigations about twenty-five years ago for the purpose of determining the effects of certain drugs on the mental faculties. He experimented with a number of different substances, but finding that the effects produced by alcohol were more striking and that it was more largely used than many of the others, he has for years devoted particular attention to this substance, and has reached the conclusion that alcohol is leading civilized humanity to degeneracy.

Moderate Drinking and Muscular Work

Experiments to determine the influence of small quantities of alcohol on the ability to do muscular work, and to sustain prolonged muscular effort have been many times repeated and under almost every variety of conditions. Results have been obtained showing the effects of alcohol when taken without food, and also when taken with food. In the former case, it has been found that when taken in small quantities on an empty stomach, it has a strengthening effect for a short time, at the end of which there is a more pronounced weakening effect.

When taken with food the effect in every case is to very materially lessen the capacity for doing muscular work, thus completely upsetting the widely advocated theory that moderate drinking with or shortly after meals helps a laborer to do his work.

Moderate Drinking and Writing

A series of experiments for the purpose of determining the effects of alcohol on the ability to perform activities requiring the exercise of simpler mental faculties have been performed. Such exercises as writing over and over the ten digits in order, or backward, or the writing of certain simple combinations of letters as "inem" were made use of. The results show that moderate drinking retards to a very considerable extent activities of this kind that are intermediate between purely muscular and psychical work. The notion that a drink "braces one up" and makes him do such work faster is without foundation.

Moderate Drinking and the Handicrafts

In this department of the investigation, the most extensive experiments have been carried on with typesetters. The work of the typesetter is a handicraft which, though physical to a certain extent, involves the mental faculties very largely, and has the advantage of being a work in which the results are easily measured. The experiments here are extensive and elaborate. Space will not permit going into details. The conclusion is given as follows:—"Moderate drinking reduces considerably an artisan's efficiency. Its effect is cumulative, and the losses caused by its increase as time goes on. The widespread notion that drinking helps an artisan in his daily work is false."

Moderate Drinking and Mental Activity

Here the matter of making definite experimental determinations becomes more difficult. However, experiments in testing the length of time necessary to add columns of figures under different conditions, and such experiments as taking the letters of a certain word and writing down as rapidly as possible all the words that could be formed from them, have proved that mental processes such as these, involving association of ideas, are greatly retarded by the use of alcohol, and that the effects are cumulative. Effects of alcohol on memorization have also been tested, and it has been found that power to commit to memory is very greatly impaired by the moderate use of alcohol.

Recapitulation

1 Alcohol impairs every human faculty.

2 The higher and more complex the faculty, the more pronounced is the effect of alcohol upon it.

3 The effects of alcohol are cumulative, that is, its continuous use impairs the faculties at a rapidly increasing rate.

4 Throughout the western world, at least one man in every four admitted to insane asylums was brought there by alcohol.

This is necessarily a very brief summary. The article as a whole is commended to those who desire more details.

LAW ENFORCEMENT

In Peterborough, it has often been said that it is possible to secure liquor during prohibited hours, in almost all bars. The same is said in almost every locality where liquor is sold. In other words the liquor interests do not hesitate to defy the law for the sake of making a few dollars. This open defiance of the law for many years was taken as a matter of course, and as something that could not be prevented.

With the growth of temperance sentiment has come a realization that the liquor men have no more right to break the laws of the country than any other citizens. It is for this reason that the liquor laws are now being enforced in Ontario as they never were before. This week in Ottawa, prosecutions were entered against several of the leading hotels for selling liquor during prohibited hours. Convictions are expected in most if not all of the cases.

So many convictions have now been secured where liquor has been sold in local option districts that the difficulty of enforcing the law that was evident a few years ago has now practically disappeared.

When local option carries in Peterborough, as it is expected that it will at the election next January, there should be but little difficulty in seeing that the law is enforced.

THE ST. CATHARINES FIGHT

The liquor men of St. Catharines, who managed, on a technicality, to upset the council and prevent the passing of a bylaw to reduce the number of licenses in the city from 19 to 12, may not succeed after all.

The newly elected St Catharines council at its first meeting promptly adopted an unanimous resolution moved by Ald H Wismer, and seconded by James T. Paterson, declaring that in view of the fact that the liquor license reduction bylaw was held up by the unseating of the council on a legal technicality, appeal be made to the Provincial Secretary to instruct the city license commissioners to reduce the liquor licenses from 19 to 12 in accordance with the view of the electors, expressed at the polls.

WHERE WE STAND

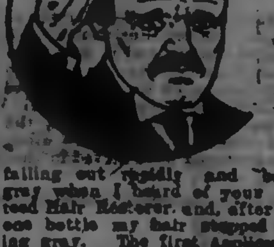
There are at present in Ontario 475 municipalities under license and [illegible] in which there are no licenses. Of the latter, 198, made up of 159 townships and 39 villages and towns have passed local option bylaws. The remaining 164, of which 6 are towns or villages have no licensed houses though they have passed no bylaws prohibiting them. Of these last, 8 are in Peterborough county, Belmont, Methuen, Chandos, Ennismore, Galway, Cavendish, Harvey and North Monaghan. There are local option bylaws in Otonabee, Smith, Asphodel, Dummer, Lakefield Norwood and Havelock. Only the city of Peterborough, and township of Burleigh are under license. They are the only black spots. How long are they going to remain a blot?

Note

The addresses that will be given at the meeting in the Crystal to-morrow afternoon at 4.15 will bear on the local option campaign. There will be music and the usual large attendance is expected.

STOP THAT SCRATCHING

Just as long as you have dandruff your head will itch. It's the little microbes that are gnawing down into the hair roots. It may take a long time for these persistent pests to get down to the vital part but when they do they will destroy life of the hair in a very short time.



"My hair was falling out rapidly and becoming gray when I heard of your guaranteed Hair Restorer and, after using one bottle my hair stopped turning gray. The first application removed the itching, my hair stopped falling out and I now have a new and it is soft, glossy and pliable." Carrie Williams 844 Clinton Ave., South Rochester, N.Y.

Parisian Sage, the delightful Hair Restorer is guaranteed by W. Madill, Druggist, Peterborough, to stop falling hair, to cure dandruff and all diseases of the scalp or money back. It is the most refreshing hair dressing in the world. Ladies use it extensively, because it makes the hair beautiful, soft and luxuriant. 50 cents a bottle at W. Madill's, or by mail from Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont.

SCRAPING THE STOMACH

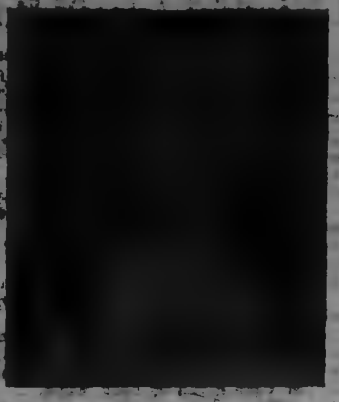
Guelph, Ont., Aug. 6, 1908.

I suffered for many months with dreadful Stomach Trouble, with vomiting and constant pain, and I could retain practically nothing.

My doctor stated that I must go to the hospital and undergo an operation of scraping the stomach and be fed by the bowels for weeks. All the medicine the doctor gave me I vomited at once. I was dreadfully alarmed, but I dreaded an operation and had refused.



I had heard of "Fruit-a-tives" and the great success they were having in all Stomach Troubles, and I decided to try them. To my surprise, the "Fruit-a-tives" not only remained on the stomach, but they also checked the vomiting. I immediately began to improve, and in three days the pain was easier and I was decidedly better. I continued to take "Fruit-a-tives" and they completely cured me.

Mrs. Austin Hainstock.

"Fruit-a-tives" are 50c a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, trial box 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

TO BUILD NEW STEEL BRIDGE

G. T. R. are Constructing a New Steel Structure to Replace the Wooden One Near Madoc

The bridge and construction cars of the G.T.R. arrived in town yesterday from Burnt River on the Haliburton branch, where they have been constructing a steel bridge. The party left last night for Madoc, where they will replace a wooden bridge by one of steel. The bridge is in the vicinity of Moir Lake, and is on the Madoc branch. The work will be in charge of J. W. Cairns, of Lindsay.

THE FIRE BRIGADE MADE QUICK RUN

The fire brigade was called out this morning to the residence of Mr. Aaron Comstock, Water street, to extinguish a blaze that had started in the woodshed at the rear of the house. The brigade made a quick run and had the fire out before any damage had been done to any of the buildings, which are close at hand. The brick wall of the house kept the fire from spreading to the residence, but the smoke and water caused some damage in the rear of the house. The wood-shed was destroyed, but a large amount of wood which it contained was saved. The loss is small.

COOPER-CARMACK TRIAL NEARS END

Nashville, Tenn., March 20.—"We are hopelessly tied up as to the Coopers, but we find John Sharp not guilty" was the report made this afternoon by the foreman of the jury which, since Tuesday, has been considering the case of Colonel D B Cooper, his son Robin and John Sharp, tried for the murder of former United States Senator Carmack. Mr Sharp was at once discharged. Judge Hart sent the jury back to their room for further deliberations as to the Coopers.

SLEEPLESS LITTLE BABIES ARE SICKLY BABIES

When babies are restless sleepless and cross it is the surest possible sign that they are not well. Well babies sleep soundly and wake up brightly. Sleeplessness is generally due to some ailment of the stomach or bowels or cutting teeth. A few doses of Baby's Own Tablets will put the little one right and give it sound natural sleep. Mrs. Jos. Gonell, St. Evariste, Que., says: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets a splendid medicine for constipation and stomach troubles. I give them to my little girl and they keep her lively and well." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Two Mills Using Same Quality of Wheat May Not Produce Same Quality of Flour

The quality of flour largely depends on the milling. Two mills might grind wheat of the same quality and the product of one far outclass the other. It is not only the high quality of the hard wheat used, but also the superior milling facilities, that places "PURITY" flour so far above all others. Our milling plant at St. Boniface, Manitoba, cost nearly $1,000,000, and is one of the most perfectly equipped mills in the world. The wheat itself is subjected to the most wonderful system of cleaning and scouring, passing through twenty distinct machines. Fifty-five steel rollers, the largest in Canada, reduce the wheat into flour. Then it is purified and dressed by "bolting" it through silk sifters of fine mesh. Not a "branny" particle or speck of dust is ever found in "Purity" Flour.

You may have to pay a little more for Purity, but baking results, quality and quantity, prove it is worth far more than the slight difference.

We have two other modernly equipped mills at Brandon, Man., and Goderich, Ont.

MANY WOULD SEE CEREMONY

Immense Number of Applications to See New-Bishop Consecrated

Special to thwe Review.

Toronto, March 20.—In connection with the consecration service to be held in St. James' Cathedral, March 25th, when Bishop-elect Sweeny will be elevated to the Bishopric of Toronto, an immense number of applications for the ceremony have been received by Mr. William Battin, registrar of the Synod. For some time letters have been coming in from all parts of the country. Wednesday over one hundred requests were received, which were placed on file accordingly, and yesterday an equally large number arrived, which were filed according to date received.

A meeting of the committee of which Rev. Canon Welch is chairman, will be held on Thursday afternoon, in the Synod office, to apportion tickets, as space in the Cathedral is somewhat limited for the many who desire to attend. Provision is being made in the edifice for about 1 300 seats, which is the full seating capacity of the Cathedral.

The capacity of St. Alban's Cathedral, where the enthronement takes place in the evening, is about five hundred. It will therefore be difficult to accommodate all who apply for tickets of admission. The registrar states that where tickets will not be sent, the reason will be understood namely, that the churches will be taxed to their utmost.

The bishops, clergy, lay representatives, and officers of the Synod, will, of course, take precedence in the allotment of seats, for both the consecration and enthronement.

CURE WAS QUICK AND COMPLETE

She Suffered for Two Years But Now Advises All Troubled as She Was to Give Dodd's Kidney Pills a Trial.

St. Robert, Richelieu County, Que. March 1[illegible]—Special—"I recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to all my friends" These are the words of Dame Joseph Parent of this place. And the good dame gives excellent reasons why she does so. "For two years," she says "I suffered from Heart Disease, Headache, Backache and a dragging sensation across the loins. Seven boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me. I hope all who are troubled as I was will give Dodd's Kidney Pills a trial."

Some people may ask how Dodd's Kidney Pills which are purely a Kidney remedy can cure Heart Disease. And the answer is simple. Diseased Kidneys fail to strain the impurities out of the blood. If these impurities are left in the blood they not only increase the work of the heart in propelling the blood through the body but act on the valves causing disease. Pure blood removes the cause of the disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills make pure blood by putting the Kidneys in condition to strain all the impurities out of it.

THREE FINE PRODUCTIONS

MISS ROSE MOORE FIRST MISS ADAMS SECOND MISS DAWSON THIRD

That is the Way They Stand To-day—Miss Perry Almost up to the Leaders—McMillan Away in the Lead Among the Men—One Vote Separating Mowry and Rundle, the Former Leading—Miss Finlay a Strong Second in the County—Who Will Lead the District Tuesday?—No Score on Monday.

The final count will be held at the Y.M.C.A. board room. Don't fail to have all your votes in the ballot box before 8 o'clock Monday night.

Candidates in the country (District No. 2) should mail in all subscriptions so that they reach the Review before 8 o'clock in the evening. Subscriptions received after mail leaves may be telephoned to the Review until quarter to eight, and will be counted. These subscriptions must be deposited in the post office and stamped before eight o'clock.

With but two more days to go the contestants in the Review contest are straining every nerve and using up all their [illegible] matter in an effort to outgeneral the other fellows and clean up all their "promises" before the striking of 8 o'clock Monday evening.

Vote early. And often. And vote in large numbers if you want to be among the winners.

You know that everyone is making a final effort to land among the winners, so see to it that the last day's effort is of the kind that counts for something.

It will be simply a question of who has the most votes. The judges are men of system and ability and will handle the problem in an accurate and businesslike manner, and in all likelihood the final result will be announced before 10 o'clock.

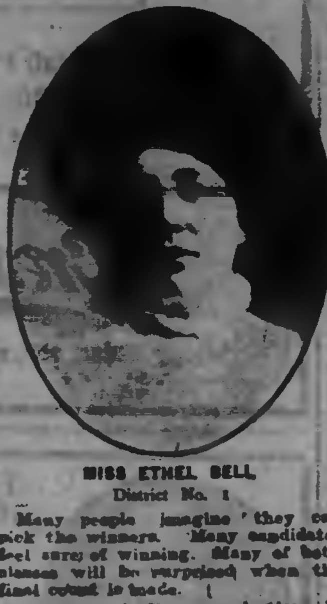
"How many votes is it going to take to win the trip to Europe?" is a question that has been asked by a good many people the past few days. "No one can tell" has been the contest manager's answer to all. And that is the simple truth. It will be impossible for anyone to more than guess the probable high vote with the system adopted for closing the big event. Every candidate is privileged to place all their collections for subscriptions in a sealed envelope, along with all the votes they have held in reserve, and place it in the ballot box to be opened by the judges and in this way keep even the official force of the Review in the dark regarding your real strength. This is absolutely fair to all. Be sure that you have enough. There is no telling what your opponent may have. How high will the vote go? That is the question that will be asked many, many times in the next two days. "Search me," says the contest man. "It ought to be pretty close to two hundred thousand, anyhow."

What do you think? Will it be two, three or four hundred thousand? It might be more, and it might be less. Well, we will all know before very long.

There may be hundreds of thousands of votes cast on the last day of the contest. And then, again, there may not. You can never tell.

How many votes do you think you will need? Figure it out and then get them. That's the way to win. Get all you can and bring them in the ballot box.

DON'T TELL ANYONE HOW MUCH YOU HAVE. Let the judges be the first to find out.



MISS ETHEL BELL
District No. 1

Many people imagine they can pick the winners. Many candidates feel sure of winning. Many of both classes will be surprised when the final count is made.

A contest is like an election. It is never over until the last minute, and no one can tell anything about who will win until the count is made by the judges and they have announced the winners.

And once more (at the risk of appearing tiresome) the contest manager wants to impress it on the minds of all concerned, that all the ballots must be in the ballot box at the Review office when the clock strikes 8. on Monday evening, March 22.

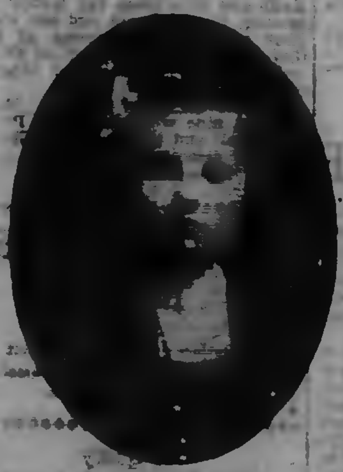
SHORT SUMMARY OF THE TRIP

The first grand prize to be awarded, the successful candidate in the great contest consists of first-class railroad travel with pullman sleeper and meals a la carte, from Peterborough to Boston, Mass, where a party conducted by Thomas Cook & Son will be joined and steamship for Glasgow will be boarded. After the voyage across the great Atlantic the first place to be visited will be the land of the thistle. In Glasgow the old cathedral and fine public buildings will be seen. The next trip will be by train to Edinburgh, known as the "Modern Athens," the picturesque old capital of Scotland. The chief points of interest to be visited include Calton Hill, Holyrood Palace, the castle, etc. A magnificent view of the city is obtained from Arthur's Seat, 823 feet, an eminence within the city bounds.

Then travel by Midland Railway via Carlisle to London, properly called the metropolis of the world. It is the greatest and richest city, not only of modern times, but of which history bears record.

Four days will be spent in London, and a carriage will be provided to visit the many points of interest, including the Houses of Parliament, Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral, National Gallery, the parks, Thames embankment, etc.

From London to Dieppe, thence to Paris, the handsomest and gayest metropolis of Europe, the capital of the world of pleasure, fashion and elegance. Four days will be spent in this city. Carriages will be furnished and the interesting places and objects in and around the city, including the Invalides and tomb of Napoleon I, Palace of the Louvre, Cathedral of Notre Dame, the boulevards, Place de la Concorde, etc. will be visited. Also an excursion by rail to the palace and gardens of Versailles.



MISS MURTIN COLIN
District No. 2

Leave Paris by rail for Havre, and then sail for Canada and Home.

THE LAST, "THE MAIN, CHANCE" FOR ALL CANDIDATES

EACH CANDIDATE sending or bringing $10 worth of NEW subscriptions to the Review Office before 8 o'clock, on March 22nd, the close of the Contest, will be given a special certificate for 4,000 EXTRA VOTES, in addition to the regular certificates. The amount may be made up in any manner—Daily or Weekly subscriptions. All that is necessary is that the sum amounts to $10, and that it be NEW.

For each $10 worth of OLD subscriptions turned in until the end of the Contest a special certificate for 2,000 EXTRA VOTES will be given. This also in addition to the regular votes.

Every subscription turned in since March 8 will be counted. It is not necessary to hold back the money until you have $10. Turn the subscriptions in as you get them, and when the amount reaches $10, the certificate will be issued—and it may be voted at once or held as desired.

No other offer of any kind will be made during the Contest.

"The Golden Opportunity for Vote Hunters."

Jane Cable

...By...

GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON,

Author of "Beverly of Graustark," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY DODD, MEAD & COMPANY

"Harry? Who is Harry?"

"Why, haven't you heard? Harry Soper. I'm engaged to him."

"The lieutenant?"

"Certainly. He's going to be promoted, though, if he ever gets on the firing line. It's not his fault that he has to do duty in the walled city. He's aching to get out and fight. But father"— Here she paused, her lips coming together with a firmness that boded ill.

"Colonel Harbin doesn't approve?"

"No. He says Harry is a 'little pup.' It's outrageous, Jane."

"Not for me," said Ethel dolefully. "I've picked Harry out of a hundred or more, and I think my discrimination ought to be considered. I'm the one to be satisfied. Father has no"—

"But how about that young fellow back in New York? You used to say he was the only one."

"He is the only one in New York. But look how far off he is! It takes weeks for his letters to get to me."

"But he writes every day."

"Harry telephones every day. I tell you, Jane, the voice has a good deal to do with it. You like to hear a fellow say nice things. It beats ink all to pieces. It will go hard with him perhaps, but he's young. He'll get over it."

"You are young too. That is why you have got over George."

"I'm not as young as I was. But I've decided on Harry. If father doesn't let us get married right away I'm liable to get over him too. It's silly doing that all the time. One might never get married, you know. But father is firm. He says I can't, and he says he'll kick Harry into the middle of next summer. Father says I shall not marry into the regular army. He says they don't make good husbands. I've got the joke on him, though. He appealed to mother, and she forgot herself and said the same thing. They were quarreling about it when I left the hotel. It was an awful jar to father. For two cents I'd elope with Harry."

"It would be pretty difficult for an officer on duty to elope, don't you think?" asked Graydon, amused.

"Not if he loved the girl. He does too. But I haven't told you the worst. Mother says I am being absolutely spoiled out here in Manila, and she says flatly that she's going to take me back to the States. Isn't it awful?"

"Back to the fellow in New York?" smiled Jane encouragingly.

"I hope he hasn't gone and fallen in love with some other girl," she said.

It was true, as Jane soon learned, that Mrs. Harbin had concluded to return to the United States with Ethel. Jane's aunt had grown immeasurably tired of Manila—and perhaps a little more tired of the colonel. It was she who aroused the colonel's antipathy to little Lieutenant Soper. She dwelt upon the dire misfortune that was possible if Ethel continued to bask in the society of "those young ninnies." The colonel developed a towering rage and a great fear that Ethel might become fatally contaminated before she could be whisked off of the island. It was decided that Mrs. Harbin and Ethel should return to the United States soon after the first of March to take up their residence in New York city.

"Mother wants to be a soldier's widow—on parole," sniffed Ethel, almost audibly enough for her father's ears.

Mrs. Harbin at once informed Jane that she was expected to return with them. She demurred at first, purely for the sake of appearances, but in the end agreed to tender her resignation to the Red Cross society. The knowledge that Graydon Bansemer's discharge was soon forthcoming and that he intended to return to America in the spring had more to do with this decision than she was willing to admit. She therefore announced her ambition to become a trained nurse and gave no heed to Mrs. Harbin's insinuating smile.

Letters of late from Mrs. Cable had been urging her to return to Chicago. David Cable was far from well, breaking fast, and he was wearing out his heart in silent longing for her return. He wrote to her himself that he expected to retire from active business early in the year and that his time and fortune from that day on would be devoted to his family. He held out attractive visions of travel, of residence abroad, of endless pleasure which they could enjoy together.

Jane had written to them that she would not live in Chicago—any place else in the world, she said—and they understood. There was no word of James Bansemer in all these letters. She was always daughter to them, and they were father and mother.

Graydon Bansemer one day received three letters, all from Chicago. He knew the handwriting on the envelope of each. Three men had written to him—his father, Elias Droom and Rigby. A dark scowl came over his face as he looked at the Rigby envelope. It was the first letter that he opened and read. Jane was sitting near by watching the expression on his face.

"It's from Rigby," he said as he finished.

"What does he say?" she asked anxiously.

"He says he is my devoted friend for life," replied Graydon bitterly. "I cannot forget, though, Jane. He is not the sort of friend I want."

"He thought it was for the best, Graydon."

"Yes, and he may have thought he was my friend too. This letter says as much. But I like an enemy better, dear. You know what to expect of an enemy at all times. Here's one from Elias Droom—old Elias." Droom scrawled a few words of cheer to the young soldier, urging him not to re-enlist, but to come home at the end of his two years. He inclosed a letter from Mr. Clegg, in which that gentleman promised to put Graydon in charge of their New York office if he would take the place. This news sent his spirits bounding. Tears of a gratefulness he never expected to feel sprang to his eyes. Jane's happiness was a reflection of his own.

James Bansemer's letter was not read aloud to Jane. When he had finished the perusal of the long epistle he folded it and stuck it away in his pocket. His eyes seemed a bit wistful and his face drawn, but there was no word to let her know what had been written by the man who had denounced her.

"He is well," was all he said. He did not tell her that his father had urged him to go into business in the Philippines, saying that he would provide ample means with which to begin and carry on any enterprise he cared to exploit. One paragraph cut Graydon to the quick:

"I'd advise you to steer clear of Chicago. If they don't kill you in the Philippines you're better off there. They hate us here."

Don't buy Silver Butter-Spreaders. We have a set of six for you. They are Wm. Rogers & Sons' AA triple plate.

If you could buy this set in a jewelry store it would cost you $3.50.

But this is the big pattern, made exclusively for us. You can buy nothing like it.

Simply do this: Send us the metal top from a jar of Armour's Extract of Beef, or the paper certificate under the top, with 10c for packing and mailing, and we'll send you one of the Spreaders.

Send 6 tops or certificates and 60c with each and get the full set of six.

Thus, for a little time, we give you back more than you pay for the Extract. We want you to know the many uses of a good Extract of Beef.

Try it in adding flavor to soups, gravies and meat dishes.

Get Armour's, for that is concentrated to four times the strength of others.

Other extracts of beef costing a trifle less go but one-fourth as far. The directions on Armour's are "Use one-fourth as much."

YOUNG ITALIAN CAUGHT STEALING TOBACCO AT G.T.R. FREIGHT SHEDS

A young Italian, apparently about 18 years of age, was caught red-handed this afternoon in a daring piece of thieving at the G.T.R. freight sheds. At about 2.15 o'clock this afternoon the foreman of the sheds, Mr. Frick, discovered the fellow in the sheds. He was hiding behind some boxes, and had the tobacco he had taken from the caddy in a bag and in his pockets. He had taken a large number of plugs from the caddy, using a railway spike to open it.

The police were telephoned for and the thief was held until they arrived, P.C's. Newhall and McGinty making the arrest.

When the prisoner was searched after being brought to the police station, he stated he bought the tobacco at a corner grocery and paid ten cents a plug for it. This was rather a barefaced statement in view of the fact that he was caught in the act of stealing it. He was very cheerful and laughed and talked in good English with the policemen.

After he had been locked up a Review reporter inquired his name, which without the services of some gifted interpreter, is quite unspeakable.

The prisoner told the police he would like very much to see Nicholas Rossetti, an Italian boarding house proprietor in the city.

MEETING ON TUESDAY NIGHT

Mr. John A. Patterson, K. C. Will Address the Local Astronomical Society

Mr. John A. Patterson, M.A., K.C., of Toronto, will address the Peterborough centre of the Royal Astronomical Society at the Collegiate Institute on Tuesday night. The subject will be "The Astronomy of Tennyson," and the lecture will no doubt be a very interesting one. Mr. Patterson is well known in Peterborough, having given an address at a laymen's missionary movement banquet at George street church a few months ago.

CARNEGIE'S "PROBLEMS OF TO-DAY"

The Historic Society of Peterborough wishes to announce the fourth and last of their series of lectures for the season. Mr. J. H. Burnham will lecture upon Mr. Andrew Carnegie's celebrated "Problems of To-day" in the Collegiate Institute on Friday evening, March 26th, at eight o'clock. The general public is cordially invited. Admission free. The society takes pleasure in extending a special invitation to the various industrial societies and unions of workingmen in the city and also to the employers of labor. Mr. Carnegie's book, which has been the talk of two continents, is an able and impartial review of the industrial conditions in the world to-day, together with a number of suggestions for the general betterment of these conditions and observations upon the responsibilities of the rich and the proper incidence of taxation.

LAYMEN OF PRESBYTERY OF PETERBORO TO MEET IN CONFERENCE TUESDAY

Important Gathering at St. Andrew's Church—Prominent Speakers From Toronto Will Give Addresses—Many Delegates Will be Present—Special Meeting at St. Paul's Church in Evening

A very important conference on the Laymen's Missionary Movement will be held in this city on Tuesday next, 23rd inst. Delegates will be present from every Presbyterian church in the Presbytery of Peterborough to consider the significance of this wide-spread movement and the was in which the congregations of this Presbytery can have a share in it. Similar conferences have been held in other Presbyteries with marked success, and this one on Tuesday promises to be no exception. The laymen of Peterborough Presbytery will have an opportunity to get into the front line. Well informed, inspiring speakers will be in attendance from Toronto. Mr. A. E. Armstrong, Mr. Matthew Parkinson and Mr. F. W. Anderson will take part and give addresses. Men from various congregations will take part in the discussion.

The conference opens in St. Andrew's church at 9 a.m. Tuesday. At one p.m. the delegates will retire to lunch in St. Andrew's Hall, where they will be the guests of the ladies of St. Andrew's, St. Paul's and Knox churches. Mr. R. F. McWilliams will preside at the lunch, and several bright speeches will be given. The conference will conclude in the church in the afternoon.

The sessions of the conference are open to men of the other churches, and all visitors will be heartily welcome at these meetings. The men of the city who cannot leave their work will have an opportunity of learning something of the great movement in St. Paul's church parlors on Tuesday night at 8 p.m., when Mr. Matthew Parkinson will give an address.

AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

It has been decided to hold an evening meeting for the men of all the churches of Peterborough in the parlors of St. Paul's church on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Mr. Matthew Parkinson, of Toronto, one of the speakers at the Presbyterial conference, has kindly consented to remain in the city to address this gathering. The meeting is open to men of all churches. In view of the approaching laymen's congress in Toronto, this will be a good opportunity of learning of the significance of this movement to men of all branches of the church in Canada.

"ALL CHARLIE'S FAULT" AT ST. PETER'S ASSEMBLY HALL

"'All Charlie's Fault,'" an amusing farce comedy, will be given at St. Peter's Assembly Hall by an amateur cast on April 19th and 26th. The first production will be in aid of the school library and the second one in aid of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Peter's.

The cast of characters and those who will assume them is as follows:

Charlie Blake, his son, James M. O'Brien.

LOCAL BOY MAKING SUCCESS OF AMUSEMENT ENTERPRISE

Mr. Wm. Fleming, a former Peterborough boy, and secretary treasurer of Mowhak Park, Troy, N.Y., has sent the Review the following invitation to attend the park, if they or any of the staff are ever in Troy. It is no likely that they will ever have the opportunity of doing so, but this journal has much pleasure in congratulating Mr. Flemming on his success in the amusement world.

Troy, N. Y., March 18.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—In sending out invitations to our local editors of the Troy papers I could not overlook my old home town, and in as few words will say, Mohawk Pines Park Club House and Amusement Devices are at the disposal of the Peterborough Evening Review or any of their staff during our progress of sixteen weeks. Season opens on May 26th. With best of wishes for the future success of the Peterborough Evening Review, its chief editor and staff, I am

Yours sincerely,

W. C. FLEMMING,

P.O. Box 608 Troy, N.Y.

The Evening Standard of Troy says: During the past few years numerous parks and pleasure resorts have been springing up in the vicinity of Troy and each one carries with it some added attraction which the amusement lovers of Troy are looking for.

On Wednesday, May 26th, the New Mohawk Pines, situated on the line between Troy and Cohoes, will be formally opened. This park undoubtedly will surpass all other resorts in this locality for pleasure, rest and comfort. It is delightfully situated, the soft breeze from the Hudson, the tall, stately whispering pines and its delightful environment make this spot an ideal one for this purpose. The facilities for reaching there are most convenient. Any car from Cohoes, Troy and Watervliet will transfer to the place. The Delaware and Hudson Railroad Company has already erected a temporary station there for the accommodation of the crowds.

The park comprises 65 acres, all of which is shaded by the pines. A new athletic field is being constructed. This field will consist of a baseball diamond, running track and tennis court. The principal feature of the park is that no admission fee will be charged. The other attractions, which are new and novel, are the Circle Dip Coaster, a pastime which has never been seen in Troy, although many parks have had a miniature one; Shoot the Shoots, the device that made Luna Park famous; the Jollier Tub Run, which will be the best attraction in the part. The run is a long one and most exhilirating. The other attractions are the Human Laundry, Merry-go-Round, Air theatre, House-up-side-Down, dancing pavilion, Pennville, Tally-Ho swings, Ferris Wheel, Brainstorm, box ball, billiard rooms and a mammoth band shed will be built. A large hippodrome is being constructed for the out-of-door attractions, which will consist of the best acts obtainable. Messrs. Fleming and Wilson, managers of the park, are no expense to make this park the best in the state, and everybody, whether unescorted or not will receive every possible courtesy.

On Monday, May 31st, a mammoth benefit and field day will be held at the park for the benefit of the new Maternity hospital. Other field days will be held there as the season progresses, for which large and expensive vaudeville acts and concessions have been secured.

THE $15,000 POWER BY-LAW

Sir,—We wish on behalf of the Special Power Committee of the City Council, to explain to the electors the position in regard to the by-law to authorize the borrowing of $15,000, which is to be voted upon on March 30th. This sum is intended for the purpose of paying for the foundations forebays, wheelpits, tail race and power house for developing electrical power at the eastern end of the proposed new waterworks dam, leaving the matter of providing money for purchasing the machinery for the power house to a future time, but making provision to have everything ready for the installation of the machinery when it is purchased.

The water commissioners having come to the conclusion that it is necessary to build a new concrete dam at the waterworks property asked the Council to submit a by-law to the electors for that purpose, which the Council has done. At the same time the Commissioners informed the Council that when the new dam is completed there will be 1,200 horse-power available there and that of this 500 horse-power will be enough to supply the needs of the waterworks department. This would leave 700 horse-power that would be available for other purposes and the Council is of opinion that it would not be good business to have this quantity of power running to waste, and that steps should be taken towards developing it so that it could be utilized in the interests of the city.

One way in which this power could be used would be to utilize it to supply the street lighting. At present the city pays nearly $9,000 a year for street lighting. This contract will not expire for nearly five years yet, so that the city cannot count upon doing its own lighting sooner than that. But it will not do to wait until the contract expires before taking action towards being ready to do that work when the time comes. It will take two or three years to complete the work of building the new dam, pumping station, power house, etc., so that when that work is completed there will be from two to two and a half years left in which to instal the electrical machinery. That would, no doubt, leave time enough to erect the power house and do the work that it is intended to do under the authority of the by-law which is now submitted to the electors. But when the unwatering is done and the machinery and appliances are on the ground for the purpose of constructing the dam the foundations, forebays, wheelpits, tail race, etc., for the power house can be constructed much more cheaply than if that work is left to be done some time in the future after the work on the dam is completed. The estimate of Mr. W. J. Kennedy, of Montreal, the Water Commissioners' engineer, is that this power-house, etc., work will cost $15,000, the amount stated in the by-law. The amount on that sum will be $637.50 a year, so that if the power-house should be completed two years before it is required it would cost $1,275 for interest for those two years, but it is believed that more than that will be saved on the cost of the work by having the plans made but and the work done at the same time as the dam is being constructed.

While the waterworks department reserved 500 horse-power, the street lighting will take from 200 to 300 horse power, which will leave 400 to 500 horse-power still available. If a market for this power is found, as for instance, by the location of a new factory here, another by-law could be submitted and the electrical machinery could be put in at once, and the whole cost of the two years' interest would not have to be charged against the saving of having the power house, etc., constructed at the same time as the dam.

By going on with the work the city will be ready in ample time to do its own street lighting when the contract expires, it will save money, by doing it while the dam is being constructed and may gain a great deal by being in a position to furnish power to some good industry.

These are some of the considerations which have influenced the Committee of the Council to ask the ratepayers to approve of the by-law authorising the issue of debentures for $15,000, and if they are good business reasons, as we believe they are, we hope the ratepayers will vote for the bylaw.

Yours respectfully,

H. RUSH,
Mayor.

A. A. McINTYRE,
Chairman Power Committee.

A Query

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Kindly inform me through your columns as to whom the title Hon is applied. Are High Court Judges to be addressed as Hon. and ex-members of Provincial Cabinets?

ENQUIRER.

High Court Judges are entitled to the title of "Honorable." Ex-Provincial Cabinet Ministers are not so entitled. Our correspondent can hardly expect the Review to look up ALL those entitled to or who receive the prefix "Honorable." We want to leave room for our holidays next autumn. But if more are wanted we will do our best.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Having lately removed from Toronto to Peterborough, I find that two of the necessaries of life, water and gas, cost me much more than I paid in the former city.

There I occupied an eight-roomed house with bath, lavatory, sinks and hot and cold water.

Toronto, net cost to me, $2.75 for 6 months, $5.50 per year.

Peterborough, net cost to me, for same accommodation, $4.33 for six months, $8.67 per year.

Toronto photo gallery and living rooms, bath, etc., $2.75 for 6 months, $5.50 per year.

Peterborough photo gallery, living rooms, bath, etc., but three rooms less and two taps less, $4.70 for 6 months, $9.40 per year.

Toronto gas 80 cents per thousand; Peterborough gas is too expensive altogether. The power here being by water, the rates should be much less than in Toronto, where the plant is operated by steam. As power is owned by the city of Peterborough, the only expense is the up-keep of the power house and dam. That the rates are excessive is only too evident, when it is proposed to spend $120,000 more, more and yet not have to increase the rates to meet the interest and sinking fund.

It is as if the works were run by a private company, whose sole desire was to squeeze the last cent from their patrons. We are not going to live forever, and our grandchildren could pay for some of the proposed improvements if they are necessary.

Yours, etc.,

TAXPAYER.

A Southern Dream

WALTZES

If you haven't heard this enchanting waltz, come to-night and have our pianist play it for you. This this is one of, if not the most charming, of waltzes that has been composed for some time—it carries you away to the Southern States one minue, then back through a floating dreamy waltz in the Canadian ball room. You will be delighted with this composition from the first note to the finale—also the "Almeda" waltzes by the same composer.

SENT ALL THE WAY FROM HALIFAX

To a Peterborough Firm for a Bottle of Medicine

The Nugent Drug Company today received an order for two bottles of "Dyspepsia Cure" from a sergeant of the Royal Canadian regiment at Halifax, NS. The letter was as follows;—

Would you kindly send by return mail two bottles of your "Dyspepsia Remedy." A friend of my wife's from your town gave me a bottle and it is the only thing that has done me any good. My stomach has been out of sorts for this last seven or eight months. Can not eat a decent meal at all."

MEDICAL COUNCIL AND DR. BINGHAM

The Toronto Globe contains the following letter;

To the Editor of The Globe—Just a line to remind the Medical Registrar that he made a bad mistake the other day. He said that my name had been removed from among licensed practitioners, and that I owed the Council between $30 and $40. Then the next day he corrected himself by saying that when he looked in the book he was wrong, and that my name had never been struck off the register; that I owed the Council nothing and that I was in good standing. I thank the gentleman for looking in the book and correcting himself. But would it not have been to his credit to examine the book in the first place, and then there would have been no charge to make. If the Registrar was driving a milk wagon and committed the same error, he would lose his sit, for sure. He loads the dice against himself who varies one hair's breadth from the truth, and "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor" is a good rule, even for a medical registrar.

In anything I may write about the Medical Council there is nothing intentionally personal in it. I wish every gentleman connected with the Council long life and every good luck. But the Council itself is a menace to the medical profession and a constant manifestation of distrust regarding our provincial universities.

YOUNG MEN WERE ALL DISCHARGED

But Must Pay for the Damage Done to the Boarding House Door

Four young men appeared at the Police Court this morning charged with being disorderly on the night of the 17th of March. They pleaded not guilty.

After hearing the evidence of the witnesses the Magistrate discharged them, but they must settle for the glass that was broken.

John Erwin was called and stated that he boarded at the corner of Simcoe and Aylmer streets and about 11.30 some young men were in the vicinity but he did not know who they were. Two panes of glass were broken in the boarding house door and he came out to see who it was. There was nobody at the door but he noticed some men by the fire station. He walked down to the corner and here he met the officers.

Chief Howard heard some men making a disturbance across from the station. One young man was dancing on the verandah and kicking the door. He telephoned for the police and they arrived soon after.

Sandy O'Brien was in the company of the prisoners on that night. He went down Simcoe street, but two of them went into Cavanagh's. The other two went on to the Aylmer at corner where he left them and turned up town.

One of the prisoners told the Court that all four went down Simcoe st. and when near Cavanagh's hotel two of the party stopped there, but he and an other went on to the corner of Simcoe and Aylmer sts. He heard the glass break and also the dancing on the verandah, but did not know who the parties were. He had seen some other fellows around the corner, but did not know who they were. One of the others, said he, was on the corner, when the glass was broken and it was he who went through the windows, but had been pushed by two other fellows who were also on the corner. He did not know who they were.

This was all the evidence taken and the Magistrate allowed them to go on condition that they pay $2 to cover the damages caused to the door in which the glass was broken.

FLORENCE KINRADE TOLD THE TRUTH

Hamilton, March 20—It has remained for Mr. Thomas Hobson, the lawyer representing the Kinrade family to find the first trace of Miss Marion Elliott and Colonel Warburton, whose names figured so prominently in the evidence given by Miss Florence Kinrade. Mr Hobson is in possession of a Norfolk, Va, Ledger-Despatch of May 14, 1908, in which the names of both Miss Elliott and Colonel Warburton occurr in the list of guests at a reception tendered to Miss Kinrade, by a Mrs Wells, at Norfolk, the night before.

HELD OPEN MEETING

Anniversary of Jr. Orange Lodges of Peterborough Last Night.

An open meeting under the auspices of the Orangemen of Peterborough was held in the Orange Hall, Simcoe street, last night when Col. Sam Hughes, of Lindsay, delivered a very interesting address. The meeting marked the anniversary of the junior Orange lodges of Peterborough and the attendance was excellent. District Master Juby occupied the chair.

Able addresses were given by Rev. Mr. Coon and Rev. Mr. Riddiford, and an entertaining programme of musical selections, songs and recitations was given.

THIRD YEAR HE HAS BEEN ELECTED

Mr. J. J. Turner Again District Deputy Grand Master of the A.O.U.W.

For three consecutive terms, Mr. J. J. Turner, sr, has been elected district deputy Grand of the Durham district AOUW, which shows that his services in that capacity must be very much appreciated. His last election to this position of distinction in Woodmen circles took place at the Grand Lodge meeting in Toronto on Wednesday, March 17th, when he was chosen by acclamation.

He was also elected a member of the executive and incidental committees.

Children's Aid Society at Havelock Brings Out Unusual Case

Special to the Review.

Havelock March 20.—The case of Mary Rosebush, who was taken by George Cochrane to the Children's Shelter from surroundings claimed unfit for the child came up before Magistrate Edmison here on Monday. The case was laid over to the 23rd inst., in order to arrest Mr. Livingstone, who was living at the Rosebush house on a bench warrant for non-appearance in court. Mrs. Rosebush's son who claims to be 17, but looks only 12, is totally uneducated and an attempt will be made to resue him also from the surroundings in which he is being brought up.

FRANK GOTCH WILL LIKELY WRFSTLE AT THE GRAND NEXT SATURDAY NIGHT

The hero of the hour in the mat game and the man looked upon to register the first defeat against Yussif Mahmout, the Turk, Frank Gotch, is coming to Peterborough. Gotch is booked, sure enough, and Mr. J. J. Turner, manager of the Grand Opera, House, told the sporting editor of the Review this morning that he would probably be here next Saturday night.

Mr. Turner, fell down, however, on the names of any suggested opponents of the "lion tamer," and is apparently not a very close follower of the carpet pastime. He stated that Mr. Small had secured Gotch's appearance for Peterborough and it was definitely decided that the world's champion would be seen here in action against a clever opponent.

PETERBORO' MENTIONED FOR SEMI-PROFESSIONAL LEAGUE

A Toronto despatch says:

Tom Flanagan has announced that he has about completed arrangements for a semi-professional baseball league in Ontario.

The prospective towns and cities are:—

Hamilton.
Toronto.
London.
Brantford.
Peterborough.
Woodstock.

"The only restriction is that all players must be Canadian born." said Tom Flanagan, "The Toronto team will play at the new Scarboro Beach athletic field."

Corney Burns, the captain of the Petes last year informed the Review today that such a league as proposed would be a paying proposition and he is very much in favor of it.

Corney has a line on several good men, he states.

RUNNING TRACK LIKELY TO BE LAID AT RIVERSIDE PARK

In all probability a running track will be laid out at Riverside park this spring. The matter is now in hand and it is understood that measurements have been made with this end in view. The track will likely be laid out in the form of an oval and will be a quarter mile one.

From all appearances track athletics are going to boom in Peterborough this summer and there will be plenty of use for the new park. It looks as if the directors of the Riverside grounds are making a good move in putting in the track. Riverside park is centrally located and with the new track will be an excellent place for holding athletic meets.

MIDGETS AGAIN BEAT THISTLES

The Score Was 5-1 and the Midgets Had the Best of the Contest

The Midgets defeated the Thistles again at Brock street rink yesterday from 5 to 6. The score at half time was 1—1, and at full time 5—1. The contest was pretty even in the first half, but the Midgets had the best of the argument in the second half, scoring 4 goals and keeping the Thistles from securing any counters. The game was strenuous at times, but nobody was hurt, and the young lads took their bumps and retaliated in a manner that made a hit with the spectator.

The Midgets were not slow to take up the challenge of the Thistles, who should now admit that the Midgets are a superior team.

The young lads bid fair to outshine the bigger players in slashing and rough work, but the referees should make an effort to stop them.

The teams were:

Midgets		Thistles
	Goal
Donahue		Hill
	Point
Latimer		Phelan
	Cover point
Smith		Matthews
	Rover
Callaghan		H Lees
	Centre
Parker		Lees
	Right wing
Barrie		Laing
	Left wing
Halpin		Morrow

Callaghan starred for the Midgets getting four of the five counters.

Donahue in goal took care of a number of shots in clever style and has all the earmarks of a good one.

TENNIS IS GOING TO BE POPULAR

There Will be at Least Four Clubs in Peterboro' This Summer

It looks as if tennis was going to boom in Peterborough this summer. One new club has already been organized and another one is likely to be formed in the course of a few days. This will make five clubs in the city as the three old ones, the St John's, tennis club and the Nicolls oval tennis club will also be in existence.

The new ones will be the Normal School club, which has already been organized, and the YMCA club which will be formed within a few days.

RUNNING

Mr. Arthur Morgan left for Toronto on the 4 48 to attend the Simpson-Shrubb race tonight. Arthur is said to be backing the local man very heavily.

Tonight is the night Fred Simpson will have to travel in championship form if he beats the crack little English runner, Alfred Shrubb. Simpson has been picked by the dopesters as primarilly a long distance man but the fast time in which he recently negotiated ten miles proves him to be dangerous at the middle distances and there are a few who select him to trim Shrubb in their 12 mile race in Toronto tonight.

It will be the accomplishment of the Indian's career if he does so and his local admirers hope that he will have the Britons scalp in his belt when the race is over. On account of Tom Eck's handling and also owing to his own reasonableness the Ojibway Thunderbolt is an easy man to get into the finest of trim and when he faces Shrubb for the start of the grind he will be as fine as a King's plater and will give the Britisher a desperate argument for the money.

Whether he can beat him or not is a different proposition though, for the distance is only a couple of miles over the favorite jaunt of the hurricane Englishman. Fred and his manager are both confident that he can win and Eck is a pretty sage picker.

SKIP FERGUSON WON THE FINAL

In the final game of the primary competition in the club bonspiel, W. G. Ferguson defeated Jas. Connal last night 11 to 7. It was a hard-fought game, and some excellent plays were made.

The rinks were:

Johnston	Craig
Cameron	Austin
Denham	Baptie
Connal, skip—7	Ferguson, skip—11

CONSOLATION.

Adamson	Harstone
Dr. Cameron	Evans
Baptie	Carton
Ray, skip—10	Knapman, skip—11

Doane	Payner
Lyle	Rush
Ferguson	Merritt
Read, skip—9	Dr. Eastwood,—11

There are still six games to be played in the consolation before the semi-finals are reached, as follows: In the third round, J. H. Burnham vs. R. Hicks. W. G. Morrow vs. W. M. Lang; in the fourth round Dr. Eastwood vs. the winner in the Burnham-Hicks; W. E. Talbot vs. G. L. Hay; J. S. Knapman vs. winner of Lang-Morrow; J. A. Fitzgerald vs. D. Davidson.

LACROSSE

POOR OUTLOOK AT LINDSAY.

"The outlook for a lacrosse team in Lindsay this year is not very encouraging." said a well-known lover of the national game the other day. "The game was never a success in this town, and the team last year received very poor support. Many of last year's players have left town, and the outlook for a team this year is not very bright."—Lindsay Post.

A BUSINESS MAN WRITES ON WATERWORKS DAM BY-LAW

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir—In reading the few comments on the present by-law now before the ratepayers for a new waterworks dam for water and power, Mr. Meldrum's remarks to Ald. Bradburn at the Board of Trade meeting evidently expressed the opinion of a large number of citizens that the aldermen were not sincere or in earnest in the taking hold of a power scheme in the interests of the city. Last year nothing tangible was done. This year a lot of fuss and feathers ending in a fizzle. Mr. McWilliams' estimate of last year's mayor and council's capabilities as being along the line of increasing taxes and overdraft and doing nothing is not a mile from the bull's eye. Mr. Kendrey has evidently come to the same conclusion. That the present year's council are built along the same lines. Their mind running along statistical information for future reference passing compliments to each other, but business takes too much power and energy, especially along Auburn dam lines of thought, too watery a proposition to tackle. (The only power proposition the town has any chance of getting.)

Playing into the hands of the present power companies. Take a little history. Some years ago the city could have got the Dickson Company's power for $150 000, but through the lack of support it fell through then after the fire had cleared the raceway of all the factories on it, the Quaker Oats Co. bought it for $100 000, and built a new dam and power house costing, report says, $100,000. Many people even to-day think the city should have owned that power. I think otherwise. It was a godsend when the Quaker Oats Co. bought it and made their investment, which is a credit to them and a good thing for the city.

But the Auburn dam should belong to the city. The city council could develop almost, if not altogether as much power as the Auburn dam as there is at the Dickson dam, and at less than half the expenses. The city should own the two dams. The waterworks they now own, but if there was a controlling mind in the council they would have taken hold of this matter in a business way and got the very best engineer that was to be had to report on both propositions and lay the whole matter before the people—a comprehensive scheme including waterworks and electric power. I will not go into details now of how this can be done, but in some future letter I will deal with them, but now take up the waterworks dam proposition. This dam was built about the same time as the government dam above on the river. These dams are as solid, so the engineer says, as the day they were built. They are of as much importance as the waterworks, built by contract and did not cost half the money that the waterworks dam did, but the water commissioners seem to have got cold feet, or water on the brain, nightmare of bursting dams, destruction, and rushing waters. This is a malady that develops in municipal officers under certain hothouse mutual admiration "didn't we do it" conditions, but to the good people of Peterborough I want to say it is not a serious malady, it is a swelling of the head that is easily reduced (withhold the money until you have the information necessary to vote intelligently.) These commissioners are good fellows, good citizens and quite capable of financing the waterworks so long, gentlemen, as the citizens of this little burg pay up the little water bills that come in every three months from Treasurer Adams' office. But reverting to the waterworks dam. We were always given to understand that ten feet was the best available head at the waterworks dam. In looking up the original reports when building and the suit with Irwin following eight to ten feet was all that could be depended on without any change. So far as the citizens are aware Chairman Matthews says this has grown to a 12 foot head. This is such a new kind of development that water power owners are crazy to get the patent right on it. Culverwell would give a good deal to get it for Buckhorn. The Otonabee Power Company would be tickled to death to grow two feet more head on dam 5, even the Quaker Oats Company would have been glad to pay for two feet extra on their dam this past winter.

The same engineer who reports this built the dam and now condemns it as unsafe, and says it has grown two feet in height, and a new dam is essential. The government engineers have not condemned the other dams on the river. If Engineer Kennedy built a properly constructed dam at the water works in the first place, then the commissioners have as much need of a new dam as a wagon has for a fifth wheel. If he did not then good common horse sense would have suggested an independent engineer's report on the same, not to employ the same man to inspect his own work.

Methinks I hear the commissioners in their innocence singing that old song changed to suit the occasion. "Little drops of water, little grains of sand, make a mighty river but a very poor dam."

The bait held out that it will not increase our taxes, is the poorest argument in the face of the fact that the commissioners are putting what is equal to a second mortgage on the water works property as security for the payment of $120,000 asked for in the bylaw. We have not paid for the original cost yet as the interest and sinking fund is being paid out of our taxes every year, and this is the easiest way the commissioners have of putting it—we will pay it out of surplus earnings of the water — good bye to any further reduction in water rates during our life time. The commissioners are legislating for the future generations. They are built on concrete lines and if you will pay your water rates like good little men we will give you good Otonabee water hemmed in by a new concrete dam, and incidentally rip up Messrs. Bradburn and McIntyre's power scheme of electric power at Auburn. The old bug bear of the Underwriters' Association demanding it, has done service so long that it ought to dam the weaver who made it. The Underwriters' Association is composed of intelligent men, and will not ask or expect any municipality to rush into an expenditure of $120,000 without due consideration and the very best experts advice from the best informed men on the river with years of experience which has cost them thousands of dollars to gain, say that Mr Kennedy's report is misleading and Mr. Holgate or some other independent engineer should be called in to report before a vote is taken on such a large expenditure of money. Ratepayers, or rather, water users, the chairman says it is up to you. If you can stand it, the rest of us will have to.

THE LINDSAY COLLEGIATE TEAM DEFEAT LOCAL STUDENT SEVEN

Lindsay beat the P.C.I. at Brock street rink this afternoon by 6 goals to 4. The half time score was 2—1 in favor of Lindsay. The Lindsay team are a fast bunch of hockey players, and were too fast for P.C.I., who did not put up their usual good game. The contest was very strenuous in the first half, and the tripping and slashing were a feature of the game. The Lindsay team were hard checkers, and the P.C.I. could not get their combination going to any great advantage. Both teams played the individual game but the checking was too hard for either of the teams to score very often. Wallace, Denison and Geale played well for the P.C.I., while Spratt brothers were always prominent for Lindsay. The biggest feature of the game was the work of the two goal minders.

The teams were:

	Goal
Greer		Meldrum
	Point
Wilson		Denison
	Cover
Beecroft		Wallace
	Rover
J. Spratt		Fortye
	Centre
P. Spratt		Geale
	Right Wing
D. Spratt		Conroy
	Left Wing
Spence		Matthews

FIRST HALF.

Lindsay started off at a fast pace and pressed matters so much that Meldrum was called upon to stop some hot ones. The checking was close and hard. Conroy got away with a nice rush but missed a nice shot. Wallace got through the whole Lindsay team but lost the puck. Both goal tenders were putting up a fast exhibition of handling hot shots, thereby saving many counters. Matthews missed a nice pass from Conroy, who went off for slashing. Wallace broke up a nice rush. Both teams were playing fast hockey. Geale went off for slashing. Spratt made a fine rush and scored the first goal for Lindsay, who were having a slight advantage. They were playing better together than the locals. The game was getting rough and a lot of tripping was indulged in by both teams. Fortye put a hard shot at Greer, but there was nothing doing. The P.C.I. were tearing off some fast individual stunts, but it wouldn't work. Beecroft put the next one past Meldrum and referee Craig gave orders at the face off that no more rough work would be tolerated. Geale refused to take the warning and went to the timekeepers for tripping. Denison scored the first goal for P.C.I. after a lone rush and a few seconds later went off for tripping.

The score at half time was 2—1 in favor of Lindsay.

POOL

TRIP TO EUROPE?

On another page will be found the standing of the candidates up until noon to-day. The score was kept open to the last possible moment to allow the counting of the newspaper ballots. No coupons will be accepted Monday. The names of the contestants will be published on Monday, but the figures will be omitted, as the final count will commence within a few hours after going to press.

Should candidates desire to place all the subscriptions on hand Monday in the ballot box, there will be no loss to anyone. The extra votes given on clubs of $10, for both new and old subscriptions, will be allowed just the same. A complete record is kept of all cash turned in, and the amount of money placed in the ballot box will be added to any surplus in clubs the candidates may have and special certificates issued accordingly. Money placed in the ballot box for any candidate, unless for bona fide subscribers, is worthless, as far as securing votes is concerned. Votes can not be bought, but are issued free on subscriptions—and in no other way.

The judges selected to make the final count will award the prizes, and their decision will be final. Neither the management of the Review or the contest manager will have anything whatever to do with awarding the prizes. Every contestant stands on an equal basis, and the prizes will undoubtedly be given according to the number of votes cast for each candidate.

Contestants in District No. 2 should be particular to mail in their subscriptions in time to reach this office before 8 o'clock Monday evening. Subscriptions received after mail leaves may be telephoned and will be allowed.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

The Toronto Star which usually philosophizes too much interesting purpose is strangely astray in its article on "Religion and the Drama." It asks, "Is the stage to become an ally of the Church and a teacher of Religion?" The stage or as much of the ancient method of presenting a dramatic representation as could be called the stage was used by means of mysteries, masques and miracle-plays to teach the very lesson the Star asks about. If the stage comes to represent again the religious as well as the social side of life, it will merely have boxed the compass and have got back to where it began. Dividing lines in this world are being laid anew. Things in general are being shaken up and readjusting themselves with the result that some are going back to the old and others are casting off utterly the old and forever taking their stand with and upon the new. To those who are casting off old, especially religious ties, the worship of Virtue for its own sake becomes once more as in the days of Socrates the tendency of the present time.

A MONEY-MAKING GOVERNMENT

The Whitney Government is pre-eminently a money making government. The Laurier government is pre-eminently a money spending organization. Sir James loses no opportunity down to the sale of Gowganda town lots for $17,000.00 for the whole lot. The speculators and money men pay for what they get from Sir James and kick accordingly. The capitalists get everything at Ottawa from ten cents to ten million dollars and the People do the kicking.

CANADIAN WOOL AND THE TARIFF

The present tariff, as we have before pointed out, is about as discouraging to the farmer as to the manufacturer. In fact, the former is being hit even worse than the latter, as he has large stocks on hand which he cannot sell except at most ruinous prices. All he can get for his washed fleece in the west is about 14c to 15c, whilst we hear of sales recently at 12c. to 13c. About fifteen or eighteen months ago the farmer was getting from 27 to 28 cents for his washed fleece, whilst to-day he has to be content with the unprofitable returns of those figures cut in two; and the grim irony of the whole thing at present is that our farmers are mainly dependent upon the highly protected American market as an outlet for his product. The tariff is not affording the farmers a chance to raise wool profitably nor have the manufacturers a fair show to compete with foreign goods. The Hon. Sidney Fisher, who pretends to be such a friend of the farmer, would do well to afford him some relief so that he may be able to sell his wool in the home market at a reasonable profit instead of a loss.—Montreal Trade Bulletin.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The account of the Boston revival shows how vulgar, if not profane, the worship of Christ is made by Mr Alexander. Nowhere did Jesus ever descend to buffoonery.

A recent bill enacted by the Ontario Legislature, makes personation at elections a very serious offence, for which a variety of easy methods of information and conviction are provided.

Why is it some people are so anxious to abolish the Senate? The Senate is a vital part of the system of government in the U.S., France, etc., which are surely just as democratic and sensible as we are.

Sir James Whitney seems in presenting the people's case, to arouse every fighting instinct possessed by the corporations and capitalists. The Premier does not mean to be hostile—he merely wishes to make it plain that he cannot be bluffed.—Toronto Star

It is because Sir James storms a bit that the capitalists get angry and——are drawn.

There is a danger that all this (religious) turmoil, bickering and wire-pulling will injure the faith that is in us as a people, affect our moral fibre, and cause us to wander far towards that carelessness and selfishness which is often wrongly named infidelity. Such a disastrous course of conduct would not be justified, however, and those inclined that way would do well to remember that another's sin is no excuse for their's.—Canadian Courier.

The form of procedure in dealing with a tariff bill in Congress is materially different from that pursued in connection with a like measure in the Dominion Parliament. A new Canadian tariff becomes law the moment it is presented to Parliament by the Finance Minister, and while changes may be made in the measure as a result of subsequent discussion these are not usually very important. A new tariff does not become operative in the United States until after Congress has approved it, and Congress has a habit of doing a good deal of mangling before granting approval. If the bill now before Congress happens to get through substantially as drafted it may have a far reaching importance on trade between Canada and the United States.—Toronto Star.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. A Birdseye View.

The following incident occurred during a terrific thunderstorm at the home of a contractor who lives in the vicinity of Tampa, Fla. The contractor and his family were sitting on the veranda watching the storm when a bolt of lightning struck a tree not fifteen feet from where they were sitting.

The shock was terrific, but no one was injured, although they were all badly frightened. The young son, with great excitement, was telling that he jumped two feet high.

"How do you know you jumped so high?" said his father.

"Why," said Johnnie, "I looked down while I was up."

SEEING THE ALPS.

The tourist of today who visits the Alps and who lacks the physical endurance or whose time is too limited to make the ascent of some of the famous peaks nevertheless is able closely to survey the panorama of mountain scenery through the medium of powerful telescopes located at the terminals of the mountain railroads. By this means the rocks and glaciers and peculiar formations of these historic mountains may be carefully studied, though the spectator need not approach them within many miles.

Each of these mountain telescopes is mounted on a forked cradle and is so nicely balanced that its position may readily be fixed by the tightening of small thumbscrews after the focus has been adjusted with a hand wheel. The magnifying power of the instruments varies from 35 to 116 diameters, but is adapted for landscape observation only.

When weather conditions are suitable, climbers on the Titlis may be seen through the telescope at Uetliberg, near Zurich, a distance of forty miles, and the hotel on the Faulhorn, sixty miles away, may be recognised. Every step of the toilers on the slopes of the Matterhorn can be followed by means of the instrument on the Riffelalp above Zermatt. Several lives have been saved by the means of these glasses, for signals of distress on the mountains are seen by the watchers at the telescopes.—Harper's.

By "FOOTLIGHTS"

Glau and his overweight chorus from the "Aeroplane" company have returned to New York in what may be described as greatly reduced circumstances. Not as to finances, let it be said, nor yet in numbers, glory be but in avoirdupois—that is to say, gross flesh. The entire galaxy has lost out in this respect, much to its advantage.

It seems the people out west will support slim ballerinas, and no other, and our famous "baloon chorus" carried, so to speak, no weight with them. They treated that prize collection of fat New York beauties with an unprecedented coldness. Consequently, Glau faced the problem of reducing the entire front and rear rows at once, or shipping them back,—"excess" baggage. It was a terrific job, as all who saw the "Aeroplane" before it left this tolerant town will admit, but our ingenious townsman tackled it and succeeded—broke all records, in fact. And thereby hangs a tale worthy of any fat lady's attention.

Glau didn't rehearse his flock into shape, nor starve them into line, nor yet worry them, verbally, into shadows. He paid salaries regularly and let them eat and drink as they liked. He simply hung up a new rule in the dressing-rooms to the effect that every lady less than five foot seven who weighed in excess of 138 pounds must take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime (or about where her bedtime ought to be), of the following: One-half ounce Marmola, 3-4 ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, and 4 3-4 ounces Peppermint Water.

They did it and in a month averaged a loss of a pound a day apiece. "That's a dandy receipt," says Glau: "Simple, pleasant, harmless and a worker from the word 'go.' Wish I could get a railroad rate reducer half as good."

A pay streak of gold three feet wide was uncovered at Summit Mine on Sheep Creek, B.C.

Fred Mark, a Chinaman, was fined $50 and costs for selling liquor illegally at North Bay.

OF INTEREST

The present crest of the gambling-wave shows itself so high, especially among women, that the religious press sounds its warning. To-day, says the Christian Advocate (New York), "this country abounds with gambling mothers." Bridge whist is the medium by which the play of chance is carried on, and though the gambling fever has been known to appear in cycles, the present seizure is declared to be more pernicious than any other known in the United States. The article arraigning it, published in this Methodist journal, has been quoted in various religious papers, dictating the wide-spread nature of the evil. Says the writer:

"It has led thousands of women to neglect their children or give them wholly to nurses or governesses, and to send them away to school as soon as possible. In some respects the effect on the children of those who cannot afford nurses, but find time and money for gambling, is still more injurious. Such families have assemblies in their own houses where the children see their own and others' mothers spending hours on hours in such games.

"This leads the children to think there is no wrong in gambling. Boys instinctively feel that betting on horse-racing, pooling, and gambling with cards, etc., are right because their mothers play 'bridge' for money.

"To this certain devotees of bridge say: 'We do not gamble or bet; we simply give prizes for skill.' This is a mode of self-deception. The game is largely one of chance as well as skill, and the prizes are values won. A similar though less degree of excitement is created.

"An expert informs us that players who substitute prizes for money usually return to the old way, the other being too dull to maintain the desired interest; and that many take to plain gambling because the 'mere playing soon grows tiresome, while the money won or lost keeps up the excitement to the small hours.'

"Once any form of gambling is introduced into a family, the house is permeated by its atmosphere; but bridge has a peculiar fascination, and there is a constant round of bridge parties. What many women, supposed to be of high intelligence and unimpeachable conduct, have done in the past few years would not formerly have been believed possible. Everything else is given up, and it is not uncommon for women to have morning bridge, bridge after luncheon, and bridge after dinner."

It is recalled that Addison, who lasht the follies of his age, wrote: "We always find that play, when followed with assiduity, engrosses the whole woman. She quickly grows uneasy in her family, takes but little pleasure in all the domestic innocent endearments of life, and grows more fond of Pam than of her husband.' "What a race of worthies, what patriots, what heroes, must we expect from mothers of this make!" The writer turns to the conditions that exhibit themselves even in the church life of the present. We read:

"A portentous phase of the recent gambling-craze is that it has invaded the churches, not merely those that tacitly allow everything that does not make a public scandal, but those that have a reputation for greater vigilance. Clergymen, in their denominational meetings and their interdenominational fraternal clubs, deplore the situation more vividly than anything herein portrayed, but confess their inability to change the situation. The wives and daughters of not a few clergymen play bridge without the least regard to the influence they exert. So strong is the tide, the total destitution of reason or true devotion, that many would give up their religious connections rather than their gambling. The knowledge of this has certainly silenced some clergymen. Some of another spirit participate with the ladies, and propose that the winnings be devoted to the 'Cause of God.' Some ladies of 'high degree' have gone straight from the Holy Communion, on Sunday, to the bridge party. The fever has spread to all the great nations. In Methodist churches there are sad cases of utter recklessness.

"If mothers became so crazed with play, naturally daughters will imitate them.

"One of the professors of Wellesley College a few months ago issued a statement to the students in which she says:

"The bridge playing fever does not abate, it threatens to become a fixed form of relaxation in college, especially among women. The rowdiest college boy, however, does not probably spend so much time in his relaxation as does the quiet but constant bridge player in our Wellesley community."

"To convince our readers that nothing herein reaches the full measure of the situation, we inform them that in Chicago the police department and the Law and Order League have joined hands in a crusade to prevent "society women" from gambling. The edict applies to cinch, whist, and euchre parties, in which the trophies are cut glass and chinaware, as well as to bridge and poker parties, in which high monetary stakes are the prizes.

"No gambling mother can effectively instruct her children in morals, to pray to God, or cause them to learn and feel what they should assimilate. Nor can she efficiently warn them against vice of any kind For, even if they attempt to do it, their dangerous example will counterweigh their formal counsels. There is an intoxication without wine and the gambling spirit pervades the whole nature. In many a house wine and tea "seasoned" with brandy add to the charms of bridge whist parties, and the hostess has been known to abstain that she "may play surer."

"The religion of those who give themselves up to such things may not be hypocritical, for many are thoughtless, but it must be formal and useless."

The Waterworks By-Law

The following is a copy of the By-law except the sections relating to the Polling Divisons; for taking the votes on the 29th day of March, 1909, of the Electors qualified to vote on By-laws for creating debts, the summing up of votes, etc. Published by the Water Commissioners.

By-Law No.______

A BY-LAW to provide for borrowing the sum of $120,000 to pay the cost of construction of a concrete dam and other works for the improvement of the Waterworks system of the City of Peterborough.

Passed the ...... day of ......, 1909.

WHEREAS, the Peterborough Water Commissioners have represented to the Council of the City of Peterborough that it is necessary, in order to ensure a permanent, increased and satisfactory supply of water to the City for public and private use and for fire protection, that the present waterworks dam should be replaced by a new concrete dam and that a new pump plant, together with the other works and appliances required to control and develop the water power at the said dam and to supply water to the waterworks system of the said City should be constructed and installed, and it is estimated that the cost of same will be the sum of $120,000 and the said Water Commissioners have applied to the Council for the said sum for such purposes.

AND WHEREAS, it is desirable in the public interest to construct and install such works and appliances and to pass this By-law, to be submitted to the votes of the duly qualified electors, to authorize the borrowing of the said sum for the purposes aforesaid, which sum of $120,000 is the amount of the debt intended to be created by this By-law.

AND WHEREAS, in order to raise the said sum of $120,000 it will be necessary to issue the debentures of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough for the said amount, such debentures to be a special charge on the waterworks, and the lands used therewith and the revenue arising therefrom and also charged on the whole rateable property of the Municipality.

AND WHEREAS, the amount of the whole rateable property of the Municipality according to the last revised Assessment Roll, being the roll prepared in the year 1908, for the year 1909, is the sum of $8,426,778 and the amount of the existing debenture debt of the Municipality, exclusive of local improvement debts payable by local special rates, but including the debt of $312,000 incurred for the purchase and improvement of the waterworks, is the sum of $870,331.98 and there is no part of the principal or interest in arrear.

AND WHEREAS, it will require the sum of $5,100 to be raised annually for a period of thirty years, the currency of the debentures to be issued under and by virtue of this By-law to pay the interest of the said debt, and the sum of $2,324.56 to be raised annually during the said period for providing a sinking fund for the payment of the same at maturity thereof—such last mentioned sum being sufficient with the estimated interest on the investment thereof to discharge the said debt when the same becomes due, making in all the sum of $7,424.56 to be raised annually as aforesaid.

1. This By-law shall take effect on the final passing thereof.

2. It shall be lawful for the Council of the City of Peterborough to borrow the sum of $120,000 and to issue the debentures of the said Corporation for the said sum, such debentures to be sealed with the Corporate Seal of the City of Peterborough and to be signed by the Mayor and Treasurer and countersigned by the Secretary of the Peterborough City Trust, and to be made payable within thirty years after the issue thereof, and to bear interest at the rate of four and one-quarter per centum per annum payable half-yearly on the thirtieth day of June and the thirty-first day of December in each year and to have coupons attached thereto for the payment of such interest; such debentures as to principal and interest to be payable at the office of the Secretary of the Peterborough City Trust in the City of Peterborough.

3. The said waterworks and lands shall be specially charged with the repayment of the said sum hereby authorized to be borrowed and the debentures to be issued therefor and the holders of such debentures shall have a preferential charge on the said waterworks and lands and the revenues arising therefrom, after providing for the payment of the expenses attendant upon the operation and maintenance of the said waterworks and the interest and sinking fund in respect to debentures already issued for the purchase and improvement of the waterworks system, for securing the payment of the said debentures and the interest thereon and the said debentures and interest shall also be a charge upon the whole rateable property of the municipality.

4. Subject to the provisions of subsection 2 of this section there shall be raised and levied during each year of the currency of the said debentures by a special rate upon all the rateable property of the Municipality, the sum of $5,100 for payment of the interest on the said debt, and the sum of $2,324.56 as a sinking fund for the payment of the said debt at the maturity thereof making together the sum of $7,424.56, to be raised annually as aforesaid.

(2) Provided, however, that the revenues arising from the said waterworks shall, after payment of the expenses of operating and maintaining the said waterworks and the payment of the interest and sinking fund in respect to debentures heretofore issued for the purchase and improvement of the waterworks system, be applied towards payment of the annual interest and sinking fund on the debentures to be issued hereunder and the Council of the said City shall only be required to raise in each year during the currency of the debentures to be issued hereunder a sum sufficient with the moneys arising and available from such revenue to make up the said annual sum of $7,424.56 required for payment of the interest and sinking fund of the debentures to be issued hereunder.

5. As the proposed expenditure upon the objects for which the debt to be created by this By-law is estimated to extend over more than one year and it is undesirable to have large portions of the money on hand unused and uninvested it would in the opinion of the Council be to the advantage of the Municipality to issue the debentures hereby authorised in instalments and it is, therefore, hereby provided that said debentures may be issued in instalments of such amounts (not exceeding in the aggregate the total amount for which provision is made by this By-law) and at such times, as the exigency of the case demands, but so that the whole shall be issued within five years and the first instalment within two years after the passing of this By-law and the proceeds of the said debentures when sold or a sufficient part thereof for that purpose shall be paid over as required to the Peterborough Water Commissioners, to be applied in payment of the amount expended in the construction of such new dam, pump house and pumping plant and the other works and appliances constructed and installed to control and develop the water power at the said dam and to supply water to the water works system of the city.

WOLVES IN ALGONQUIN PARK TOO CUNNING TO TAKE POISON

During the winter of 1907-08, the writer's diary shows thirty-one deer found slaughtered by wolves on Headquarters Beat. Only one deer was completely devoured. Five more were about half consumed. Of the remaining thirty-six only a few pounds of meat had been eaten out of the haunch, but in nearly every instance the brain was eaten and the throat out. Out of the thirty-one, twenty-three were does, the sex of the remaining few in four instances being impossible to determine. So the benefit of doubt goes to bucks. The greater portion of those does were slaughtered in the month of March, and all the does evidently carried young. By one moment's thought the reader will see the amount of damage done. These does, owing to the protection the park gives against dogs, would, in the majority of instances, have given birth to two fawns each. Then there is the fact that only about one-half or less of the deer killed are found by the rangers. Against this slaughter of deer, only two wolves were found poisoned, although there is a possibility that a dozen more were killed by poison and not found. The grey wolf usually gives birth to from five to nine whelps during the month of April, usually selecting a large hollow log for a den, or a snug niche in a rock.

The prevailing idea that a wolfe has a regular den is not sustained by the trappers and woodsmen around the park. Another idea which many trappers stoutly declare to be true is that the wolfe in the wild state drinks like a pig, and not like a dog, as most people would suppose. The writer has been told by many old bushmen that the mother wolfe takes the whelps to the water as soon as they are able to travel and any that lap are instantly killed. During the summer months the mother wolf is very industrious in teaching the whelps to hunt, chasing deer, rabbits, etc., until at the beginning of winter each whelp is able to capture a deer single-handed, in a fair race, with ease.

On the fifteenth of January, 1909, while myself and companion were examining baits on a lake, we noticed a wolf track entering the woods near the bait which had been scratched out. We followed the track for about a quarter of a mile, when the wolfe had climbed an immense bluff. My companion followed the tracks, while I followed the ravine. I had only gone a few words when I heard a noise of something crashing in the snow, and turned up over a small raise of ground. A fine young buck lay there dying. I went to it and found it had just been killed by a single wolf. After a short run of about two hundred yards the wolf had seized it, first by the hind leg, severing the tendon, then had at one bite broken the deer's back, tearing the skin and flesh open until the kidney could be seen. Then he had seized it by the throat, and was no doubt drinking the life blood of the deer when disturbed either by myself or friend. A close examination of footprints showed that the wolf had stolen up quietly until within forty yards of the deer, when the race for life began, with the inevitable result. The course the animals ran was down a slope of clean snow about ten inches deep; in fact, the odds were in the deer's favor.

That the wolf is a difficult animal to poison, and that the poisoned baits set out in Algonquin Park for the destruction of the wolves which roam the game preserve, are not killing the fur bearing animals of the park, are two conclusions given by Mark Robinson, a park ranger, in an article contributed to Toronto Saturday night. Ranger Robinson says in part:

My first intimate acquaintance with the habits of wolves, began in December, 1907, when in company with that veteran ranger, Mr. R. Balfour, I set out one fine morning to put out bait for wolves. Visions of dead wolves all over Kearney Lake floated before my eyes. There were fresh tracks of the big grey fellows to be seen everywhere, and when I was informed that chances of capturing any of them were few, I kept my counsel, but secretly thought; "Splendid stuff you are giving me, my friend." However, events that followed proved that the information was correct.

The baits were visited daily for about a week and every morning we found them turned around. The wolves had rolled all over them. Some they carried a distance and dropped them, usually beside another bait, and walked off without any show of concern. Leaving this section and going to another we had much the same experiences.

At the end of two weeks we returned to Kearney Lake, and I found my first wolf,—a monster measuring seven feet three inches in length — also a fox lying a few feet away. The ground all about was simply padded down with wolf tracks but neither wolf or fox had been touched. A raven had made a small hole in the back of the wolf and then left, evidently not feeling extra well. This capture aroused my enthusiasm, and every plan of capture I had heard of from old hunters was tried without success. A friend suggested that four grain strychnine capsules be tried, these being placed inside a piece of meat. This was done. The baits were taken out, the capsules were found lying on the snow. This was the limit, and as the three men present examined the capsules one was heard to remark: "That has a fox skinned a mile for cunning."

There is much difference of opinion as to whether the wolves always still-hunt their deer in this section. The experience of a great many is that they do, showing that the wolf cunningly adapts himself to circumstances. Should wolves howl when in pursuit of game in this section the deer would all take to the water, and none be captured. In the writer's experience, when wolves howl it is to call together the pack. Then, after a short run, the still-hunt begins. That the wolf is a rank coward is a fact. He is very cunning, but a sneak among sneaks, and will follow a man's track at some distance. But let the man turn back and Mr. Wolf will take himself off at a rate that would surprise a King's Plater.

At the present time there is much talk about the amount of fur, being destroyed by baits set for wolves. There is no doubt that where bait is set on the mainland that a few fishers and marten may get poisoned, but by placing the baits on islands in the many lakes, and this is where wolves travel in the winter, this can be avoided. The only furbearing animal I ever saw killed, with the exception of wolf or fox, was by a bait set on the mainland. Superintendent Bartlett is very strict in this respect. And much of the talk comes from trappers outside of the park, who desire to see poisoning done away with in the park so that they can porfit by placing it around the borders with better results. At present it is estimated that only one wolf out of every six that is poisoned, is found, so that much good is resulting from carefully set bait in the park at a very low cost to the Government.

INFORMATION THAT WILL INTEREST AGRICULTURISTS

Annual report of the Minister, 1908.—This summarises much information of interest to agriculturists. Statistics as to the exports of dairy produce from 1868 to 1908 show how great the expansion of this branch of agricultural industry has been since Confederation. In 1868 the total exports of cheese amounted to 6,141,570 lb. of the value of $620,543. In 1891 the quantity exported exceeded one hundred million pounds in weight and in 1902 it exceeded two hundred million pounds. High water mark was reached in 1904 when the quantity exported was 233,980,716 lb. of the value of $24,184,566. The highest total value of cheese exports was, however, in the preceding year, when the quantity exported was 189,710,463 lb. of the value of $22,887,237. The great bulk of these exports has been consigned to British markets. The amount of butter exported, which in 1868 was 10,649,733 lb., of the value of $1,698,042, rose in 1906 to 34,031,525 lb., of the value of 7,05,539, the bulk again going to Great Britain. In 1908 the exports fell to 4,786,954 lb. of the value of $1,068,703, the decrease being attributable to lessened output from drouth and to increase in home consumption.

An investigation has been conducted by the Chemistry Division of the Experimental Farms into the causes of the deterioration of hard wheat when sown on newly-broken scrub-land in certain districts of the Northwest. The conclusion arrived at is that the deterioration is due to prolonged vegetative growth of the wheat plant, hence a retardation of the ripening of the berry caused by excessive moisture in a soil containing large percentages of vegetable matter and nitrogen. It is believed that in a comparatively short time such soils will produce hard wheat as with cultivation and fallowing they will necessarily lose a part of this organic matter and be less retentive of moisture.

In connection with the Health of Animals Branch, reference is made to the new regulations of March 1907, under which all horses imported from the United States must be tested with mallein. It is stated that this important change has caused less irritation than was anticipated and that the regulations are undoubtedly of great value in preventing the introduction of diseased animals. Gratifying results are reported from the policy of slaughter and compensation in dealing with glanders. The expenditure for compensation is now showing an annual decrease and hopes are entertained that in a few years the disease will be practically stamped out. The British Board of Agriculture has recently adopted a policy involving the slaughter of re-acting horses similar to that which Canada was the first to adopt, in 1904. Such a policy has long been advocated in Great Britain by experienced veterinarians.

Experimental work carried on at Antigonish Nova Scotia, has proved that the Pictou cattle disease is due to the ingestion of the weed known as ragwort (Senecio Jacobea) and also that no bad effects following the eating of the plant by sheep. Special attention is therefore being given to the development of the sheep industry in the districts infested by the weed.

2. Report of the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, 1908. The report for the fiscal year ended March 31st, 1908, of Mr. J. A. Ruddick, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, covers a wide field and gives a great variety of information concerning the dairying and fruit industries of Canada. The report, besides an introduction, consists of six parts, dealing respectively with 1. the Dairy Division, 2. the Report of the Assistant Dairy Commissioner, 3. the Fruit Division, 4. the Extension of Markets Division, 5. the Cold Storage Division and 6. the Commissioner's visit to Great Britain and Holland in 1907. The efforts made to impress upon factory men the importance of discontinuing the practice of shipping cheese to Great Britain in a green condition, have, it is stated, been followed by some improvement. According to opinions expressed by British importers this practice, if continued, will curtail the consumption of cheese and thus lessen the demand for it.

Dairying production in 1907-8 was influenced by several factors, which are indicated in the report. In the first place the season of 1907 was very dry, and there was a consequent shortage of feed in some of the most important dairy districts, resulting in a reduction of herds before the ensuing winter. It is pointed out that a succession of good years before 1907 engendered a feeling of security that is not warranted by average climatic conditions, and occasion is taken to emphasize the value of corn, which apart from being an insurance against short pasturage or failure of the hay crop is the cheapest and best winter feed in the dairy districts, especially if preserved in the form of silage. The high prices paid for cheese induced many of the combined factories to make cheese instead of butter, and this fact, coupled with an increasing home consumption, caused the butter exports of 1907 to be the lowest for many years. In estimating the progress of the dairying industry care must be taken not to rely exclusively upon the quantity or value of the exports, which fluctuate acording to the home demand and which must necessarily be affected by the large stream of immigrants during recent years. Mr. Ruddick estimates the increase in the value of the home consumption of butter, cheese and milk for 1907 over 1900 at $10,000,000, and he points out that if this amount were added to the value of the exports for 1907 the total would be largely in excess of any previous record.

Considerable space is devoted to the work of the cow-testing associations which has for its object the improvement of the dairy herds of Canada. It is gratifying that more dairymen have begun to keep milking records of individual cows, for which the branch supplies blank forms. In 1907 there were 56 cow-testing associations in operation in the Dominion, comprising 26 in Quebec, 24 in Ontario, one in Prince Edward Island, two in Nova Scotia and three in British Columbia. In 1906 there were only 16 associations. The members increased from 297 in 1906 to 276 in 1907, and the number of cows entered to be recorded from 3,760 to 9,160. Some striking instances are given of the aggregate yields of different herds showing the influence which superior systems of management have upon the production of milk. Thus, in July, 133 cows gave 123,400 lbs. of milk, 4,128 lb. fat, and 143 cows gave only 107,010 lbs. milk, 3,444 lb. fat. The herd with ten more cows yielded 16,790 lb. milk, 684 lb. fat less. In another case in Victoria county, Ontario, where the records of two herds extended over six months May to October, the total production per cow represented an excess of 76 per cent of one herd over the other, and the 'tremendous possibilities' for the county if the yield from its 19,000 cows were levelled up to a higher average are indicated. This section of the report contains many practical hints upon the selection, breeding, feeding and management of dairy cows and it will well repay careful perusal by all who have a practical interest in dairy farming.

The fruit division records are marked increase in the work of inspection under the Fruit Marks Act, the number of inspections in 1907-08 being more than double those of the previous year. In 1907-08 the lots inspected numbered 961,632 against 330,898, and the number of packages inspected 43,243 against 13,406. For the purposes of the Fruit Crop Report, which is issued monthly from April to September, the Dominion is divided into ten districts. In district No. 2, consisting of the counties on Lake Huron and inland to York county, the orchards though numerous are small. The district is, however, a very large one, and apples can be grown to perfection in any part of it; but the farmers are engaged for the most part in mixed farming. The orchards therefore are usually not well taken care of, and from the fact that they are small and often some distance apart it is expensive for the ordinary itinerant buyer to buy and harvest them. At three or four points selling associations have been formed, and wherever these have been organized apple growing is exceedingly profitable.

Particulars of the transportation facilities, including iced car services, port facilities, cargo inspection, the handling of fruit and the provision of cold storage accommodation in Canada rea given in the reports from the Extension of Markets and Cold Storage Divisions. The progress made during ten years is shown by the fact that whereas in 1896 not a single steamer sailing from Canadian ports was equipped with a mechanical refrigerating plant, there were in 1907 42 steamers made between them 237 trips in the season, the total cold storage space available was 5,001,819 cubic ft. In addition there were nineteen steamers with cooled air accommodation of 907,440 cubic feet, the total available cooled air space for the season being 4,119,354 cubic feet.

Finally the account given by Mr. Ruddick of his visit in 1907 to Geart Britain and Holland and the accompanying photographic illustrations, is not the least interesting and instructive part of the report. We learn that Holland, with a total area of 12,648 square miles, or a little over half the size of Nova Scotia, and a population of 5,104,137 exported in 1906, 58,000,000 lb. of butter and 104,355,000 lb. of cheese. With butter at 22 cents and cheese at 12 cents per lb. the total value would amount to $27,042,432, or nearly as much as the value of the butter and cheese exported from the whole of Canada during the same period.

HAS VERY MANY VICTIMS HERE

Reports Many Cases of Rheumatism and Gives Simple Home Recipe

Thousands of men and women who have felt the sting and torture of this dread disease, which is no respecter of age, persons, sex, color or rank, will be interested to know that while for many years rheumatism was considered an incurable disease now it is one of the easiest afflictions of the human body to conquer. Medical science has proven it not a distinct disease in itself, but a symptom caused by inactive kidneys. Rheumatism is uric acid in the blood and other waste products of the system which should be filtered and strained out in the form of urine. The function of the kidneys is to sift these poisons and acids out and keep the blood clean and pure. The kidneys however are of sponge-like substance the holes or pores of which will sometimes either from overwork, cold or exposure, become clogged and inactive, and failing in their function of eliminating these poisons from the blood they remain in the veins decompose and settling about the joints and muscles, cause the untold suffering and pain of rheumatism and backache, often producing complications of bladder and urinary disease, weakness, etc.

The following simple prescription is said to relieve the worst cases of rheumatism because of its direct action upon the blood and kidneys, relieving, too, the most severe forms of bladder and urinary troubles:—Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. The ingredients can be had from any good prescription pharmacy and are absolutely harmless and safe to use at any time.

A FABLE OF NIGERIA.

The Crafty Spider and the Way He Paid His Debts.

The following fable of the spider is one of the folk tales of northern Nigeria:

A spider, it seems, had occasion to borrow a sum of money. A journey round to the generously disposed brought him 2,000 cowries each from the cat, the dog, the hyena, the leopard and the lion. When pay day came round, the spider remained at home to receive the visits of his creditors in a certain prearranged order. First came the cat to claim repayment of his loan. "Hush!" said the spider. "I hear a noise outside. It is a dog come to see me. You must hide under this calabash for safety." The cat was scarcely hidden when the dog, coming in, made a similar request for his money. Says Master Spider. "There is a cat under that calabash. Take him and consider the debt paid." No sooner said than done. Just then a snuffling and scraping were heard at the door. The third creditor, the hyena, had arrived. "Don't be alarmed, my dear dog, but hide here till he has left." And the spider bustled him under the calabash. "I smell a dog," said the hyena, routing about. "Under that calabash," the spider replied. "Eat him up, and your debt is paid." The dog paid the penalty of his simplicity, and all was quiet once more. The hyena was preparing to leave, when he heard an ominous sound that sent him crouching against the wall. It was the pattering of the leopard's feet at the door. "Quick! Under this calabash!" cries his host, and the hyena curls up in the fatal cache, only to meet a like fete from his more courageous enemy. "My debt is repaid," said the leopard, and ran against the lion coming in. A terrible fight ensued, for the leopard and the lion are equal in strength, so the natives say. When blood and dust make havoc in the house and both animals are exhausting their strength the spider is busy at the fire. Seizing a pot of boiling grease, he pours it over the clawing mass. Leopard and lion roll apart in their death agony, and the spider has only to straighten and clean up before resuming once more the humdrum life of fly catching. No wonder he is known as "Maiwayo," the crafty one.

A REAL CLOUDBURST.

One That Descended Upon a Mountain in Scotland.

What a real cloudburst is like is described by a Scotland correspondent of Country Life: "A cloudburst of exceptional size descended on the Cairngorm mountains, and an old watcher, who has his hut almost exactly where the cloud burst, gives the following details: On July 10, 1901, the morning opened brilliantly fine and warm, with a cloudless sky and brilliant sunshine, but toward noon heavy clouds formed on the hills, and it rapidly became so dark that it was almost impossible to read. He was standing in the door of his hut, when suddenly he heard from the hill across the glen a report like a thunderclap, followed by a noise like the tearing of linen, only a thousand times louder and more majestic in sound. Then he noticed that a solid mass of water had struck the hilltop, and part of it, bounding up again with the force of the impact, had descended on the hilltop immediately behind his hut. Immediately afterward a tremendous volume of water came pouring down both hillsides, forming great rifts in the hills as it swirled, irresistible in its course, down rocks and stones. The channel the flood scooped out was in places quite twelve feet deep, and large rocks were tossed down its course as if they had been pebbles. The sand and stones brought down by the water so dammed up the river Dee that quite an extensive loch was formed. During the time of the cloudburst the weather a mile or two up the glen remained fine, but to the south the clouds were black as night."

AUTOMATIC FOOTBALL.

Actions of One Player After a Kick in the Head.

"Speaking of queer things in football," said an old player, "I recall a game that was played at Annapolis some years ago between Columbia and the Naval academy teams.

"One of the men on the Columbia team, the quarterback and a very prominent player of the year, started the game in good condition, but after part of the first half he was kicked in the head in one scrimmage. It took some time to get him around, but he suddenly arose and gave a signal. The two teams lined up and play went right on.

"This man went through the game, and no one noticed that anything was wrong with him. When the game was over and the Columbia team was on the way back to New York in the train this player, who had appeared to be in a brown study, suddenly turned to the man next to him and asked, 'Who won the game—what was the score?' and a number of other questions that made it seem as if he hadn't been anywhere near the field of play.

"The players were greatly surprised and thought perhaps the kick in the head had hurt the man so that his mind was affected. Later they learned that he was unable to tell what happened from the moment he got the kick in the head until the time he recovered consciousness, so to speak, on the train.

"His playing of quarterback and his giving of signals had been entirely automatic, or, rather, subconscious. That case was referred to frequently in the psychology courses at Columbia, you may well imagine."

Daniel Harrison, a St. John man, came out of the woods near Nerepis, lay down on the track and was fatally injured.

Wagner's Swan.

What interests me about Wagner, says a writer in London Opinion, is his affection for live beasts and animals. In "Siegfried" we have a dragon, and in "Lohengrin," as you are all aware, there is a very beautiful swan. When the late Sir Augustus Harris produced this latter opera something went wrong with the bird. Just before the rise of the curtain, therefore, the audience was considerably surprised and startled to hear the indignant voice of one of the stage hands resounding from the realms behind inquiring with characteristic vigor, "What's the matter with that infernal duck?"

THE art of dress requires in these days most careful study in order to acquire a knowledge of even the rudiments thereof, and be it known that these same rudiments are all-important for any woman who wants to look well gowned. There is a somewhat tiresome monotony in the constant repetition of "long lines" that is heard everywhere, and the crusade against avoirdupois which goes on unceasingly makes man—mere man—wonder at woman's tireless endeavor. To look slender is obligatory from the fashion standpoint, and if nature has not so ordained the figure, then it is essential to obtain the effect some way or other, and ofttimes the desired result is obtained by the lines of the gown without the loss of a pound in weight. But all this means careful consideration of the subject and often repeated trials have to be reckoned with.

The advance styles for spring show a tendency to exaggeration of the slender effects of the winter, but attained solely by the cut and the trimmings, and for the benefit of the great majority of women there is encouragement to be found in the knowledge that every day the secret of the lines is being discovered, so that with patterns the small dressmaker can be relied upon to produce more effective gowns than has been the case for several years. The great point to be considered is that the waist lining shall fit perfectly, and, as has so often been said, the corset must be carefully chosen. Although the short waist line is still the most fashionable, the waist line of the lining and corset are both long—the longer the better being the rule. Then the skirt is placed high on the lining, well above the normal waist, and the material of which the body of the waist is composed is arranged as becomingly as possible, closely fitting but never tight across the bust, and with the flat, close fitted sleeve that always make a woman look slender.

Methods of Securing Straight Lines.

Straight lines in the skirt are difficult to manage, but, while it may be rank heresy to say so, are often "a trick of the trade," the straight line being given by the seam in the centre of the front breadth or by the braiding or placing of the seams. Often a plain scant skirt if not properly adjusted is too full in front. In olden times this fault would have been remedied, or the attempt to remedy it would have been to take in the extra fulness in the centre seam. Now the dressmaker who is clever enough to win success attains the desired result by going into a more elaborate rectifying, lifting the skirt higher at the back and sides, and so giving a much more slender effect and at the same time disposing of the extra material in the back. This is, of course, not a cut and dried rule to be followed, but is one of the methods employed to carry out fashion's dictates and, like most of the rules, has much to recommend it.

The flat, straight trimmings are of great service in the long lines, and every day sees some new and attractive sort of trimming displayed for both street and house gowns. Most elaborate and beautiful in design are many of these trimmings, and there is a great variety to choose from, variety in both color and design as well as price, for, while the cost of the most costly is decidedly alarming to the woman with a slender purse, among the less expensive ones are to be found many that are most desirable.

Broad, flat bands of trimming, passementerie, lace or embroidery, put both on the front and back of the gown, give the straightest possible line, while if the band across the bust is more becoming, then the trimming is put on in the bands at the sides. Satin evening gowns in all colors are made or marred by the embroideries, for if these same embroideries are not carefully chosen for design and color they can sorely deface the most charming of gowns, and the possibilities of color are endless. Gray satin is extremely fashionable this spring, and the net embroidered in silver, gray pearl, steel and rhinestone paillettes is a most effective trimming, black, white and gray net as foundations being chosen for whichever looks the best on the shade of gray.

There are this season an unusual number of designs and materials in the made up trimmings—garnitures, as they are called. These are to be found in straight tunics in the shaped trimmings for the front and back, and in the long, flat pieces which, when properly placed, add so much to the smart effect of the gowns. They are not inexpensive, comparatively speaking; at the same time, they make it possible, if the gown itself is well fitted, for a woman who has to consult economy to possess a gown that would cost a large sum for far less price than if she had to order it entire from an expensive dressmaker. The original cost of many of these garnitures is necessarily large, but as the season advances bargains can be found, some color or design that has not been popular being marked down in price, and which in itself is every whit as handsome and valuable. Dressmakers take advantage of the sales of trimmings, and the clever manager is now on the alert herself to purchase what will aid her in looking well gowned for half the price the more extravagant and less careful woman is forced to pay.

Trimmings to match the gown are not easy to find among these bargains, but when economy has to be closely consulted it is not possible to have exactly what is desired, and there are always good contrasts, while it is possible, if the trimmings are of white silk, without paillettes or spangles, to have it dyed to match the material. This, if heavy embroidered lace is chosen, should always be successful, although sometimes it has to be dipped more than once to get the right shade.

There is no positive rule as to the texture of the trimming. The finest of net is used, as is also the heavier description of lace. The latter hangs in straight effect, but the lighter fabric is softer and can also be given some weight by the embroidery and appliqué work that is considered indispensable in such thin material. Heavy passementerie is coming into fashion once more in the craze for embroidered effects, and jet passementerie threatens to become overwhelmingly popular before long. The finer and expensive qualities and designs in jet passementerie display marvellous work, while in the cheaper grade, there are many effective designs. Jet embroidered lace is extremely smart and is most beautifully worked in elaborate openwork designs; it is extremely expensive, but possesses the merit of wearing well, which the cheaper machine work sadly lacks. Steel, silver and gold and rhinestones are combined with jet in the trimming for evening gowns, and the smartest theatre and restaurant dinner gowns are made most brilliant with these trimmings, black and dark colors in satin showing them off to the best advantage.

Fashion Details That Every Woman Should Know

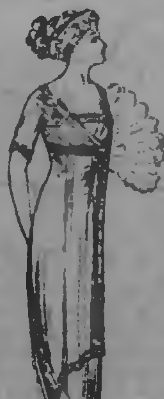

FIG. 1—Pink and Gold Costume.

The satin underdress is an absolutely plain princess, with a short train, the square neck being cut quite low. The underdress is of ivory satin and the only trimming is the broad band of gold embroidery bordering the neck. Plain, straight sleeves that are almost close fitting reach two-thirds of the way to the elbow and are also finished with bands of the embroidery.

The overdress, of pink tulle or chiffon, is drawn across the bust in surplice style. The tulle is carried across the corners of the square neck in a graceful fashion that takes from its angularity. Directly across the bust there is a girdle of deep rose satin which gives the costume the unusual note that is necessary if a smart gown is to be really satisfactory. It is what is called the "interesting" note of a gown and stands for its individuality.

From the left shoulder a band of the gold embroidery falls straight to the bottom of the drapery. The girdle which holds in the surplice of tulle passes under this band, which is attached to the gown down to the girdle. Beneath the girdle the tulle overdress is plain and draped to the figure in clinging lines. In front the drapery reaches about to the knees and from the left side it slopes downward, the longest point being directly in the back. The gold embroidery is used around the bottom of this drapery and is carried up the back as a border to the drapery, which is slashed in the middle of the back showing the satin skirt. The two points of the drapery are finished with long tassels of the same color rose as the girdle.

This model is also used for gowns in which the underdress and the drapery are in the same shade. The bands of embroidery make a sufficient contrast. Yet there is something very fresh and interesting in the combination of the different colors in drapery and underdress in this particular model, where such a large part of the underdress shows. Endless are the variations which can be worked out in this model, which is excellent for "tonal" costumes, those in which different tones of the same color are used. The burnt umber shades, burnt ivory and a reddish gold embroidery carry out this idea to perfection. So also does a blue combination, in which pale blue satin, just off a blue white, forms the underdress, a deeper blue tulle the overdress and a still deeper or more vivid embroidery pailletted, or perhaps brightened with crystals, the trimming.

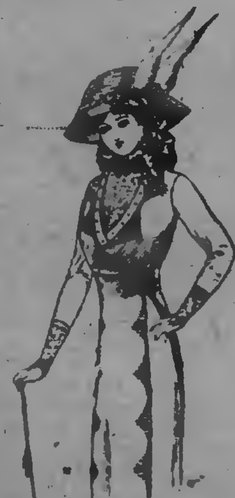

FIG. 2—Braided Cloth Gown.

VERY interesting suggestions for the spring are shown in illustration No. 2. On this costume braiding is used in two designs, one an all-over design and the other a border pattern. The all-over design is used for the chemisette and deep cuffs, and the border is used to edge the panels of the skirt and to trim the bodice in simulation of a surplice.

The costume shown is of gray cloth, with black braiding. The skirt is made with straight panels of cloth front and back which are separated and show a wide under panel at the sides. The front and back panels, which are loose from the sides, are bordered with braid set on in points. The bodice is very plain and tight fitting, with perfectly plain shoulders and close fitting sleeves. The gown is very short waisted, and the fitting of the skirt of this model is a matter of some difficulty and not to be attempted by an amateur modiste.

With this costume is worn a hat in one of the popular shapes now being shown as desirable for early spring. This is a dark gray mushroom shape in a coarse straw, trimmed with a cord around the crown and two pointed white wings at the side. The hat is faced with gray satin in a still darker tone.

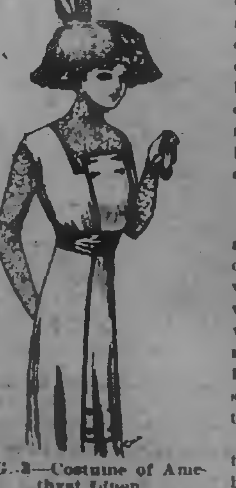

FIG. 3—Costume of Amethyst Linen.

FOR linen dresses amethyst will be a favorite color during the early summer months, not the deep purplish tint, but the paler shade, which always looks cool and dainty for warm weather wear. The one piece style of costume prevails for all wash materials, although many of the new models show elaborate braiding and applied trimmings of various kinds. Also they are made either in a princess fashion or else the front of the waist continues the panel trimming of the skirt in an apparently unbroken line. Some of the dresses made in this way button down the front with a single row of ornamental disks placed at one side, while others have an apron front piece such as is shown in the accompanying illustration. This panel ends abruptly across the bust, where it is held in place with buttons. The upper end laps over the lace yoke.

A narrow band of darker amethyst linen is sewed on flat all around the panel for a finish, and the same treatment is applied to the deep square yoke and armholes. If a striped linen be chosen in preference to a solid color then the panel would look well made of a crosswise piece of the material. One attractive wash dress of blue and white linen had a narrower panel buttoning down the waist and skirt with two rows of pearl buttons. Some of these simple dresses are cut away at the base of the throat, to be worn with flat, round lace collars and silk ties or jabots. It is a style that becomes youthful women particularly well.

"NOW A STRONG HEALTHY GIRL"

Saved from the Grave by Psychine

Miss May Moore of Teeswater, Ont., says "A year or two ago my health was in a very precarious state. I was just getting over a very bad attack of LA GRIPPE which had left me prostrate. I had a dreadful hacking cough, could not rest day or night because of the pain in my lungs, and frequently brought up a large quantity of blood. I consulted one of the best physicians in our town, and after sounding me thoroughly, he told me that my lungs were in a very bad state, that I was getting rapidly worse, and that Consumption would most assuredly bring me to my grave in the near future."

"My appetite was entirely gone, and I was simply wasting away to a shadow. At nights I used to perspire so that in the morning I could wring the water out of my clothes."

"At last PSYCHINE was recommended to me as a sure cure, and although feeling most discouraged, I determined to give it a trial. I was surprised at the marvellous result. It acted like a charm. My cough was relieved at once, and soon left me altogether, neither did I have a single hemorrhage after taking the PSYCHINE. I began to put on flesh rapidly, so much so that several of my friends could hardly believe that I was the same person. PSYCHINE does its work thoroughly, and it undoubtedly brought me back from the verge of the grave and made me a strong healthy girl."

PSYCHINE is the greatest strength restorer and system builder known to medical science, and should be used for Coughs, Colds, Weak Lungs, Wasting Diseases, Loss of Appetite, Weariness, etc. All druggists and stores sell PSYCHINE, 50c and $1 bottle. MAXIMUM U.S. TARIFF GOES UP 20 PER CENT; AN ENLARGED FREE LIST

Washington, March 17.—The long-expected Tariff Revision Bill, prepared by the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee to carry out the pledges contained in the national platform of the Republican party, was intoduced in the House of Representatives to-day by the committee chairman, Sereno E. Payne, of New York. It is a maximum and minimum schedule, the maximum rates being on the average abouut 20 per cent. higher than those of the present Dingley schedules. The minimum rates provided are in many instances material reductions from the present rates.

TAXING INHERITANCE.

The only marked departure from the usual means employed by the Federal Government to raise revenue is found in a provision for taxing inheritances. This was recommended by President Taft in his inaugural address. The inheritance taxes are to be graduated and similar in percentage to those imposed on inheritances in New York State. No duty is imposed on coffee and there is no increase in the taxation of beer and whiskey but tea is taxed eight cents a pound when it comes directly from the countries of production, and nine cents a pound when it comes from a country other than in which it is produced. This nine-cent duty if enacted into law will prove a great blow to the tremendous tea business of Sir Thomas Lipton.

The duty on refined sugar is reduced five one-hundredths or one-half mill a pound, and a fixed amount of Philippine sugar is to come in free. The internal revenue taxes on cigarettes are increased. Iron ore and hides are to be free.

WOOD PULP AND PAPER.

The demands of newspaper publishers prior to the last political campaign that wood pulp and wood paper be admitted free or at a greatly reduced rat eof duty are granted in large measure by provisions in the bill. At the time these demands were made the publishers insisted shoul do eno special enactments in their behalf, but the House leaders refused to accede to this.

Mechanically ground wood pulp from one-twelft of one cent per lb. to exemption from duty on pulp from any country not imposing export duty, etc., on certain forest products.

Printing paper valued at not above 2 1-4 cents a pound from three-tenths of one cent to one-tenth of one cent per pound; valued above 2 1-4 cents a pound and not above 2 1-2 cents pound, from one-fourth of one-cent to two-tenths of one cent per pound.

On eof the interesting provisions in the bill is to foreguard the possibility that enought revenue will not be provided under the measure to wipe out the constantly growing deficit in the Treasury. In the event that a deficit still remains, the Secretary of the Treasury under authority conferred the bill may make another issue of Panama Canal bonds to reimburse the Treasury for the $40 000,000 pai dou tin the original purchase of the canal. According to Chairman Payne this would more than make up any probable deficiency.

It is estimated by those who prepared the bil that it would yield about $320 000,000 annually. From the inheritance taxes alone about $20 000,000 a year is expected. This is $10 000,000 more than the Dingley Act yielded in 1906 the figures of that year being used as a basis of estimate.

DUTIES ON LUXURIES

There are increases in duty on luxeries, and on some other things. Some articles now on the free list have been transferred to the dutiable list. Among the articles on which the duties are increased are various classes of crude cocoa, now free; spices; perfumeries and toilet articles, fancy soap, feathers, furs dressed on the skin, manufactures of hair, oxalic acid, coal tar dyes, certain cements, asphaltum and bitumen, cast polish plate glass of the smaller sizes, pins, parts of watches, peas, figures, lemons, pineapples, mercerized fabrics, knit stockings, surface-coated papers, lithographic prints, and certain classes of gloves. Zinc, in ore, now paying 20 per cent. ad valorem, is to pay one cent per pound for the zinc in it.

The duty on tin-plate, long a Republican hobby, is reduced. The duty on steel rails is reduced also. On shoes the duty is reduced 40 per cent. Lumber and timber duties are cut down generally at the rate of 50 per cent. On wood products used in the manufacture of paper, the reduction is about at the rate of from $6 to $2 per ton.

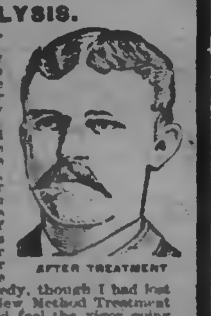
CHEAP WOOL DUTIES CUT.

The duties on wool used in the manufacture of clothing are not reduced, but the cheaper grades of wool used in the manufacture of carpets, etc., are cut. The internal revenue tax on cigarettes is increased from 20 to 50 per cent. The United States and Philippines are to have reciprocal free trade, subject to the limitation on the amount of sugar already noted, and on tobacco.

All the present tariff arrangements with foreign countries are to be abrogated under the terms of the bill, and new arrangements made on the basis of the minimum tariffs imposed. Countries which do not give the United States the benefit of their minimum tariff rates or otherwise discriminate against the United States, ar eto have their products assessed at the maximum rates provided in the bill.

Coal and agricultural implements are to be admitted free of duty where the countries from whence they come admit United States coal and agricultural products free.

BEFORE TREATMENT



AFTER TREATMENT

NERVOUS DEBILITY

OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT will cure you and make a man of you. Under its influence the brain becomes active, the blood purified so that all pimples, blotches and ulcers heal up; the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, bashfulness and despondency disappear; the eyes become bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body, and the moral, physical and mental systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. The various organs become natural and manly. You feel yourself a man and know marriage cannot be a failure. We invite all the afflicted to consult us confidentially and free of charge. Don't let quacks and fakirs rob you of your hard-earned dollars.

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.

THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS.

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in early youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, went to Mt. Clemens for baths, but received little benefit. While at Mt. Clemens I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and will continue to do so."

CURES GUARANTEED OR NO PAY

A VISIT TO THE IAN McLAREN OF CANADA

By B. VanBlaricom in the "Canadian Bookman" for April.

(The Canadian Bookman)

"How did I become a writer? I may say that it was largely owing to the influence of my wife, who gave me no rest night or day; women have such creative imaginations. Then at a social gathering one evening I was strongly urged to write. I replied that I would some day, but influential friends, whose opinions I valued, remarked that I should begin at once. On the way home I thought the matter over, and, although it was eleven o'clock when I reached the manse, I inwardly observed: If I am going to begin, why not to-night? I lighted a lamp, and sat down. Before midnight I had completed the first chapter of 'St. Cuthbert's.' I presume if I had not taken decisive action that I might still be seriously thinking about entering the field of literature."

Thus Rev. Robt. E. Knowles, pastor of Knox church, Galt, Ont., author of "St. Cuthbert's," "The Undertow," "The Dawn at Shanty Bay" and "The Web of Time," now one of the foremost and favorite novelists of the day, began his literary career, his first work appearing in 1905.

A BUSY LIFE.

I found him the other morning in a den, a spacious ground-floor apartment to the left of entrance of the main hall of the manse in the solid and staid Scottish town. Although a busy man, Mr. Knowles never appears in a hurry. If he were, he could not find time to faithfully attend to the moral and spiritual needs of that historic church which has the largest communicant roll of any Presbyterian kirk in Canada. But somehow he discovers time for much more—time to curl, to hunt, to ride, to golf, to lecture, at least once a week, and to engage in literary pursuits, yet he does not seem overworked. He is no recluse—no self-centered soul—for he gives freely of his talents to public enterprises, and in the municipal and educational problems of the town takes a lively interest. He is a member of the Galt Collegiate Institute Board, and frequently addresses the pupils. An inveterate traveller, he has crossed the broad Atlantic on many occasions, visiting Europe and the Mother Country, while there are very few spots in America's wide expanse with which he is not familiar.

An on-looker would think that any one of these pursuits would keep an ordinary being on the move, and the query naturally arises, how does he accomplish so much? Well, here is an outline of diurnal duty. He rises at 7.30 and 9 o'clock finds him in his study. For an hour and a half he gives himself up entirely and unreservedly to literary work, writing on an average about 800 words a day. Although he at times pens as many as 2,000. The next two hours are devoted to sermonic preparation, or reading, and then lunch.

HIS RECREATION.

"I do no literary work at night," he declared; "I have never been able to make any satisfactory progress by the mellow glow of artificial light. I find that my pen does not flow freely and my thoughts refuse to surge. I halt and hesitate and soon realize that I am sorting words; so I confine my literary labors to the early morning hours. In the afternoon, from 2 to 4, I play golf in summer and in winter enjoy the royal game of curling. From 4 to 6 I mount my horse and go about my work. I am not boasting when I say that I have the finest saddle-steed in this district. He captured second prize at the New York Horse Show. I thus visit a large number of parishioners, many of whom live in the country, and answer all calls of sickness and distress—and they are not few in number in a congregation the size of Knox church, the membership embracing 550 families and 1,400 communicants. In the evening I am frequently engaged at the church, the weekly prayer service, the meetings of session, and other gatherings claiming my attention. Rarely do I have a night completely to myself, and, when I do, I spend it reading in my study and count the moments as pure gold. You must put something into the hopper or the mill will soon dry up, you know, if its sources of supply are constantly drained and never fed."

Mr. Knowles conducts two services every Sunday, and also takes an active part in Sunday school work. He has been eleven years in Galt and for seven years previous was pastor of Stewarton Presbyterian church, Ottawa. He has thus seen eighteen years of active, zealous, ministerial life, being ordained in 1891 by the Presbytery of Ottawa. His father, a Presbyterian minister, was a native of Ballymena, Ireland, while his mother was also of Irish extraction, the ancient city of Cork being her birthplace. The natal spot of their gifted and eloquent son and vivid portrayer of Scotch character, was in the little hamlet of Maxville, Ont., in the County of Grey. The celebrated Orangeman, Dr. Sproule, M.P., was already practising in that northern region. "He saw my earliest dawn," Mr. Knowles remarked with a smile.

To-day Mr. Knowles is in his forty-first year, although the casual observer gazing upon the classic features and into the large, luminous eyes of the man, from whose broad brow the silvering thatch of nature is rapidly receding, would make a guess that he should own, at least, to a halfcentury of existence. "I would rather be young and look old," he observed, discussing the age problem, "than look young and be old, in the same sense that it is better to deserve the good opinion of men and not have it than to have it and not deserve it. You know there is a German problem that runs, 'Whether men speak well or ill of thee, thou art therefore, not other than thyself.'"

Of the hobbies of the author-preacher, little more need be added. An ardent devotee of the stane and besom, he can "skip" a game with splendid judgment and skill. With golf club he steadily vanquished all opponents on the golf links last summer, and forged ahead until he reached the semi-final class—well, never never mind what happened then. Lover of the great outdoor world, he is fond of hunting and riding, while among his less strenuous forms of exercise are billiards, and in that most scientific hobby he sometimes beguiles an hour, several of his parishioners boasting the necessary table.

HIS SURROUNDINGS.

But amid what surroundings does he do his daily work? His den is large and faces the east, overlooking the Grand River, while, between his residence and the banks of the stream that gives Galtonians a shudder every spring lest it should bestow its usual baptism—cold and relentless—a beautiful terraced lawn greets the eye. From the wide verandah the view is enchanting, and among stately pines the house itself, now occupied thirty years or more as a manse, is one of the historic dwellings and memorable land marks of passing time in the thriving and deeply religious centre of "New Jedboro." Built three-quarters of a century ago, it was in its day one of the show places of the town. It is commodious and comfortable, typical of the warmth and welcome within. But the study — how ample its proportions, its walls barricaded with bookcases containing two thousand volumes, while in the fireplace the flames burn brightly and on every side are scattered cosy chairs which invite you to recline and remain. There is nothing elaborate about the birthspot of Mr. Knowles' stories, which throb with human intesets and tell with sentiment, tenderness and pathos the tales of men and women fighting the battle of life and tasting of its joys and sorrows, its triumphs and trials, its hopes and fears, its love and loneliness—the record of the human heart.

"Do you use a typewriter?" I asked.

"Why, I would just as soon do my love-making in public. Use a typewriter! It would destroy the divine afflatus. No, I write every word by hand—but do not think I send that to the publishers"—holding up several closely-written pages of foolscap the chirography being in small, inky characters—"the printers would have a nice time making out that horrible scrawl, wouldn't they? No, I carefully write what I have to say, as I have told you, at the rate of about eight hundred to two thousand words a day. When my story is finished I call in a typist and dictate to her and this I send to the publishers. I generally begin to write a story in November and keep steadily at it until July."—Mr Knowles is now engaged on another novel which will appear this fall. Its title is "The Attic Guest." With respect to revisions the authro reads the proofs four times. Three revises are sent, each one succeeding the other, and then comes an OK, proof after which the pages are ready to be bound in book form.

In the process of revision interpolations are made, many a paragraph altered and re-written and in some instances whole chapters so amended that the finished product is at certain times scarcely on speaking acquaintance with the original. An author's work is something like that of a railroad builder. Sir Sandford Fleming, the eminent Canadian engineer and father of the Pacific cable, was with the first surveying party of the C.P.R. that went through the Rockies and in later years he was a passenger in an observation car on the first train crossing the mountains. Contrast the sense of security, comfort and ease of Sir Sandford's experience when rolling through that majestic Alpine region on bands of steel with his first difficult and dangerous undertaking and you have a very fair indication of the supreme satisfaction of an author when he sees his task completed and the feeling he has when he tackles the first chapter.

HIS FAVORITE READING

Biography is the favorite reading of Mr Knowles. He revels in its pages and delights in its conflicts and achievements. His heroes are Carlyle and Abraham Lincoln. He regards them as the two most central and outstanding figures of the 19th century, in their respective fields, the one as the greatest leader, liberator and statesman of his country, the other as the fearless, outspoken literary light, commanding character and dauntless sage of the heather-clad hills.

In his literary and ministerial labors, the author of "St Cuthbert's" finds no overlapping, no interference no drawbacks—the one being the complement of the other. To give force and strength, tenderness and truth to his stories he must be in the current of human endeavor in order to keep the fires of imagination burning and the sympathetic flame aglow. He must be an aggressive actor in the daily drama of life. He finds types of stern, rugged character in the strong, healthy and invigorating make-up of the canny Scot of North and South Dumfries Townships. His characters are all portrayed from the life and pursuits such as he encounters in close contact and touch with these people, their sorrows, temptations, struggles, ideals, pleasures, pursuits, and victories. Mr Knowles unhesitatingly declares that they are a people without veneer or affectation, possessing strong elemental characteristics, clannish and cold, perhaps, to the unknowing; but when the heart is reached, difficult though the process may be, it is equally as difficult to escape.

Mr. Knowles is the first pastor of the historic sanctuary who was not born in the land of the heather and educated in Edinburgh. Some years ago at a meeting of Knox kirk session, when the subject of the country of their birth was referred to, out of the thirty-one elders in attendance they all proclaimed the "land o' cakes" as the one in which they first opened their eyes, "and" continued their pastor, "they are the best people, the most considerate and indulgent, the most loyal and true, as well as the most affectionate and tender, of any in the world. I have been among them eleven years now, and in all my intercourse there has never been a harsh word—never a breeze. The hearty tie of people and pastor is indeed strong."

METHOD OF WRITING

"In all my writings I follow the human path and here I may incidentally observe that few if any, of my flock escape affliction. I find, in the course of time that death, disease and sorrow knock at every door. In the great domestic drama, love and loneliness, pleasure and pain, seem ever intermingled. This tends to keep the mind of one, who shares alike in their sufferings and triumphs at a white heat, and, in the interpretation of life, and truth, it stimulates the intellect, stirs the emotions and enlarges the sympathy. If there is any predominant quality in my books it is the heart element, —the human interest —the revelations in many homes as I see and experience them on every side. I believe many writers have in mind the characters and a definite outline of the plot or story before they begin. With me I may say that I take one or two central, pregnant figures, drawn from local associations and insight. In developing my narrative, I follow, as it were, the lines of least resistance. My thoughts are liberated as imagination suggests and I permit circumstances to make the plot. All these seem to come with the characters, and I would rather let the characters unfold the plan than make the plan create the characters. If you will pardon a personal illusion, I may tell you that in preaching I never write out my sermons, but having my headings or central thoughts before me, I trust to the inspiration and contagion of the audience for the effectivense, and strength of my sermon. If I were asked afterwards—as I have been on several occasions—to repeat what I have said to a stenographer—I am completely at sea; the thoughts refuse to flow; the mind is torpid and sluggish; and the words halting and lame. It is the same in connection with my literary work. A few general characters take entire possession of my mind and intellect, and on these I rear the superstructure. Experiences take shape and form as I proceed, just as in life's daily record, and the fires of fancy kindle and burn as I commit my feelings and impressions to paper. This is how incidents are created and so situation follows situation until the climax is reached and the story ended."

A CANADIAN LITERATURE.

"Is there a Canadian literature?" I asked.

"Well, you know that Robert Barr left Canada, his native country, because he said that Canadians were better judges of whiskey than literature. This was a bitter arraignment of the discrimination of Canadians. The cities too often are ready to reach for the black cap, and in literary work I would far rather sooner be tried by a jury than a judge. The people are, after all, the great jury who render the final verdict. I would say there is a Canadian literature in so far as there can be—in spite of the critics who try to destroy the structure by breaking in the windows and berating those inside. You can never hatch the chicken by smashing the egg."

"What is the future for the young novelist in this country?"

"The development of our national life, growing literary relish, culture of intelligence and increasing wealth, along with a rapidly augmenting population could make a large market. In the past there may have been a paucity of buyers, but to-day Canadians, other things being equal, are as willing and anxious to buy and read Canadian works as any others. There is really no national literature; all literature is the same in this sense. Adam Bede would have been worth as much being a Canadian story as an English tale. All is the story of life, which is the same in every land where the intensest longings and deepest feelings of the soul find expression. Life is an instrument and all life is uniform. Conflict, strife, fear, joy, love, trial and triumph are seen on every hand. The great Canadian novel that we hear so much about which has not yet been written—will not be the production of a great Canadian author, but the outpouring of a great Canadian soul. It will not necessarily be historic or national, but will deal with life in every phase.

LEADING AUTHORS.

Mr. Knowles, when questined, as to whom he considered the most outstanding Canadaian auttor, living or dead, replied that of those who had passed "into the silent kingdom," he regarded Archibald Lamapman as the sweetest and tenderest singer, rich in color and delicate in harmony, while in the arena of prose writing the most distinguished representative was Judge Haliburton. He established a school in his refreshing sketches of "Sam Slick" and thereby kindled a torch of humor at which scores have vainly tried to light their tapers. Judge Haliburton is known in the literary world today more widely than any other Canadian.

Of living Canadian writers, Mr. Knowles remarked that Ralph Connor was undoubtedly the most widely read, appealing strongly to the middle religious classes, particularly in the United States. Sir Gilbert Parker was the most nimble expert, and Norman Duncan was probably the greatest artist in letters. Duncan had lived so long in New York and Parker in England, that they had practically ceased to be Canadian authors. In elemental power, the greatest Canadian poet poet is William Wilfrid Campbell. Some of his verse is cast in tyrannic mold and is at times seething and subtle. His great gift is in giving stirring utterances to the emotions and passions.

"Yes," continued Mr. Knowles, "the literary field is the only one where nepotism does not count, where pull goes for naught. Officialdom and influence yield you nothing. Readers place a ban on no one, and the production of a son of a chimney sweep, if worthy, is as welcome to a magazine or publishing house as that of the scion of a millionaire, and is accorded as enthusiastic appreciation. The only force that tells in this battle is merit, pure and simple—the ability to personally 'deliver the goods.'"

"As to the methods which should be employed to increase the interest of young Canadians in books our public school readers should, where merit warrants it, contain selections in prose and verse, from Canadian authors," added the speaker.

The most famous pulpiteer in America, Rev. Dwight Hillis, was once prevailed upon to write a book. It was thought that, as he was such an outstanding figure and so commanding an orator, a production from his pen would immediately meet with success. The work was an awful failure.

"There is an intrinsic judgment seat in literature, sovereign and arbitrary," continued Mr Knowles, "and a novel depends for its success on the real power to grip. The distinctive quality of fiction is its original creation. A great name in some other arena, or the unbounded popularity of a previous work, does not avail. It is no warrant for success, no guarantee of a wide sale. A publisher cannot tell what is going to take and what is not. I suppose the most widely read book in America was "In His Steps," by Chas M. Sheldon. The manuscript was offered to the Fleming H. Revell Co. who returned it. In less than six months, so insistent had become the demand they had to purchase 225,000 copies to meet the wants of their patrons. A writer or a publisher, could he foresee the future, would indeed be happy. Many an author has written a work for which there was a universal call and the publisher, to secure his next production, has paid him a royalty in advance. In not a few instances a succeeding book from the same pen has not met with one quarter the sale of its predecessor. One can never tell, to use a colloquial expression, how a book will "catch on." My publishers tell me that Canadians, population considered, are the best book buying people in the world. In other words, the residents of Canada, in proportion to their number, purchase more copyright works than the citizens of any other country."

"Yes," he concluded, "many writers are pursuing the same path, all clamoring for recognition, and patterning their product after some original who has blazed the way, but the work that will live, will not be after any particular type of diction. It will be the outpouring of a great soul, the recital of human experience, the liberation of imagination—something that will have strength, tenderness and freedom as well as the power and pathos to stir and stimulate those making their way along life's rugged road, with new hope fresh courage, and unfaltering faith."

A Woman's Sympathy

Are you discouraged? Is your doctor's bill a heavy financial load? Is your pain a heavy physical burden? I know what these mean to delicate women—I have been discouraged, too; but learned how to cure myself. I want to relieve your burdens. Why not end the pain and stop the doctor's bill? I can do this for you and will if you will assist me.

All you need do is to write for a free box of the remedy which has been placed in my hands to be given away. Perhaps this one box will cure you—it has done so for others. If so, I shall be happy and you will be cured for 2c (the cost of a postage stamp). Your letters held confidentially. Write to-day for my free treatment. MRS. F. E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

USING PURGATIVES INJURES THE HEALTH

In the Spring a Tonic is Needed—But Not Harsh, Drastic Medicines.

A spring medicine is an actual necessity to most people. Nature demands it as an aid in carrying off the impurities that have accumulated in the blood during the indoor life of winter months. But unfortunately thousands of people who recognize the necessity for a spring medicine do not know what is best to take, and dose themselves with harsh, griping purgatives. This is a serious mistake. Ask your doctor and he will tell you that the use of purgative medicine weakens the system but does not cure disease. In the spring the system needs building up—purgatives cannot do this; they weaken you still more. The blood should be made rich, red and pure—no purgative can do this. What is needed in the spring is a tonic, and the best tonic medical science has yet discovered is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose of this medicine actually makes new, rich blood. This new blood strengthens every organ, every nerve, and every part of the body. This is why they cure headaches and backaches, rheumatism and neuralgia, and a host of other troubles that come from poor watery blood. That is why men and women who take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills eat well, sleep well, and feel bright, active and strong. If you need a medicine this spring try this great reviving tonic, and see the new life, new health, and new strength it will put into you. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Joseph O'Blain, a Metcalfe farmer, was awarded $800 and costs at London Assizes against the M.C.R. for injuries.

PREMIER NOT WELL

Friends Are Alarmed at Absence From House of Sir Wilfrid.

Ottawa, March 22.—Some alarm is expressed in Government circles over the condition of Sir Wilfrid's health. He has not been in the House during the past week. The word was given out early in the week that the Prime Minister had a cold, but would be out the next day. Then when his continued absence from the precincts of Parliament began to excite comment it was whispered that he had tonsilitis; while during the past few days lumbago has been alleged as the cause of his confinement to the house.

Whatever may be the matter with Sir Wilfrid, some of his warmest friends and admirers are beginning to fear a recurrence of his old malady. He kept an appointment with Hon. Robert Rogers and Hon. Colin Campbell on Friday, but he was able only to open the conferences relating to the Boundaries Bill and ask the western delegates to return on Tuesday. He went home and did not appear in the House that afternoon.

When Sir Wilfrid's health two years ago temporarily failed there was apparently no organic trouble, but merely a weakness which necessitated a long rest. Since he recovered he has been giving more attention to his bodily needs, but he has been an indefatigable worker and it is feared that the strain of the past two years may have been too great. In all probability he will be forced to get away from Parliament and Ottawa for a prolonged visit to the seashore.

WOMAN LEAPS FROM WINDOW

Buffalo, N.Y., March 22.—Mrs. William Ferguson, 33 years old, of Owen Sound, Ont., leaped from a window on the third floor of a rooming-house in Washington street here yesterday.

The police say she had been enticed to a room by a man who had promised her liquor. Mrs. Ferguson had some words with the man and then rushed to the window and threw herself to the pavement, 30 feets below. Both of her legs were broken and her spine was hurt. She may not recover.

Mrs. Ferguson's husband and two children live in Owen Sound. Her father, John C. Wright, living near Owen Sound, is reported to be a well-to-do farmer.

SUFFRAGETTES ARE ANGRY

They Do Not Like the Bill Now Before the British Parliament at Present Time.

London, March 22.—The adult suffrage bill, which was read and shelved in the House of Commons Saturday, is regarded by the suffragettes as cancelling the possibility of woman franchise being granted at this session.

The measure was introduced despite their protests. They know there is no chance of adult suffrage in England to-day. They have always demanded suffrage only on the same terms as men have it. Therefore this bill was designed really to kill the project for the present.

Premier Asquith, in discussing the bill, said it was well known that on the woman suffrage question the Government was not of one opinion, and it had never been made a Government question. He himself believed, as did most of his colleagues, in the necessity for reform in the present franchise, apart from any question of sex, as to which he wished to reaffirm what he had previously said, that the Government intended introducing a measure for general electoral reform. These veiled promises did not assuage the suffragette wrath.

While Mr. Asquith was speaking, four attendants carried in four huge bundles of papers. It was a petition from the anti-suffragettes, signed by 243,853 women, praying the House of Commons to reject any measure granting the Parliamentary franchise to women. It was received with much laughter and was then gravely carried out again.

In the clouds, just before 10 o'clock in the forenoon, there appeared a bright red streak on which could be plainly seen a landscape, with fields, streams and woods, among which two bodies of troops in battle formation were advancing towards each other, firing volleys. The puffs of smoke were clearly visible.

Half an hour later the picture suddenly disappeared, but the excitement and fear aroused among the villagers lasted until next morning, when the explanation appeared in the newspapers of the district that a sham fight had been held by the garrison of Mergenthaim, some twenty miles distant, and had been miraged on the clouds.

HOUSE AND DRIVING SHED BURNED DOWN

Fire at Residence of Mr. Thos. Sutton, in Smith—Overturning of Lantern in Driving Shed the Cause—Most of the Effects Saved.

A lantern overturning was the cause of a disastrous fire at the home of Mr. Thos. Sutton, Smith, shortly after midnight on Saturday. The farm on which the fire occurred is the property of Mr. Bert McKee.

Mr. Sutton's sons returned home from the city about 12 o'clock on Saturday night, and accidentally upset a lantern in the driving-shed. The flames caught under the driving shed floor and the young men used their coats to smother them, and thought they had succeeded in extinguishing them. They went into the house and about one o'clock in the morning the family was awakened by the flames from the shed. The fire had not been thoroughly put out and commenced to burn again, getting great headway.

The driving shed is situated about one hundred feet north-west of the house, and the wind was blowing from the north-west. This blew the sparks from the shed to the house, which also caught on fire. There were no means of fighting the flames, and both the shed and house were burned down. Most of the household effects were saved. A shed between the driving shed and the barn was torn down in order that the blaze might not endanger the barns.

Mr. J. A. Storey, agent for the Farmers' Union Fire Insurance Co., informed the Review this morning that the loss would be partially covered by insurance.

C.P.R. BRAKEMAN ENDED LIFE AT SHARBOT LAKE

"I have done it."

In this brief sentence William Blakely, Sharbot Lake, aged 21 years, announced Friday night to his brother that he had made a successful attempt to take his own life by swallowing a quantity of carbolic acid. For some time the unfortunate young man has been acting in a strange manner and his friends have been keeping a watch on him.

Friday night, shortly after six, he eluded their surveillance, went to a store and secured a bottle of carbolic acid. He then went to a mill yard where he swallowed the contents of the bottle of carbolic acid. His brother, who had been keeping track of William, arrived at the mill yard just after the unfortunate man had swallowed the fatal dose and was startled by the announcement, "I have done it," and an empty bottle and streaks of red from the burning acid down young Blakely's chin amply bore out his statement. It was 6.25 when the fatal potion was swallowed and at 7 o'clock the man who had committed the rash deed, died an awful death.

As soon as young Blakely realized that his brother had taken carbolic acid he hurried him home and called in Dr. Ourtley but medical skill was of no avail.

hTe deceased was a brakeman on the C.P.R. with his headquarters at Havelcok. Last fall he was laid off but had been recently notified to begin work again. It is said that he was in love with a girl whom he proposed to marry. There is said to have been some interference in his love affairs and Blakely took the matter to heart and brooded over it. It was after this that he began to act so strangely and his relatives watched him. A father, mother, one brother and one sister are left to mourn the sad occurrence.

When the Teacher Got Mad.

Wilkes-Barre, March 22.—When Prof. Clayton Kellar, principal of the Laveyville High School, sat down in a pond of water which had been poured into his chair, was he justified in using a ruler on Miss Ruth Russell, a 19-year-old pupil, when he found that she had constructed the lake?

Prof. Kellar was arrested yesterday, charged with assault and battery by Judson Russell, the girl's father.

Bought Ayton Plant.

Detroit, Mich., March 22.—It is stated that the $17,000 plant formerly used by the binder twine factory at Ayton, Ont., and which was purchased by M. J. Daly of Chicago for $6,500, was installed in the penitentiary at Jackson, Mich., as new machinery. The grand jury investigating the prison management have just discovered it.

FIREMAN'S BODY HAS BEEN FOUND

Amherstburg Man's Death Has a Suspicious Appearance.

Windsor, March 22.—Some mystery attaches to the finding of the body of John Conway, 29 years old, of the Amherstburg fire department, on the river beach, just off the rear of Capt. John Menzie's property in Amherstburg, at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

There are some indications that Conway may have met his death through foul play.

The body had been in the water about twenty-four hours.

It was discovered by some children who were playing in the vicinity.

The body showed several severe abrasions. On the planking of a boathouse, not far from where Conway's remains lay, the police discovered bloodstains, and a bloody imprint on the handle of the door leading into the boathouse. Coroner Park has taken charge of the case but no inquest has been decided upon.

MAKING MONEY WHILE YOU WAIT

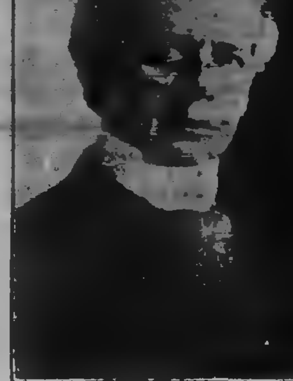
Toronto, March 22.—An alleged "green goods" game was broken up last night when Messrs. Shteren and his wife Malle, Austrians, were arrested by Detectives Wallace and Armstrong.

As there was no real counterfeiting apparatus discovered the couple were not slated on the docket as counterfeiters, but as plain vagrants.

A large egg-shaped, mysterious looking brass affair with a battery and some machinery in it was found among the effects, which, it is said, was represented to prospective victims as being capable of turning out brand new crisp bank notes of any amounts. The patrons of the syndicate were supposed to pay so much real money to receive probably twice as much phoney stuff that would baffle detection.

As far as can be learned, nobody has yet been stung in Toronto, but then the game was only introduced a couple of days ago.

Canada's Premier Is Reported Ill



SIR WILFRID LAURIER

KIDNAPPED BOY NOT YET FOUND

Sharon, Pa., March 22.—Weary and worn showing in his face the terrible strain under which he has been for the last three days, J. P. Whitla, father of Willie Whitla, the kidnapped boy, returned yesterday morning from a fruitless trip to Cleveland.

The father refuses to sleep at all, and keeps up through sheer will power. Yesterday physicians gave orders that Mrs. Whitla be not allowed to see any visitors.

Hundreds of letters from all over the country continue to pour in from friends and strangers alike, tendering sympathy.

Whitla did leave $10,000 in Blatison Park, Ashtabula, Ohio, Saturday, night, as requested by an unknown writer, but the police heard of it and lay in wait. No one came.

EXCITEMENT IN BRITAIN OVER NAVAL ESTIMATES

London, March 22.—"England's national existence may be in peril within less than a generation from the tremendous navy now being hurried on in Germany from the domineering ambition of the German chiefs' aspirations to increase the German race," writes Frederick Harrison, leader of the English positivists. "It is no question of loss of prestige, no question of the shrinkage of empire—it is our existence as the foremost European power, even as a thriving nation. How idle are fine words about retrenchment, peace and brotherhood while we lie open to the risk of unutterable ruin, to a deadly fight for national existence, to a war in its most destructive, most cruel form."

These are words not of a habitual scaremonger, but of a man who for forty years has been head of a school whose doctrines include the abolition of militarism. They are extracts from a two-column letter published in Thursday's Times by Mr. Harrison.

Mr. Harrison sees as between Germany and Britain "all elements of a contest quite natural in the ultimate solution of national destinies. With the normal growth of these mighty nations it may well come within an actual generation. It is an antagonism like that between Athens and Sparta, Rome and Carthage, Spain and Britain, Germany and France — one which seems to be independent of persons, even of the will of the peoples, to be borne on by the elemental springs of national destinies. It seems inevitable. Our supremacy at sea will be met by a determined challenge within a reasonable time.

"The German navy is not built for distant voyages," he says. "It is built to act as the spearhead of a magnificient army. This army, as we know, has been trained for a sudden transmarine descent on the coast, and every road as well as bridge and smithy in East England and Scotland declared in the German War Office. If ever our naval defence were broken through and the military occupation of our arsenals, docks, and capital effected, the ruin would be such as modern history cannot parallel. It would not be the Empire but Britain that would be destroyed.

"Is there an intelligence department at the Admiralty?" asked Bonar Law in Parliament on Thursday with much the same scorn as was used in reference to the British military intelligence department after its incapacity had been shown up during the early stages of the Boer war. Others go farther and lay the responsibility of the situation now developed before Admiral John Fisher.

"Thou art the man," was a black head-line in one paper which, not content with the indictment of the first sea lord in prose, called in the services of a poet, who concluded several hotly denunciatory stanzas with the following:

What shall be said of those who said:
"Sleep soundly Britain in your bed."
With danger looming?
What shall be told of those whose hand
Thus lightly would their native land
To death be dooming?

Sir John Fisher's retirement from the Admiralty is called for clamorously by that section of the press which espoused Beresford in the quarrel.

"It repeatedly has been suggested by the admirals," says one caustic commentator, "that Fisher should be rewarded with a peerage for his services to the country. Agree to give him two peerages, but retire him from the Admiralty."

There is little likelihood of this idea being carried out at present. Fisher will stand or fall with the Government, which, as one of its most friendly critics says, has "been cutting down naval expenditure in order to find money for semi-socialistic experiments."

BLACK LIST MAN FINED

At Police Court This Morning Was Found Drunk on the Street

At the police court this morning, John Donahue was charged with having obtained intoxicating liquor when he had been served with the black list notice. He admitted the charge and after hearing the evidence, the Magistrate fined him $10 or twenty days in gaol.

The defendant gave evidence on his own behalf. He said he had met a friend from the woods on Saturday, and had been treated by him on the street. He admitted being around hotels during the day but did not ask for or receive any drink.

The Magistrate imposed the above fine on him, as he thought the prisoner needed a lesson for his own good.

ALEX SHARPE AMONG THE THREE CONVICTS RELEASED

Kingston, March 20—Three convicts who left the big white prison this morning immediately after their release, enjoyed their first smoke in several years. Immediately after leaving the cutter which conveyed them to the station they made purchases of cigarettes, tobacco and pipes.

Bright smiles of happiness adorned their countenances. One of the trio was a "peg leg" from Toronto, the second was Jack Walsh, also of Toronto and the third, Sharpe, of Peterborough.

Charities Conference.

Buffalo, March 22.—Announcement was made yesterday of the preliminary arrangements for the 36th national conference of charities and correction, to be held here June 9-16, inclusive. Local committee are preparing to entertain 2,000 delegates.

Miners Leaving For Europe.

Mahanoy City, Pa., March 22.—Believing that a strike or suspension is inevitable after April 1 in the anthracite coal fields, scores of foreign mine workers are leaving this region daily for Europe to spend the summer.

A Big Consolidation.

Pittsburg, March 22.—A $10,000,000 consolidation of the independent coking plants in the Connellsville and Lower Connellsville districts at an early date is practically a certainty. Definite financial arrangements to complete the merger have been made.

Boy's Body In Well.

Belleville, March 22.—David, the three-year-old son of Samuel Brooks, a clothing merchant, was missed on Saturday afternoon and yesterday morning his body was found in an unused well in the rear of the Albion Hotel.

FRENCH STRIKE IS AT AN END

The Paris Government Employees Weaken and Sue for Peace.

Paris, March 22.—The great strike of the employes of the Postoffice Department, which has practically isolated Paris and cut off France from communication with the outside world for the past week, collapsed yesterday. The strike committee decided to call off the employes and made the first move to effect a settlement, virtually suing for peace. The Government met the committee half way.

Yesterday afternoon representatives of the linemen called on M. Barthou, Minister of Public Works, ostensibly for the purpose of protesting against the charges that they had cut the wires, but they communicated the terms on which the allied associations collectively would resume work. These were, first, the resignation of M. Simyan, Under Secretary of Posts and Telegraphs; second, that no employe should be dismissed on account of the strike. They also desired the assurance that the delegates of the association hereafter should be permitted to lay their grievances directly before the Minister of Public Works.

M. Barthou said that the Government would not discuss the resignation of an official except with Parliament, but he practically gave the delegation the satisfaction they demanded on other points, explaining to them, however, that the Government had not yet exercised its right of dismissal.

WILDCAT SHOT BY LOCAL MAN NEAR CITY

Three local sportsmen, Messrs. Jas. and Edward Simons and Wm. Denoon, while out hunting on Saturday afternoon, killed a large wildcat about four miles out the C.P.R. track near the wintergreen patches. The dog which was with the party, was the first to get on the track of the animal and after chasing it for about two hours the wildcat took to a tree and the hunters were soon attracted to the spot by the barking of the dog. The animal was shot by Mr James Simons, and when measured, was found to be five feet six inches from the end of the tail to the tip of the nose. This is the second wildcat that has been killed within the last two months, in this locality, Mr Fred Reutch killing one not long ago. The place where the last animal was killed is one that is frequented by many young children in search of wintergreens, who may congratulate themselves in not meeting the animal.

WILL FIRE TEN SHOTS

Kinrade's Lawyer Finds That Revolver of This Type is Manufactured in the U.S.

Special to the Review

Hamilton, Ont., March 22,—Because of the fact that Ethel Kinrade's murderer fired nine shots two theories were held, one that the murderer had but one revolver, which he reloaded in the house, and the other that he had two revolvers. Mr. Lynch Staunton, one of the family solicitors, has been investigating this phase of the case with the result that he has ascertained that a revolver capable of firing ten shots at one time, loading is manufactured in a large United States city. This class of weapons being rare, it is considered it should be easy to trace it, and the police therefore are working on this latest clue.

Lumbermen's Confab Off.

Vancouver, B.C., March 22.—The proposed conference of lumber and saw-mill men with dealers of the prairie provinces, called for Calgary, April 15, has been indefinitely postponed on account of coast members being unable to attend.

Paris, March 22.—Cretien Riedel of San Francisco is here interviewing Government officials in regard to an experiment with Luther Burbank's spineless cactus, which it is proposed to try in the Sahara desert.

ARE LOBBYING AT VICTORIA

Magnates Are Busying Themselves Improving Their Hold on British Columbia Forests.

Washington, March 22.—The American Lumberman declares that having succeeded in getting a reduction of fifty per cent. in the lumber schedule in the Payne Bill American owners of Canadian timber have temporarily transferred their activities from Washington to Victoria, B.C.

The same paper asserts that members of the ways and means committee have been informed that some of those who advocated free lumber before that committee are now at work on members of the Provincial Parliament at Victoria to have present leases, which now run twenty-one years, made perpetual.

It is said that there is an organization composed almost entirely of citizens of the United States and that an investment of a quarter of a million dollars will be made for the purpose of getting more complete control of the Canadian forests.

This organization, it is further said, will enter Canadian politics on a large scale, and it is declared that both parties are seeking its favor.

Alhough it did not succeed in getting lumber on the free list, the cutting of the rates in half is considered advantage enough the double the value of their holdings and to warrant the exploitation of a Canadian lumber holding company.

TERRIBLE MURDER

Woman Hacked to Death in Her Home at Niagara Falls, New York.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., March 22.—A brutal murder took place at 8 o'clock last night when Mrs. Anthony Perak, 50 years old, was literally hacked to pieces in her home at Buffalo avenue and Portage road.

The murderer, who is as yet unknown to the police, used a carving knife, a bread knife and an axe to accomplish his end.

The woman was stabbed several times in the back and abdomen, and her head was crushed in by a succession of terrible blows.

The work, the police believe, was that of a man insane from jealousy or mentally unbalanced from other causes. The husband, who was doubtless a witness of the assault upon his wife, is in a pitiable condition. He talks incoherently of the murder and seems on the verge of mental collapse.

Dr. Frank Jones, who had been summoned to the house by a passer-by, attracted by the hysterical conduct of the husband in the ward, was first to reach the scene. The body was still warm when he arrived. He notified the police.

Eight men have been taken into custody, three of them boarders in the Perak home. The most tangible clue the police have to work upon is the imprint of a bloody hand on a panel of the kitchen door. This panel has been removed and Prof. Whipple of Buffalo, a finger print expert, has been summoned to make an examination of it.

MARRIAGE IS A COSTLY BUSINESS

Windsor, March 22.—Because he contracted a second marriage, Harry A. Bradley, well-known Windsor jeweler, must pay to his sister, Susan Bradley, $1,530, by order of Judge McHugh, in the decision he gave on Saturday in the case of Bradley v. Bradley.

Miss Bradley succeeded in convincing the court that when she left a dressmaking business in Toronto immediately after the death of the first Mrs. Bradley, 13 years ago, and came to Windsor to look after her brother's home and children, she did so on the understanding that she was to have a home for life. When he married again, a little over a year ago, she claimed the agreement was broken.

The award was for wages for six years at $5 a week, no allowance being made for some $700 that she voluntarily expended during her care of the house.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE ON SUNDAY MORNING : FAMILY HAD VERY NARROW ESCAPE

A destructive fire occurred yesterday morning about three o'clock, at the corner of Smith and Water streets, when the grocery stock of Mr. J. L. Guthrie was totally destroyed, and the property, which is owned by the Misses Griffith, was badly scorched. Mr. Guthrie was away in Harvey at the time, and his family, who occupy the rooms over the store, had a lucky escape. The fire was first noticed by two men driving past the store, who immediately notified the occupants of their danger and also sent in the alarm, to which the fire brigade made a quick response and soon had the fire under control, and succeeded in confining it to the store, as no damage was done to any other part of the premises.

The electric wires undoubtedly caused the fire, as they were in bad condition, there being no insulation on them in many places. The fire is supposed to have started at the south-west corner of the store, where the main wires enter near the plate windows which the extreme heat soon cracked, letting in the wind, and the store was soon in a blaze. When the fire brigade first arrived there were three blazes in different parts of the store.

Mr. Guthrie places his loss between $800 and $900 which is partly covered by insurance.

Coal Company Makes Offer.

Montreal, March 22.—It now transpires that the Dominion Coal Co. has offered to pay the Steel Co. $2,500,000 on account of damages and allow the balance to stand until the accounts are adjusted between the two companies.

It remains to be seen whether the Steel Co. will insist on appropriating this amount to the payment to special items of its claims.

The Coal Co. is ready to pay over the cash, but it insists upon reserving the right to dispute any items of the Steel Co.'s claim which it may on examination discover to be invalid.

Last Trailer Burned.

Chicago, March 22.—The quick-step and the dead march mingled in a weird and curious medley at the obsequies of "the last of the trailers" on Friday night. After almost a third of a century of continuous service (so-called) No. 75 made the last trip that a trailer is destined to make on the lines of the Chicago Railway Co. and was forced, bucking and hurdling rails to the last, to a fiery end in a "bonfire."

Blown From Cannon.

Peshawar, British India, March 22.—It is reported that twelve hundred arrests have been made at Jelialabad, Afghanistan, in connection with the plot recently discovered to murder the Ameer, the heir apparent, and the others members of the royal family.

According to advices batches of prisoners are being blown from guns daily.

THE BY-LAW

The projects before the people at the present time are manifold. The city and the city's needs are increasing. Peterborough cannot be handled any longer as a village. It has become a centre of industry, and to a certain extent of population. The dam known as the waterworks dam was built some fifteen years ago at a cost totalling up to date of some $35,000.00. Mr. Kennedy, C.E., of Montreal was the engineer. That dam is no longer equal to the demands upon it. It is not even safe and Mr. Kennedy says it must be replaced. While the ratepayers may grumble at this, the fact remains. The Commissioners declare that after considering the whole question thoroughly they are ready to stand or fall by the by-law so comprehensively set out in another column. While due time for the consideration of the whole question has not in the minds of many citizens been given for consideration of so far-reaching and important a question, the Review has decided to take the stand that it is the best proposition now before the people and with the commissioners' responsibility behind it the by-law must be carried. There is no other proposition before the ratepayers. The commissioners are not acting for themselves on behalf of any private company but wholly and solely for and on behalf of the citizens who elected them to their present positions. A recollection of this fact may minimize much of the opposition that naturally arises when money is to be expended.

THE G. T. P.

The statement made by some Liberal members of Parliament and by the representatives of the G.T.P., that the ten millions is required by the G.T.P. company because it has built a better road than it originally intended, is a nice piece of bluff. The road was to have been a makeshift in the first place, then, was it? But the truth is that the appalling shrinkage of the price of bonds down to 77 has put away the question of going on as originally mapped and agreed upon. Even Liberals of the most enthusiastic type are shaking their heads. Canada is in a very dangerous position.

THE SPECIAL COMMISSIONER'S REPORT

The report of the special commissioner of the Department of Customs, appointed last summer to inquire into the conditions of the woollen industry in England, has been presented to parliament. Mr Costello gives a statement of wages and the conditions of labor in the districts of Bradford, Leeds and Huddersfield, but no comparison is made with the wages paid the woollen mill employees in Canada, and the figures are of interest chiefly to those connected with the textile industry and as a basis for any revision of the tariff the Government may deem necessary.

It may be of interest to state, however, that the men engaged in wool scouring and dyeing in the three English districts mentioned receive an average of five dollars and sixteen cents a week, that in the rag department the average wage of the feeders of machines is $4.87, that under the heading of scribbling and carding women and girls earn about $3 per week, while men earn on an average of $4.87 to $6. For spinners the average for men is $6.08 to $7.30. On the whole the figures show that wages accepted by the Yorkshire operatives are considerably lower than those paid similar operatives on this continent. The conclusion of the report is that in order to make any fair comparison between the cost of manufacturing in Canada and in Great Britain it is necessary to take into account such items as wages; more expensive factory buildings, owing to the rigorous climate and the extra cost of heating; the need for additional buildings to provide for the necessity of carrying larger stocks, owing to Canadas being far removed from the base of supply; and also because Canadian mills are practically compelled by local market conditions to purchase a year's supply of Canadian wools after shearing. The higher rate of interest on money employed, the increased cost of machinery and the more expensive motive power owing to higher prices for fuel are also elements in cost in Canada.

In conclusion Mr. Costello says;—"Owing to the Canadian mills having a limited market they are compelled to show a large number of designs each season and manufacutre from comparatively short warps, which interferes with production and increases cost. These specializations which are so general in Yorkshire have many advantages in lowering the cost of production and also enable the manufacturers in England to do a large volume of business on a comparatively small capital, which is not possible in Canada.

More extended reference to the report will be made in an early issue.—Canadian Textile Journal.

ALMOST SENSATIONAL

It's but a short time since the first box of Booth's Kidney Pills came to Peterborough.

What a work this stranger has accomplished. Dozens of residents benefitted and cured of lame, weak and aching backs, urinary and kidney troubles. It is remarkable; the reason for it is Booth's Kidney Pills are a new blend of vegetable ingredients having a peculiar action on the kidney tissue that brings quick help.

Mrs. M. J. Cook 494 Aylmer street, Peterborough, Ont., says;—

"I always find quick relief in Booth's Kidney Pills. They strengthen and relieve my back of a dull, heavy pain which settles in the small of it and extends into my shoulders. For years I had suffered with these symptoms of kidney trouble and could find no relief. I would have frequent spells of dizziness and headaches. I was restless and weak and would often awake more tired than on going to bed. I had never found relief for these painful and weakening symptoms of kidney trouble until I used Booth's Kidney Pills procured at McDermid & Jury's Pharmacy. I have had little trouble since as I use Booth's Kidney Pills occasionally and they keep me in the best of health."

BRANTFORD BY-LAW IS IN DANGER

Brantford, March 20.—Announcement was made yesterday that unless the bill to be introduced by Hon. Adam Beck in the Legislature affecting contracts with public utilities is amended, the provisions of the bill will nullify Brantford's contract with the Cataract Co. for the supply of power and light to this city.

The bill requires a vote of ratepayers on all agreements made by municipal councils for public utilities for a period of one year or over, and applies to any bylaw or agreement entered into after March 11. The Brantford contract was entered into on March 15, and the issue may have to be submitted to the ratepayers.

BANQUET TO NEW PRESIDENT

New York, March 20.—With songs of the football field and the boat race course, with a deafening cheer and a rousing chorus of "Here's to good old Yale; drink her down," President Taft was greeted last night as the first Yale President of the United States by more than 1,500 students at the Waldorf Astoria.

He was not hailed as the President, but as "Bill," the salutation which punctuated the cheering as he entered.

Large squads of blue-coated policemen were thrown about the hotel. Inside the corridors fairly swarmed with detectives, secret service men and special watchmen.

CANADA'S VIEW OF THE NAVY

London, March 20.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Lord Strathcona states in The Mail there cannot be a doubt that throughout the Empire the universal wish is that our naval supremacy shall be assured. Sir Hugh Graham, asked by The Mail what Canadians would say about the naval estimates, replied that Canadians' whole reliance on British prowess on the idea that the British navy will be kept to the strength and efficiency to meet any possible combination of enemies. It was not too much to say that the strength or supposed strength of the British navy had more to do with sentiment in perpetuation of the British connection than any other factor.

SHIPWRECKED MEN TURN UP

Montreal, March 20.—After shipwreck off a bleak and barren island in James Bay and innumerable hardships suffered in their long and tedious tramp to a railway station, Frank Johnson and George Martin, two of the crew of the ill-fated Stork, the Hudson Bay Co. steamer, arrived in Montreal yesterday morning.

Just one hundred and forty-eight days haved elapsed since Johnson and Martin were compelled, together with the rest of a weary crew, to abandon the fur-laden Stork in the icy waters of James Bay on Oct. 10, 1908. The Stork left London on June 18, 1908.

OF INTEREST

Prof. Barnes, of McGill, who was associated with Prof. Rutherford in the recent radium experiments which aroused so much interest in scientific work, last evening at the Normal school made his first public appearance in Ottawa. A very large audience heard him speak on The Electron Theory of Matter. The lecture was under the auspices of the Astronomical Society. Though a young man, Dr Barnes is an authority in physical research as distinguished from chemical analysis, and his school has upset some of the cherished theories of the older chemists. "Smashed into atoms" will henceforward cease to be an up to date expression. "We must dig up the atom and see of what it is composed. We must go beyond the chemists, and not stop where they stop," said Dr. Barnes in introducing some fundamental facts in connection with the more recent developments in the construction of matter.

POWER IN ETHER

Ether, which conveys our wireless messages pervades all space. Light travels from the sun at the rate of 186,000 miles a second also heat at an enormous speed. These must be something for the light and heat waves to travel in, "something for the waves to wave in."—hence we have invented the name "ether" for this something. Ether, which does not affect the passage of heat or light nor the action of gravitation, is non-compressible, non-viscous, nothing sticks to it or is clogged in its passage through it. According to Sir Oliver Lodge, it is an immensely dense fluid weighing 1000 tons to the cubic millimeter. Ether is an immense storehouse of energy, if we could tap it. We cannot do so but we can see the manifestations of this energy. So enormously greater is this ethered force that the greatest material force would be entirely negligible in comparison, if it were not that our own bodies are composed of matter.

WHAT IS MATTER.

According to Lord Kelvin's theory, matter is made up of little vortices of ether. Masses of matter are composed of numbers of these rings or vortices. Silver, hydrogen, etc. are simply different manifestations of matter. Dr. Barnes illustrated this by experiments. With hydrochloric acid and ammonia he caused smoke rings to be ejected from a small box. These little vortices, he explained, would keep right on but for the resistance of the air or collision with one another. By injecting ink into water he showed how the rings are attracted or repelled, or atoms are displaced by one little vortex colliding with another. He pointed out that the heat of a body is caused by the vibration of its particles

The existence of the "molecule" was first brought forward to account for the construction of matter. The old objection to the molecule — that it could be divided up indefinitely —is that by reducing it so small as to be incapable of sub-division. It has practically been measured and weighed. Its size is 10-8 of a centimeter, or one hundred millionth. Taking the bulb of a common radiometer about three inches in diameter, and supposing a pin hole cut in its side to fill the bulb with molecules at the rate of 100,000,000 a second and beginning at the birth of the solar system, it would take to the end of our planet life.

AN OLD THEORY UPSET

"A time will come when electrical engineers will have to change their signs," said the lecturer, after he had demonstrated that it is from the so-called "negative" electricity we draw our electric force. Long ago Franklin stated that negative electricity was simply the absence of positive electricity. The exact reverse is the truth. In a series of beautiful experiments it was shown that practically all the force came from the negative end of the apparatus. Rays of electric energy were shown, illuminated, pushing and exertive force in a vacuum, and rising or falling when deflecting by a magnet. The ray was shown to be "matter in the fourth state."

THE ELECTRONS

The "electron" seems to about the smallest thing in existence, but one of the most important. Prof. J. J. Thompson, of Cambridge, finds the electric chemical equivalent to the electron to be 10.7 whereas that of the hydrogen atom is 10.4. In other words the electron is 1000 times smaller than the atom. This upsets the chemists theories but confirms the molecular theory. Positive rays of electricity are always associated with matter of atomic size, hence digging up the atom to see what it is made up of, we get the electron theory of matter. Small as it is, the lecturer gave a good comparative idea of the size of the electron. But their strength. Electrons repel each other with a force a trillion trillion times greater than the attraction of gravitation, or say some 320 quadrillion tons. This gives them a velocity as great as light. Some day all these negative electrons will find their positives and be at rest."

The principles of the electric currents of electro plating, and of insulating were explained fully.

"Far greater marvels are in store for the human mind than any we dream of," said Dr. Barnes, in closing. A vote of thanks, coupled with many complimentary remarks to Prof. Barnes, was moved by Dr Bryce and Prof. Shutt.

Funeral of Sir James Gowan.

Barrie, March 22.—Sir James R. Gowan's funeral took place Saturday afternoon from the family residence and was largely attended. Rev. Dr. Witton of the Reform Episcopal Church conducted the services. Those who bore the pall were Henry, Arthur and J. R. Strathy, Harry H. Ardagh, Henry O'Brien, K. C., and Harry Strathy.

The body was deposited in the family vault in the Union cemetery.

Quarantine Is Lifted.

Detroit, March 22.—Canada has lifted the quarantine on cattle.

The Dominion Government placed an embargo on shipments of cattle, sheep, swine, horses, hay, straw and fresh meat, Nov. 2 last, just after the discovery of the outbreak of the hoof and mouth disease of Livonia Township. The removal of the embargo was announced from Ottawa Saturday to John A. Smith, collector of customs for the port of Windsor.

Osteopaths Win.

Harrisburg, March 22.—After a long battle the osteopaths have won state recognition. Governor Edwin S. Stuart has approved the bill providing for the establishment of a state board of osteopathic examiners. His approval of the measure came just a few minutes after a rumor had been circulated through the capitol that the legislation had been vetoed.

Immigration Figures.

Ottawa, March 22.—The total immigration into Canada for the eleven months of the present fiscal year was 130,444, as compared with 247,056 for the same period of last fiscal year, a decrease of 47 per cent.

The immigration for the month of February was 4,791, as compared with 6,164 for February of last year, a decrease of 22 per cent.

Sulphuric Acid Kills Five.

Evansville, Ind., March 22.—Five men were killed and a score injured in an explosion at the Sunnyside Coal Mines near this city.

The explosion was caused by a windy shot due to an overcharge of powder. The dead were all killed by sulphuric fumes, which followed the shot.

Banwell on Parole?

Kingston, March 22.—A report that Banwell, the former Crown Bank teller, is to be released from the balance of his four-year-term, was not confirmed or denied at the penitentiary.

INSURANCE

Is the base upon which the enormous modern Credit System is built. No bank will advance without full insurance on the goods offered a collateral. No Loan Company nor individual will loan on real estate without e buildings properly mortgaged. No individual can afford to carry the carry the risk which Banks and Loan Companies will not assume.

THE LOCAL OPTION MOVEMENT IN THE CITY

The Matter Appearing in This Department is Furnished by the Peterborough emperance and Moral Reform League Which Has Arranged for its Publication.

SUNDAY'S MEETING

Two addresses in favor of local option were delivered Sunday afternoon at the temperance meeting held in the Crystal. "Some men," said Mr J. O. Tisdall, of George street, "say that they may not vote for local option because it may increase their taxes. Those men do not realize that if we had local option the thousands of dollars that are now spent every year over the bars of Peterborough would go to the wives of the men who now waste it in drink. It would then be spent in buying clothes and boots and food and thereby benefit almost all lines of industry and in that way lighten our taxes by reducing the number of people we now have to keep in our gaols.

"I have nothing to say against the hotelkeepers," continued Mr Tisdall. "They are, for the most part, fine fellows. They are too fine for they thus draw people into their nets where they are ruined. We sometimes hear hotelkeepers say that, they kept a respectable house and that they do not sell to drunkards. The trouble is, as the old Quaker pointed out, that they make the drunkards in the first place. The people of Peterborough who vote to have the liquor traffic licensed in the city are partakers in it and are part and parcel of it. They are as bad as those who sell liquor.

"The bulk of the people of Peterborough are professing Christians, and if they will but put forth on effort they will be able to carry local option next January by an immense majority. It is difficult to understand how any professing Christians can fail to realize the responsibility that rests upon them to vote for local option. I came through a local option campaign some 15 years ago, and I was a marked man. Christian men told me that they were sorry that they could not deal with me. The reason was because my store was across the way from two saloons and they were afraid that they would be seen entering my store.

Christians should not hesitate to vote for local option even if it should increase their taxes. The stand we take on local option is one of right and wrong, and we should not allow a matter of dollars and cents to prevent us from doing our duty. Every Christian in Peterborough should come out and fight for local option. They should remember that they are fighting for the boys and girls of the city. During the weeks and months that are to intervene between now and the day the vote will be taken they should be talking it up and when the vote is held they should record such an immense majority for local option that the liquor interests will never again think of raising the question again in the city.

Behind Other Places

"Some people seem to think," said Mr. H. B. Cowan, "that it is too soon to take a vote on local option in Peterborough, that we should wait a few years longer. The fact is that we are behind other sections. In the United States, there are whole states under prohibition, where ten years ago only 6,000,000 people were living in sections free from liquor, there are now 38,000,000 people in the United States living in places from which the bar has been banished. In Ontario we are behind some of the other provinces of Canada. In Prince Edward Island they have prohibition. In Nova Scotia liquor is sold in only about two cities in the whole province. In Quebec over half the municipalities have banished the bar. The fight against the traffic is being waged vigorously in every province in Canada.

Next January the people of Peterborough will have a chance to do what people are doing all over the continent —banish the bar. The reason the temperance workers everywhere are so enthusiastic is because they know that they are fighting for the right. The liquor men are becoming thoroughly demoralized because there is not union in their own ranks. In Peterborough some men who are engaged in the business have said that they intend to vote for local option because their experience with the trade has shown them that it works ruin. Every person in the city can help to carry local option in some way even if it is only by talking in favor of it on every possible occasion."

The chairman was Mr. George W Powell. It is expected that a speaker from outside the city will speak next Sunday afternoon.

A Parisian Character.

The revolutionary Libertad has died in a Paris hospital from a kick which he had received during a recent stormy meeting. Libertad was one of the most curious figures in contemporary Paris. He wore no hat, but long tangled hair and a long beard. Over his scarlet shirt he wore a black blouse, and he was never seen without a crutch and an enormous cane. His language was terrific, and he rarely attended any public meeting without calling for blood. The man was a complete mystery. His most intimate disciples knew nothing of his history. On his deathbed he begged his friends not to arrange a funeral for him, as he had left his body by will to the Paris School of Medicine.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.

Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

C.P.R. Behind It.

St. John, N.B., March 20.—There is considerable speculation as to what is behind the proposed incorporation of the Port, Canada, Docks, Storage & Warehouse Co., capitalized at ninety-nine thousand dollars, for the purpose of building docks, warehouses, elevators and all terminal facilities. Geo. W. Marsh, W. L. E. Marsh and Jos. Dust, Toronto; Robert N. Agnew and Charles Henry Clark, New York, are the company.

There has been reports that the Canadian Pacific were behind them, and it may be they have something to do with the present enterprise.

Election Will Be Close.

Edmonton, March 20.—As the campaign draws to a close, it appears that the big fight will be in the south of the province, where practically the only doubtful seats are. The eight seats by acclamation are all north of Red Deer. The ridings that are spoken of as close are Medicine Hat, Cardston, Lethbridge City, Macleod, High River, Calgary, Olds, Okotoks, Ponoka, Vermillion and Camrose. In other ridings Liberal candidates are confident of winning. The Conservatives seem more certain of Macleod than they do of any other riding in the province.

Newfoundland Calls Halt.

London, March 20.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Negotiations between Britain and the United States for the conclusion of pecuniary claims and concessions have been suspended, due to the fact that the Newfoundland Government is unwilling to include the fishery pecuniary claims in the schedule of the proposed treaty, contending they should be dealt with by the colonial courts after the result of the arbitration fisheries question is known.

Dreadnought as a Present.

Melbourne, Australia, March 20.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Age prints a suggestion that Australia should present Britain with a Dreadnought as a free gift, apart from the naval subsidy. The Argus, which differs with The Age in many local questions, cordially supports the proposal.

Gets a Life Job.

Brantford, March 20.—Fred Whiting, who had one hand burnt off by an unprotected live wire at Mohawk Park, received $1,000 damages, an artificial arm and a life job from the Cataract Power Co. at the Spring Assizes here yesterday.

Dies While Resigning.

New York, March 20.—Battalion Chief William McCarthy of the Brooklyn Fire Department had been feeling "a little out of sorts" for so long a time that he yielded to his wife's persuasion on Wednesday and prepared his resignation after 36 years in the service. He was waiting at headquarters in the evening to have his resignation countersigned by his deputy chief when an alarm sounded.

He straightened up, tottered and fell dead, with his resignation in his hand. McCarthy had many medals for bravery. He leaves six children besides his widow.

Look to Colonies For Help.

London, March 20.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Times says the response which the naval revelations have already elicited from other parts of the Empire is striking evidence of the underlying solidarity of the British race, and adds: "Our necessities are growing on every sea. We count upon the dominions to take their share in meeting them. We have the common spirit, and common resources, and it only needs to make such provision in time of peace that these will tell to full effect if ever they have to meet the test of war."

Sifton's Mother Dead.

Winnipeg, March 20.—Last evening Mrs. John W. Sifton passed away after a brief illness, aged 76. Deceased came to Canada as a girl and in '53 married Hon. (then plain) J. W. Sifton, spending the first twenty years in Ontario and coming later to Manitoba.

She was the mother of Chief Justice Arthur Sifton of Alberta, and Hon. Clifford Sifton, several daughters also surviving.

Farmer's Presence of Mind.

Brockville, March 20.—His heavily-laden sleigh becoming stuck on the G.T.R. railway crossing a mile from Prescott, a farmer narrowly escaped being hurled into eternity yesterday by drawing the king bolt and parting his horses from the vehicle. The sleigh was shattered to fragments, and the pilot of the engine wrecked.

Clothes Catch Fire.

Belleville, March 20.—Mrs. F. E. O'Flynn, wife of a prominent lawyer in this city, was badly burned through her clothing catching fire in the kitchen.

The hired girl noticed the flames and helped put them out, not before both the lady and herself had been painfully burned.

Windsor Man Killed In West.

Windsor, March 20.—Charles Riley, aged 22, son of John Riley, this city, was killed on the Canadian Northern at Humboldt, Sask. His parents here have received no particulars as to how their son met his death. He was employed for a time at Walkerville, and was with the Canadian Pacific before going west.

To Investigate Liberia.

Washington, March 20.—Members of the Government commission to investigate the condition of Liberia were named yesterday. They are: Robert C. Ogden, New York; W. Morgan Shuster, formerly collector of customs for the Philippines, and Emmet J. Scott, private secretary to Booker T. Washington.

Would Sell the I.C.R.

Montreal, March 20.—Le Canada, the French Ministerial organ here, is not in love with the Government plan for a commission for the I.C.R., that paper saying that a favorable offer to purchase from responsible parties should not be refused.

Wreck Victims Buried.

Montreal, March 20.—All Point St. Charles, the railroad centre of Montreal, mourned yesterday, and thousands of railroad families turned out to pay their last tributes of respect to the memory of the Nixon family, who met such a tragic ending at the Windsor street station, whither they had gone to meet and welcome their father. About the hearses of the little boy and girl were members of their Sunday school classes, and behind came hundreds of men of the neighborhood, anxious to show, by their presence, the great sorrow they felt at the loss that had been sustained.

Kidnapper Caught.

Cleveland, March 20.—That Willie Whitla, kidnapped son of Attorney James P. Whitla of Sharon, Pa., would be restored to the hands of friends within a few hours, was the prediction made by the Cleveland police last last night, after they had placed under arrest a man whom they claimed answered descriptions of the kidnappers.

Frank H. Buhl, the millionaire iron and steel man, uncle of the kidnapped boy, stated he would spend $100,000 to recover the boy.

Votes For Women.

London, March 20.—By a vote of 157 to 122 the House of Commons yesterday passed the second reading of the bill giving everybody, men and women, a vote, the only proviso being that they shall be 21 years of age and shall have resided three months in the constituency.

As this bill was introduced by a private member, and as it has not received the "blessing" of the Cabinet, there is no chance of its becoming law during the present session.

Brant's Tomb Intact.

Brantford, March 20.—At the annual meeting of the Brant Historical Society here a letter was read from C. A. Machaffe, a former friend of Dr. Healy here, denying that the latter ever tampered with the tombstone of Capt. Joseph Brant. Little credence was placed in stories from Buffalo that the tomb had been robbed. Officers elected are: President, Judge Hardy; vice-presidents, Miss Gilkinson, A. J. Wilkes, Curator E. Henwood.

Secretary Is Sought.

Winnipeg, March 20.—A warrant is out for the arrest of W. A. Coulson, for three years secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association, which has members all through the west.

He has disappeared, leaving the alleged shortage of from $5,000 to $20,000, though his solicitor claims the amount is not more than $1,600.

Inventor Commits Suicide.

New York, March 20.—A man believed from papers in his possession to be Wm. Gibb, an architect and inventor, and a well-known member of the New York Golf Club, committed suicide by shooting in Vancortland Park.

One of his inventions, an indoor golf game, on which he was believed to have spent practically all his life's savings in perfecting it, met with considerable success, and so far as known Gibb was not despondent.

He formerly lived in California, Denver and Canada.

Life Lost In Fire.

New York, March 20.—Failure of his family or the police to discover any trace of him has led to the fear that John W. Simpson, a well-known insurance man, and formerly president of Marietta College, in Ohio, met death in the fire which early yesterday caused the injury of a dozen persons and endangered many others in the seven-storey apartment building at 24 South Central Park, adjoining the Plaza Hotel.

Little Girl Jumps Five Storeys.

New York, March 20.—One person was killed, another was fatally and several seriously injured in an explosion and the panic which followed it in a six-storey tenement house at 161 East 96th street yesterday.

Four Years For Burglary.

St. Thomas, March 20.—Johnston Radcliffe, an Englishman, who pleaded guilty to burglary some weeks ago, was yesterday morning sentenced to serve four years in Kingston Penitentiary by Police Magistrate Glenn. His wife was acquitted on the charge of receiving goods known to have been stolen.

Paraguay Wants Money.

Washington, March 20.—Paraguay is contemplating floating a loan of $10,000,000, according to information received at the State Department yesterday.

It is believed that the money is to be devoted to internal improvements.

Uprising a Failure.

Havana, March 20.—The uprising in Santa Clara Province, that evidenced itself by the defection of seven members of the rural guard who took to the woods with their arms and horses has resulted in complete failure.

Lynched For Shooting Police Chief.

Elkins, W.Va., March 20.—Joseph Brown, said to have been an ex-convict, who on Thursday evening shot Chief of Police White at Whitmer, near here, was taken from jail by a crowd of men at 1.30 o'clock yesterday morning and lynched.

White, who is a son of Mayor W. White, of Whitmer, had remonstrated with Brown for using offensive language.

Gave Wrong Name.

Toronto, March 20.—Fred J. Kyle, C.P.R. night telegraph operator at Locust Hill, who was accidentally shot Thursday night, gave his name as "Brown" in order to keep his parents from knowing that he had been hurt.

As it was merely a flesh wound he will be out of the Western Hospital in a few days.

The Coolness of Peter.

By EDGAR WELTON COOLEY.

Copyright, 1909, by E. W. Cooley.

Peter Quiggles opened his eyes with a start, then sat bolt upright and stared. Not four feet from him stood a man with a mask over his eyes. He was holding a dark lantern, flashing the light glaringly in Peter's face.

"How dare you," began the man with the mask, offended—"how dare you set an alarm clock to go off at the very moment I'm ransacking the house? D'ye want to scare me to death? How do you know but I might be subject to heart failure or something and that the sudden fright"—

"I—I'm sorry," began Peter humbly. "I didn't mean to disturb you. I—I can't sleep comfortably on one side all the time, you know, and I have to set the alarm to awaken me so I can turn over."

"Oh!" said the man apprehendingly. "Well, don't let it occur again."

"I'll try not to," replied Peter obligingly. "But, you know," he hesitated, "you can't always tell about that clock. You can't always anticipate its behavior. It is a very absentminded clock and possesses some very peculiar notions of its own. Really it is the most aggravating clock you ever saw. Why, once I set the alarm for 4 o'clock in the morning. I wished to go to the station to meet my uncle, you know. He was a very rich bachelor, with no immediate family. Besides, he was in exceedingly poor health. And, would you believe it, that miserable clock betrayed the confidence imposed in it?"

"And your uncle?" asked the man interestedly.

"My uncle was compelled to hunt me up and ring us out of bed. It was very embarrassing. Of course we had to make some kind of an explanation. But unfortunately, you know, my wife and I had no opportunity to consult together. We told entirely different stories. That made my uncle suspicious."

"Naturally," said the man.

"Then, to make matters worse," resumed Peter, with a sigh, "my uncle was a chronic story teller, one of those people who take a frenzied delight in relating a long narrative with a joke at the end of it—the kind of a joke, you know, that you don't really laugh at until the next day."

"I understand," said the man, taking a seat on the edge of the bed resignedly. "I've heard them kind of jokes myself. I call 'em vaccination jokes. They have a point to 'em all right, but they don't take until later. Besides, they are pretty near as bad as having the smallpox."

The man chuckled softly. "Well," Peter continued, "at breakfast that morning this uncle of mine told one of his stories. It was during the days when nearly everybody had one of those silly little things they called chestnut bells. You remember?"

"Perfectly," said the man.

"Well, at the very moment my uncle sprang his joke and leaned back to enjoy our mirth that clock—that unregenerate, malicious clock"— Peter laughed long and loudly.

"There isn't anybody else in this part of the house," reassured Peter, "but my wife, asleep in the next room, and she's deaf, you know. Really she is so deaf that I can wear a red necktie, green checkered trousers and a purple vest and come home any hour of the night without awakening her."

"You're lucky," said the man, "and being lucky"—

"Lucky!" repeated Peter. "I'm so lucky"—

"Never mind about that," interrupted the man. "I was just going to remark that I never saw a lucky man who didn't have money."

"Money?" replied Peter. "Of course I have money. Really, I've got so much money that I can't fall down without breaking a bill, you know. Once I"—

"Just hand it over, then," interposed the man with the mask commandingly.

"Do I understand that you wish me to hand my money over to you?" queried Peter cautiously.

"That's what I remarked," replied the man, "and you'd better be quick about it if you don't want"—

"My dear sir," said Peter impressively, "as one who has speculated more or less successfully, I beg to give you a little timely advice."

"See here," said the man irritably, "I ain't going to waste any more time with you. I've wasted too much already."

"Why, so you have," remarked Peter thoughtfully, "but you see it isn't exactly my fault! I didn't invite you here, and, really, I'm not insisting upon your staying, you know. Maybe you're waiting for me to order you out?"

"Well, you are cool," said the man admiringly.

"Of course I'm cool," replied Peter. "It's very convenient to be cool sometimes—on a cold winter's night, for instance. You see, your wife won't put her feet against you if you are cool."

The man with the mask laughed softly, then arose to his feet. "Look here," he said, "are you going to give me that money or ain't you? I've got a gun in my hand, it's pointing at you, it's loaded, and my finger is on the trigger."

"It certainly is very kind of you to warn me of my danger," replied Peter gratefully.—"The light of your lantern blinds me so that I had not noticed you had a gun. But, really, won't you please point it in some other direction? It makes me nervous, you know, and when I get nervous my memory fails me quite suddenly. I might forget where I put my money. I always experience considerable trouble in remembering what I do with all my money anyhow."

"Come, come," said the man. "Hand it over. Fork it out. I can't stay here all night. I want to be going."

"Since you speak of it," replied Peter wearily, "I really wish you would go. I would enjoy going back to sleep, you know. I'm tired. You see, I was out to the lodge last night. Do you belong to any lodge? No? Well, the union, then—you belong to the union, of course?"

"I see very plainly," said the man resolutely, "that you do not intend to give me that money peacefully. Guess I'd better"—

"Why, my dear sir," responded Peter naively, "I haven't refused, have I? Really I beg your pardon if I have appeared backward in complying with your most natural and reasonable request. I am not unmindful, you know, that you are at this moment a guest in my house, and I certainly meant no disrespect. How much money do you want?"

"All you have," replied the man gruffly.

"But, my dear sir," protested Peter humbly, "if you could just manage to get along with a trifle less—just a trifle, you know—perhaps some time in the future I can repay your kindness and consideration. You see, tomorrow morning before breakfast is the day and the hour when our cook expects her week's wages. Possibly you lack the experience that would enable you to thoroughly understand the situation, but really, you know, I cannot imagine any position more embarrassing in which a man could be placed than to be forced to face his cook on such a momentous occasion without a cent in his pocket, and my cook unfortunately is a very robust cook. Really I shudder to even think of such a predicament."

"To thunder with the cook!" replied the man shortly. "I want to know if you're going to"—

"And, then, there are the gas man and the iceman," resumed Peter. "Of course I realize that you have nearly as much claim upon my money as they have—really it is rather difficult to discriminate between you—but it wouldn't be just right, you know, to give you all the money and not save a cent for the other holdup men, now, would it? Of course I understand that between you all you will get all my money anyhow, and I'm really not much concerned who gets the most, only I don't want to appear partial, you know."

"You can do just as you please," replied the man determinedly. "You have your choice between giving me all your money and taking the consequences. I'm not here for my health, I tell you."

"Oh, well, if you feel that way about it," said Peter resignedly, "you'll find my trousers on a chair at the foot of the bed. My purse is in the right hip pocket."

The man with the mask walked to the chair, slipped his hand in the pocket indicated and pulled out a black wallet. Emptying the contents upon the bed, he counted them deliberately.

"See here," he said indignantly, "there is only $10.24 here!"

"What!" gasped Peter breathlessly, leaping out upon the floor. "How—much—did you say?"

"Ten dollars and twenty-four cents," replied the man.

"Are you sure?" demanded Peter in an agony of despair. "Are you certain you haven't made a mistake?"

"No," said the man. "That's all there is."

"Oh, dear, dear!" wailed Peter. "I see it all. I didn't want to believe it, but I guess it must be true. It really is too bad. I don't see why she did it. She might have known"—

"She?" said the man. "Who?"

"My wife," replied Peter tearfully. "I am exceedingly sorry, but she beat you to it, you know."

"Well," said the man, rather disappointedly, "I reckon this will have to do then. But next time"—

"Pardon me," interrupted Peter, who had followed him to the door, "but really I am afraid you will fall down the stairs. It is so dark behind that lantern. Wait. I will turn on the light. There; now you can watch me and see where you are going at the same time."

"Thank you," said the man, backing slowly down the stairs, his revolver still in his hand. "As I was going to remark, I never met anybody who was quite"—

"No; that isn't right," said Peter. "You have to turn that small knob first. There; that unlocks the door. But you were saying"—

"I was going to say," again began the man, looking up at Peter, but placing one hand behind him and pulling open the door, "that I never"—

But two policemen suddenly sprang through the door and pinioned the man's arms behind his back.

"Really, I am sorry," grinned Peter, "but I guess you will have to finish your sentence in jail, won't you? You see, that bell was a burglar alarm. You rang it when you entered my room, and unfortunately, you know, it is connected with an automatic device at the police station. They were rather long coming, but I trust you found my companionship agreeable. I certainly did my best to entertain you."

"Say," said the man, submitting quietly to the officers, "you lied to me about the iceman, didn't you? Your wife don't need no ice when she's got a cold storage plant for a husband. You're the coolest"—

But the patrol wagon was rolling away.

A DREADNAUGHT

Australia and New Zealand, believing Great Britain to be in need of help from her children overseas, have each offered a warship. The offer is considered a token of genuine loyalty to the motherland and to the cause of Empire on their part. Is Canada not prepared to do as much? The Review earnestly hopes so. PETERBORO'S REPRESENTATIVE RETURNS FROM SCOTLAND

Mr. R. M. Waddell of the Canadian Curlers Arrived in City This Morning—The Sons of Scotia Were Hospitable Sportsmen and Royal Entertainers —Other Curlers on Train.

Fresh from laurels in Scotland, Mr R. M. Waddell arrived in the city this morning from Montreal. On the train were also four other Canadian curlers, Messrs Patterson and Strath. Toronto; Mr. Needlands, Barrie, and Mr. Logan, Parry Sound. These with Mr. Waddell were among the 12 Canadian curlers who sailed from Liverpool on February 12th on the Empress of Ireland. The passage to St. Johns was rather a rough one at times but none of the party suffered any ill effects from the voyage.

At St John's the Ontario rink played with the curlers of that city, and won with two shots up. Mr. Waddell was vice-skip.

It is not necessary to review the doings of the Canadians in the land of the heather as they have been reported very fully in the press dispatches. Mr. Waddell says they were given princely treatment and the Scotch brethren seemingly made it a special study to see that the visitors were entertained in the best possible fashion.

NEW INSURANCE AND REAL ESTATE FIRM

Messrs. G. A. Reed and G. G. Pratley have opened up offices at 163 Charlotte street and will conduct an insurance and real estate business. Mr. Pratley will give his attention to the business for the city while Mr Reid will look after the interests of the new firm in the country and as both men have had a large experience in this line of business, will no doubt be successful. Mr. Pratley was identified for some time with the Davis Thompson Company, as was also Mr. Reid.

The new firm will represent the following companies: London and Lancashire Life Insurance Co. of London, England; Phoenix Fire Assurance Co. of London, England; the Gore District Mutual Fire Assurance Co; Maple Leaf Fire Assurance Co.

The firm have had handsome new offices fitted up for them and have installed a Bell telephone, No. 711, and are now open for business.

GIVEN LOCKET ON DEPARTURE

Mr W. H. Jewett, who is leaving the C.G.E. works, for the west, was presented with a handsome locket by a number of his fellow workers.

The following address was read:

Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—We, the undersigned heads of departments in the Canadian General Electric Works, desire, on the eve of your departure for the golden west, to testify to the high esteem in which you are held by your late associates. We look back with pleasure to the happy and harmonious relations which have always existed amongst us, and regret that these associations are now about to be severed.

We recognize the fact that in this transitory life the most intimate and closest relationships must sometimes inevitably be broken, and that this may be the last occasion on which we may have the privilegee of meeting on earth. Wee ask you to accept this locket as a small token of our regard and appreciation of your many excellent qualities, and trust that, when you take up your abode on the prairie of the west, it will serve as a memento of your brother workmen in Peterborough, and the good feeling which has, on all occasions, characterized our relations.

In conclusion, permit us to express to you and your partner in life a devout wish and prayer that as with you the high noontide of life, so radiant to-day with hope and promise, fades away into the softer hues of the evening, the light of a brighter world may gladden your pathway more and more, and that at last we may all meet on the golden shores of the Great Beyond.

With best wishes for your future success and happiness, we beg to remain.

Yours respectively,

G. J. Tovey, B. Watts, J. Wilson, H. McCusker, G. H. Thornton, R. E. Harding, W. A. Brundrett, W. Common, U. F. Morrison, W. H. G. Armstrong, A. W. Patterson, A. Metheral, R. G. Martin, R. Morrison, E. R. Sharly, R. Cottrell, R. W. Carson, A. E. Prest, J. Mackenzie, F. Derrick, J. Perry, N. Munro, M. Breckenridge, W. S. Robinson, R. A. Anson.

The ladies are arranging for a lecture in the near future by Rev. L. Geggie, of Toronto. The title of the lecture is "The Rose, Thistle and Shamrock." Mr. Geggie will be assisted by Rev. Ernest Hazeldine tenor vocalist formerly of Manchester, England.

The Laymen's Missionary Convention to be held here on Tuesday will be attended by laymen from all over the Presbytery. A good meeting is expected. It meets in St. Andrew's church, and there will be two sessions, morning and afternoon. Three distinguished speakers and leaders will be with us from Toronto. The ladies of the three congregations are providing lunch for all.

The Communion will be observed on Sabbath morning April 4th. Those intending to unite with us by certificate or profession, are asked to let Mr Pogue know of it as soon as possible. He has a little book on "The Lord's Supper" which will be given to all such to read before the Communion.

The Bible class has now an enrolment of 212. The average attendance however, is only about half that number.

Rev. A. T. Taylor, D.D., of Cooke's Church, Toronto, is to be the anniversary preacher this year.

HONORS FOR MR. J. A. CULVERWELL

Our progressive fellowtownsman, Mr. J. A. Culverwell, has been elected Associate of American Institute Electrical Engineers of New York.

He is to be congratulated not only for this recognition of his electrical engineering standing but also for his re-election as a vice-president of Upper Canada College, the governing body of that great school. Mr. Culverwell is also a member of Engineers' Club, of Toronto, the leading engineering society of Ontario, and has received the endorsements of some of the best American experts on his work on behalf of canal barge transportation.

He has large interests in the water powers of the Trent and Otonabee rivers, being managing director of two power companies and managing director of a large power syndicate. He was formerly with the Edison General Electric Company, Canadian district. His knowledge of water power and corporation law is well recognized.

He is credited, in the Healey Falls case, with having secured the largest official municipal endorsements—some eighteen councils—for any power enterprise in Canada, and has the reputation of overcoming, eventually, every kind of opposition and persecution he and his friends meet with. More power to his elbow, for his success means progress to the whole district.

He has the backing of many of the best men of three counties, Toronto, etc., who thoroughly believe in his integrity and ability.

A Boy Vocalist

Master Harry James, of Toronto, boy vocalist, was in the city on Saturday and was to have sung at a local picture show this week, but took a severe cold and will not be able to appear. He will, however, sing here later when his many friends will be glad to hear him.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

TO THE PUBLIC:—

We, the undersigned, beg to announce that we have opened an Insurance and Real Estate Office at No. 163 Charlotte street (2 doors west of George street) Peterborough, Ont., under the firm name of G. A. Reid & Co., and are now ready for business.

We have secured the agency of several old and reliable Insurance Companies, and are prepared to write Fire, Life and Accident business at the lowest current rates, and we would respectfully ask you to consult us before placing your insurance. We have had considerable experience in this business, having been connected with the firm of Davis-Thompson Co., Limited, for a number of years, and we feel we are in a position to fully look after the interests of the insuring public.

If you wish to buy, sell or rent a farm, house, lot or any other kind of property, call at our office and we will assist you. No charge will be made unless a sale is effected.

By strict attention to business and square dealing we expect to merit a liberal share of your patronage.

Open evenings this week.

GEO. A. REID,
G. G. PRATLEY.

Peterborough, March 22, 1909.

ACCEPTS CALL TO HALIFAX

Rev. J. W. McMillan Will Leave Winnipeg in the Near Future

It is announced that Rev J. W. McMillan, formerly minister of St. Andrew's church, Lindsay, but now residing at Winnipeg has accepted a call to St Matthew's church at Halifax.

Mr. McMillan is a brilliant preacher and a man who was very highly esteemed here during his ministry. He has also made a success of his work in the western metropolis and his very many friends and well wishers wish him abundant success in his new sphere of work.—Lindsay Post.

Rumor in Winnipeg says that the three North-West Mounted Police who returned to Winnipeg from the far north yesterday have discovered valuable deposits of gold and other minerals.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE GOVERNMENTAL INQUIRY RE WOOLLEN INDUSTRY

The official report of the government commissioner is just to hand and is very instructive.

"SESSIONAL PAPER NO. 87.

In order to make a comparison between most of manufacturing in Canada and in Great Britain it would in my opinion, be necessary to take into account the following items, viz.:—

1st.—Wages;

2nd—More expensive factory buildings owing to rigorous climate;

3rd—Extra cost of heating same;

5th—From capital employed in carrying larger stocks owing to being far removed from the base of supply and also that mills are practically compelled by local market conditions to purchase twelve months' supply of Canadian wools after shearing season;

6th—Higher rate of interest on money employed;

7th—Increased cost of machinery;

8th—More expensive motive power owing to higher prices for fuel;

9th—Owing to Canadian mills having a limited market, they are compelled to show a larger number of designs each season and manufacture from comparatively short warps, which interferes with production and increases cost;

10th—The specialization which is so general in Yorkshire, has many advantages in lowering the cost of production, and also enables manufacturers in England to do a large volume of business on a comparatively small capital, which is not possible in Canada.

Your obedient servant
THOMAS COSTELLO."

This report will be observed to establish the contention of the Canadian woollen manufacturers that unless wages are reduced it is impossible for Canadians to compete with the woollen manufacturers of Yorkshire.

CANADA ALARMED; THE G.P.P. IS RAPIDLY NEARING A CRISIS

The Vancouver World (Independent.)

The recent failure of the Grand Trunk Pacific to float its bonds after they had been underwritten and the low figure to which they have fallen ($77.50) have created a feeling of distrust on the English market, which is extending itself to all classes of Canadian securities. The pluck and energy of the company who accepted the task of building the line of railway through a wild and very little known country has often been the subject of admiring comment and the statesmanship of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's government in extending generous first aid to the company, has been universally commended. Now, after many months of earnest effort and the expenditure of a large sum in prosecution of their task the company find that their calculations as to cost were erroneous and that the mountain sections especially have absorbed a far larger amount of money than was anticipated. They find themselves facing a dead wall across which is plainly written the sign, "No Thoroughfare." The undertaking has proved too much for the resources of the company and in their extremity they have appealed to the government for further aid. Months ago the World predicted that an application of the kind must be made soon, and the application has established the correctness of the prediction. When we consider the circumstances that beset the company—when we call to mind the extraordinary engineering and construction difficulties that have to be overcome and the panic which upset all calculations eighteen months ago; and when we recognize the fact that the future of British Columbia—ay, and that of the whole of Canada, hinges upon the completion of the new National highway, it will not come as a surprise to the country when it is told that the government is about to invest $10,000,000 of public money to hasten the completion of the route. Operations on the G.T.P. should not pause for lack of support. It is charged in a certain irresponsible and generally untruthful quarter that the G. T. P. funds would have been ample but for waste and extravagance of the management. Similar charges, and worse, were preferred against the C. P. R. when that company came before parliament for aid in 1882. The C. P. R. directorate were accused of having enriched themselves and a favored few by the manipulation of the stock while the work languished from the incompetence or indolence of the engineering staff. Any one who may care to examine these accusations will find a rich field for their exploration—Hansard and the papers of the day when the proposition to help the C. P. R. was before parliament. None of these charges were sustained, and so far as we know no effort was ever made to press them. Having failed in their purpose (for the aid was extended by parliament), the charges were filed away for future use—perhaps when the G.T.P. will come up for discussion. At the time when assistance was extended to the C.P.R., Canada was a poor country. The population was about one-half what it is now, and a ten-million dollar guarantee at that time would be equal to ten millions now—so great has been the prosperity that followed the construction of the C. P. R. Relief to the amount asked cannot be refused. A shut-down of operations on the G.T.P. now would precipitate national disaster by which every interest, public or private, would be affected. Prominent mercantile firms and financial institutions would totter and business throughout Canada would be deranged. Is Canada prepared for such direful consequences? Is it prepared by throwing over the railway company in the north to face a disaster in every business centre? We believe that the answer will be in the negative and that parliament stands ready to grant the desired aid and so secure a continuance of that prosperity which at present delights the hearts while it fills the pockets of our people.

Was Read by Miss Warde at Meeting of Ladies' Literary Society of T.A.S., on Friday Evening—A Pleasing Musical Programme.

A delightful literary evening was provided for the members of the Ladies' Literary Society of St. Peter's T.A.S. on Friday night when Miss Warde read a paper on the Life and incidentally the Works of Brother Azarias a character very well known to all broad-minded students of literature. The essay was a gem in itself and gave evidence of considerable research and careful writing on the part of the essayist. Brother Azarias, who was known in the world as Patrick Francis Mullaney, was born in the year 1847, in the County of Tipperary and came to America when he was ten years old. His father who preceded him in coming to this country, settled in Deerfield a small village in Central New York, made notable by the residence of Horatio Seymour, who figured prominently in the history of his time as the War Governor of his State and the leader of the Democratic party. Oppression at this time was bitter and rampant in Ireland and steadily the immigrants poured into the United States. Mournful as the outpouring seemed at first to the Irish, at the last, it was most mournful to the English. Very quietly the exiles made the railway into the country where they were needed to dig canals, construct railways, to fill factories, and becomes the servants of the dominant race. They settled where wages were good and work plentiful, thus filling the New England, the Middle States and the west. They soon became voters and found themselves of importance at election time and to quote from John Abbott, "Little by little they crept into every walk of life until their representatives held positions very near the throne; and some day a capable enthusiastic historian will trace their course from the shovel and pick to the cabinet and show the far-reaching effect upon English influence and American thought of the Irish current so mercilessly forced into western seas by the nation that has suffered most and must suffer on, for many a decade for its own crimes." Mr. Mullaney was a positive character descended from an intensely nationalist family which had given many of its members to exile and the scaffold and when opportunity offered he made his neighbors well acquainted with his religious and political opinions. His family was soon appreciated in Deerfield and he himself secured a good business footing that he held with ever-increasing respect till his death after an advanced age. His boys received their early training in the Union School at Deerfield and afterwards at the Brothers' school in Utica three miles distant. In this latter school Patrick Mullaney distinguished himself as its most clever pupil. He was a boy who loved books who read widely and well, and as he read he kept his pencil and note book ever at hand. He won high fame for thoroughness in all his work and was regarded as an all-round student. He frequently appeared in public as the representative of his school and in all educational contests came out victor. He was therefore well known to the intelligent people of Utica from a very early age. When he was scarcely fifteen years old he decided to devote himself to the religious teaching of the young as a follower of La Salle. The lowly life of the teaching monk was his choice—a life of utter self-abnegation. He would belong entirely to his community together with all his efforts and every moment of his time on earth. After spending three years at the college in Utica he left for the novitiate of the Christian Brothers in New York. When not quite 18 years of age Brother Azarias was allowed to make his vows. His first work was the teaching of little boys in the primary schools. He was a born teacher, ever eager to impart to others that which he had just learned, if he thought it worth the telling. However he was soon sent to teach in the city of Albany and from here he was sent in 1866 to Rock Hill College, a few miles out of Baltimore where he stayed 20 years. From 1866 to 1879 he lived the simple life of a teaching monk varied by attacks of illness, by productions of his books and a visit to Europe. When he was 32 years of age his superiors appointed him head of the Rock Hill College at Ellicott City Ind. His writings had won for him eminence among the young thinkers and the future promised to be brilliant. He was yet the same sweet gentle, unassuming brother, and it surprised many that one so mild should have been chosen for this trying position. In a very short time however, he proved himself to be possessed of great executive power and strong disciplinary ability. In the social conditions of Baltimore district he became a person of eminence, counting among his admirers President Gillman Archbishop Bayley, Monsignor Corcoran, Cardinal Gibbons and Archbishop Keane.

In 1874 Brother Azarias published his first book, entitled "An Essay Contributing to a Philosophy of Literature." This book was a direct overthrow of the Emersonian theory and is one of the finest pieces of criticism offered to the world by the literary circle of the United States, and the only thing of its kind in the English language. His other books are "Books on Philosophy and Letters" "Phases of Thought and Criticism" "Essays on Education," and "Culture of the Spiritual Sense." His work was carried on amid many discouragements, of which ill-health was the most serious. During the last few years of his his life he won many laurels as an orator. In 1892 he attended the opening session of the Champlain School in the city of New London, Conn., and delivered a few lectures of that quality which drew to him the affectionate regard of all classes of people. He lectured before a Catholic Congress held in Chicago in 1893; addressed the Parliament of Religions which was part of the celebration in honor of Columbus' discovery of America and delivered a course of lectures before a Summer School of Philosophy in the Adirondacks. In the summer of 1893 Brother Azarias again became ill and never recovered. Thus after a novitiate of 32 years on earth he passed on August 20th, 1893, to his Lord in whose footsteps he had so faithfully walked. His funeral sermon was preached by his intimate friend Rev. Father McMahon, who took for his text: "I am Azarias, the help of God, son of the great Azarias." His body was taken by his relatives, with the kind permission of his superiors, and laid beside the body of his father and mother in the little cemetery of Deerfield.

During the evening a very nice little musical programme was run off. Miss Nora Shevlin opened it with a nicely rendered piano solo, followed by a vocal duet by Miss Gertie Clancy and Miss Alice Milloy. Miss Morrow who is visiting in the city delighted the audience with a vocal solo.

The next meeting will be held on April 2nd when Rev. Father McColl will address the Society.

PRESENTED WITH AN UMBRELLA

Mr. H. T. Gillespie Honored by Fellow Employees at Peter Hamilton Company

Mr. H. T. Gillespie, who has left the office staff of the Peter Hamilton Co., to accept a position with the George Matthews Co. was presented with a gold-headed umbrella on Saturday by his fellow-workers at Hamilton's. The presentation was made by Miss Dawson and an appropriate address was read by Mr. Jas. Hamilton. The address was as follows;

To Mr. H. T. Gillespie,

Dear Friend,—We regret to hear that you are severing your connection with the old established firm of the Peter Hamilton Co., Limited, where for eleven years you have been a valued member of the office staff. But as each step in promotion means just so much more salary, we suppose we have no right to complain of your decision to leave us.

However, before you go the office staff wishes to testify to the high esteem in which you are held by your friends and fellow workers and present you with the accompanying token of their regard.

Wishing you all the happiness and good luck possible for the future.

We remain,
Elsie Dawson,
Electa Strong,
James Hamilton,
James Galvin,
Wm. Galbraith,
A. R. Nichols,
Patrick Leahy,
Fred Boland,
J. C. Anderson.

Mr. Gillespie made a short speech in which he expressed thanks for the handsome gift and the kind sentiments of the address.

AN ITALIAN STOLE FROM FREIGHT SHEDS

Was Remanded for One Week and Will be Examined as to His Sanity—Evidence in Police Court

Rocco Piucci, an Italian, was charged at the police court this morning with having stolen a quantity of tobacco, 14 bars of soap, 7 cans of peas and one box of grass seed from the Grand Trunk freight sheds. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared in the interests of the prisoner. Crown Attorney Wood acted for the prosecution.

As there was evidence to show that the prisoner might not be of sound mind, the Magistrate remanded him until Monday, March 29th, in order that he might be examined by the jail surgeon.

Adam Frick was the first witness, and he stated that he first noticed the prisoner holding a horse near the freight sheds. He thought that his actions were suspicious and watched him. The accused went behind some goods in the sheds and as the witness went up to him he noticed that a caddy of tobacco was broken and some of the contents were missing. P. C's. McGinty and Newball arrived on the scene and the prisoner was searched with the result that the tobacco was found in his pockets. Afterwards he went with the police to Renzetta's, where the rest of the goods were found.

Mr G. N. Gordon asked that he be allowed to call two witnesses to testify as to the prisoner's actions during the past few days and this was granted.

The prisoner's brother was called, and through his interpreter, Mr. Tom Minicolo said that the actions of his brother since last Monday had been very queer. He had acted foolishly on the street and had telephoned to Minicolo's fruit store and ordered a lot of goods.

Mr. Tom Minicolo said that he had answered the telephone when the prisoner had sent in the order. He was told to take it to a Sherbrooke street residence but when he arrived there with the goods they did not know anything about the order, so he took it back to the store again. From actions of the prisoner, he concluded he was not in his right mind.

Nicolas Renzetta, with whom the prisoner boarded, said that he had acted strangely lately and had been yelling and dancing on the street.

This was all the evidence taken and the Magistrate remanded Piucci until next Monday.

WHY NOT OWN AN AUTOMOBILE?

If automobiles are needed anywhere at all they are in the country. One of the speakers of the Women's Institute, at Guelph, recently predicted that the time was near at hand when farmer's wives would run their own automobiles. Nor is the prediction a visionary one. Like the telephone and the trolley, the automobile seems destined to add to the comfort of country life, and the cost will not interfere with your buying. We can sell at a mere fraction of original cost. These cars are taken by us as part payment for the newest and latest models, and are such as we can thoroughly recommend. Any machine we send out is guaranteed to be in first class condition, and beyond the fact that second-hand cars are not this year's style, there is nothing wrong with them in any way. We use them as a means of introduction to the country trade, and make the values extra special to encourage quick buying. If interested, send your name and address for fuller particulars.

THINKS JEFF CAN NEVER GET INTO CONDITION AGAIN

Jim Jeffries may be sincere when he says he wants first to know that he can get into condition before he will say whether or not he will fight somebody—presumably Johnson. Deep in his heart though is the conviction born of knowledge that he can never fit himself properly to meet Johnson or any one else.

Jeffries' fighting days are over. We may just as well quit jollying ourselves and face the facts. He has lived during the past four years as he deserved—on the fat of the land washed down by thirst quenchers that cheer. "Eat, drink and be merry" has been the big fellow's motto and he has gone to it hook, line and sinker. He had earned it. It was his by right. He worked hard, denied himself many pleasures, brushed aside temptation, fought the best men the world produced and won his spurs. He was entitled to rest, to the land's best, to the cheering grape. He has not spent a vicious, immoral life. That is to his credit.

A couple of years spent in the environments of a gilded cafe, with an invitation to drink every minute, the idol of constant crowds, the petted of the sportsman's world is not calculated to preserve that fine mental equilibrium so necessary to a champion; neither is it conducive to maintaining muscles supple as a kitten's, yet strong as a lion's. It is not prone to improve the eye. And above all it has never been known to improve the breathing mechanism. The struggle between nature and the abuses she is subjected to cannot be prescribed as a good thing for the stomach. The artificial sleep induced by overindulgence of food and drink does not add to a person's vitality. In fact these things are all recognized as destroyers of the body.

All this has fallen to Jeff's lot. Tempered as it was by a splendid, happy, domestic home life made possible by a worthy wife, it left an indelible imprint on the undefeated champion that time, training and boasting can never efface. Jeff's fighting days are over. In his zenith he was unbeatable. Let that be his portion. Let us not urge him to try the impossible. He has done credit to the Anglo-Saxon blood, to his ancestors, to the sporting world, to himself. Let it go at that.

AT THE P.B.C. ALLEYS

A trundler who hasn't a 200 score at the Peterborough Bowling Club alleys these days isn't considered at all shang. Scores around the 200 mark are getting as common among Peterborough bowlers as a best man at a wedding. There were 29 of these at the P.B.C. alleys last week, Martin, Cairns and Sutherland standing out above the rest as the high scorers. The 200 scores during the week were as follows:

Sutherland—223, 225, 207, 210, 207
McIlroy—223, 248.
Staunton—212, 248.
Gutterson—209, 212.
Clancy—232, 202.
Perry—206.

McIlroy and Staunton are tied for the cigars with a score of 248. A game to decide the winner will be played some night this week.

The schedule for the week is as follows:

Monday—Belmonts vs. Exam. B.
Tuesday—Exam. A. vs Grays.
Wednesday—Iroquois vs. Lock Wks.
Thursday—Pacifics vs. B. H. C.

On Saturday McIlroy beat the alley record for three consecutive games made by Mr. Gray, a commercial traveller, shortly after the alleys were opened. His score was 662. McIlroy put on 663, thereby beating the former record by one pin.

Manager Clancy is in Toronto today and will endeavor to arrange a game with a Toronto team, to be played here in the near future.

The Grits and Tories will play tomorrow night for the oysters, and the game promises to be a hummer. Total pinnage in three games is to decide the issue, and the teams will be as follows:

GRITS.	TORIES.
Sutherland	Wareham
Cairns	Pollard
Ferguson	McIlroy
Glover	Connors
Martin	Bruce

SHRUBB WON EASY VICTORY OVER PETERBORO' INDIAN

Simpson no Match for the Fleet Englishman—Britisher Led From First Lap—Won by Over Half a Mile.

Toronto, Feb. 22.—Followers of athletics have long been of the opinion that Shrubb has no superior at short or middle distances, and his easy defeat of Fred Simpson in the twelve-mile race at the Armory Saturday night was only another demonstration of his prowess. The Englishman beat the Indian by slightly more than half a mile in 1.06.33, an exceedingly creditable performance indoors. Shrubb ran eleven miles in one hour and one minute. His world's amateur outdoor record is 11 miles 1,236 yards in one [illegible]

A ten-lap track of clay and cinders was built in the Armory, and could scarcely have been improved upon. Both runners expressed their satisfaction with the going, and it was surveyed by a civil engineer and found to be exactly ten laps to the mile. A crowd of 3,500 people watched the race, which was Shrubb's from the beginning to end. The English champion gained lap after lap until at the end he had a lead of almost six turns of the track on his Indian rival. His fellow-countrymen were present in large numbers, and about the only enthusiasm which the race aroused was that which marked the occasional bursts of speed by Shrubb when he set out to put an additional lap between him and his opponent. Little Union Jacks were much in evidence among the Shrubb supporters. Alf. wore his customary uniform with the flag on his breast. Simpson wore no distinctive badge.

At the crack of the gun Shrubb bounded away from the mark and took the pole, with Simpson in full pursuit. The Englishman went right out to get a lap at the start, and Simpson followed the hot pace for about a third of a mile, when he saw that an attempt to hold the speedy little Briton was useless. At the end of the first mile Shrubb was three-quarters of a lap to the good, and by the time the runners had gone a mile and a half the Briton had gained a lap and was running to Simpson's pace. The Indian's style was a long stride not unlike Longboat's, but the little champion bounded along behind him with his short, graceful stride, until two miles had been covered, when Alf. drew away again and at three miles and seven laps he had made his advantage two laps. For three-quarters of a mile Shrubb took Simpson's pace, and then shot away again to gain a third lap, which he accomplished after going 6 1-5 miles. Loud cheering was heard from the Shrubb supporters when the Englishman ran round the Indian and set the pace for a couple of laps before drawing away again. Long before this stage of the race it was seen that Simpson could not hold Shrubb and that the little fellow was toying with his opponent. The fourth lap was gained by Shrubb after going 9 1-2 miles, and the fifth after one lap of the twelfth mile had been run. The ultimate winner continued to increase his lead until he had put five and three-quarter laps to his credit. There was no demonstration at the finish, the result having been a foregone conclusion after the first mile had been run.

Tom Longboat was present and challenged the winner to a fifteen mile race, which will be run at Rosedale grounds on Saturday, April 17th. The officials were;—Starter, Gen. Cotton; referee, Col. Sir Henry Pellat; timers, Rev. John D. Morrow, Lou Scholes, T. C. Flanigan and Sergt. W. Grant; judges, Major J. A. Currie, M. P., Controller J. J. Ward; scorers, Capt. Michell, Capt. Darling, Capt. Biggs.

The times of the runners by miles was as follows;

SHRUBB.

1—........	4.49 4-5
2—Shrubbb	10.12 2-5
3—Shrubbb	15.31

SPORTING TALK

Professional hockey seems to have paid about as well in those western Ontario towns as pro baseball did in Peterborough, Port Hope and Cobourg.

Local baseball "bugs" are now discussing the question as to whether there is room in Peterborough for two baseball leagues. The older players want to be in the game and the younger fellows want a league of their own. A good many are in favor of two leagues—senior and junior—or senior and intermediate.

Yankee Rogers and Hassan Abdallah the Terrible Turk, have been matched. A matter that is not agitating the sporting public of Peterborough very much is who will win the match.

The question now that the house-cleaning season is at hand, is, can Fritz Mohl beat a carpet?

There may be a Midland league all right this year, but Peterborough is not likely to have a team in it.

The most important wrestling match since the celebrated Gotch-Hackenschmidt bout will be the go go between Gotch and Mahmout. In spite of the fact that the Turk beat Rogers in such short order at Sohmer Park in Montreal, Yankee says Gotch will dispose of the Sultan's subject when the two meet. Americus, who has met both Gotch and his opponent, also states the American will win, but says the battle will be a hard one.

The Canadian amateur wrestling championships which will be held in Ottawa will be without their star heavyweight attraction, now that Hurtubise has turned professional.

It's up to the lacrosse men to get busy and see what's doing in the way of lacrosse prospects this season.

Bill Hoagland has written another letter to the sporting editor about the proposed walk for Peterborough this spring. He is dead anxious to see another race here and states that one will likely be held in Toronto for four days beginning April 14th.

The Y.M.C.A. Track and Field Club are working with a view to having a big meet on May 24th. There's no reason why a highly successful one could not be held.

THE TIGERS BY 35-25

Played Fast Match With Maple Leafs on Saturday Night

In a Saturday night league game at "Y" gymnasium the Tigers defeated the Maple Leafs by 35 to 25, and had the advantage at half time period by 18—12. The contest was a gingery one and both teams showed nice form. Mr. J. Laing officiated as referee.

The teams were:

TIGERS.		MAPLE LEAFS.
	Forwards.
Martin		Staunton
Kirn		Downing
	Centre.
Wallace		Sutherland
	Defence
Dobbin		Laing
Lees		Loomis

Next Saturday night's fixture prove an interesting one, when the Arabs and Tigers will hold the floor.

MAJESTIC POOL TOURNAMENT

The handicap pool tournament at the Majestic billiard parlors will be commenced on Monday, March 29th. Entries are to be made on or before the 25th of March.

The entrance fee is 50 cents and will be returned to all entrants except the winners of prizes at the termination of the tournament.

The prizes will be as follows;—

First prize—Order for gent's furnishings on Lang & Maher valued at $5.00.

Second prize—Order for gent's furnishings on Lang & Maher, valued at 3.00.

An independent committee of three will do the handicapping after the entries are named. All entrants will be notified of when they are to play. Full information concerning the tournament may be obtained from Mr. Smyth at the Majestic Billiard Parlors Water street.

KETCHEL AND JACK JOHNSON

New York, March 19.—The middle weight champion, Stanley Ketchel, the cowboy fighter, will soon have his ambition realized. A match between him and the heavyweight Jack Johnson was arranged last night, and if nothing goes amiss the pair will come together inside of six months, or about August next. Willus Britt, who is looking out for Ketchel's welfare, practically clinched the prospective match last night by posting $1,000 for the contest, calling for a side bet of $5,000.

The fight in all probability will be decided in California, and in all likeliness will take place in Colma.

Johnson is also under agreement to fight Sam Langford, colored, in London, on Derby night.

YANKEE ON THE SMALL CIRCUIT

Yankee Roger's manager writes that the big grappler is being booked on the small circuit and will probably appear here. He wants an opponent looked up to meet Yankee when he comes.

RUNNING

Can the Toronto Telegram pick a winner? Well the following from Saturday's paper would make it appear as though it could;—

Don't get foolish and wager your week's wages that Simpson will beat Shrubb. Remember that the little Englishman is the best in the world at the distance and you have only the press agent reports as to how fast Tom Eck's Indian can travel. Tis a must up a tree. It looks like Shrubb all the way, and a lot of laps in front at the finish.

Fred Simpson will in all probability run in Hamilton Friday, March 26. Eck has been eager to put Simpson on for a race in that city, and he has practically completed arrangements. It is likely that Tom Coley will be Simpson's opponent. Tom has had the professional bug in his ears for some time, and if he is in any kind of condition he will make his first appearance in the big game there next Friday. Arrangements for this race will be completed to-day.

Although the Marathon trust headed by Powers has seen fit to bar the Indian from all the big Marathon events it will not deprive the Ojibway from getting a few races on the side. In addition to his Hamilton date Fred is booked for Haileybury, Brantford and a couple of other Ontario towns while Eck received a telegram last night from New York asking him if he would put Simpson on against Moloney at fifteen miles. The telegram was written before the Dorando-Hayes race, but did not reach Toronto until yesterday, and it gave Simpson the option of running Maloney or meeting the winner of the Hayes-Dorando race at the Marathon distance. Needless to say, Eck wired back accepting either race.—Hamilton Spectator.

A LACROSSE MEETING AT THE Y.M.C.A. ON THURSDAY

A meeting of those interested in lacrosse is called for at the Y.M.C.A. on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. The prospects for the season will be discussed and other matters of interest in connection with the lacrosse situation in Peterborough, and the formation of a club here will be taken up.

The lacrosse season is close at hand and if Peterborough is to be represented in the C.L.A. it is necessary that the enthusiasts get busy as soon as possible.

From what is said, there is material in town for a good team this year.

YUSSIF WINNER

Raoul de Rouen Failed to Down the Turk in Graeco-Roman Bout.

Yussif Mahmout, the Turk, won from Raoul De Rouen, the French wrestler in a handicap match at Sohmer park, Friday night, before one of the largest crowds that witnessed a wrestling match there this season.

The match was at Graeco-Roman style and De Rouen was to throw Mahmout twice in an hour. The contract was something the big Frenchman could not fulfil for he failed to throw the Turk once and during the last twenty minutes of the match Mahmout came close to putting De Rouen down, having him in a bad position two or three times.

There was considerable excitement in the third bout when De Rouen ran at the referee, Sandy Ferguson, a sporting man from Kansas City, as if he intended striking him. The wrestlers were off the mat, with De Rouen on top of the Turk, when the referee stopped them and ordered them on the canvas. De Rouen seemed to think he had lost some advantage by the move, and rushed at the referee with clenched fists. Ferguson stepped back, and got in position to swing a right to the big Frenchman's jaw. He looked as if he had the punch, and knew how to land it but while De Rouen was thinking about fighting the Turk was attending to business and taking advantage of the Frenchman's excitement was on top of and doing his best to down him

Baseball Situation Discussed

Sporting Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—I noticed in Saturday's edition that some Toronto man by name Flanagan, has completed arrangements for a semi-professional baseball league in Ontario and that Peterborough is one of the prospective towns. It seems to me that this announcement is one of the many athletic "wild cats" that so frequently find space in a newspaper, or that the promoter is making a step without looking over the ground. If a semi-professional club is formed in this city, it will mean that the members of the same will be imported players. As the other prospective towns are somewhat removed from here, the matter of financing a club would be next to impossible. And if the club did even pay expenses, it would mean that Peterborough fans, instead of bestowing their patronage on the local clubs and encouraging true sport, would be supporting an alien organization who have no claims to either the money or sympathy of local sport lovers. While I may be mistaken in regard to the present plans of the so-called promoter, this much I do know: "If a semi-professional club is supported in this city, the local youngsters (and Peterborough has a few of them) will have very poor encouragement to learn and play the game, with a decent object in view. We have only to look at the past records of our good homebrews, and the disappointing results obtained, when players were imported to represent this city, to arrive at a conclusion. Peterborough has never benefitted in an athletic sense, except when the city was represented by strict locals. The confidence of our patrons of sport has been shattered, when the preference was given to rank outsiders.

This season's hockey team, the intermediates, were well supported because we were represented by a local septette. The Lindsay press give us a hard dig last week when they referred to the Toronto City League idea, by which Peterborough was to have a team in that league. They stated that it would be quite convenient for us as the Peterborough players could live in Toronto. We know what this means, and the dig was coming to us.

"The only restriction is that all the players must be Canadian born," quoth Mr. Flanagan. Will it not be amusing to see his umps reading out the names of players from certificates, and then indulging in the additional formalities of demanding baptismal or other certificates testifying to places of birth. If that occurred here how many players would reply to Peterborough as their place of birth?

Thanking you Mr. Editor,

I am yours truly,

FAN.

HOCKEY

GAME TO-NIGHT.

Creeman's home-furnishings department seven will meet a picked team from the canoe factories at Brock street rink to-night between seven and eight o'clock. The game should be a fast one.

GUILD LEAGUE EXECUTIVE

A meeting of the Church Hockey League executive will be held at the Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday night at eight o'clock, when arrangements will be made for the banquet and presentation of the Burnham trophy to the St. Andrew's hockey team, winners of the Guild League championship.

All the teams in the league are asked to send a representative.

CORDAGE SEVEN DEFEAT LAKE RATS

By 3-2 at Brock St. Rink Saturday Night---Both Teams Put up an Interesting Struggle

A week ago Saturday the Cordage were beaten by 8-1, but played with six men against the Lake Rats seven but the rope workers had the best of the struggle in the second game. The ice was soft and slushy, but the contest was interesting all through. Both goal tenders had a busy night and delivered the goods in fine style, their work being a feature of the game. Clancy and Calman did good work for the winners while Folley and Barrie worked hard for the losers. Duffy Hillier gave good satisfaction with the bell.

The teams were;

Cordage		Lake Rats
	Goal
Killenbeck		Scully
	Point
Guerin		Neary
	Cover
Crowe		Barrie
	Rover
Clancy		Gilbert
	Centre.
Dickie		Le Roy
	Right Wing
Calman		Price
	Left Wing
Webb		Folley

Calman secured the first goal and Clancy the other two for the Cordage and Price and Folley scored for the Lake Rats.

TORIES ARE FAVORITES

The Tories and Grits will play at the P.B.C. alleys for the oysters to-morrow night.

It looks as though a defeat were due the Laurier men who have been doing a considerable amount of premature and unwarranted boasting concerning their abilities in the ten pin game. The said qualifications, however, are of the invisible character as far as any records would show and the odds are 10 to 1 on the Opposition at the time of going to press with no takers.

All interested in tennis are requested to attend the meeting in the Y.M.C.A. parlors Tuesday, 23rd, at 7.30 p.m.

LAST DAY OF THE GREAT REVIEW EUROPEAN CONTEST

At 8 O'clock To-Night the Battle of Ballots Will be at an End---The Last Chance For all Candidates---Subscriptions Not Turned in To-day Are Worthless.

EVERYTHING IS IN READINESS FOR THE FINISH TO-NIGHT

The Final Count Will be in the Hands of the Following Well-Known Gentlemen: Messrs E. B. Fowler, Secretary of the Canadian Cordage Co.; A. W. Cressman, of Cressman's; T. H. G. Denne, Purchasing Agent Quaker Oats Co.; W. H. Casement, Postmaster of Lakefield; Frank Moher, Reeve of Douro, and Mr. F. Woollcombe, of Norwood.

The names of the various candidates appear below. As the final count will commence in a few hours, in fairness to contestants in the outside district no figures are published, and the names remain in the same relative position as they were on Saturday. The candidates and their friends no doubt thoroughly understand the closing rules, and it will not be necessary to go into details again.

The ballot box will close at exactly eight o'clock this evening, and certificates and ballots deposited together with subscription records will be taken to the Y. M. C. A. It may take ten or fifteen minutes to arrange the certificates of contestants, after which the judges will proceed with the count. The result should be known by 10 o'clock.

While all interested are invited to be present, the total vote of any candidate will not be given the public until the end of the count, when the names of the winners will be announced.

As the office force of the Review and the contest manager know little more than the general public as to the strength of contestants, it will be useless to ask for information.

There will be ten winners—five in each district—but who they may be is a mystery at present. The vote may be close, and then again, many thousands of votes may separate the leaders. Of course, the first grand prize will be awarded to the candidate having the highest vote in the entire contest. The second grand prize will be given to the candidate with the highest vote in the district not winning the first grand prize. According to the rules, there is a grand prize for each district.

This has been a great and exciting contest, and it will be a great honor to win. In fact, the contest manager has never conducted an affair of this kind where enthusiasm ran higher. The campaign has been of the most strenuous order, the utmost fairness has prevailed and no one has been given an advantage over another. Some loyal supporters have had considerable fun circulating "scare" stories. That's good campaigning. These little tales always relate to the great reserve of other candidates and held-back subscriptions. It will be demonstrated tonight whether these stories are true or not.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY

THE LAST, "THE MAIN, CHANCE" FOR ALL CANDIDATES

EACH CANDIDATE sending or bringing $10 worth of NEW subscriptions to the Review Office before 8 o'clock, on March 22nd, the close of the Contest, will be given a special certificate for 4,000 EXTRA VOTES, in addition to the regular certificates. The amount may be made up in any manner—Daily or Weekly subscription All that is necessary is that the sum amounts to $10, and that it be NEW.

For each $10 worth of OLD subscriptions turned in until the end of the Contest a special certificate for 2,000 EXTRA VOTES will be given. This also in addition to the regular votes.

Every subscription turned in since March 8 will be counted. It is not necessary to hold back the money until you have $10. Turn the subscriptions in as you get them, and when the amount reaches $10, the certificate will be issued—and it may be voted at once or held as desired.

No other offer of any kind will be made during the Contest.

"The Golden Opportunity for Vote Hunters."

CARNEGIE'S "PROBLEMS OF TO-DAY"

The Historic Society of Peterborough wishes to announce the fourth and last of their series of lectures for the season. Mr. J. H. Burnham will lecture upon Mr. Andrew Carnegie's celebrated "Problems of To-day" in the Collegiate Institute on Friday evening, March 26th, at eight o'clock. The general public is cordially invited. Admission free. The society takes pleasure in extending a special invitation to the various industrial societies and unions of workingmen in the city and also to the employers of labor. Mr. Carnegie's book, which has been the talk of two continents, is an able and impartial review of the industrial conditions in the world to-day, together with a number of suggestions for the general betterment of those conditions and observations upon the responsibilities of the rich and the proper incidence of taxation.

MEETING ON TUESDAY NIGHT

Mr. John A. Patterson, K. C. Will Address the Local Astronomical Society

Mr. John A. Patterson, M.A., K.C., of Toronto, will address the Peterborough centre of the Royal Astronomical Society at the Collegiate Institute on Tuesday night. The subject will be "The Astronomy of Tennyson," and the lecture will no doubt be a very interesting one. Mr. Patterson is well known in Peterborough, having given an address at a laymen's missionary movement banquet at George street church a few months ago.

FIRE BRIGADE IN NEW ROLE

Were the Means of Breaking up a Gang of Rowdies Who Were Molesting a Chinaman

Saturday night at 9.55 an alarm was sent in to the fire station and the brigade made a fast run to the corner of George street and King but they had a new job to undertake. It seems that a party of young men entered the Chinese restaurant at this corner and proceeded to have some fun with the proprietor. They were well supplied with wet refreshments and just in the humor for having a "little time" at the Chinaman's expense. After putting up with their antics for a considerable time he escaped and made for the police station where his excited yells of "fight" "fight," were mistaken for fire, and an alarm was sent in to the fire station.

The young men had made themselves scarce soon after the Chinaman had gone to the police, leaving a quantity of "bottled joy" behind them so that when the fire brigade arrived the only thing they were up against was "the wet goods" left by the young men but as this is not in the fire department's line, they returned to the station.

CHAPTER XXVII.

EARLY in March a great transport sailed from Manila bay laden with sick and disabled soldiers—the lame, the healthless and the mad. It was not a merry shipload, although hundreds were rejoicing in the escape from the hardships of life in the islands. Graydon Bansemer was among them, weak and distrustful of his own future, albeit a medal of honor and the prospect of an excellent position were ahead of him. His discharge was assured. He had served his country briefly, but well, and he was not loath to rest on his insignificant laurels and to respect the memory of the impulse which had driven him into service. In his heart he felt that time would make him as strong as ever, despite the ugly scar in his side. It was a question with him, however, whether time could revive the ambition that had been smothered during the first days of despair. He looked ahead with keen inquiry, speculating on the uncertain whirl of fortune's wheel.

Jane was obduracy itself in respect to his pleadings. A certain light in her eyes had at last brought conviction to his soul. He began to fear, with a mighty pain, that she would not retreat from the stand she had taken.

She went on board with Mrs. Harbin and Ethel. There were other wives on board who had found temporary release from irksome but voluntary enlistment. Jane's resignation from the Red Cross society deprived her of the privileges which would have permitted her to see much of Graydon. They were kept separated by the transport's regulations—he was a common soldier, she of the officers' mess. The restrictions were cruel and relentless. They saw but little of one another during the thirty days, but their thoughts were busy with the days to come. Graydon grew stronger and more confident as the ship forged nearer to the Golden Gate, Jane more wistful and resigned to the new purpose which was to give life another coloring, if possible. They were but one day out from San Francisco when he found the opportunity to converse with her as she passed through the quarters of the luckless ones.

"Jane, I won't take no for an answer this time," he whispered eagerly. "You must consent. Do you want to ruin both of our lives?"

"Why will you persist, Graydon? You know I cannot"—

"You can. Consider me as well as yourself. I want you. Isn't that enough? You can't ask for more love than I will give. Tomorrow we'll be on shore. I have many things to do before I am liberty to go my way. Won't you wait for me? It won't be long. We can be married in San Francisco. Mr. and Mrs. Cable are to meet you. Tell them, dearest, that you want to go home with me. The home won't be in Chicago, but it will be home just the same."

"Dear Graydon, I am sorry. I am heartsick, but I cannot, I dare not."

Graydon Bansemer was a man as well as a lover. He gave utterance to a perfectly manlike expression, coming from the bottom of his tried soul:

"It's d—d nonsense, Jane!" He said it so feelingly that she smiled even as she shook her head and moved away. "I'll see you tomorrow on shore?" he called, repentant and anxious.

"Yes!"

The next day they landed. Graydon waved an anxious farewell to her as he was hurried off with the lame, the halt and the blind. He saw David Cable and his wife on the pier, and in spite of himself he could not repel an eager, half fearful glance through the crowd of faces. Although he did not expect his father to meet him, he dreaded the thought that he might be there, after all. To his surprise, as he stood waiting with his comrades he saw David Cable turn suddenly and after a moment's hesitation wave his hand to him, the utmost friendship in his now haggard face. His heart thumped joyously at this sign of amity.

As the soldiers moved away Cable paused and looked after him, a grim though compassionate expression in his eyes. He and Jane were ready to confront the customs officers.

"I wonder if he knows about his father," mused he. Jane caught her breath and looked at him with something like terror in her eyes. He abruptly changed the subject, deploring his lapse into the past from which they were trying to shield her.

The following morning Graydon received a note from Cable, a frank but carefully worded message, in which he was invited to take the trip east in the private car of the president of the Pacific, Lakes and Atlantic. Mrs. Cable joined her husband in the invitation. One of the sore spots in Graydon's conscience was healed by this exhibition of kindness. Morever, Cable stated that his party would delay departure until Graydon's papers were passed upon and he was free from red tape restrictions.

The young man on landing sent telegrams to his father and Elias Droom, the latter having asked him to notify him as soon as he reached San Francisco. Graydon was not a little puzzled by the fact that the old clerk seemed strangely at variance with his father in respect to the future. In both telegrams he announced that he would start east as soon as possible.

There was a letter from Droom awaiting him at headquarters. It was brief, but it specifically urged him to accept the place proposed by Mr. Clegg and reiterated his pressing command to the young man to stop for a few days in Chicago. In broad and characteristically uncouth sentences he assured him that while the city held no grudge against him and that the young men would welcome him with open arms—his groundless fears to the contrary—he would advise him to choose New York. There was one rather sentimental allusion to "old Broadway" and another to "Grennitch," as he wrote it. In conclusion, he asked him to come to the office, which was still in the U—— building, adding that if he wished to avoid the newspaper men he could find seclusion at the old rooms in Wells street. "Your father," he said, "has given up his apartment and has taken lodgings. I doubt very much if he will be willing to share them with you, in view of the position he has assumed in regard to your future, although he says you may always call upon him for pecuniary assistance." A draft for $500 was inclosed with the letter.

Graydon was relieved to find that there would be no irksome delay attending his official discharge. When he walked out a "free man," as he called it, a gentlemanly pension attorney locked arms with him and hung on like a leech until the irritated soldier shook him off with less consideration than vigor.

He went directly to the Palace hotel, where he knew the Cables were stopping. David Cable came down in response to his card. The two men shook hands, each eying the other inquiringly for an instant.

"I want you to understand, Graydon, that I am your friend. Nothing has altered my esteem for you."

"Thank you, Mr. Cable. I hardly expected it."

"I don't see why, my boy. But we'll let all that pass. Mrs. Cable wants to see you."

"Before we go any farther I want to make myself clear to you. I still hope to marry Jane. She says she cannot become my wife. You understand why, sir. I only want to tell you that her objections are not objections to me. She is Jane, and I love her, sir, because she is."

"I hope you can win her over, Graydon. She seems determined, however, and she is unhappy. You can't blame her, either. If there were base or common blood in her, it wouldn't make much difference to her pride. But she's made of other material. She's serious about it, and I am sensible enough to get her point of view. She wouldn't want to marry you with the prospect of an eternal shadow that neither of you could get off of your minds. I sometimes wish that I knew who were her parents."

"It doesn't matter, so far as I am concerned."

"I know, my boy. You'll never know how it hurt me to find that I had no daughter. It hurts her worse a thousandfold to learn that she has no mother. I trust it may not happen that you will lose her as a wife."

"If I really thought I couldn't win her, sir, it would ruin my ambition in life. She loves me, I'm sure."

"By the way, Clegg tells me he has offered you the New York office. It is a splendid chance for you. You will take it, of course."

"I expect to talk it over with Mr. Clegg when I get to Chicago."

"Come up to our apartments. Oh, pardon me, Graydon, I want to ask you if you have sufficient money to carry you through? I know the pay of a private is not great."

"Thank you. I have saved nearly all of it. My father has sent me a draft for five hundred. I don't expect to use it, of course."

"And then I did save something in Chicago, strange as it may seem," said Bansemer, with a smile. "I have a few of your 5 per cents. I trust the road is all right."

The Cables left San Francisco on the following day, accompanied by the Harbins and Graydon Bansemer. There was no mistaking the joy which lay under restraint in the faces and attitude of the Cables. David Cable had grown younger and less gray, it seemed, and his wife was glowing with a new and subdued happiness. Graydon, sitting with the excited Ethel, who was rejoicing in the prospect of New York and the other young man, studied the faces of the three people who sat at the other end of the coach.

Time had wrought its penalties. Cable was thin and his face had lost its virility, but not its power. His eyes never left the face of Jane, who was talking in an earnest, impassioned manner, as was her wont in these days. Frances Cable's face was a study in transition. She had lost the color and vivacity of a year ago, although the change was not apparent to the casual observer. Graydon could see that she had suffered in many ways. The keen, eager appeal for appreciation was gone from her eyes; in its stead was that appeal for love and contentedness. Happiness, now struggling against the smarting of a sober pain, was giving a sweetness to her eyes that had been lost in the ambitious glitter of other days. Ethel bored him, a most unusual condition. He longed to be under the tender, quieting influence at the opposite end of the car. He even resented his temporary exile.

"Jane," Cable was saying with gentle insistence, "it is not just to him. He loves you, and you are not doing the right thing by him."

"You'll find I am right in the end," she said stubbornly.

"I can't bear the thought of your going out as a trained nurse, dear," protested Frances Cable. "There is no necessity. You can have the best of homes and in any place you like. Why waste your life in"—

"Waste, mother? It would be wasting my life if I did not find an occupation for it. I can't be idle. I can't exist forever in your love and devotion."

"Good Lord, child, don't be foolish!" exclaimed Cable. "That hurts me more than you think. Everything we have is yours."

Sermons by Mail.

Oklahoma City, Okla., March 22.—Mail order gospel—Christianity carried broadcast by a two-cent stamp. Sounds odd, compared with the methods of the late Sam Jones, Dwight L. Moody and other great evangelists who relied largely upon personal magnetism as a means of securing converts. Yet this idea has been adopted seriously by Rev. Ward R. Clarke, pastor of the Unitarian Church of Oklahoma City.

Drinks Carbolic.

Toronto, March 22.—But twenty years of age and already tired of life, Charles H. Diefenthal, a young electrician, committed suicide in a quick lunch restaurant Saturday night by drinking carbolic acid. The young man had apparently deliberately planned to end his life, for in his pocket was found a note giving a reason for his action and asking that his father in Quebec should be notified of his death.

Accident In Mine.

London, Ont., March 22.—Thomas Dunkin, 144 Tecumseh avenue, received a telegram yesterday afternoon saying that a serious accident had occurred in a Cobalt mine, in which he is a partner, and asking him to proceed to Cobalt at once.

Mr. Dunkin immediately left for Cobalt. The name of the mining property couldn't be ascertained.

Carrie Was Annoying.

New York, March 22.—Carrie Nation, who came across in the Baltic's second cabin, made things very disagreeable for a time, it was said yesterday, for her fellow passengers. They reported the facts to Captain Ransom, and for the rest of the voyage there was less trouble as the result of a talk the captain had with her.

Elliott Not Known.

Kingston, March 22.—Claude Elliott is not registered at Queen's College. It is stated that there was a young man named Elliott who sang baritone in St. George's Church choir. He was an Englishman, and is at present in New York, employed, it is reported, as a street car conductor.

STATEMENT TO THE ELECTORS BY WATER COMMISSIONERS CONCERNING THE BY-LAW

To be Voted on Tuesday, March 30th, For the Erection of New Dam—Consideration and Importance of the Subject—A Comprehensive and Detailed Review.

During the past four years the Water Commissioners have had under consideration the propriety of advising the erection of a new dam, and new power station, with enlarged pumping capacity. They are now of opinion the work should be proceeded with, with as much expedition as the subject is capable of. The present dam, they are convinced, is not satisfactory, in view of the vital interests that are at stake which interests are wholly dependent on it. At the time it was erected by the Water Company the use of cement for the purpose of building a dam was untried, and in fact had not reached the experimental stage in such use. The Company did its best with the material then generally employed. For several years after and up to quite a recent date the Government of Canada built the same character of dam, but it is very certain it will not do so in the future. The one feature in which this old kind of dam has always failed is its leakage which nothing that has been devised can overcome, even the best losing from one-quarter to one-third or more of the power they would otherwise develop. The city's dam is no exception. Another reason that has led the Commissioners to make representations to the City Council for the submission of the bylaw, is that the present dam does not assure that degree of security and permanency of structure so essential when ratepayers reflect that the city is wholly relying on it for water supply and fire protection. Again, the pond above the dam is small as is the case with all dams on the river, and therefore it is requisite the city should have a dam that not only would develop to the full all the power the flow of the river will give but be of that modern type by which the height of the water in the pond can at all seasons be kept at the same level a most important feature.

COST OF REPAIRS AND FIRE INSURANCE.

Since the city's purchase from the company, the cost of repairs to the dam has been $6,150.00, or an average of a little over $860.00 yearly, which if applied to the building of a new dam would answer nearly $20,000.00 of its cost. Last year the cost of repairs was $1235.72. The Underwriters' Association, which fixes the rates for fire insurance, has required the city to provide a very largely increased pumping capacity, or in the alternative has threatened a general advance in rates for fire insurance upon city property. To provide this demand at the present dam would entail a cost of over $70,000 in enlarging the power station, wheel pits, forebays, etc. and yet leave the composition of the dam much as it is. In the judgment of the commissioners it would be false economy of the rankest kind to invest so large or any large sum in that way. During one period of the past year the present pumping power had been reached by the demand made by water consumers, and had a large fire occurred at this time, effective service could not have been given; but it is just to state that to a considerable extent this was caused by the wanton waste on lawns, and by reason of bad plumbing. During the year 1908 the daily pumping was 1,710,000 gallons, equal to about 140 gallons per day, per head, of the population. In London, England, where the plumbing must be of the best, and yet the water supply plentiful, the quantity is under 25 gallons per head daily. While building a new dam, there must be amendment in this particular.

CONDITION OF PRESENT DAM.

The report of Mr. Keefer, C.E. to the Commissioners, contains this statement in regard to the condition of the dam.—"The present dam was built above eleven years ago, and is what is known as a crib timber dam, a form of construction which is commonly used by lumbermen on our rivers, and is dependent for its ability to hold the water entirely on the plank sheeting driven more, or less, into the bed of the river on its upstream side. The remainder of the dam, that is, for the overflow section, is rough open cribwork which has no value to hold water, but is simply to supply the necessary weight to ensure its stability. The foundation of the dam rests on the gravel bed of the river and there is nothing to prevent leakage under it except the sheeting I have mentioned and to do this it would require to be driven either to the rock or into a good clay stratum—if it existed—overlying the rock. At the time I made examination of the dam, at low water stage, there was a very considerable leakage under the dam, and though it is difficult to estimate its exact amount, I should estimate it as amounting to at least thirty per cent of the flow, and that it might amount to as much as fifty per cent.

"No doubt at the time the dam was constructed the form of construction adopted was fully warranted, and it has served a good purpose as a sufficient quantity of water could be held to furnish the necessary power for the present equipment of the pumping station. As, however, with the growth of the city, the present consumption seems to have about reached the limit of the pumping capacity and there is no reserve capacity—a most important feature in a direct pressure system—it is a question whether you will not very soon have to provide for an extension of your works, which of course, will involve a greater consumption of water for power purposes, in which case it will be necessary to reduce the leakage in the dam as much as possible.

"The difficulty experienced from the excessive leakage under and through the dam is that it reduces the effective weight of the structure, and therefore, its stability. Your Superintendent, Mr Wm. Henderson, has taken a wise precaution in filling in a large quantity of gravel, as shown on the plans, above the dam, which has no doubt been the means of averting serious trouble, though it cannot stop leakage."

RECOMMENDATION FOR NEW DAM

For above reasons the commissioners believe they are justified in the recommendation to pass the by-law; but there are other considerations. The works originally cost the city $240,000 and $312,000 are now invested in them by issued debentures. This has already been reduced by $35,000 paid from sinking funds to the City Trust towards the redemption of the debentures. During the seven years ownership by the city, vast benefit has been gained. The water rates have been reduced between forty-five and fifty per cent. without a dollar of direct assessment on ratepayers for the cost of purchase or the improvements, save water-rates, and in the one item of fire hydrants the yearly saving is $1,000 in the taxes. The sinking funds and interest and cost of management have been paid out of the income from the rates, and also a reserve fund laid by of $33,000, which, with the city's approval, may be applied towards providing a filtration plant when the dam, etc., are completed. For the past year the net surplus amounted to $9,259.13. The annual sinking fund and interest fixed by the by-law for the new dam is $7,424.56, leaving $1,834.57 to be further added to reserve fund, or go in reduction of water rates. The excess during the past seven years has constantly increased year by year, and there is no doubt this will continue as the works are extended. Therefore, the new dam, power station and plant will add nothing to the taxation of the people beyond at most the present charge for water.

PROPOSAL TO SPEND $120,000.

The proposal of the commissioners is to employ the $120,000 in construction of a new dam, etc., five hundred feet below the present dam, where good, level rock bottom can be reached, and where the river is nearly one hundred feet narrower than at the present dam. Both ends of the dam will rest on city property. The dam is intended to be constructed of concrete piers, built on a solid concrete base or low dam—the latter founded on rock bottom—with sluices between the piers of sufficient capacity to discharge the entire river flow at high water periods without causing flooding or unduly high back water in the pond; the sluices to be closed or partly closed, by stop logs, as may be required, to control the river discharge; thus making available the entire low water river flow for pumping and power purposes. The stop logs will be handled by power winches, probably electrically operated. There will be a log slide in the dam; and the dam throughout its entire length will be covered by a steel reinforced concrete floor or bridge. The pump house, situated at the westerly end of the dam, will have concrete foundations, penstocks and forebays—all founded on rock bottom, with rock bottom wheel pits and tail races. The superstructure will be of brick, with iron window sashes; steel concrete floors in the pipe vault and machinery room, thus being of the most durable construction and absolutely fireproof. The pumping plant will consist of one new unit of three millions imperial gallons capacity per twenty-four hours, when pumping against 130 pounds pressure in the air vessel, for fire purposes; also, the two 2 1-4 million gallons each pumping units in the present pump house. The new unit will be first installed and set to work, after which the old units will be repaired, if necessary, and removed to the new pumping station, thus providing an uninterrupted water supply to the city. The pumping capacity will then be 7 1-2 million gallons per day, with provision in the pump house for an additional unit of 3 millions — thus ultimately providing for 10 1-2 million imperial gallons per day. The pump house will be well lighted and provided with a travelling crane capable of handling any part of the machinery in the building. There will be a concrete decked crib—situated in the pond—for the intake or suction pipe, with centre well and revolving screens for convenient cleansing.

The suction and discharge pipes will be well supplied with stop valves for cutting off any pump or set of pumps, as may be necessary. It is intended that the dam, pump house and pumping plant—in fact the entire development—shall be so designed, constructed and equipped as to be thoroughly modern and efficient throughout, as well as absolutely fireproof. The materials of construction will be almost entirely of concrete, iron and steel; thus securing the greatest degree of permanence, and reducing the cost of maintenance and operation to a minimum. It is the intention to provide a continuous roadway across the river, on the dam, thus requiring slight changes from the preliminary plans, but include in the estimate of cost. When the dam and power station are finished, two years hence, if proceeded with this year and next, it is intended that the present power station and intake pipe will be used with a steam auxiliary plant, to provide against a case of anchor ice or other contingency which would deprive the city of water supply for general purposes, or in case of fire. This $120,000 will be disposed of as follows, as shown in the Engineer, Mr. Kennedy's report. The figures for many of the items are omitted, as giving them would be indiscreet, before tenders are asked for.

Wheel pits, foundations, pump house, forebays, etc...... ...
Intake crib, with connecting bridge, valves, screens, etc.........
Turbines, 3 million gallons moving present pumps, travelling crane; suction and discharge pipes; stop valves, castings, etc., in place.........
Contingencies.........
	$111,375.00
Engineering and inspection 5 per cent.........	5,569.00
Total.........	$116,944.00

The total will be observed is $3,166 less than the sum called for in the by-law, but as the money cannot be applied to any other purpose than the dam, etc., debentures will not be issued for more than is necessary.

HEAD OF DAM—HORSE POWER.

In November, 1904, the commissioners employed Mr. C. H. Keefer, hydraulic engineer of Ottawa, to examine carefully and thoroughly into the whole subject of the old, and a new dam, the power that would be obtained and various other matters. His report states that "at low water a head of ten feet could be maintained by holding the water to level of the crest of the present dam," and that "with the ordinary low water flow of the river this head should give 1,250 effective horse-power." He adds, "If, however, a proper system of storage of the surplus water of the river drainage area was arranged, and all the dams and regulation of supply placed under the control of a proper officer, whose duty would be to see that the water was not wasted and a normal flow maintained, there there is no doubt that the minimum flow and power could be increased at least fifty per cent."

REPORT OF MR. KENNEDY.

In November last the services of Mr. William Kennedy, jr., hydraulic engineer of Montreal, were secured. After an exhaustive examination of the capabilities of the river flow at the intended site of the new dam, he reported as follows;

"Replying to the questions as per your letter of the 15th inst.

1. What head the proposed dam will give?

The head will fluctuate slightly according to the river flow, but I propose the low water pond level to be maintained at elevation of 78.50 to 78.75, or, at least, one foot higher than the present dam crest level, which, with a further gain, of say, nine inches in tail water (by placing the dam further down stream) will be a total gain of at least fifteen per cent. on the present head from the dam crest to tail water—as given by Mr. Henderson for October, 1908, or from, say, present head 10 feet, to 11 1-2 feet proposed head. This fifteen per cent., over, extra head will give a net gain in results, or output of power to pumping or electrical machinery, of twenty per cent or over, at the new dam.

I expect we will do better than this; but the exact gain can only be determined by actual tests under varying water conditions.

2. What number of horse-power will it give?

The horse power will vary in proportion as the variations in river flow from low to high water, but at ordinary low river flow of 65,000 cubic feet per minute (figures obtained by Mr. Henderson, superintendent) and 11 1-2 feet head the power will be 1,134 h.p., allowing 80 per cent. efficiency on water wheels—increasing as above stated, with river flow—or, probably 1,300 h.p. during a great part of the year; increasing to 2,000 h.p. easily at a good flow."

APPLICATOIN OF THE POWER.

With these assurances, and the improved conservation of the waters in the back lakes by the Government, already largely undertaken and certain of being perfected within a few years, it may be easily predicted that the new dam will develop 1,200 horse power. Of this it is proposed to reserve 500 horse power for pumping purposes. From the application of part of the remaining 700 horse power to the lighting of the city or other economic use, a very large saving to the ratepayers will be obtained. The present cost of public lighting is $8,500 per annum, private lighting is threatening to rival our taxes, and a great economy in these items can be made by the city, by its own use of the water power, which otherwise would flow idly down the river. However this is a matter in which the commissioners have no authority to act. The City Council will no doubt use the surplus in the best interests of the public at large.

The Commissioners have thus unreservedly endeavored to explain and justify their conduct to the electors and they hope they have in some measure succeeded in the effort. Engineers are unable to determine the life of the present dam, or least refuse to give assurance of its longevity, and the Commissioners are taking what they believe to be prudent precaution against possible mishap, are providing for the requirement of increased pumping capacity, and directing the attention of the ratepayers to the condition of the present, and the benefits to be derived from a new dam. They are convinced their recommendation is justified, and in fact urgent, as well as being a sound business proposition.

SUPPORTS THE $15,000 BY-LAW

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Permit me to say a word in support of the $1,500 by-law to be submitted to the ratepayers on March 30th.

First I wish to say that the Council and the Water Commissioners are endeavoring to work together for the best interests of the city. The commissioners are not at the present time taking any responsibility of the power by-law, for the reason that they are only acting and responsible to the ratepayers as Water Commissioners. However, as soon as the city takes up the business of generating electricity for light or power purposes, the Water Commissioners become Power Commissioners as well.

At the combined meeting between the commissioners and Power Committee, held for the purpose of discussing the submitting of a by-law for the proposed dam, the Power Committee, after hearing the report of the commissioners' engineers, discussed the advisability of submitting the above by-law at the same time as the by-law for the dam, with a view of being able to save expense by letting the contract for dam and power house at the same time.

Should this by-law pass, I would be in favor of placing the responsibility in the hand of the commissioners at once, and let them get an estimate of the cost of the total development and delivery, believing that they will be better able to do so than the council, especially as they are to assume the management later. Should they find the cost of development too great, the money need not and cannot be used for any other purpose.

I would urge the ratepayers to vote for both by-laws, as I do not think it good business to have from 500 to 700 horse power go to waste flowing over a dam owned by the ratepayers, when it could be utilized for street lighting and other purposes.

In closing I would add that the Power Committee are also working on a larger power policy, which they hope to complete to the satisfaction of the ratepayers, and to the best interests of the city.

Yours truly,
G. A. GILLESPIE.

PRESBYTERIAL LAYMENS' CONFERENCE TO-MORROW

Preparations for the Presbyterial Laymen's conference to be held tomorrow in St. Andrew's church, commencing at 9 a.m., are about completed. It is expected that there will be a large representation of the congregations in the Presbytery. Men of the other churches in the city will be welcome. The conference will be opened by Rev. A. E. Armstrong, of Toronto.

The laymen of the church will be expected to turn out in large numbers to hear Mr. Matthew Parkinson, of Toronto, tomorrow evening in St. Paul's parlors at 8 p.m. He will hold a conference on the movement and explain the significance of the great national missionary congress to be held in Toronto from March 31st to April 4th. Those who desire to keep in touch with this great movement will be glad of the privilege this meeting affords.

MISS BIRDIE DAWSON
Winner of First Grand Prize, District 1

MISS BIRDIE DAWSON—With the phenomenal vote of over one and one quarter million. Miss Dawson's work has been more than successful; it was spectacular.

MISS MAUD ADAMS—With the remarkable record of nearly one and one quarter millions. This represents the very best energy, industry and unfailing application. While not securing a first place, the Review desires to recognize Miss Adam's efforts and will, in addition to the prize received, give a trip over the Mackinaw summer tour route, and a sum for expenses.

MISS MAUD PERRY—Who has given untiring attention to the contest, while at the same time filling her important duties as head operator at the Bell Telephone exchange. Miss Perry has proved her evident popularity by the vote of nearly a million. In addition to the prize gained the Review adds a trip to Quebec and a sum for expenses.

MISS ROSE P. MOORE—Of Lakefield, who has made the first place in the country district, securing the second grand prize with a total of over seven hundred thousand. When one considers that the territory necessary to be covered to secure so large a vote, Miss Moore's success is little short of marvellous. Miss Moore's work was well done and her reports were models of neatness and business thoroughness.

MISS LILA FINLAY—Of Norwood, who gains a first district prize, with a splendid vote, aggregating nearly three hundred thousand. While not so early in the contest, as others Miss Finlay gained rapidly toward the close doing remarkably well for the time given to the canvas.

HERB McMILLAN
First Prize, First District

MISS MURTIN COLIN—Youngest of the candidates, and whose work was done entirely in the country district with a total vote of which she may be proud.

MISS ADA HOLCOMBE—Of Havelock while not winning one of the prizes the Review desires to recognize as a valued helper and begs the acceptance of a gold bracelet.

MR. HERBERT McMILLAN— Who had just one month, may be rightly called the whirlwind of the contest. He either had a host of friends or a winning way, for he secured the very best class of business, and gained a total of nearly six hundred thousand.

MISS LILA FINLAY
First Prize District 2

MR. W. G. RUNDLE—Was a late starter and was so handicapped. He was piling up rapidly and is to be considered as having his work done in spare hours only.

W. A. MOWRY—Gains a special prize for the good business he brought in, while not qualifying for one of the regular prizes. Mr Mowry was a veritable night hawk, and made many a good hit. He is asked to accept a china tea set.

MR. P. G. TOWNS—Leads all competitors among the men except one. His work was of the very best class and secured at considerable effort. He has a reputation that is more than local for doing things and doing them well. He has made good in every way and is the sort of towns out of which cities are made.

MR. BERT CUNNINGHAM—Was the dark horse of the contest, bringing in his returns at the last moment, and doing it all in the last few days. Had he got to work earlier he would have made his male opponents hustle.

The Daily Review's European Tour contest closed last night at eight o'clock and was followed by the summing up and announcement of the names of the successful competitors, the work of determining the result being done at the rooms of the Y.M.C.A. There the judges got to work and after verifying the lists, submitted the certificates to the computors, when the votes were rapidly counted on the adding machine. The result fully verifies the promise made by the Review when the contest was started and marks a fitting close to one of the most interesting and honestly conducted struggles for supremacy ever attempted in the Midland District of Ontario. The leaders may well be proud of their success and those who made so aggressive a fight for leadership will agree that every move was as fair and honorable as the strictest construction of the rules and regulations could demand. The feature of the contest was the number of votes cast by the candidates during the last hours of the balloting. During the afternoon the excitement increased and the returns came in with great rapidity, the candidates and friends sparing no exertions to roll up a bigger vote. As many as 1,500,000 votes were cast between 6 pm. and 8 pm, the hour of closing, and the business office of the Review was packed to the door. No attempt was made to do the summing up, as the room at disposal would not allow of the judges and those making the count to do so with comfort.

MISS MAUDE ADAMS
First Prize, District 1

An adjournment was made to the Board room of the Y.M.C.A. where the long table was a convenience. On it was placed the adding machine, kindly loaned by the Bank of Commerce, and which was manipulated by Mr. T. H. Ardiel of the Dominion Bank staff.

The judges were Messrs. E. B. Fowler, A. W. Cressman and T. H. G. Denne, of the city; Mr F. Moher, of Douro, Mr W. H. Casement of Lakefield, Mr E. C. McLeod of Norwood, who kindly took the place of Mr F. Woollcombe, who was detained.

The certificates for votes held by the contestants, were taken from the packages, and scrutinized by the judges so as to leave no room for question in their finding and that every one interested should be assured of the absolute fairness of the final count. The certificates were read by Mr. Fowler and rapidly computed on the adding machine by Mr. Ardiel. The first lists to be counted were of the smaller totals and the interest rose as each successive count showed increasing numbers of votes for the candidates. The last lists to be determined were those of Miss Moore, Miss Perry, Miss Adams, and Miss Dawson, and the final count was awaited with breathless interest. Then congratulations were in order and were acknowledged.

MISS MURTIN COLIN
Second Prize, District Two

While the Daily Review congratulates the winners on their success and other contestants for their excellent showing which they have made it feels that it might not overlook its own share of success. It has upon its lists the names of over a thousand new subscribers and certainly has reason to be proud of its subscription list. Both the Daily and Weekly editions are substantially increased in their advertising value and its field of responsibility and usefulness in the city and vicinity is largely extended.

MISS ROSE MOORE
Winner Second Grand Prize, District 2

The business men and advertisers of the city and county, who wish their announcements and messages to to reach the eyes of the buyers will find that the Review has opened up for them a wider field of publicity. The canvass has placed the paper in homes where it will be read closely for its full, fair and accurate reports and chronicles of the local happenings. And best of all, for the advertiser, it is a paid for circulation, not given away with political or municipal objects in view, but valued because the paper is worth the subscription price.

MISS ADAMS PLEASED.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—To the host of friends who were my supporters from start to finish in the popularity contest I wish to take this opportunity to publicly express my thanks. I feel satisfied with my high vote and also am pleased with the nice manner in which the Review has rewarded me, more than doubling the value of the prize I won.

P. G. TOWNS
First Prize, District 2

I heartily congratulate Miss Dawson on her splendid victory.

Yours truly,
MAUDE ADAMS.

WORD FROM MISS MOORE.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—Allow me to express through your columns my thanks and appreciation to the hundreds of friends who gave me their support in the contest just closed. I am well satisfied with my vote and the prize awarded me by the Review.

Yours very truly,
ROSE P. MOORE,
Lakefield, Ont., March 22nd.

MISS DAWSON'S THANKS.

I wish to tender my sincere thanks to those who supported me in the contest. I appreciate what they have done and realize that it was largely through their efforts that I was able to carry off the first prize.

THE OFFICIAL AWARDS

Peterborough Ont., March 22, 1909

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

We, the undersigned judges, selected to count the vote in the Peterborough Review European Tour and Diamond Contest, find the following to be a true statement of the number of votes cast for the various contestants:

We find as a result of the count that MISS B. DAWSON is entitled to the first Grand Prize (choice of European Tour or Gerhard-Heintzman Piano) by reason of having the largest number of votes in the entire contest. We find that MISS ROSE MOORE is entitled to the second Grand Prize ($80 diamond ring) by reason of having the highest number of votes in the district not winning the first Grand Prize. We also find that MISS MAUD ADAMS, MISS LILA FINLAY, HERB McMILLAN and P. G. TOWNS are entitled to first prizes (diamond rings) by reason of having the highest vote in their respective lists (and not winning either grand prize), and that the second prizes (gold watches) go to MISS MAUDE PERRY, MISS MURTIN COLIN, W. G. RUNDLE and BERT. CUNNINGHAM.

AN ISOLATION HOSPITAL

Whether it be an Isolation Hospital in one building or in many, the fact remains that an isolation hospital is a present as well as a future necessity. One day recently a lady who takes in students of the Normal school, found that one of them had developed scarlet fever. What was the lady to do, ship the sick boarders or lose the others?

She resolved to keep and nurse him, letting the others go. There was no hospital or house of refuge for the sick man to go to. The city is clearly liable for damages for the amount of damages for the amount of loss sustained by the lady in question. What would happen if a big hotel found itself in the same box? The city would find a bill against it for thousands of dollars damages which it would have to pay.

AN ERRONEOUS IDEA

A remarkable and disheartening article appears in the Contemporary Review from the vivid pen of Jack London on "The Lepers of Molokai." To the average reader, the word Molokai is a living horror. It carries the mind to an isolated prison-house where the tortured and doomed lepers of the Hawaiian Islands are thought to eke out a miserable existence while awaiting certain death. The only ray that illumines the dreadful picture is the Christian heroism of Father Damien, who risked his life to carry consolation to those doomed victims of an unclean plague, and who himself caught the disease and died.

From the heroism of Father Damien, nothing can detract a shred. He took the risk, he exiled himself from civilization and all the things which most men hold dear, he faced death; and death accepted his challenge. Jack London calls him "the hero of the church." But it will be a great comfort to the people of the outside world to learn on the testimony of the novelist that the picture of Molokai has been painted in far too deep colors. The grim facts that the prisoners in this paradise are doomed men and that they are isolated from the rest of mankind, cannot be written away. They are separated from their families and all that most of them value highest. But—this being granted—they are not so badly off as certain sensational writers have led us to believe. In fact, they seem to be much better off than could have been hoped.

Mr. London opens his article by describing the sports to celebrate the Fourth of July, which he and Mrs London attended. All were enjoying themselves. The lepers raced horses and donkeys, and had bushels of fun. Nor were the visitors afraid. Says Mr. London:—

"Leprosy is not so contagious as is imagined. I went for a week's visit to the Settlement and I took my wife along—all of which would not have happened had we any apprehension of contracting the disease. Nor did we wear long gauntled gloves and keep apart from the lepers. On the contrary we mingled freely with them, and before we left we knew scores of them by sight and name. The precautions of simple cleanliness seem to be all that is necessary. On returning to their own house, after having been among and handling lepers, the non-lepers, such as the physicians and the superintendent merely wash their faces and hands with mildly antiseptic soap and change their coats."

One day they had a rifle match which the Londons attended. "All about us in the shooting booth, were the lepers" he says. "Lepers and non-lepers were using the same guns and all were rubbing shoulders in the confined space." Again they had a baseball match. The men who know the disease do not fear it greatly. Victims are no longer treated with mediaeval rigor. A "suspect" is invited to visit the Receiving Station at Honolulu and all his expenses are paid. There he is carefully examined by a bacteriologist and then by five examining physicians. He can have a physician of his own along if he wishes. If found to be a leper he is so declared; but is not bundled off at once to Molokai. He is given weeks or even months to wind up his business. At Molokai he may be visited by his relatives business agents, etc., though they are not permitted to eat or sleep in his house. Moreover he has the privilege of re-examination; and patients are continually going back to Honolulu for that purpose.

Molokai is a lovely spot with a superb climate. The lepers engage in fishing farming and the like, and sell their products to the Board of Health. All trades are followed. There is a boss painter who employs eight men. Mr London gives a number of cases to show that many of the people, who have lived in Molokai, do not want to leave. Before the discovery of the leprosy bacillus, a number of people were sent to Molokai by Mistake; but when it was found that they did not have leprosy at all they fought against being sent away, and obtained jobs from the Board of Health enabling them to remain. "The present jailer is one of these men. Declared to be a non-leper, he accepted (on salary) the charge of the jail in order to escape being sent away."

But it would be impossible to give even an idea of all the cheerful tidings in Mr. London's amazing article. He says that for himself he would prefer to spend the rest of his days in Molokai than in any tuberculosis sanatorium, or "in the east side of London or New York or the stock yards of Chicago." Leprosy is a slow and uncertain disease. It appears, "commits a ravage," and then may lie dormant for five, ten or forty years. The lepers in hiding often die because their wounds from disease are not treated properly. In Molokai, surgeons look after them and often put a complete stop to the disease for years after its first appearance. Antiseptic surgery has done much to lessen the horrors of this as of all other afflictions. They do not even know how the disease is communicated. There is a woman in the settlement who has had five leper husbands and children by all of them; and yet she herself has never taken the disease. Father Damien, on the other hand, succumbed. It is still a mystery and an affliction, but it need not be a horror. —Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The C.P.R. switchman who twigged that something was wrong with the runaway train and sidetracked it so that it would not go through the main waiting-room of the station and kill hundreds of people, ought to be rewarded.

No doubt the $10,000,000.00 G.T.P. loan will go through, notwithstanding the brag, bluster and boasting of its self-sufficient advocates. But at least this much should be guaranteed by written agreement, that the G. T.P. will ask for no more, and will not ask for a gift of the said ten millions now to be granted.

We should like to see the "At Dodsley's" reviews of books and history in the Montreal Gazette, by M. J. G., who is known to be Mr. Martin J. Griffin, one of the chief librarians of parliament, in book form. They give the ideas of a man who knows how to convey the real meaning of things to "the general."

Little Harry with his sister and brothers was being taught natural history by the governess through the instrumentality of a game. The game was called "Barnyard." One child was a duck, another a turkey, and a third a calf, and so on—a noisy, delightful game.

But little Harry remained, in all the tumult as still as death. Far off in a corner he crouched, silent and alone. The governess, spying him, approached, saying, indignantly:

"Come, Harry, and play with us."

"Hush," answered Harry, "I'm laying an egg"—The Circle.

Firemen Knocked Out.

Toronto, March 23.—For the first time since the second fire of a week ago Sunday in the Crown Coal Co. yards, at the foot of West Market street, no firemen were at work on the coal piles last night, although two lines of hose were left.

The fire has been in many respects the most stubborn and the most dangerous the fire department have ever had to contend with. Three firemen are in hospital, another one ill at his home and others have suffered more or less serious illness as a result of the blaze, due principally to the noxious gases which the blazing coal has originated. In addition numerous of the laborers who have been employed in shifting the coal in the pile which was first on fire have been affected.

Young Man's Suicide.

CROUP QUICKLY CURED

Don't Let the Child Choke to Death While Waiting For the Doctor.

Hyomei, the miraculous, antiseptic dry air treatment, will cure croup in either the first or second stages. Easily inhaled, even when the breathing is irregular, it reaches more promptly than any other remedy the terribly inflamed membrane of the windpipe. Its soothing balsams act immediately, the inflammation is allayed and the swelling reduced.

George H. King, of 22 Willington South Woodstock, says: "We would not think of keeping house without Hyomei. It has warded off colds, croup coughs and sore throats for all of our three children many and many a time. When a child breathes badly and through the mouth and the glands around the eyes and nose commence to swell, then is the time that we find the Hyomei quickly relieves the trouble and gets the bronchial tubes, lungs and throat cleared up."

Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) is guaranteed by Wm. Madill, druggist, Peterborough, to cure catarrh, colds, coughs, asthma, bronchitis and croup, or money back. A complete outfit, including a neat hard rubber pocket inhaler, costs only $1.00 An extra bottle of Hyomei, if afterwards needed, costs but 50 cents.

In the judgment of many readers the most interesting editorial page in Canada is that of the Toronto Daily Star. Mr. John Lewis, author of the Life of George Brown, and for many years chief editorial writer on the Globe is the Star's chief writer, and the staff has recently been increased by the accession of Mr. Joseph T. Clark, "Mack," formerly editor of the Saturday Night. Mr. Lewis and Mr. Clark stand in the first rank of their profession in Canada, and the combination of two such writers on the staff of the same paper is something unique in Canadian journalism.

The Star's editorials are always sane, progressive, exceptionally free from bias, political or otherwise, and always eminently readable. Special contributions, in which "Mack's" personality is particularly noticeable, are now an outstanding feature of the page, so that altogether it is little wonder that it is popular.

The body of the Rev J. W. Simpson, general manager of the Fidelity Mutual Insurance Company, and formerly professor of Marietta College, Ohio, was found in the ruins of the Fifth avenue apartment house, which was burned in New York on Thursday night.

"I'm sorry I said it, daddy. I did not mean it in that way. It isn't the money, you know, and it isn't the home, either. No; you must let me choose my own way of living the rest of my life. I came from a foundling hospital. A good and tender nurse found me there and gave me the happiest years of my life. I shall go back there and give the rest of my years to children who are less fortunate than I was. I want to help them, mother, just as you did—only it is different with me."

"You'll see it differently some day," said Mrs. Cable earnestly.

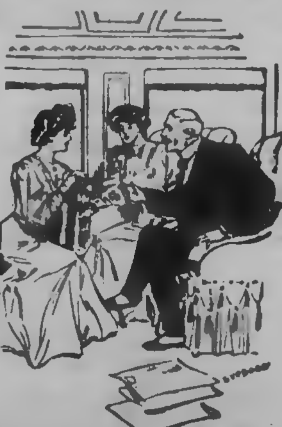
"I don't object to your helping the foundlings, Jane," said Cable, "but I don't see why you have to be a nurse to do it. Other women support such causes, and not as nurses, either. It's"—

"It's my way, daddy, that's all," she said firmly.

"Then why, in the name of heaven, were you so unkind as to keep that poor boy over there alive when he might have died and ended his misery? You nursed him back to life only to give him a wound that cannot be healed. You would ruin his life, Jane. Is it fair? I'm uncouth and hard in many ways—I had a hard, unkind beginning—but I really believe I've got more heart in me than you have."

"David!" exclaimed his wife. Jane looked at the exasperated man in surprise.

"Now, here's what I intend you to do: You owe me something for the love that I give to you; you owe Graydon something for keeping him from dying. If you want to go into the nursing business, all right. But I'm going to demand some of your devotion for my own sake before that time comes. I've loved you all of your life"—



"Good Lord, child, don't be foolish!" exclaimed Cable.

"And I've loved you, daddy," she gasped.

"And I'm going to ask you to begin your nursing career by attending to me. I'm sick for want of your love. I'm giving up business for the sake of enjoying it unrestrained. Your mother and I expect it. We are going abroad for our health, and we are going to take you with us. Right now is where you begin your career as a nurse. You've got to begin by taking care of the love that is sick and miserable. We want it to live, my dear. Now, I want a direct decision—at once: Will you take charge of two patients on a long contemplated trip in search of love and rest—wages paid in advance?"

She looked at him, white faced and stunned. He was putting it before her fluently and in a new light. She saw what it was that he considered that she owed to them—the love of a daughter, after all.

An hour later she stood with Graydon on the rear platform of the car. He was trying to talk calmly of the country through which they were rushing, and she was looking pensively down the rails that slipped out behind them.

"We'll be in Chicago in three days," he remarked.

"Graydon, I have decided to go abroad for five or six months before starting upon my work. They want me so much, you see," she said, her voice a trifle uncertain.

"I wish I could have some power to persuade you," he said. Changing his tone to one of brisk interest, he went on. "It is right, dear. It will do you great good, and it will be a joy to them. I'll miss you."

"And I shall miss you, Graydon," she said, her eyes very solemn and wistful.

"Won't you—won't you give me the promise I want, Jane?" he asked eagerly. She placed her hand upon his and shook her head.

"Won't you be good to me, Graydon? Don't make it so hard for me. Please, please don't tell me again that you love me."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THE spring floods delayed the eastern express, bringing the party to Chicago nearly a day late. The Cables and the Harbins went at once to the Annex, where David Cable had taken rooms. They had given up their north side home some months before, both he and his wife retiring into the seclusion that a great hotel can afford when necessary.

Graydon hurried off to his father's office, eager, yet half fearing, to meet the man who was responsible for the broken link in his life—this odd year. He recalled as he drove across town that a full year had elapsed since he spent that unforgettable night in Elias Droom's uncanny home. Was he never to forget that night—that night when his soul seemed even more squalid than the home of the recluse?

All of his baggage except a suit case had been left at the station. He did not know what had become of his belongings in the former home of his father, nor, for that matter, did he care.

At the U—— building he ventured a diffident greeting to the elevator boy, whom he remembered. The boy looked at him quizzically and nodded with customary aloofness. Graydon found himself hoping that he would not meet Bobby Rigby. He also wondered as the car shot up how his father had managed to escape from the meshes that were drawn about him on the eve of his departure. His chances had looked black and hopeless enough then, yet he still maintained the same old offices in the building. His name was on the directory board—downstairs. Graydon's heart gave a quick bound with the thought that his father had proved the charges false after all.

Elias Droom was busy directing the labors of two ablebodied men and a charwoman, all of whom were toiling as they had never toiled before. The woman was dusting law books, and the men were packing them away in boxes. The front room of the suit was in a state of devastation. A dozen boxes stood about the floor; rugs and furniture were huddled in the most remote corner awaiting the arrival of the "secondhand man;" the floor was littered with paper. Droom was directing operations with a broken umbrella. It seemed like a lash to the toilers.

"Now let's get through with this room," he was saying in his most impelling way. "The men will be here for the boxes at 4. I don't want 'em to wait. This back room stuff we'll put in the trunks. Look out there! Don't you see that nail?"

Eddie Deever, with his usual indolence, was seated upon the edge of the writing table in the corner, smoking his cigarette and commenting with rash freedom upon the efforts of the perspiring slaves.

"How long are you going to keep these things in the warehouse?" he asked of Droom.

"I'm not going to keep them there at all. They belong to Mr. Bansemer. He'll take them out when he has the time."

"He's getting all the time he wants now, I guess," commented Eddie. "Say, talking about time, I'll be twenty-one next Tuesday."

"Old enough to marry."

"I don't know about that. I'm getting pretty wise. Do you know, I've just found out how old Rosie Keating is. She's twenty-nine. Gee, it's funny how a fellow always gets stuck on a girl older than himself! Still, she's all right. I'm not saying a word against her. She wouldn't be twenty-nine if she could help it."

INSURANCE BILL DISCUSSED IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

After Debate Proposed Enactment Sent to Committee—G. T.P. Loan Debate is Postponed for a Week—Sir Wilfrid is in the House Again.

Ottawa, March 23.—The bill of the Canada Life Assurance Co. to declare that the intention of the act of 1879 was to allow the company to deduct interest on capital before calculating the 90 per cent. profits to be distributed among the shareholders, was attacked by the Opposition yesterday, and was finally sent back to the standing orders committee for an enquiry as to the sufficiency of the notice given.

Mr. Turriff, Liberal, of Saskatchewan, joined the Opposition in opposing the principle of the bill.

During the discussion Senator Cox sat in the gallery, and while the point with regard to the reference back was being debated, Mr. Clarke, who had charge of the bill, left his seat to consult with the head of the insurance company. On his return to the floor, he agreed to the delay.

When the bill was called Mr. Lennox asked for the opinion of the Minister of Justice, which was promised when the bill was last before the House. It was a matter of importance to many people in this country to know whether it was legal to make this legislation retroactive. Thirty-five thousand policyholders in Canada were interested.

Mr. Clarke of Essex protested that this question did not arrive on the first clause, which ought to be passed. Finally Mr. Aylesworth arose. He scarcely knew upon which point his opinion was desired, he said, not knowing what legal question arose. As to the necessity for this legislation, it might be that there was none, while it might be that under the statute of 1879 the company, by the wording of the act, was not legally entitled to deduct interest on capital before calculating the ninety per cent. "profits" to be distributed among policyholders. That was his view, and the legal representatives of the company had agree with his interpretation. Hence this bill, which was, of course, retroactive. For himself, he was prepared to support the bill as it simply set at rest any doubts as to the legality of the operations of 30 years, for which period the policyholders had slept on their rights. So long as no litigation was on foot the bill simply meant the interpretation of a statute.

Mr. Borden emphasized the objection of insufficiency of notice, pointing out that there was nothing in the advertisement to show that it was intended to declare that "profits" to be divided among policyholders should not include profits from the company's investments of capital.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier suggested that this point be reserved until the fourth clause was reached.

Mr. Northrup also supported the motion for delay. The promoter of the bill had declared before the banking and commerce committee that the bill was not retroactive. Now the Minister of Justice said it was.

Mr. Foster also counselled reconsideration.

Mr. Fielding agreed that in a matter affecting so many policyholders deliberate action was advisable. Moreover, if the legislation was not proper, it should not pass. Speaking for himself, however, he thought the bill a good one. For 30 years it had been the practice of the company to deduct the profits accruing upon the capital before dividing profits between shareholders and policyholders.

It was the practice of companies generally both here and in England, and it had been specifically incorporated in the new insurance bill. That bill, however, would not be retroactive, so that the bill now under consideration was necessary. It was under this practice that the shareholders had put in $875,000 of new capital.

The G.T.P. loan resolution upon which the bill will be founded will not be taken up till Tuesday of next week. The Government has promised the Opposition considerable information in connection with the road's finances before the matter is brought up in the House.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier was in the House in the afternoon, but rested at home last night.

Home Boy's Fortune.

Waterborough, Queen's, N.B., March 23.—Eleven or twelve months ago Thomas W. Parsons came to this province, a lad from the Middlemore Home School, Birmingham, England, and was domiciled with Stephen Yeamans, Newcastle, and later with Dr. Earle. A few days ago he received word that by the death of an uncle in England he was heir to the sum of at least $20,000.

BILL IN LEGISLATURE TO REGULATE AUTOISTS

Member for East Wellington Would Make Law More Stringent by Letting Councils Order Autos Off the Roads on Certain Days.

Toronto, March 23.—Regulating the speed of automobiles and imprisonment of serious offenders contributed largely to the discussion in the Legislature yesterday.

J. J. Craig, the member for East Wellington, in moving the second reading of his bill, admitted that the automobile was here to stay, and probably only 10 per cent. of the motorists had caused the antagonism. He wished the county councils given the right to order automobiles off the highways certain days in the week, and the penalty for a third conviction to be imprisonment without the option of a fine, and the motor to be impounded for three months. He felt that the counties which maintained a good system of roads should have some control over them.

W. K. McNaught concurred in all that Mr. Craig had said, but felt that the proposed regulation was too radical. There were several similar bills before the House, and he suggested that they be sent to a special committee.

Hon. A. G. MacKay was in favor of improvement and cancellation of license to drive. The objection, however, to the bill was that motorists might pass through several counties in one day.

George Gooderham spoke for those who had used automobiles ever since they had been introduced into Canada, and thought that this Legislature should be guided by the experience of older countries.

Hon. W. J. Hanna said their was no objection to sending these bills to a special committee provided the committee would not deal with the question as a new matter, and apply itself directly to the rule for regulation. It was fair to say that the present statute was very complete and was frequently referred to in the United States.

The Premier agreed to the second reading, the bill to be sent to a special committee to be named later.

W. K. McNaught's bill to amend the Ontario Railway Act by enabling conductors to remain inside of cars not provided with rear-end vestibules was sent to the legal committee.

Several bills to incorporate railway companies were passed through the committee stage.

The Minister of Education's bill respecting compulsory school attendance was amended in committee. Considerable discussion arose on the point when children are absent receiving religious instruction, but the Premier felt that no anomaly would be found to exist in the working of the act.

J. C. Elliott has introduced a bill to refer disputes concerning the maintenance and construction of bridges between township and municipalities to the county judge.

J. McEwing seeks to amend the Assessment Act by equalizing the business assessment in towns.

Other bils introduced were: An act to amend the Municipal Act, Hon. Dr. Reaume; an act respecting the Department of Education, Hon. Dr. Pyne; an act to amend the supplementary Revenue Act (1907), Hon. F. Cochrane; an act to amend the act respecting Burlington Beach, Hon. F. Cochrane; an act to amend the Free Grants and Homestead Act, Hon. F. Cochrane; an act to amend the law respecting mine accidents and the operation of mines, Hon. F. Cochrane.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The Evening Bulletin made its first appearance yesterday at Prince Rupert.

The C.P.R. has arranged a meeting with its mechanics at Winnipeg to hear the proposals of the men.

The C.P.R. is negotiating for an elevator site at Vancouver in connection with its plans to ship wheat via the Pacific.

The Railway Commission will take up the telephone rates as soon as it finishes with the express rates investigation.

The hot-heads among the French strikers are attempting to humiliate the Government by forcing a public confession of weakness.

The minority report on the Payne tariff bill presented to Congress at Washington yesterday describes the bill as crude, indefinite, sectional and prohibitive.

J. L. Wright has appeared before the Sarnia council with a proposition for a railway from St. Mary's to Sarnia to connect with the C.P.R. line from Woodstock to Port Burwell.

Must Muzzle Dogs.

Simcoe, Ont., March 23.—Rabies has again broken out in Simcoe. A small black dog belonging to Frank La Fortune, a liveryman, showing signs of having been affected, was destroyed Friday, and one belonging to F. R. Pursel, was shot Saturday.

It appears that La Fortune's dog bit a lad about 11 years of age, named Gurling, on Thursday, and it has been thought advisable to have the boy taken to the Pasteur Institute at New York. At a special meeting of the town council, held at noon yesterday, it was decided to assist in the expenses of sending the boy.

Mayor Sihler has issued a proclamation that all dogs must be muzzled for two months.

Broker Arrested.

Toronto, March 23.—Charged with conspiracy to defraud the public by influencing the price of Gowganda stocks through illegal means, William Joel, broker, room 121 Confederation Life Building, and living at the Broadview Hotel, at Broadview and Queen streets, was arrested by Detective Kennedy at his office at 4 o'clock yesterday.

It is alleged that Joel is the moving figure in the Elkhardt Proprietary Silver Mines, and the Gowganda Premier Silver Mines, of which he is listed as a director.

May Not Cut Off.

St. Catharines, Ont., March 23.—That the city license commissioners may not accede to the request of the people of this city, as expressed in a majority vote, that seven licenses be cut off this year, seems evident. It is, however, quite probable that the number will be reduced by three or four, at least, according to a statement made to a deputation from the Citizens' League, by the chairman, J. D. Chaplin.

Silver Dart Again.

Halifax, March 23.—J. A. D. McCurdy, in the Silver Dart, made two successful flights on the ice at Baddeck yesterday morning, covering a distance of about six miles in eight minutes.

Mr. J. T. Baldwin, chief engineer of the association, also made a flight in the Silver Dart yesterday, but as the wind was puffy at the time, Mr. Baldwin shut off power and glided to the ice.

At 85, Ends His Life.

Cobourg, March 23.—Thos. Redner, aged 85, cut his throat with a razor Sunday morning, severing the wind pipe and jugular vein. He had breakfast with the family of his son-in-law, J. A. Platt, and going to his room, ended his life. No cause is known.

Dr. Marriott Hutchins, president of the Board of Education of Jack County, Michigan, was robbed in London on Thursday last, of $1000 and a diamond ring, by means of a confidence trick.

KIDNAPPED BOY SAFE.

Millionaire's Son Is Returned by Arrangement With Father.

Cleveland, O., March 23.—Little Willie Whitla, who has caused his parents great anxiety and the police of the entire country worry since he was kidnapped from school in Sharon, Pa., last Thursday, was returned to his father at the Hollenden Hotel here last night at 8.30 p.m.

In compliance with an agreement entered into between the boy's father and an agent of the kidnappers here yesterday, the boy was placed on a street car on the outskirts of the city and started to the hotel shortly after 8 o'clock. Two boys, G. W. Ramsay and Edward Mahoney, recognized the lad on the car and taking him in charge, conducted him to his father who was in waiting according to a prearranged plan which he had followed at the dictation of the kidnappers.

The boy wandered about the hotel lobby unannounced for several minutes asking bellboys for his father before the latter knew his son was in the big foyer. The moment Mr. Whitla heard that a strange boy was in the hotel sauntering about in aimless fashion, he rushed across the lobby, grasped him in his arms and smothered his face with kisses.

Crime at North Bay.

North Bay, March 23.—Two men attempted to force an entrance to the residence of J. R. Moffatt, manager of the Bank of Ottawa, here, on Sunday night about 9 o'clock. As Mrs Moffatt was leaving the house Saturday night, a man stepped out of the shadow and struck at her with a sandbag. She dodged the blow, and escaped her assailant.

Two men were found in a C.P.R. passenger coach, which they had unlocked, having a set of skeleton keys in their possession. One made his escape.

Airship Carried Twenty-Six.

Berlin, March 23.—Soaring like a mighty bird, Count Zeppelin's dirigible airship, Sunday, created a world's record for weight carried in cruising the sky. The huge dirigible ascended from its quarters at Lake Constance bearing Count Zeppelin, ten aeronauts of the German army and 15 soldiers. The flight covered 150 miles and the airship was in air four hours.

To Balloon Across Continent.

Boston, March 23.—A balloon journey from the Pacific to the Atlantic Oceans, across the breadth of the United States, has been practically assured for the near future by the announcement that the Aero Club of Seattle, Washington, will finance such a journey, to be undertaken by Henry Helm Clayton of the Blue Hill Observatory.

Chinese Smuggler Sentenced.

Buffalo, N.Y., March 23.—Riley, one of the three Chinese smugglers whose boats were wrecked on the breakwater in November last, and six Chinamen were drowned, pleaded guilty yesterday to smuggling Chinamen and was sentenced to one year and one day in the Erie County Penitentiary, the maximum penalty.

Two Lads Drown.

Hamilton, March 23.—Albert Harvey, aged 11, and William Gould, aged 9, adopted sons of Mr. Baker, Tintern, about eight miles south of Beamsville, were drowned on Saturday in the Twenty Mile river, while attempting to save their dog from drowning.

A Woman's Sympathy

Are you discouraged? Is your doctor's bill a heavy financial load? Is your pain a heavy physical burden? I know what these mean to delicate women—I have been discouraged, too; but learned how to cure myself. I want to relieve your burdens. Why not end the pain and stop the doctor's bill? I can do this for you and will if you will assist me.

All you need do is to write for a free box of the remedy which has been placed in my hands to be given away. Perhaps this one box will cure you—it has done so for others. If so, I shall be happy and you will be cured for 2c (the cost of a postage stamp). Your letters held confidentially. Write to-day for my free treatment. MRS. F. E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

DARRELL IS ALIVE.

Toronto Broker Just Got Tired and Left For States.

Toronto, March 23.—"He just got a sudden idea that he was tired of the whole thing," said E. C. Wedd, speaking of his brother-in-law, Harry Darrell, whom he saw in the Burns Hotel, Detroit, Sunday.

Mr. Darrell disappeared on the afternoon of Jan. 15, and for a time it was thought, as he evidently intended it should be, that he had been drowned in the bay. As a matter of fact he took a train to Chicago and immediately secured a position with a produce company by whom he is now employed as a salesman in and about Detroit. He has changed his name and is known in Detroit as "Harry Douglas."

E. C. Wedd, his brother-in-law, received word Saturday from a friend of his who met Darrell in Detroit and to whom Harry admitted his identity. Mr. Wedd immediately informed Mrs. Darrell that her husband had been found. Mrs. Darrell was overjoyed at the news.

Mr. Wedd set out for Detroit and spent Sunday with Harry, who talked freely, saying he was well, though just a bit homesick. He said that he did not think of coming to Toronto immediately, nor does Mrs. Darrell intend going to Detroit just now. He seems a bit hazy in his mind about his leaving the city in so mysterious a way, and will only say that as business was so bad and showed no sign of improving he just "lit out."

Friends intend spending considerable time in Detroit in the near future with the hope of persuading him to return to Toronto, which they think can be done in the course of time.

Other instances are recalled in which he is credited with having been lost for days and months. One time he turned up in Switzerland, another time it was learned he had spent several days in a cottage on the island. He has always been of an exceedingly reckless temperament. In boating or sailing he would court danger and death.

Defence Hints at Plot.

North Bay, March 23.—The case of Edgar Cahill was taken up in the High Court yesterday, the charge being theft of money and forgery of payee's name at Elk Lake postoffice. T. M. McGarry defended and A. E. H. Creswick was crown prosecutor.

The chief witnesses for the prosecution were Postoffice Inspector Bolduc, who swore that accused admitted to him that he cashed the order in question, and Alonse Payne, handwriting expert of Ottawa, who gave his opinion that the writing on the forged order, and the writing of accused bore the same characteristics. Judge Latchford charged in favor of prisoner and the jury acquitted him. Cahill is barely 20 years of age, and was assistant postmaster at Elk Lake. His own straightforward evidence helped his case. The defence rested strongly on lack of evidence and more than hinted at a plot, in which the accused was to be sacrificed to ulterior motives.

Banwell on Parole.

Kingston, March 23.—It was made known yesterday that George Banwell, former Crown Bank felon, had been released on parole from prison. He was let out on St. Patrick's Day and had served all but two months of his four-year term, less the six months deduction for good conduct. As a result he is not entirely free, as for the next twelve months he will be watched and have to report. He left prison in good health and returned to Toronto.

Another man named Kew, sentenced to life at Toronto several years ago, was let out on ticket-of-leave, and John Houghton of Toronto was let out on good behavior, after serving three years on a five-year term for highway robbery.

Russian Prince Dead.

St. Petersburg, March 23.—Prince Michael Hilkoff (Khilkoff), a member of the Council of the Empire and formerly Minister of Communications, died suddenly on Sunday. He was present at the inaugural meeting of the Russo-British chamber of commerce, when he fainted. The prince was removed to his residence, but did not regain consciousness.

Prince Hilkoff was well known in the United States, where he secured his railway training. To him belongs the credit of getting the maximum amount of work out of the Siberian Railway during the war with Manchuria.

A Kidnapper's Remorse?

"Would like to communicate with people who had girl by the name of Pearl stolen in Chicago 18 years ago. Address P. O. Box 441."

Gilbert Woodill of this city admits that he inserted the advertisement, but refuses further information.

Pleased With Idea.

London, March 23.—Lord Crewe has expressed to Premier Ward his appreciation of New Zealand's offer of battleships, which he has communicated to the King, the Premier and the Admiralty.

At a dinner at Sydney, Australia, four citizens offered to contribute $175,000 if it was decided to present Britain with a Dreadnought by public subscription.

No Obstacles For Road.

Galt, March 23.—Engineers surveying the route of the Hamilton, Galt, Guelph Electric Road (Patterson project) are here and say no great obstacles are found. Construction work commences at once. Mayor Patterson and G. R. Barrie, a leading farmer, have been chosen valuators of land taken for the right of way.

Alleges Breach of Promise.

Brockville, March 23.—Miss Grace Herbison of Junetown has brought an action in the high court for $5,000 damages against C. M. Quinn, a prominent merchant of Lansdowne, for breach of promise.

The Hawaiian Senate has passed a bill prohibiting aliens from fishing in Hawaiian waters. The bill aims at Japanese fishermen.

THAT AWFUL PAIN IN THE BACK

Lots of men, and women too, are limping about the house—groaning in easy chairs—or tossing about the bed—because of that nagging pain in the back. The old standbys—hot vinegar, porous plasters, liniments, etc.,—don't do any good any more. You see, you are a bit older now. The kidneys are not as strong as they used to be. And even those "blistering" liniments and plasters won't stimulate the kidneys.

Your trouble is kidney trouble. The kidneys are not diseased, they are overworked and strained. The bowels and skin—which help the kidneys to rid the system of waste matter—have not been doing their share of the work. The kidneys have had to do too much.

What you need is a medicine to cure the bowels, liver and skin. This medicine must cure the Constipation by acting on the liver and thus make the bowels move regularly and naturally. This medicine must heal and strengthen the kidneys, and thus relieve the congestion. "Fruit-a-tives" is this medicine. It is the most effective Kidney Remedy known, and keeps these vital organs in a vigorous, healthy condition. For aged people, for those who work hard, for tired-out women, "Fruit-a-tives" never fail to stop that severe pain in the back and build up the whole system. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Boston, March 23.—Two hundred and twenty-one persons perished by shipwreck, and 89 vessels met with disaster off the New England and British North American coasts during the fall and winter season of 1908-09, which ended on Sunday night.

Reservists Want Grant.

Ottawa, March 23.—The third special service battalion Royal Canadian Regiment of Infantry, who served at Halifax during the Boer war, are seeking a similar Government grant to that given to those who served at the front.

Sues For Loss by Quarantine.

Kingston, March 23.—The proprietor of the Iroquois Hotel, which was quarantined last fall, on account of the smallpox scare, is billing the city for about $400 damages by the loss of trade during the time the hotel was closed.

THANKSGIVING DAY

The Review is not in accord with the views of those who are seeking to have Thanksgiving Day put back from Monday to Thursday. With Monday a holiday it is possible for those desiring to do so to visit relatives and friends, while on the other hand, with Thursday a holiday, there is really no opportunity for such a visit. There will be widespread and general discontent if the change is made.

TAX RATE TO BE 19 1-2 MILLS MATTER FINALLY SETTLED

Four Aldermen Stand for a 20 Mill Rate—Committes Will Have to Practice Rigid Economy.

The rate of taxation for 1909 will be 19 1-2 mills. The matter is now finally settled. In view of the fact that the City Trust Commission cannot legally reduce its demand by $8,500, as had been considered feasible, Ald. Hicks and Turner made a strong fight to have the rate 20 mills. Ald. Gillespie and Metheral supported them.

Ald Morrow presented the following report from the Finance Committee;—

Council of the City of Peterborough:

Gentlemen—Your Finance Committee beg leave to report as follows;—

1. We recommend that in view of the opinion received from the City Solicitor in regard to the request of the Council to the Peterborough City Trust to reduce their demand for this year by $8,500, the by-law passed at the last meeting of the Council levying rates for this year be amended to make the appropriations for the departments as originally drafted by this committee and the rate 19 1-2 mills.

2. We recommend that the rate by-law be further amended by repealing the clause which required the taxes for city, Public School, Collegiate Institute and Separate School purposes to be set out separately and that it be provided as an illustration that there be printed on each tax bill the amount of taxes payable on each $1,000 of assessment for general city purposes and for school purposes respectively.

We received from Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., a copy of a bill before the Legislature to amend the Municipal Act regarding the license fees and we recommend that Mr. Bradburn be asked to use his influence to have the maximum license fee for billiard tables not less than 40 for the first table and $20 for each additional table.

4. We recommend that the city solicitor be instructed not to have the school debenture by-laws confirmed by the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, and that the City Treasurer be authorized to issue cheques to the City Solicitor for the fees payable for the purpose of having the other debenture by-laws confirmed by that Board.

5. We instructed the City Solicitor to prepare a by-law to authorize the issue of debentures for $2,000 to pay for concrete crossings constructed in 1908 and a balance on concrete crossings constructed in 1907.

Ald. Morrow and Ald. Phelan moved the adoption of the report.

Ald. Metheral opposed the last clause of the report. He was against issuing debentures for a small sum like $2,000. It should be paid out of current revenue.

Ald. Turner agreed with Ald. Metheral. He would rather have the rate of 20 mills and pay the $2,000 out of current revenue.

Ald. Hicks favored the 20 mill rate. He thought the appropriations of the committees had been cut too fine. It was not safe to have such a narrow margin.

Ald Turner seconded this and pointed out that it was the duty of the city to keep out of debt.

Ald. Duffus and Ald. Morgan stuck fast for the 19 1-2 mill rate.

Ald. Hicks said it was a bad policy to have overdrafts. There was one last year, and it should be wiped out.

Ald Morrow thought it would be better to try and get along with the lower rate.

The amendment was voted on and was lost Ald. Hicks, Ald. Metheral, Ald. Turner and Ald. Gillespie voting in favor of it.

When the by-law to fix the rate at 19 1-2 mills came up Ald. Hicks and Turner moved against it, but the vote went the same as on the previous division.

SIGNIFICANCE OF LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT

At the Presbyterial Laymen's Conference, which was opened at St. Andrew's this morning, Rev. A. E. Armstrong, of Toronto, gave an address of great interest on the significance of the laymen's movement. Sheriff Hall occupied the chair and made a brief introductory address. There was a large representation of delegates in attendance.

The laymen's missionary movement, which is now of such importance and so widely known, has had a very interesting career. It was originated in New York at a businessmen's banquet on November 15, 1906.

The formation of a foreign missionary board had a very humble beginning. A haystack prayer meeting was the cause of its formation. It was attended by five students of Williams College. The students of the college had been in the habit of holding prayer meetings in a woods nearby, and on the afternoon of the haystack prayer meeting it was too rainy for the students to venture into the woods. Only five of them had gathered on this rainy afternoon. They took for their motto, "We can do it if we will," and working on that resolution a wonderful growth had taken place. The foreign missionary movement was born in prayer—all great movements are born in prayer.

In Canada "the Laymen's Missionary Movement" includes all missionary work—the entire task of the Christian work in Canada. It is not a society for sending out missionaries and is not for the purpose of raising any money for missionary work. Toronto is aiming at $500,000 a year as the amount the people of that city should give for home and foreign missions, but the Laymen's Missionary Movement would not get a cent of that money.

It is not a money-making or mercenary movement, but is simply a movement to inform men, to inspire men and show them their duty in connection with the missionary movement.

The Laymen's Missionary Movement has been launched in nearly every city in the United States, and in every city and in many towns in Canada.

It was launched in Toronto at St James school house on November 9th, 1907. The movement was introduced in Canada before this date, but the meeting really marked its launching. At the time of the meeting many, were skeptical of the movement, but have since been enthusiastic supporters of it. The movement was not a visionary thing, started by a few enthusiasts, but a sane movement with solid and reliable men behind it. As a result of the missionary movement men have had their whole conception of the church changed. The church was placed in the world by Jesus Christ for the good of all mankind.

The movement says to us men in Canada that we must look after our home mission work. In a few years there will be more people living west of Lake Superior than living east of it. The character of future citizenship will be determined by the manner we mold the characters of these incoming citizens of ours.

We must teach the new citizens the love of law and exaltation of Jesus Christ. United States and Canada gave 9 1-2 millions of dollars for foreign missionary work and Great Britain about the same. The rest of the world only gave about $6,000,000, which shows how great a part the Anglo Saxon people will have to take in the evangelization of the world.

COUNCIL TO ASSIST IN ENTERTAINING VISITORS

Arrangements have been completed for the visit of the Canadian Press Association to Peterborough on Saturday of this week. The visitors are assured of a hearty welcome.

The Legal and Reception Committee brought in the following report at last night's meeting of the City Council;—

Gentlemen—Your Legal Committee beg leave to report as follows;—

1. We recommend that $100 be given to the Committee of Local Publishers towards the entertainment of the Canadian Press Association on the occasion of their visit here on March 27th next.

2. We instructed the City Solicitor to, on behalf of the city, sign the consent to an order from the Board of Railway Commissioners permitting the Canadian Pacific Railway to fill in that upper end of the spur line to the Dickson Co's mills in accordance with an agreement formerly entered into.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

ALD. TURNER,
Chairman.

The report was adopted on motion of Ald Turner and Ald. Gillespie.

A committee from the Council will leave Peterborough on the eight o'clock train and will meet the special bringing the visitors from Toronto at some point between Peterborough and Toronto and return to this city on the special. In this way they will get acquainted with the newspaper men.

STREET RAILWAY'S APPLICATION WILL COME UP ON THURSDAY

The application of the Peterborough Radial Railway for an extension of time in which to construct their line to Stony Lake before the Railway Committee at Toronto on Thursday, and the city will send a deputation to see that the city's interests are safeguarded. The matter, although it had previously been dealt with, came up again at last night's meeting of the city council, and caused a long discussion. The matter was introduced by Ald. McIntyre, who moved that the city council support the Street Railway Company in their application for an extension of time in which to start their railway to Stony Lake that the extension be granted for one year, and that the company guaranteed to start in that time.

It was pointed out that the company could not give a guarantee.

Ald. Duncan and Ald. Duffus were added to the deputation to go to Toronto.

Ald. Morgan wanted to make the Street Railway Company come to time. If they would not give a guarantee to commence work within one year he would let them lose the franchise.

THAT $25.

After some discussion it was moved that the matter of the $25 received by the chief of the fire department from the C.P.R., be left in the hands of the chairman of the Fire, Water & Light Committee to deal with as he sees fit. This was carried.

It is likely that a benefit fund for the firemen will be formed.

Those present were: Mayor Bush, Aldermen Phelan, Morrow, McIntyre, Metheral, Turner, Gillespie, Bradburn, Buller, Morgan, Duncan, Duffus and Hicks.

Reports from the different committees were read and adopted.

CORNWALL VISITED BY A FATAL FIRE

Windsor Hotel Burned to the Ground With Loss of Three Lives---Several Seriously Injured.

Special to the Review.

Cornwall, March 23.—A fatal fire occurred here early this morning, when the Windsor hotel, managed by Alex Laplante, was burned to the ground, three men losing their lives, while several other persons were injured, some seriously. The dead are E Duquette, Winchester, carpenter, employed by Ross & Co; George Hagley, Philadelphia, and John Galton Coopers, employed at the Cornwall Brewery Co.

The seriously injured are Mr. St. Clair, back injured, cuts on head and feet, and Mr. Bease, broken legs and internal hurts.

About thirty persons lived in the hotel and all might have perished but for the alarm given by a dog.

RETURN VISIT OF GRAND OPERA COMPANY AROUSES INTEREST

The return of the Royal Italian Grand Opera Company, Manager Turner has been assured by the arrival in the city of Manager F M Norcross of that organization. He is attending today to the preliminary arrangements and on looking over the subscription list which has been out for a couple of days he feels assured that the people of Peterborough appreciate a good and first-class attraction when it visits town. In the first visit of the company it came almost unheralded, but the patrons of the Grand who witnessed the performance went away with the feeling that they had seen a phenomenal attraction the like of which had never been presented in the city before. On Friday night, March 26th it has been decided that the ever popular opera entitled Carmen will be presented. Mr Norcross is on this way to Quebec and Montreal where the company present their full repertoire of twelve operas. This requires three sets of principals and scenic production for each opera. Altogether this organization composes of more than one hundred people. twenty-five operatic musicians in the orchestra are made a special feature of and are fully enjoyed by the audience as well as the opera.

THE MARKET WILL BE OPERATED BY CITY DURING COMING YEAR

Proposition to Give it to the Highest Tenderer Turned Down by Close Vote—Property Committee Not Pleased—A Lively Discussion.

The city will operate the market for the year commencing April 1st, on practically the same basis as during the past twelve months.

The proposition to give the market to the highest bidder, tenders having been asked for, was voted down at last night's meeting of the City Council, the casting vote of Mayor Rush deciding the matter. Mr. George Ball will be market clerk for the coming year.

Ald. Bradburn, chairman of the Property committee, presented the following report:

Council of the City of Peterborough:

Gentlemen,—Your Property Committee beg leave to report as follows:

1 We received the following tenders for the market tolls and charges for the year beginning April 1st.

A. S. Maguire	$ 900
W. A. Stabler	600
Jas. McGhee	961
Jas. Girven	925
Robert Bradburn	1,016
Alexander Northey	1,000

We recommend that the tender of Robert Bradburn be accepted.

2 We recommend that this committee be authorized to ask for tenders for the erection of a building for an isolation hospital in accordance with the plans made by Mr. W. Blackwell and sent to the Council by the Board of Health.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

It was moved and seconded that the report be adopted.

ALD. PHELAN OBJECTS.

Ald. Phelan thought to adopt the report of the Property Committee would be to cut Mr. Ball off rather abruptly. He believed Mr. Ball had given good satisfaction as market clerk and thought the system in vogue should be continued for another year.

Ald. Buller wanted to know what the market had paid in 1908. He could not vote intelligently until he had this information. He would like to see the market continued as it was for another year.

Ald. Bradburn read a statement showing that the receipts at the market during the year ending March 31st, 1909, were $31,479.33. The charges, including the clerk's salary, were $823.30, leaving a balance of $656.03. As the market had sold for $1,060 in the previous year, the city had lost about $350 by municipal ownership.

Ald. Bradburn said the market had not paid as well as in the year previous when it had been let by tender. Ald. Ball had the chance to tender for it and he had not done so.

Ald. Duncan said that Mr. Ball had the opportunity to tender for the market as well as anybody else. The speaker had nothing against Mr. Ball, but the market should be conducted in the manner that would bring the most money to the city.

Ald. Buller spoke again favoring continuing the market under municipal ownership. The farmers had more confidence in the market when it was under the control of the city.

Ald Phelan moved an amendment, seconded by Ald. Buller, that the city conduct the market for another year.

Ald Morrow said it might be possible to pay Mr. Ball a salary and also a commission.

Ald. Metheral spoke in favor of the adoption of the report of the committee.

The amendment failed to carry, those voting in favor of it being Ald. Phelan Ald McIntyre, Ald. Gillespie, Ald Duffus and Ald. Buller.

It looked then as if the matter was settled, but Ald. Duffus pointed out that one of the aldermen had not voted, and called for the yeas and nays.

Ald. Morrow said he had not voted on the matter because he hardly knew just what to do. The city had lost money by municipal operation of the market, but on the other hand he did not think Mr. Ball was being used fairly. He had given up his business to become sanitary inspector, and when that position was abolished he was made market clerk. Now, without any warning, he was to lose his position. The yeas and nays were then called and the vote stood as follows:

Nays—Aldermen Metheral, Turner, Bradburn, Morgan, Duncan and Hicks—6.

Mayor Rush voted yea and the amendment was carried.

Ald Bradburn wanted to know what the mayor meant in voting to accept the highest tender at the meeting of the Property Committee in the afternoon and then voting for the amendment at night.

"This is a great way of doing business," said Ald. Duncan. "This is all I have to say about it."

Mayor Rush said he had always been in favor of trying municipal ownership a second year. He had voted for the highest tenderer in committee, which was the right thing to do if the change was to be made. When it was decided to call for tenderers, however, it was optional whether or not the old system was reverted to. Six of the aldermen were in favor of trying municipal control of the market for a second year, and ho voted in council according to his own conviction.

There was some more discussion of a similar nature over the matter before the subject was dropped.

Ald. Duncan said it would be more satisfactory to Mr. Ball and all concerned if some system was devised whereby the city would keep closer "tab" on the market, and he moved that this matter be referred to the Property Committee. Ald. Turner seconded this, and it was carried.

ISOLATION HOSPITAL

Prospects Bright for Securing New Institution in Near Future.

Prospects are now bright for an isolation hospital. The property committee took up the matter at a meeting yesterday afternoon.

Ald. Bradburn informed the Committee that they must take up the question of an isolation hospital and take it up at once. The city must have some place to take patients suffering from contagious diseases. There have been many cases of scarlet fever in the city this year and many of them among the working people and they are at a great loss. The men not only lose their wages by being locked up in their house but they are under great expense as well. It is a different matter when fever breaks out in a family where a nurse can be secured and the patient isolated in the house.

The Board of Health has had plans prepared by Mr Blackwell for a hospital. These plans provided for a three-storey building with basement.

The plans for the hospital were carefully considered and it was decided that the chairman secure specifications from Mr Blackwell and then call for tenders. A motion to this effect was passed.

It is the intention to build the hospital on the city's farm in the north end.

RETURN DEBATE FRIDAY NIGHT

Normal School and Collegiate Institute to Debate Interesting Subject

POLICE COURT

At the Police Court this morning Frank Brown was charged with being drunk and disorderly. He admitted being drunk, but claimed that he was not disorderly. However, he was fined $2 to be paid in ten days or in default of payment ten days in jail. He promised to pay.

Two youths were before the Magistrate charged with the theft of a number of Easter Cards from a local bookstore. They pleaded not guilty. The parents of the accused were not present and the Magistrate remanded the case until this afternoon at four o'clock.

Queen Elena, of Italy, is again suffering from fever from the broken rib sustained in her accident at Messina shortly after the earthquake.

THE HISTORY OF CANADA

Subject of Address at Knox Church Last Night---Mr. McWilliams the Speaker

Being Literary evening at Knox Church Young People's Society meeting last night Mr. R. F. McWilliams gave an address on the "History" of Canada. Military rule was predominant in the country after the defeat of the French and English controversy in the control of government and the passing of laws was long prevalent. In 1837 the rebellion took place. In 1867, the Confederation of Canada was passed by the Imperial government, although opposed by one or two provinces.

"We do not know who was the originator of the law to bring about confederation. The credit lies mostly on Sir John A. MacDonald, Sir John Carter and Dr. Tupper, now Sir Charles Tupper, and others. Other good notes of history were listened to with rapt attention.

Mr. Roy Laing moved a vote of thanks for the very interesting lecture delivered, it was seconded by Mr. Ken Denoon. Mr. A. Cavenport will speak on "Life Lessons From Psalms" next Monday, March 29th.—Com.

NEW PROCESS OF PHOTOGRAPHY

Being Used by Mr. Mendel—For High Grade Work

Mr. Louis Mendel is using a new process of photography which gives the most satisfactory results of any method he has employed. By the process, which Mr. Mendel obtained in New York when he was on a visit to the metropolis, the plates and prints are not re-touched and the natural expression of the original of the photograph is preserved. The modelling of the features is made perfect and the artistic effect generally is very pleasing. The process is used for special work on high grade portraits.

WEDDING BELLS

HEWIE—DICKSON

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. Wm. Dickson Aphodel, on March the 18th, when his eldest daughter, Cassie Elizabeth, was united in marriage to Mr. John M. Hewie, of Otonabee. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. A. Frost under a floral arch. The bride, who was given away by her father, entered the parlor to the strains of the wedding march played by the bride's sister Miss Annie. The bride looked charming in a pretty gown of cream cheviot with trimmings of duchess satin ribbon and silk over lace. her veil was arranged beautifully with knots of ribbon. After the ceremony and the hearty congratulations had been bestowed upon the young couple, a sumptuous wedding repast was partaken of in the dining room the usual toasts being responded to. The bride's going-away gown was of navy blue broadcloth with trimmings of satin and buttons and hat to match.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF NEILL'S STORES

Mr. Louis Mendel has just finished handsome photographs of Mr. R. Neill's stores in Lindsay, Barrie, Berlin, Guelph, Galt Woodstock and Peterborough. Mr. Mendel paid a visit to the outside towns mentioned for the purpose of taking the photographs.

These altogether show twenty-one views. Cuts will be made from the photos for the catalogue Mr. Neill is issuing.

MR. BAXTER FOR PRAIRIE LAND

Mr. Frank Baxter, left for Lethbridge today where he expects to take up land. In company with Mr. Al. Parker, Mr. Baxter went west some months ago but returned and has remained here since.

He thinks that the west is the best part of the country on the continent.

AMATEUR GARDENING

In March either in the hot-bed or in boxes by the sunny window, seed of the following flowers should receive their start, in order that good sized plants may be ready when all danger of frost has gone, and the beds may be made outside: Ageratum, snapdragon, asters, begonias, marguerites, cockscomb, heliotrope, annual hollyhock, lobelia, pansy, petunia, salvia, verbena, stocks and wall flower. Most of these will be ready to plant outside by May 1st to 15th.

For the vegetable garden, early peas may be planted outside in this month, and will produce a crop by June 15th. In the hot-bed or indoor box the following vegetable seed should be planted. Globe artichoke, early cabbage, early cauliflower, celery, eggplant, kohlrabi, lettuce, parsley, pepper and tomato.

An inexpensive hot-bed which will prove a most profitable investment for the amateur who has a little space outside at his disposal may be made in this manner: Make an excavation the desired length and breadth, eighteen inches deep. Choose a place where there will be no seepage. Fill one foot with fine brush. Press this down well and pack tightly on top four inches of cow manure. Cover this with rich sandy soil. Glass sash or boards may be used to keep out the frost. Keep the bed moist with warm water for a few days until it begins to heat, and plant seed when the temperature has settled at about ninety degrees.

YUSSIF HAD AN EASY TIME WITH HAMILTON MAT MEN

The Hamilton Herald says;—Yussif Mahmout the giant Turk, who will wrestle Frank Gotch for the Championship of the world at Chicago next month, was seen in action here on Saturday night when he threw Charlie Conkle and Ulrick of Buffalo, each twice in less than half an hour, although he was given an hour in which to turn the trick. Mahmout created a favorable impression here, although there were very few who saw him in action but thought Gotch would put it over him.

Mahmout did not display many of the more scientific points of wrestling but relied upon his weight and strength to down his men. He gained all the falls by the same hold a back half Nelson with the left foot bent back to the hip. He did not seem to try to gain some of the famous foot and leg holds upon which American wrestlers depend so much, and from his actions it was clearly seen that he was used to the Graeco-Roman style, which is popular throughout Europe.

The big Turk is a peculiar fellow. He is good natured and, while he does not speak a word of English he smiles when the crowd smiles and does not get provoked if his opponent does something that is not to his liking. He has a disposition like a lamb a heart like an ox and the strength of a bull. He weighs very close to the double century mark when in wrestling togs, and created a great deal of surprise when he walked on the mat in his bare feet. He is a well developed fellow, but has a very peculiar shaped head. His head is cone-shaped and there is no curve in the back of his neck at all. His hair is shaved off so close that some spots on the top of his head make him appear bald.

Ulrick of Buffalo, was the first to go up against the man from the land of the Sultan, and he Marathoned around the mat for some time before the Turk could catch him. Once he was down, however, he had no chance whatever. The big fellow gradually pressed his shoulders to the mat and gained the first fall in 5.12.

Conkle was the next to go on, and he also did some running before he fell into the hands of the giant. He made a much better showing than Ulrick, and on one occasion had the nerve to try and get behind the Turk. The half-Nelson and foothold brought him down, however, in 9.06. Ulrick lasted only a little over two minutes in his second attempt to stay with the Turk and Conkle lasted about seven minutes and a half the last time he went, making the time of the four falls 24 minutes.

SURPRISES FURNISHED BY CLOSE OF CURLING SEASON

The curling season closed in a whirl of surprises. The rink which began, as Mr. J. H. Burnham's rink, in the "Consolation," wound up as Mr. J. H. Knapman's, and while Mr. Hollingshead was the original vice-skip, "Andy" Webb immortalized himself in that position in the last four games. But it is to Mr. R. J. Winch that the chief credit is due. A siege of four hours involving two games on tough ice was not enough to "put him off" his game. He was on the "spot" every time and it is probable that his "stane" counted in four-fifths of the rink's ends. To the uninitiated it may be well to say that changes in rinks are permitted by the rules so long as a man of equal standing in another rink and not one higher up is taken. These changes are of course, never made if the originals are not otherwise engaged. Mr. Knapman played two splendid games and is enjoying the "surprise" which he sprang on the talent when his rink won the prize.

RINK SKIPPED BY MR. J. S. KNAPMAN WINS CONSOLATION

The consolation prize in the local bonspiel has been won by the rink skipped by Mr J S Knapman. Mr. Webb was vice-skip, Mr R J. Winch second, and Mr. Wolstenholm the lead. Up to the finish of Saturday's games the rink was skipped by Mr. J. H Burnham. He was unable to play on Monday, however, and Mr. Knapman took charge of the rink. In the semi-finals Mr. Knapman defeated Mr. Hay by one shot and carried off the premier prize by defeating Mr. Thompson in the final games.

The scores were;

Wolstenholm	James
Winch	L. Hall
Webb	Dixon
Knapman—9	Hay—8
Barber	Moore
Oke	Barber
Ferguson	McDermid
Lang—10	Thompson—14

The Finals

Wolstenholme	Moore
Winch	Barber
Webb	McDermid
Knapman—17	Thompson —6

Too much praise cannot be given that veteran curler, Mr R. J Winch, who was on the "spot" every time or to "Andy" Webb, the vice-skip, who rarely missed a "draw."

FRED SIMPSON'S NEXT RACE A RELAY IN BRANTFORD

Fred Simpson was in the city today, accompanied by his wife. Fred has very little to say concerning his race with Shrubb on Saturday and does not attempt in any way to detract from the Englishman's credit for winning.

The Peterborough Indian says he had a bad cold which bothered him about the throat and chest and was not by any means in good shape for such a trying match.

He states his race billed with Coley in Hamilton has been called off and that his next go will be a relay race in Brantford when he will meet Henry Jackson, the Christian Island Indian and F Cummings.

The distance will be 12 miles.

Simpson has been promised a 15 and 20 mile race with Shrubb, "I think I would have a good chance in that Marathon Derby, if I could get entered in it," Fred remarked.

DAVE LAWSON TO PLAY FOR COBALT

Peterboao's First Baseman Will Leave Shortly to Join the Team

Mr. Corney Burns has received a letter from Mr. Dave Lawson who is now in Toronto in which the Peterborough man states that he has decided to play with Cobalt this season. Fans in this city will remember the big first baseman who played such a grand game for the local team last season. His many friends in town will be pleased to hear of his new team, which is assured if he puts up the game as he did when in Peterborough.

CRESSMAN'S BEAT CANOE BUILDERS

Neither Team Scored in First Half---Winners Finished Strong

Last night at Brock street rink Cressman's defeated the Canoe Builders by 2—0. Neither team scored in the first part, mostly on account of poor shooting, but in the second half Godfrey and Darling scored for Cressman's. The game was not very brilliant, as the players were inclined to mix it up too much, and as a result a lively scrap took place in the second half. Referee Tindale had a busy time and gave good satisfaction.

The teams were;

Cressman's		Canoe Builders
Allen	Goal	Rogers
Duffy	Point	Dummitt
Barrie	Cover	O'Dette
Darling	Rover	Johnson
Tindale	Centre	Anderson
Godfrey	Right Wing	Hopkins
Stewart	Left Wing	Walker

HAMILTON SPEC. ON PRO. LEAGUE

Is of Opinion That Flanagan's Plan is Not One of Promise

Tom Flanagan is trying hard to swing his semi-professional baseball league into the land of the real. On Thursday he was figuring on a six-team league, composed of Hamilton, Brantford and Toronto teams, but since then his dope has changed some and this morning he announces a six-team league composed of Hamilton, Toronto, Brantford, London, Woodstock and Peterborough. Tom claims to have just about completed arrangements for the formation of such a league, but evidently he is taking a great deal for granted. London and Peterborough in the one league will do, even if the London people were willing to enter any semi-pro. league, and Tom's method of handling a schedule with these two teams to be allowed for would be eagerly watched by the fans. With the Toronto teams safely housed at the new Scarboro' Beach Athletic park, Flanagan is evidently jumping to the conclusion that the other towns will be easy to handle, and the ball teams will follow his direction. The only league that has any chance of being formed in which Hamilton and Brantford would figure is a six-team affair with Toronto, but even that is very unlikely as the Brantford people are emphatically opposed to it. It really looks like a city league proposition for the Scarboro Park magnates.

The Baseball Situation

Sporting Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—I read the letter in last night's issue of the Review, which was signed "Fan," and while his intentions may be all right, he is evidently not very broad minded. He no doubt refers to last year's baseball team as an example that professional baseball is a failure. I would like to ask who is responsible for the entrance of professional baseball into Peterborough? Not the persons who tried to make it a success, but the fans themselves. The good old days when we played truant from school and jumped the fence are past and gone, and we must now keep abreast of the times. Every town tells the same story. All the players who were famous ten years ago are dead ones as far as their playing ability is concerned, and who is to take their place. Has "Fan" taken any interest in the young lads who have paid for their suits, gloves and other things out of their own pockets, and done their best to put up an interesting game? Has he paid his ten or fifteen cents to see a good game at Riverside, when the best of the city were battling for honors? The attendance figures does not show it to be so, and as he mentions hockey in his letter I would ask him did local followers of the winter game favor the town team in the championship game with Lakefield—not much. If we are to be represented in any sports by strictly home-brews, the fans have not done their part, and we must now put up with the consequences. In defence of professional ball, the writer holds that last year, without an exception, those who attended the games at Riverside park paid their twenty-five cents and were treated to an exhibition of baseball that was worth going a long way to see. The players, while here, both on the diamond and on the street, were popular, and their conduct was as good as could be desired. It is to be hoped we will see some more this summer, and as long as the backers were the only losers last year and are willing to try it again it will be up to those who don't want to go to the games to spend a nickle on the street cars and patronize the intermediate series; and clap the players on the back when they make a nice catch, which will give them the necessary confidence to go up to the managers in a year or two with the question: What are you paying?

Thanking you, Mr Editor, for space,

TWO DRAWS IN NAPANEE BOUTS

Hurtubise and Hawkey Wrestled There Last Night

Napanee, March 22—Before a crowd of 400 here tonight Barnes of New York and Sheridan of Oshawa, met in a light weight wrestling match resulting in a draw, after a struggle of an hour and eight minutes.

Immediately afterward Hurtubise of Peterborough and Hawkey of Kingston, met in the heavyweight class. After struggling about five minutes a foul was declared in favor of Hawkey on account of biting. Hurtubise refused to allow the foul and refused to continue the match if Hawkey was allowed the advantage. A draw was declared by Referee Cartwright.

RUNNING

NOVEL RACE AT NORTH BAY.

North Bay, Ont., March 22.—The three miles crutch race here to-night between Harry Reynolds of Toronto, and B. Ferro of North Bay, one-legged men, attracted an enthusiastic crowd of over five hundred people many of whom were Italians partisans of their countryman, Ferro, one of the contestants. The Italian led until the third mile, when Reynolds sprinted ahead for a short distance but soon dropped back. Ferro winning by inches in twenty eight minutes for the three miles. The match was for a purse of $100 and another race has been arranged to take place in Toronto soon. The contest was very amusing and interesting the Italian spectators adding to the interest of the event by excited comments and actions. The officials were;—J. J. McKay, starter; H. A Heavener timekeeper; Wallace A. F. Mudge, George Sutton, and Alex Kinsella, referees.

FREDDY CLEMENTS LOOKING FOR JOB

The following appears in the Kingston Whig;

The Whig received a letter this morning from Frederick C. Clements, Toronto, a professional baseball player. In part he says, "as a first class pitcher, I would like a job on your team this year. I played with Peterborough and Park Nines, and also with Newark, N.J. If needed kindly answer at once, stating salary." Any local team desiring his services can get in touch with him by writing to 13 Strange street, Toronto.

BASEBALL

The Toronto News says:—Con. Murphy has signed his contract with the Edmonton team in the west and will leave in a few days for the west.

It looks as if the Midland Baseball League has gone out of business. Last season the three clubs in the league—Peterborough, Port Hope and Cobourg—dabbled in the "pro" game, and wound up the season considerably to the bad.

Jerry Edmunds, a Toronto boy, who caught for Peterborough last year, has been signed by the Winnipeg Club, of the Northern League.

WHAT WOULD THE COST BE?

I would like to ask "Fan" who wrote to last night's Review concerning the semi-pro. league, what it would cost in his opinion, to pay the salaries of the players if such a league were formed?

Yours truly,
ENTHUSIAST

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Steady—Hogs Steady at East Buffalo and Chicago.

LONDON, March 22.—London cables for cattle are steady, at 13c to 14½c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 9¾c to 9½c per lb.

Toronto Junction Live Stock.

TORONTO JUNCTION, March 22.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 45 carloads, composed of 970 cattle, 36 sheep and 45 calves.

Exporters.

Export steers sold at $5.25 to $5.50, with one extra well finished load at $5.75; bulls, $4 to $4.50 per cwt.

Butchers.

Prime picked lots of butchers are worth early as much as the best exporters, and sold at $5.30 to $5.40, but it must be remembered that there are few of this class on the market, not more than 20, out of 900 cattle on sale; loads of choice selected butchers sold at $5.10 to $5.25, loads of good, $5.70 to $6.05; medium, $4.40 to $4.65; common, $4 to $4.30; cows, $3.25 to $4.35; canners, $1.50 to $2.50; bulls, $3 to $4.

Milkers and Springers.

About 15 milkers and springers sold at $30 to $60 each.

Veal Calves.

About 50 calves sold at $3 to $7.25 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts light. Prices very firm; ewes, $4.50 to $5 per cwt.; rams, $4 to $4.50; lambs, $5.50 to $6 for common to medium, and $7 to $7.85 for choice grain-fed lambs.

Hogs.

There was no change from Mr. Harris' quotations in The World of Saturday, selects, fed and watered, $7.15, and $6.90 f.o.b., cars at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, March 22.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending March 20 were 1022 cattle, 48 sheep and lambs, 1337 hogs and 891 calves. The offerings of the market this morning for local consumption consisted of 750 cattle, 25 sheep and lambs, 750 hogs and 50 calves.

There were no new developments in the market for cattle, prices being much the same as they were last Wednesday, notwithstanding the fact that supplies were smaller than a week ago, but they were quite ample to fill all requirements, as the demand from both local and outside buyers were somewhat limited and there was no demand from exporters on account of the weaker cable advices received from Liverpool and London on Saturday, consequently trade on the whole was rather slow. Full car loads of choice steers weighing 1250 lbs., sold at $5.60 and odd small lots, at $5.75, while the range was from $5.50 to $5.75 per cwt. Good cattle brought 5c to 5¼c; fair, 4½c to 4¾c; medium, 4c to 4¼c, and common, from 2¾c to 3¾c per lb. The market for sheep and lambs was quiet, on account of the continued light receipts and prices were unchanged. The demand was fairly good and sales of yearling lambs were made at 6¼c to 6½c for choice stock and at 5¾c to 6c for good, while sheep brought 3¼c to 4¼c per lb. The supply of calves was small, which met with a good demand at prices ranging from $1.50 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

Owing to the smaller receipts of hogs a stronger feeling prevailed in the market and prices scored an advance of 10c per cwt. The demand was good from packers and an active trade was done with sales of selected lots at $7.85 to $7.90 per wt., weighed off cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, March 22.—Cattle—Receipts, 3300 head; slow and steady to 10c lower; prime steers, $6.50 to $6.75; two loads fancy, $7; shipping, $5.75 to $6.40; butchers', $5 to $6.25; heifers, $4 to $6; cows, $3.50 to $5.25; bulls, $3.50 to $5.25; fresh cows and springers, fair demand and steady; $25 to $55.

Veals—Receipts, 1200 head; active and steady, $7 to $9.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 11,600 head; active and steady; heavy and mixed, $7.20 to $7.30; yorkers, $7 to $7.25; pigs, $6.65 to $6.90; roughs, $6 to $6.40; stags, $4.50 to $5, dairies, $6.89 to $7.20.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 14,400 head; active; ewes and mixed sheep, 40c to 50c higher; lambs, closing slow and easier; lambs, $5 to $8.40; yearlings, $6.50 to $7.25; wethers, $6.25 to $6.50; ewes, $5.75 to $6.25; sheep, mixed, $3.50 to $6.25.

New York Live Stock.

NEW YORK, March 22.—Beeves—Receipts, 4236; steers, 10c to 15c higher on limited receipts; bulls and cows, 5c to 10c higher; steers, $5.90 to $6.85; bulls, $3.75 to $5.25; cows, $2.10 to $4.85, dressed beef, slow, at 8c to 10c.

Calves—Receipts, 3021; market active; firm to 25c higher; veals, $6.50 to $10; culls, $5 to $6. Dressed calves, firm and higher; city dressed veals, 9c to 15c; country dressed, 8c to 13½c.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 11,546; sheep in limited supplies, firm; lambs, 25c higher; nearly all sold; sheep, $4 to $5.50, culls, $3 to $3.50; lambs, $7.25 to $8.40, culls, $6.50; yearlings, $6.50 to $7.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, March 22.—Cattle—Receipts, estimated at 15,000, market, 10c higher; beeves, $4.70 to $7.15; Texas steers, $4.50 to $5.80, western steers, $4.10 to $5.50; stockers and feeders, $3.40 to $5.45; cows and heifers, $2 to $5.60; calves, $5 to $8.25.

Hogs—Receipts, estimated at 42,000; market, 5c to 10c higher; light, $6.45 to $6.85; mixed, $6.55 to $6.95, heavy, $6.60 to $7; rough, $6.60 to $6.75; good to choice, heavy, $6.75 to $7, pigs, $5.25 to $6.30; bulk of sales, $6.70 to $6.90.

Sheep—Receipts, estimated at 15,000; market 5c to 10c higher; native, $3.50 to $6; western, $3.60 to $6.20; yearlings, $6.10 to $7.40; lambs, native, $5.50 to $7.80, western, $5.60 to $8.

LIBERALS ARE VICTORIOUS IN THE ALBERTA ELECTIONS

"Billy" Buchanan Won in Lethbridge—Grits Will Have Large Majority—Eight Seats Still in Doubt—Socialists Are Successful.

Edmonton, Alta., March 23.—At midnight returns showed the return of the Rutherford Liberal Government almost unanimously. It beats even the Whitney record in Ontario.

It looks as though the Conservatives have failed to get more than four seats at most. Only two are certain. R. B. Bennett, Conservative leader, is one of Calgary's two members, but Hon. W. T. Cushing led the way. Hoodley in Okotoks is also returned. In the last Legislature of 33 the Conservatives had but two, and Robertson, one of them, is among the fallen.

The Socialists have elected one man and in Red Deer Mitchener, Independent Conservative, has defeated J. T. Moore, the veteran Liberal campaigner. In Macleod, O'Neil, Conservative, is reported to be in the lead. No returns worth while have come in from Claresholm. The platform adopted by the Conservative party at Red Deer was in the main followed, but was very large forgotten in the criticisms offered the Government on its railway policy and particularly of the sharpness with which they called on the elections after dissolving the House. The Government pinned its faith on its record of administration, the railway policy and its solicitation on behalf of the workingman.

At Calgary, owing to the split in the vote, there was opportunity for both parties to have celebrations. Hon. W. H. Cushing was escorted around the city and made a speech thanking his supporters for re-election. R. B. Bennett also expressed appreciation of the work of the Opposition. Large crowds of enthusiastic party men followed the successful candidates around the city and cheered their approval. The latest revised figures are: Cushing 2,456, Bennett 2,416, Egbert 1,842, Blow 1,831, Howells 675.

The result is as follows:

EPWORTH LEAGUE HOLDING CONTEST

Young People of Mark St. Church are Holding Contest to Secure New Members for the League

At the regular meeting of the Epworth League of Mark street church last night, encouraging reports were submitted from both sides of the contest which is being held to secure new members for the League. The contest ends next week when the losing side will have to furnish the programme for the next meeting. An interesting feature of the meeting was an address by Miss Marion Coon on "The Wicked Gate" of Bunyans Pilgrims Progress, to which the members listened with good attention and interest.

Tea is more susceptible to foreign influences than even butter. This is why it should never be exposed to the air or sold in bulk form. The sealed lead packets of "Salada" Tea preserve the tea in all its native goodness. Insist upon "Salada".

PRICE OF EGGS WILL BE LOWER

Prospects for Hen Fruit Selling at a Reasonable Price at Easter

Fresh egg prices are on the downward grade and men who are in close touch with the situation make the happy prophecy that the price will go down to about 15 cents a dozen. They may be even a little lower.

While the prices of the precious articles, which have been carefully marked with a sign "strictly fresh eggs guaranteed," have been doing aerial stunts for the past few weeks selling from 25 to 30 cents, they took a drop last Saturday retailing from 22 to 25 cents.

Last year at the end of March the prices were even lower than they are now, selling from 18 to 20 cents, but the dealers contemplate going that mark within a week.

"The usual spring inflow of eggs has started and the prices are coming down, and will be lower," stated a dealer to the Review this morning. "The price of eggs should really be cheaper now than they are. It is likely they will be down to 15 cents by Easter," he concluded.

This will be good news to those who have been paying the high prices that have been demanded this winter. Fifteen cents is a reasonable price for a dozen of eggs but when it reaches around the 30 or 35 cent mark, most people raise a strenuous objection to paying that amount. By the time Easter Sunday comes around reasonable prices will prevail, which will enable us to have a feast of this article without bothering about the price paid for it.

PIMPLES, BLOTCHES AND SORES

Zam-Buk's Purifying Action on the Skin—Interesting Cure of Chronic Case.

It is just at this season that pimples, blotches, sores, scrofulous ailments and eruptions generally make themselves most felt. Zam-Buk will be found of wonderful use wherever there are skin eruptions, or deep-seated ulcerations.

Mr. Geo. Hobden, of 108 Manitoba street, St Thomas, Ont, says:—"My left cheek broke out in a mass of red, watery pimples, which gradually spread over all the lower part of my face and neck and kept getting more inflamed and troublesome until they developed into a mass of running sores and scabs. In the meantime I had been using one remedy after another but instead of checking this disease, it grew worse. I happened to hear a report about Zam-Buk and straightway obtained a box. The first application checked the itching to a certain extent and encouraged me to persevere with the balm. In a week's time this wonderful ointment had worked like magic; cleaning out the sores, healing them up, and banishing the unsightly scabs. I kept on applying it, however, for a few days longer until I was positive of a cure, and my face was smooth and free from all traces of pimples or eruption.

Pimples, blotches and irritating rashes on the face and other parts of the body indicate a disturbance of the functions of the skin. Impure matter which the blood should discharge by means of the skin is allowed to remain, the process of "exhalation" is interrupted and just where the bad matter collects there pimples, ulcers, and sores quickly appear.

To remove the impurities the pores must be opened and the skin made healthier by vigorous application of Zam-Buk morning and night. Zam-Buk balm stimulates the functions of the skin by the penetration of its refined herbal essences and thus reaches the root of the disease, which can not be done simply by the use of internal medicine.

Zam-Buk is a sure cure for eczema, ringworm, ulcers, abscesses, piles, bad leg, suppurating wounds, cuts, burns, bruises, chapped hands, colds cracks and all skin injuries and diseases. All druggists and stores sell at 50 cents per box, or post free from the Zam-Buk Co, Toronto, upon receipt of price.

COUNTY CONSTABLES WILL HOLD MEETING IN TORONTO

A meeting of county constables of the province of Ontario will be held in Toronto in the course of a few days, to take up an important matter, and one in which the county constables in this district are deeply interested. It is proposed to ask the government to have a paid county constabulary, and at this meeting the matter will be discussed and action taken. The suggestion is one which was brought up a few years ago, but at that time no action was taken upon it. As it stands now county constables only receive pay for the cases they are called upon to investigate and work up, and the remuneration is not sufficient.

A county constable, who was in the city this morning, stated that he would likely attend the meeting in Toronto. He said that under present conditions there was no encouragement for a county constable to stay at the work, as the pay was very small when there was no fixed salary. "I think the time has come when we should have a paid county constabulary," he added.

PRESBYTERY MEETING AT ST. ANDREW'S THIS MORNING

Preceding the opening of the Laymen's Presbyterial Conference this morning a meeting of the Presbytery of Peterborough was held from nine to ten o'clock.

The call of Rev. Mr. Brown to Campbellford was sustained. He is now stationed at Burk's Falls. Arrangements were made for his induction.

SPRING DRILL OF 57TH WILL BEGIN ON MONDAY APRIL 5

A meeting of the officers of the 57th was held in the mess rooms last night. There was a large attendance and several matters of importance were discussed. The business of the meeting, however, related to the internal affairs of the regiment and nothing of much public interest was done.

Considerable time was spent in the discussion of the arrangements for the spring drill which will commence on Monday, March 5th.

The proposed visit here of the Brantford and St. Catherine regiments on May 24th was also discussed.

PAST PATRIARCH HOOPER WAS THE GUEST OF HONOR

A most successful and largely attended banquet was given in Belleville last night by the Oddfellows of that city, at which Past Grand Patriarch C. N. Hooper, representative to the Sovereign Lodge, and one of the most capable and widely known Oddfellows in the province, was the guest of honor. He has for a long time been one of the outstanding figures in connection with the Oddfellows' order of Belleville.

Mayor Marsh, of Belleville, and Mr. E. Gus Porter, M.P., were among the local guests in attendance, and a large number of representatives from outside towns were also present, Col. Miller representing Peterborough. A brilliant address was given by Patriarch Prowley, of Toronto, and Senator Derbyshire also made some interesting remarks. Col. Miller was called upon to respond to "Our guests," and also favored the gathering with a recitation.

RIFLES COMING

Brantford Regiment Will Visit Peterborough on May 24th.

Special to the Review.

Brantford, March 22.—At a meeting of the officers of the 38th regiment, Dufferin Rifles, last night, it was decided to accept the invitation of the Peterborough Rangers to visit Peterborough on May 24th. The Rifles will arrive in Peterborough on Sunday morning and will remain there until Monday night. The Brantford regiment will be 400 strong with brass and bugle bands.

NO MAPLE SYRUP OFFERED HERE YET

But it May be Expected Any Day—Farmers are Preparing for the Season

There has been no maple syrup offered by any of the farmers or the stores as yet, which is to be wondered at considering the fine weather that has prevailed lately. Some farmers have tapped but the flow of sap has not yet been fast enough to warrant making preparations for boiling, although a small quantity passed through town this week on its way to Stirling, which had been shipped from up near Lindsay. There will likely be some on the market next Saturday, according to reports from the stores, but those who intend purchasing need not be surprised if a high price is asked.

TO STAMP OUT THE PRACTICE

Reward of Fifty Dollars Will be Paid for Conviction of Those Sending in False Alarms

The city will pay $50 for information leading to the conviction of a person sending in a false alarm of fire. The Fire, Water and Light Committee had agreed on $25, but before the report was submitted to the Council last night it was decided to change the sum to $50. It is felt that vigorous action should be taken to stamp out the practice of sending in false alarms.

THIS IS A BAD PLACE ON STREET

Pedestrians Having Hard Time at Foot of Sheridan Street

The bog hole at the foot of Sheridan street, somewhere in the depths of which there is supposed to be a cement walk, is almost impassable, while the thaw continues on the face of the hillside above. Last summer operations during which all the gravel disappeared, have left nothing but mud on the road, which needs no persuasion on a soft day to bring it down the hill in masses, covering the Hunter street walk as though a small avalanche had descended upon it. There is a problem ahead of the proper authorities, before the face of Sheridan street can be made solid enough to stay in its proper place and not come down with every shower, to block the main thoroughfare for the hundreds of pedestrians who daily have to pass that way.

THANKSGIVING ON A THURSDAY

Ministerial Association in Toronto Not Satisfied With Monday

In a well supported motion passed at the meeting this morning the Association so informed the Dominion Government and expressed a wish that Thanksgiving Day this year, and in all years to come be on Thursday, as of yore.

The question was brought up in addresses by Rev Dr Wilson, of Trinity Methodist church and Rev. Dr. Turnbull of West Presbyterian church They pointed out that Monday as Thanksgiving Day was detrimental to the real spirit of thanksgiving and what was the use of a national thanksgiving day if there was no real honest thanksgiving.

In the discussion which followed, these addresses, the several ministers who expressed their views, told many incidents of last year where the holding of Mnoday as Thanksgiving prevented religious services and made the day one of pleasure and sport rather than one of expressions of gratitude to the Almighty. The resolution will be forwarded to the Dominion Government.

Rev Dr McFayden delivered an address on certain features of the Apostle Paul's career. Rev George Jackson and others who have recently been prominent in the religious discussions of the day were present at the meeting but they did not speak on the subject of the higher criticism.

THE PREMIER OF ONTARIO DEFENDS THE POWER PLANS

Makes Attack on Corporation Supporters.

Says Paid Writers in Ottawa Are Spreading False Circulars---Some Clauses Added.

Toronto, March 24.—Sir James Whitney returned to the attack on Henry O'Brien, K.C., The Law Journal and the Toronto Electric Light Co., in the Legislature yesterday, on the committee stage of the H. E. P. commission bill validating the by-laws.

Mr. O'Brien was sitting under the gallery and heard the Premier's scathing references.

Sir James ran over the history of the power scheme and then set out to give "a word or two" on the attack made on the Government. If these attacks had been made openly and fairly they could have been met, but such was not the case.

"I can say very positively, on the authority of one of these gentlemen, at the time the vote was taken they offered $1,000 for one page of a newspaper for their purpose," he declared. This was an indication of the action of these gentlemen and the financial responsibility they undertook. It was men who were directors in the Electric Light Co. who had done these things.

"I never said the directors of the Toronto Electric Light Co. met as such, but I do say that gentlemen who are directors of this company, and of this I am now complaining, have spent large sums of money sending out absurd, scurrilous and false circulars from the city of Ottawa, in the name of the Economic Society, attacking the Government of Ontario and the Hydro-Power Commission in a most reckless and abandoned manner. I say they have hired writers to villify and discredit the Government and the people of the Province of Ontario, and I do not hesitate to characterize it as discreditable to these gentlemen as citizens of the Province of Ontario, as residents of this city and as individuals.

"I desire to call attention to the bill which is on the order paper. Last year a bill was passed to validate the contracts between the Hydro-Electric Commission and certain municipalities. There was a general approval expressed in this House regarding that bill. Since that bill was passed certain actions at law have commenced.

"Besides that, no reputable newspaper in this province objects to this bill. More than that, the organ of the great Reform party in the Province of Ontario is in favor of this statute, and has published an editorial expressing confidence that Sir James Whitney and his Ministers would let no quibble stand in the way of the power policy.

"Now, we have the opinion of one of the ablest judges in Ontario that there was a defect in the statute passed last session. We have in addition the resolutions of the municipalities, and we have this expression of opinion from the organ of the Opposition endorsing the proposition and expressing confidence in the action of the Government."

"I rise to correct the position taken by the Premier," said Hon. A. G. MacKay on the conclusion of Sir James' remarks.

"One year ago when the bill of 1908 came up I suggested that the better course was to submit the question again to the people. Possibly if that suggestion had been adopted, all this litigation might have been avoided."

He observes that Hamilton had dropped out; that Ingersoll had added 500 horse-power; that Stratford powers had been varied; that the municipalities had in the aggregate taken 3,100 horse-power less than was at first announced; that Stratford prices had been increased $3, while Hespeler was unchanged.

Hon. Mr. Beck explained that as the contracts cost $539,000 less than the estimate there was no need to charge the first figures.

Sections were added to the bill validating the contracts with the F. W. McGuigan Co., the Canadian Westinghouse, and the Canadian General Electric Co. Mr. MacKay asked for copies of the contracts and Sir James undertook to produce them when ready, or if not ready in time to withdraw the clause.

A second new clause giving the H. E. P. Commission power to expropriate easements was also introduced.

The rest of the afternoon was spent on the bill for the better administration of justice. W. F. Nickle summed up the result on the declaration that the people wanted good law and cheap law. A number of speakers took part in the technical discussion.

FARMER SUED FOR A SUBSCRIPTION

Windsor, March 24.—John Ruston, a well-known farmer, having promised to pay one hundred dollars as subscription to building a Methodist church at Woodslee, declined to "come across" when the building will cost about twice the original estimate, which was six thousand. He was told this was all the more reason why he should contribute and was sued in the Division Court at Belle River, judgment being reserved.

TORONTO CHILD BURNED TO DEATH

Toronto, March 24.—Two-year-old Loreen McCulloch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McCulloch of 84 Harvard avenue, was so severely burned yesterday that she died in the afternoon at the Sick Children's Hospital.

Her mother was upstairs completing her toilet, after having lighted the fire, when Loreen attempted to accelerate the speed of the flames.

In some way she caught fire. She screamed, the mother raced downstairs, picked her up in her arms, ran upstairs and assisted by her husband extinguished the flames.

Mr. McCulloch is a Canadian Pacific Railway telegraph operator. Loreen was one of a pair of twins.

The prizes for the out-of-town competitors will be forwarded to them in the course of a few days.

STORY OF THE OPERA "CARMEN"

Following is the story of the famous opera "Carmen," which will be presented at the Grand Opera House on Friday night by the Royal Italian Grand Opera Company:

Jose, a Brigadier of Dragoons of Seville, is waiting the arrival of Michaela, a peasant girl, with a letter and purse for his mother. A band of girls arrives at the cigar factory opposite, and Carmen, the prettiest and most coquettish, throws him her bouquet. Jose falls distractedly in love. A quarrel ensues among the girls in the factory. Zuniga, the officer on guard, commands Jose to arrest Carmen and conduct her to prison. She fascinates the luckless brigadier till he connives at her escape, and is himself placed under arrest for it. Carmen returns to her wandering gipsy life, and tempts Jose, who meets her outside the walls, to desert. He refuses; but, quarrelling with his superior officer about Carmen, is forced to join the smugglers. Carmen's love grows cold. Escamillo, the popular Toreador, wooes her, while the jealous Jose departs to visit his dying mother. Carmen is faithless. She goes with Escamillo to the bull-fight at Seville. Jose pursues her; and, frantic at her desertion and avowed affection for Escamillo, stabs her to the heart.

MORE DETAILS OF CORNWALL FIRE

Coroner Will Not Hold Inquest---Jumped From Top Storey.

Cornwall, March 24.—Fire, which destroyed the Windsor Hotel, breaking out at 12.45 yesterday morning, resulted in the loss of three lives, and the serious injury of half a dozen other inmates. The dead are:

John Gallon, of Philadelphia, a brewery cooper.

George Hagley, of Philadelphia, a cooper.

The injured are George Besse, leg broken, back hurt; Cory St. Clair, badly burned, and may die; A. McMillan, back injured; W. Rice, internally injured; James H. Smith, hands cut; Mrs. King, suffering from shock; J. Mooney, hands and feet cut; W. Hollister, hand cut.

The hotel, which consisted of three storeys, was well equipped with fire escapes, but in the confusion and the smoke-filled corridors some of the inmates did not find them.

The hotel was well filled with 32 inmates. James Grundy, employed at a local theatorium, was nursing a toothache when his dog began to bark, and Mrs. Grundy said she thought there was a fire. He opened the door and was met with a cloud of smoke. He got his wife to the street and then began to arouse other inmates, but by carelessness no alarm was sent in for the fire department for nearly half an hour. Besse was hurt by jumping from the top storey.

It was not until daybreak that it was learned three inmates were missing, when a search of the ruins soon revealed the bodies. The two victims from Philadelphia were young men who had been here about four weeks. Duquette was about 40 years of age, and leaves a widow and family.

The Windsor Hotel was bought by Mr. Laplante about five years ago, and last summer was enlarged by a new wing. The loss to building and contents is about $25,000, insurance $10,000. Besides this, the guests lost all their personal property.

The local coroner, Dr. C. J. Hamilton, has decided not to hold an inquest, and last night the excitement caused by the conflagration has died down.

Strange Disappearance.

London, March 24.—The police, both county and city, are endeavoring to locate a stranger who drove to the Saddler Hotel, at the corner of Talbot and York streets, on Saturday night, tied his horse to the barn and then disappeared. The stranger is thought to be named M. Cole.

Dead Babe Under Bed.

Port Arthur, March 24.—The body of a newly-born babe was found under a bed at the Western Hotel. When Dr. Pratt was called to attend a young woman she claimed she found it dead. Others disclaimed all knowledge of the affair. Coroner Brown has ordered an inquest.

DR. GRENFELL COMING HERE

He Will Lecture in Grand Opera House on the Night of April 14th

Di Grenfell

Those who have been reading the fascinating stories of life on the Labrador coast, which have appeared from time to time in the press, will be delighted to hear the missionary hero, Dr. Grenfell, tell his own story in his own modest way. He will lecture in the Grand Opera House, Peterborough, on the night of April 14th, and the local committee of the Deep Sea Mission are making the arrangements. The lecture will be illustrated and should draw an immense audience.

Dies In Going to Help Son.

Wetaskiwin, Alta., March 24.—William Brash was found dead at his home near Millet by some neighbors, and his mother was found about a quarter of a mile from the house, also dead. It is thought she died from exposure in going for help, she being over 82 years old.

Shakespeare Memorial.

London, March 24.—There was a meeting at the Mansion House yesterday evening to further the plan for the construction and endowment of a memorial theatre as a Shakespeare memorial. The committee in charge has decided that $2,500,000 is necessary.

Crowds Meet Whitla Boy.

Sharon, Pa., March 24.—Willie Whitla arrived here at 12.06 yesterday afternoon. Fully 3,000 persons extended the boy a demonstrative greeting. Cheering and singing, the crowd followed the boy and his father to the Whitla home.

CHURCH EXPELS FATHER MURRI

Rome, March 24.—The supreme congregation of the holy office has issued a major excommunication against Father Romolo Murri, leader of the Catholic Democrats, who was elected to the Chamber of Deputies at the last general elections as a Christian Democrat. The excommunication deprives the priest of all ecclesiastical communion, being equivalent to an anthema, which is pronounced upon the greatest offenders only.

Father Romolo Murri was suspended in 1907 "ad divinis" by the Pope for disobedience of papal instructions regarding the behavior of the clergy.

NEWMARKET CANAL SHEER WASTE SAYS THE OPPOSITION

Captain Tom Wallace Moves Amendment to Item in Estimates and Calls for Division—Hon. G. P. Graham Says Water Can be Secured.

Ottawa, March 24.—Declaring the construction of the Newmarket Canal to be a sheer waste of public money, and that it was begun to serve the political ends of the Liberal party in North York, the Opposition, led by Capt. Tom Wallace, yesterday divided the House on the question.

Sir Wilfrid's defence consisted principally of the argument that some North York Conservatives had asked that the canal be constructed. The vote was 112 to 71 against the amendment.

Tom Wallace (Centre York) opened the discussion. He urged that when the revenues were decreasing and the necessary expenditures increasing it was time to dispense with useless public works such as the Newmarket Canal. This was an "absolute waste of public money." So far there had been expended on the section from Holland Landing to Newmarket $200,000 and the estimated cost was about a million dollars, although it had been difficult to obtain accurate information.

He moved the following amendment:

"That the original estimate of the cost of the proposed canal between Newmarket and Lake Simcoe, in the riding of North York, was less than $300,000, but that estimate has now been increased to nearly $1,000,000, which latter sum, according to the engineer's report, does not include the proposed expenditure for conservation of water south of Newmarket.

"That the total cost of the said canal when completed is as yet unestimated, and can only be conjectured.

"That the said canal when so completed will be practically useless.

"That the expenditure thereon is wholly improvident and unwarranted, and constitutes a wanton misuse and waste of public money."

The Minister of Railways, replying, said he proposed to talks on the canals of the world in general to show their importance with regard to the question of transportation.

"It is safer to talk of some other canal," remarked Mr. Borden.

What followed from Mr. Graham was a mass of figures concerning canals and locks generally. For instance, on the Trent Canal there was 20 dams.

"There will be more on this canal," laughed Mr. Foster.

Getting to the Newmarket Canal and the jokes cracked at its expense, he thought it would be made as "sufficient" as the Erie, which carried the grain of western states to the seaboard.

Mr. Graham switched to the joke about the absence of a supply of water wherewith to operate the canal, figuring that some of the great canals of the world were supplied by pumps from artesian wells.

According to the report of one engineer, supplies of water were available to lock through 4,407 vessels, or 20 a day, for seven months a year.

Mr. Aylesworth read a report from The Mail to the effect that Haughton Lennox, M.P., had accompanied the North York delegation and had "endorsed" the project in a speech.

Mr. Lennox denied this. He had attended at the request of Sir William Mulock, but the statement that he had made a speech endorsing it was "wholly untrue."

A cold turn-down for Manitoba was the result of the conference yesterday between Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. Robert Rogers and Hon. Colin Campbell.

The Prime Minister refused to treat with the delegates on the basis of financial terms proportionate to the terms given Saskatchewan and Alberta, or control of lands such as Ontario enjoys, and the conference therefore came to an abrupt end.

MAURICE RYAN FOUND GUILTY

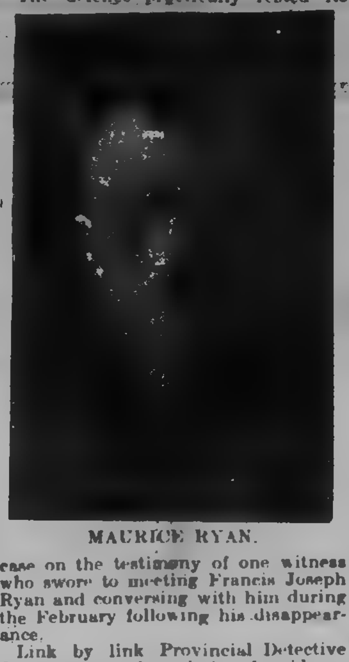
North Bay, March 24.—Maurice Ryan was yesterday afternoon found guilty of the charge of having murdered his brother, Joseph Ryan in November, 1907. The jury were out less than half an hour. Sentence was deferred until to-day.

The defence practically rested its case on the testimony of one witness who swore to meeting Francis Joseph Ryan and conversing with him during the February following his disappearance.



MAURICE RYAN.

Link by link Provincial Detective Greer presented a chain of evidence implicating the prisoner, who sat in the box with immovable countenance, betraying no feeling. Justice Latchford's charge to the jury was against the prisoner.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Governor Hughes last night signed a bill designating Oct. 12 as a legal holiday, to be known as "Columbus Day."

Earl Grey announces that the school children of New Zealand has contributed in penny subscriptions to the Quebec battlefields funds the sum of $950.

The Dominion Government will take no action at the present session in regard to the tariff questions raised by the revision in the United States.

The Commonwealth Government has decided not to offer a Dreadnought to England, preferring to adhere to her settled policy of defending Australia.

President Lewis of the United Mineworkers of America says the anthracite miners have a fund of $5,000,000 to draw on in case of a strike, while $2,000,000 more can be easily raised.

DREDGE HAS STARTED WORK

Deepening the Channel Between Lakefield and Dam No. 2--River is Free From Ice

The dredge "Emmerson" started work to-day deepening the channel in the river between Lakefield and No. 2 dam. The tug "Empire" is also employed in connection with the work, and good progress should be made.

The river is entirely free from ice between Nassau and Lakefield, which pretty nearly establishes a record for an open channel on that part of the river. There is still some ice in the stretch between the lift lock and Nassau, but if the weather continues as at present it will soon be gone.

REV. MR. POGUE DENIES REPORT

The Rev. Mr. Pogue informed a Review reporter that the report that he had spoken against or in favor of any of the contestants in the late Review contest was wholly untrue. He cannot imagine how any such report could have got under weigh. It is wholly without foundation.

A Pulpwood "Boom" Town.

St. John's, Nfld., March 24. What was several months ago a tract of virgin wilderness in the central section of Newfoundland, is to-day, because of the scarcity of pulpwood in the United States, a town of nearly 2,000 inhabitants. Within fifty square miles of territory, there has been laid out a dam 1,000 feet wide, capable of storing 100,000,000,000 feet of logs. Two separate railroad lines, a power station of 45,000 horse-power capacity, a private telephone system and nearly 400 attractive and serviceable houses.

BIG FIRE AT VICTORIA, B.C.

Victoria, B.C., March 23.—Fire yesterday morning caused the loss of over $150,000, mostly covered by insurance.

The buildings destroyed are the Pacific Club and nearly all structures of that block, bounded by Fort, Broad and Broughton streets, mostly owned by F. B. Pemberton.

The cause of the fire which originated in rear of John Gilbert's plumbing shop, is not known, but at 3.30 that place was doomed. The Pacific Club was unoccupied, the firemen, fearing that servants might still have been there, fought their way in and made careful search. Water pressure was poor.

Conservatives and the Navy.

Ottawa, March 24.—A Conservative caucus yesterday morning decided to support a resolution notice of which has been given by Hon. Geo. E. Foster, which declares that in view of the great resources, the environment and geographical position of Canada, she should no longer delay in assuming a share of the burden incident to the protection of her coast line and seaports.

Inquiry Ends.

St. Thomas, March 24.—The Ontario Government's investigation into the administration of the license law in East Elgin and the official acts of License Inspector Andrews was concluded yesterday afternoon, Commissioner Endo Saunders of Toronto presiding. No judgment was given, the commissioner promising to make his report later.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS

Big Seizure of Fish.

London, March 24.—Another seizure of fish was made at the Grand Trunk depot Monday night, consisting of seven boxes, weighing over 1,000 pounds. The seizure was made by Inspector Weldon, under instructions from the Department at Toronto, who wired "seize and sell."

The seizure was made on account of the fact that the boxes contained a quantity of pickerel which the shipper had no right to ship out. The rest of the shipment consisted of mullets and suckers.

The shipment was made by a man named Allen of Bothwell, and was consigned to Dixon & Co., New York.

Agreed to Kill Children.

Buchanan, Sask., March 24.—A rumor is being investigated here that a ten-year-old Galician girl fled from home and told the neighbors that she had overheard her mother telling her father he must get rid of her and her four-year-old sister. The father agreed, according to the rumor, and said he would kill them and incinerate the bodies in the crude clay oven affected by these people.

Demand a Subway.

Kingston, March 24.—The proposition to place an overhead bridge over the G.T.R. tracks at Montreal road, in place of a subway, has caused no end of a row, and both the city and county will demand a subway.

This is the level crossing where two lives were lost recently.

A Bigamy Charge.

Brantford, March 24.—Susan Froman charged Jacob Lewis at the Police Court here yesterday with bigamy. The plaintiff married Lewis 10 years ago, knowing he had another wife, and the pair separated recently. The woman married again, and as a result of some differences, laid the charge against her former husband. The prisoner was admitted to bail and the case was enlarged.

Engine Boiler Explodes.

Buffalo, March 24.—Engineer H. E. Kabel and Fireman John Gost, of an east-bound Lehigh Valley freight, were almost instantly killed late yesterday near Corfu. The boiler of the engine exploded. Henry C. Meyers, a brakeman, was blown from the top of the string of cars.

Fire at Camlachie.

Camlachie, Ont., March 24.—The residence occupied by George Carson and owned by J. E. Bachlor was totally destroyed by fire last night, together with the greater part of the contents, including $70 in cash. The fire was caused by the upsetting of a lamp.

Cataract Contract Holds.

Brantford, March 24.—Announcement has been made here through W. S. Brewster, M.P.P., that the retroactive clause in Hon. Adam Beck's bill requiring a vote of ratepayers on the recent five-year contract between Brantford and the Cataract company, will not be operative as far as this city is concerned.

Yankee Shoemakers Win.

London, March 24.—The long litigation which has been going on between the United Shoe Machinery Co. of Boston and the Canadian shoe manufacturers, has ended in a victory for the American company. The Canadian courts decided that the leases under which the manufacturers obtained the Boston company's machines were void and refused the company an injunction to prevent the use of the machines in contravention of the terms of the leases. The Privy Council yesterday reversed this decision, granted the company a perpetual injunction and awarded it nominal damages with costs.

No Graft In School Books.

Regina, March 24.—In an address on the royal commission investigating the Morang school book contract, Hon. Mr. Haultain exonerated the Commissioner of Education of any charge of personal graft, and declared that the charge of permitting unreasonable profits not justified in the face of the evidence.

But he stated the contract was an improper one, and that an equally good and slightly cheaper book could have been obtained if the commissioner had collected all the information available and made a proper use thereof.

Hasn't Spoken For 10 Years.

Detroit, March 24.—During the hearing of the divorce suit of Sarah and John Kasenow, whose marriage took place in London, Ont., 26 years ago, it developed that Kasenow had not spoken to his eldest daughter, now 20 years of age, since she was 10 years of age, because she had refused to consent to remain at home and keep house for him if he turned his wife out of the house. Mrs. Kasenow was granted a divorce on the ground of cruelty.

Two New Planets.

Paris, March 24.—The Astronomer Gaillot announces the discovery of two new planets situated beyond Neptune, which is the outermost known planet of the solar system. He estimated that one of the planets was four times and the other six times the distance of earth from the sun, or 4,185,000,000 and 5,580,000,000 miles respectively.

REV. MR. CARMAN WITHDRAWS STRICTURES ON REV. JACKSON

Victoria University Issues Declaration.

Will Stand by Rev. George Jackson---Dr. Carman Says He Did Not Intend to be Personal.

Toronto, March 24.—Yesterday was indeed laden with surprises for the Methodist Church in Canada. The first came when the faculty of Victoria University had decided unanimously to issue a declaration of independence of thought and freedom of speech and to stand or fall with Rev. George Jackson.

The second came when the meeting of the board of regents called by the chairman, Rev. Dr. Carman, last night adopted the faculty's declaration and ordered it published in the official church organ as the new declaration of principles, practically a new theological creed, signed by the chairman, "A. Carman" himself.

The meeting yesterday afternoon was one absolutely unanimous. Rev. George Jackson's statement of views both then and as previously published were concurred in by every member of the faculty without the slightest dissent.

The board promptly took up the matter of the Carman-Jackson controversy, but the angel of peace hovered over the gathering to such an extent that each side appeared to outrival the other in its desire to extend the olive branch.

When it had been read Rev. Dr. Carman so stirred the hearts of the regents by his declaration that his statements in regard to "Brother Jackson" were not intended to be personal that a member of the board started singing a verse of the hymn, "Blessed be the Tie that Binds," and the verse was sung through by the other members who heartily joined in.

Dr. Carman's declaration of fraternal feeling towards Rev. George Jackson cleared the path for the withdrawal by the superintendent of his strictures on that minister and it only remained for the findings of the board to be placed in the form of the following resolutions, which were signed by Dr. Carman and Chancellor Burwash:

Resolved, that the report of the president of the university in reference to the recent theological controversies be received and adopted by this board as a statement of the position of Victoria University in the matter; and

Further Resolved, that it is considered desirable that whatever has been written of a personal character calculated to wound the feelings of brethren or interfere with their work be withdrawn, and

Further Resolved that the report of the president and the resolution of the Faculty of Theology be published in The Christian Guardian and in the secular press accompanied by a copy of this resolution, the resolution to be certified by the chairman and secretary of the board.

At a meeting of the Faculty of Theology of Victoria University, held in the president's office a 3.30 p.m., a statement was issued in which the following statement was made regarding the creation story in dispute:

We further believe and teach that in the beginning God created the heavens and the earth, that all their order and perfection are the work of His wisdom, goodness and power; that He created man in His own image after His likeness, a responsible moral being; that man fell into sin; that sin is not a stage in the process of development, but a moral act by which a man forsakes the right and does the wrong; that by sin man's nature has been changed for the worse, so that according to our seventh article he is very far gone from original righteousness and of his own nature inclined to evil and that continually; that redemption from sin is only through the atonement of our Lord Jesus Christ, from whom the whole Old Testament dispensation was both preparation and prophecy and in whom the Old Testament has its complete fulfillment.

These doctrines have been the fundamentals of our teaching for the past 38 years and these are the truths which we find taught in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments.

RESUME WORK AT TRENTON

Operations Will be Started on That Section of Canal About Middle of April

Toronto, March 22.—It is expected that work on the local section of the Trent Canal will be resumed about the middle of April, or a little before. Walls and piers built last summer are standing firm and the work so far in connection with the canal seems satisfactory. The temporary bridge at Glen Miller, carried away by the heavy rain, has been removed and replaced by a new steel bridge, which is a fine piece of work. Contractors have just completed about twenty new dumping cars, and a great deal of other repair work has been going on all winter. Work on dam No. 2 stands firm, and appears as if it would do so for a good many years. Teams have been hauling stone from dam No. 1 to 2, getting ready to feed the big stone crusher. Messrs. Cameron and Murphy assistant engineers, have been busy up the line all winter and report everything in good shape. The merchants of Trenton are looking forward to a very successful season. Indications are that trade will be brisk and the town again a busy place.

O K

The Food Drink

Many people drink O'Keefe's "Special Extra Mild" Ale solely for its food properties. Being brewed of finest hops and malt, it contains all the body and brain building elements of these grains.

It is due to the fact that we use the best, that is so rich and creamy—so thoroughly enjoyable—as well as so nutritious and wholesome.

It's "extra mild" remember, and never makes you bilious. 32

THE FRENCH STRIKE

There is a probability that as a result of the present strike in France the right of a body of men to leave their work whenever they see fit to do so in order to force recognition of a real or fancied grievance will be seriously disturbed. It has been a contention of those favoring state ownership and management of public utilities that it meant peaceful and uninterrupted enjoyment, because strikes would become a thing of the past. The experience of France has demolished this taking theory, for the present is not the first instance in which serious public inconvenience has been caused through demonstrative strikes on the part of employees of the state. The telephone service was paralyzed on one occasion, and on another Paris was left in almost total darkness. The serious feature of such demonstrations are that the cost is forced upon people who are in no way to blame, and that the strikers, fully realizing this, pay not the slightest attention to it. It will be a comparatively easy matter for the Government to pass a law making such strikes illegal, but it will be found entirely different when it comes to enforcing such an enactment. A man cannot be made to work any more than a horse can be made to drink when he does not desire to do so. At the same time it is impossible to contemplate handing the management of a public service into the control of those engaged to perform its duties. In the present instance the strike is due to a matter of discipline. Without discipline among the employees the performance of the postal, telegraphic and telephonic services of the state in an effective manner would be entirely impossible. That there has been a lack of discipline in the state telephone service for years has been an open secret, simply because the nature of the service made it impossible to hide it. It has made the service frankly the worst of any large city in the world. To restore efficiency in any of these services is the task confronting M. Clemenceau. He cannot afford to meet the demands of the strikers; in fact, it is imperatively necessary that they should be taught a sharp lesson. This he will certainly do if he can, for he has shown in the past that he has but little sympathy with those who would teach socialism to him—the political leader of the Socialist in France.—Montreal Gazette.

COUNTY CONSTABLES

A meeting of county constables is shortly to be held in Toronto with a view, we hope, of establishing this much-abused body on a permanent and paying basis. As it is at present, the position of a county constable is more of a nuisance than an honour. The trifling pay received by means of fees when the occasion arises, is not such as to ensure promptness and efficiency. It would greatly please and re-assure the people of this province if the county constabulary became something worth while. Why a policeman in the small parts should not be as alert and well-paid as one in the city it is hard to say. Crimes of violence have naturally become frequent in unprotected districts. This is a very distinct reproach to our civilization, and is inuring to the great injury of the happiness and respectability of sparsely-settled districts. Complaints from these quarters are rare. Why? Because it is almost certain to be known who made them, and then the trouble begins. As a consequence much impropriety is allowed to go unreported and unchecked. Many promises are made by members regarding what they will do in this particular, but doubtless owing to apathy at headquarters, little comes of it.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Conservative candidate in the late election in West Peterborough wishes it understood that he is willing to abide by the issue of the protest, and that all others must do the same.

It is very strange that we could expend so much money on a Quebec celebration and hesitate in offering a warship or two to John Bull when he is fearful of invasion.

Are we ready for adult suffrage? The issue will be raised by the new Bill. Women Suffrage advocates demand the extension to women of the vote on same terms as it is given to the same terms as it is now given to men. It is alleged that this would merely be to add to the property voters and make a barrier against progressive reforms.

Dr. Wm. Barry's fine article, "Under Which Democracy," puts plainly the great issue of the day—How shall the people be a great people indeed. "Democracy," he says, "must be transformed to a religion of the Infinite or it will pass like any other worn out symbol." "The people must become a church." Again, as so often the issue comes back to the pulpit and the men in it. Are they strong enough for their great task? Do they realize their power?

A useful object lesson in the need for an adjustment of taxation on land values is given. It is obviously unjust that a great town pleasure estate should be rated at the same price as a shop where incomes hardly earned. An injustice like this simply cannot continue for ever, whichever party upholds it. The forces of justice may be slow, but they are sure and arrive inevitably, if late. Honest people have nothing to fear; cowards always fear the irresistible.

NEAR DEATH'S DOOR

Mi-o-na cures dyspepsia. If any of the readers of the Review are suffering from stomach trouble of any kind Wm. Madill, druggist, Peterborough, will sell you a box of Mi-o-na (for 50 cents with an absolute guarantee of relief or money back.

Neil Murray, of Huron Road, Goderich, Ont., says;—"I suffered with indigestion for over four years and had been given over as incurable by many doctors. I had become a nervous wreck through loss of sleep, and whatever I did eat did not remain on my stomach for over two hours. I would suffer with vomiting spells that would almost kill me, perspiration as large as beads would break out all over my body and leave me in so weakened a condition that I would be unable to stand, not a night's rest in over six months and was so weakened and run down that my family thought I would die. My heart was greatly weakened, and would flutter and a sharp pain would come through me and cut off my breath. I was reduced in weight from 150 to less than 110 pounds. Doctors would give different causes for my trouble, yet none of them gave me the slightest relief. I commenced treatment with Mi-o-na and when one-half of the first box was used I could eat my meals without suffering the dreadful vomiting spells. I used about ten boxes in all, and am entirely cured. My stomach is as strong as ever, and there is not the slightest trouble with digestion. I have gained about 40 pounds in weight, am strong and like a new man. I will always speak highly of Mi-o-na as it cured and, I believe kept me from sure death when all else had failed."

OF INTEREST

The policy of the police department of London is unique and differs from that of other cities in one very important particular. A patrolman or a "constable" as they officially call the members of the rank and file are commended for the arrests they do not make. The constable who brings in the smallest number of prisoners, who appears most infrequently as a prosecuting witness in a police court receives the highest credit. The officer who can settle difficulties on his beat outside the station and does not trouble the police judges is considered the most capable and efficient in the performance of his duty. This of course, does not refer to grave offences, to burglary, larceny, murder or similar crimes, but to petty offences, such as assaults and disorderly conduct which make up the greater part of the business of the police courts in our cities. When the London policeman finds two men quarrelling he endeavors to reconcile them. When he finds a drunken man, he takes him home; when he catches a boy pilfering he talks to him kindly and cautions him not to do it again; after the second offence he takes him to one of the many private institutions for the reformation of the young and thus protects the urchin from the stigma that a police court always leaves.

Thus the policeman is the friend rather than the foe of the people of his beat, and they know that he is trying to help them up rather than keep them down. That accounts in a great degree for the respect that is shown the constables in London and for the influence they exert. Nowhere else in the world is police authority obeyed so promptly and perfectly as in London, and the criminal statistics very seldom show any cases of resisting an officer, which is so frequent an offence in this country. Nor do you often hear of a London policeman being killed or injured in the performance of his duty.

The policeman is strictly enjoined by the regulations to remember at all times that he has no personal interest to serve in making an arrest or securing a conviction of an offender. He is required to practice a self-control which would not be expected of any other occupation. He knows that he will be praised if he can settle a case out of court, and if it should ever appear that he has improperly attempted to influence the judgment of a magistrate against the prisoner he knows that he will be severely dealt with. The tone of the regulations is to encourage the use of gentleness and tact, and, no matter what scurrilous abuse may be hurled at him by a hooligan or a termagant he is not permitted to reply.

The same consideration is enjoined upon officers in charge of police stations. No prisoner is treated as guilty; they act on the theory that sympathy and kindness will cure crime quicker than severity. The "charge room" of a London station house is therefore always an interesting place. While the doors are carefully guarded, and the ladies and gentlemen who for one cause or another have "run up against" a constable on duty, to have been pinched by a "plain clothes man, are not permitted too great freedom of action they are "treated as kindly and as courteously as if they were in a Sunday school," as a London constable explained it to me.

It is a wise rule also that a reasonable time is allowed to pass after the arrest before a charge is entered or a prisoner is questioned. The officer who makes the arrest is instructed to be deliberate about his movements. He does not rush up to the sergeant desk make his report and rush out again, but he takes it leisurely. He saunters around until the person he has arrested is given an opportunity to cool off and gather himself together before answering the charge that is made against him. He he shows signs of excitement and particularly if the prisoner happens to be a hysterical woman, half an hour and sometimes an hour is allowed to elapse before the offender is brought to book, as they say. While in some cases the delay gives the prisoner an opportunity to manufacture a story re think up an excuse, in the majority of cases it acts the other way and allows the reasoning powers and the common sense of the prisoner to assert themselves.

Veteran officers will tell you that a good thinking is most efficacious before a prisoner is compelled to make an explanation or commit himself.

"When a drunken man, particularly if he has the appearance of a gentleman is brought in by a constable who cannot find out where he lives he is invariably turned over to the station physician and no charge is preferred against him until he has slept off the effects of the alcohol. Then, if he makes a reasonable explanation he is permitted to depart in peace without suffering the disgrace of having his name written upon the book. The London authorities explain that this policy is more effective than any form of punishment. If a young nobleman is hauled up in police court, or if he even gets his name upon the police register, it hardens his heart, he loses his self-respect, it makes him reckless and indifferent to shame. Whereas if he is allowed to sober up, and is released without publicity he congratulates himself upon "a jolly narrow squeak" and promises himself that he will never get into such a scrape again. The entire police policy is based upon the effectiveness of "the friendly hand."

The Metropolitan police district of London extends over a fifteen-mile radius from Charing Cross and includes an area of 699.42 square miles, which is laid out like a gigantic chess board into sixty-four grand divisions and 8,000 sub-divisions. The organization is so perfect that the commissioner of police at Scotland Yard may know at any moment the exact place where any patrolman could be found and a sergeant or an inspector, or a fellow patrolman knows where to look for him when help, advice or instruction is needed.

There are thirty superintendents, 569 inspectors 2,180 sergeants and 16,210 constables, making a total of nearly 20,000 men, so thoroughly organized that they are an almost perfect human mechanism, the greatest of its kind that was ever known, and their personal association with the 7,000,000 people they are employed to serve is far more intimate than that of any other peace force in the world. The London constable is called a "peeler" because Sir Robert Peel, prime minister during the early part of the nineteenth century, organized the force or "Bobbys"—a nickname like that of "Tommy," which is given to the soldiers of the British army. He is the confidant of the joys and sorrows, the triumphs and the troubles of every person on his beat and is on confidential terms with the professional criminals to a degree that has never been acquired by any American officer of justice. He secures this confidence by offering a "friendly hand" and as long as a professional criminal behaves himself he knows that he will not be disturbed. Of course he is aware that he is under surveillance and that each constable is supposed to know where he can lay his hands on any "bad man" on his beat when that person is wanted, but the relation is a valuable one to both.

London policemen are appointed by competition. Any young man between 21 and 27 years of age who brings certificates of "sober habits," "honest character," "good temper," and "respectable connections and associates" from five householders who have known him personally for five years, may apply for appointment on the force. He must "stand clear 5 feet 9 inches without shoes or stockings" must be "free from bodily complaint, of strong constitution, good muscular development and careful as to personal cleanliness." He must also be "generally intelligent, read well, write legibly, and have a fair education."

Having complied with these conditions the applicant is sent to a school of instruction. There he settles down for a course of training in a barracks where he receives his board and lodging free of cost, but no compensation. His life there is similar to that of a recruit in the army. He spends three or four hours a day in military drill to smarten up his appearance, to make him stand erect to develop his muscles, teach him discipline and how to work with others when help is necessary. Three or four hours a day are spent in the study of simple, scientific principles to develop his mind and judgment and give him the mental as well as the muscular training necessary to qualify him for duty. Each succeeding week the course of instruction is advanced, and the candidate finally learns something of law and the penalties for its violation. After a while he is assigned only at a police station or a police court where he comes in contact with the public and the criminal classes and learns from the evidence submitted to the magistrate how a competent constable conducts himself.

The candidate is required to make reports upon imaginary cases and upon the application of ordinary laws and ordinances. For example I have before me a circular prepared last fall by the commissioner of police and sent to the various schools of instruction—I believe there are twenty or thirty in the county of London. This circular requires candidates to prepare reports "upon the laws and regulations affecting the licensing of and offences committed by peddlers and hawkers," also "upon the powers and duties of the police under the vagrancy act and the proper treatment of offenders thereunder." "Report as many as you can of the offenses with which a constable can deal under the highway act;" "What are the powers of the police under various acts of parliament to prevent juvenile vagrancy and depravity." "What would you do in case a lady is knocked down and killed by a motor car, the driver of which makes off." "You are called at night into a house from which a thief has apparently escaped with valuable property—what steps should be taken."

It must be understood that during the three to six months which a candidate spends in the police school of his competitors are dropped by the way for lack of mental capacity or lack of judgment or other reasons. I was told at Scotland Yard last fall that in 1907 only 22 per cent of the applicants passed the ordeal successfully and were appointed to the force. Every possible test that can be devised is applied to try their tempers, their patience, their judgment and other characteristics.

The text book most carefully studied is entitled "Duty Hints for Constables and Section Sergeants." It is a compact little pocket volume of fifty pages, containing a comprehensive epitome of information upon everything that a policeman ought to know. It is arranged alphabetically, like a dictionary and the first page contains instructions as to accidents, advertisements, aliens, animals, areas assaults, etc. The book contains the location of every fire station, hospital, shelter, for homeless, every coroner, physician, ambulance station infirmary, etc, and the last three pages are filled with "hints" to an officer on duty. He is admonished never to lose his temper, to answer every question, civilly, never to express an opinion unless he is asked, to state all facts in favor of as well as against an offender.

In this way are the policemen of London educated and when they join the force they expect to stay with it for life. The pay is absurdly small, beginning at 600 shilling, or $7.50 a week in round numbers, with an increase every six months until a total of 50 shillings or $12.50 a week is reached. A sergeant's pay begins at 50 shillings and may be increased to 100 shillings, or $25 a week. An inspector's pay begins at 100 shillings, and if he remains until he is 62 years old the may reach a maximum of $1800 a year. Superintendents are paid $2,100 a year. But a member of the service may be retired on two-thirds pay for disability or for age when he passes 62 and if he is killed, or dies from the effects of injuries received on duty his widow and minor children receive pensions.

CATTLE MARKETS.

LONDON, March 23.—London cables for cattle are steady, at 12c to 13c for Canadian steers, dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 9¼c to 9⅝c per lb.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, March 23.—Receipts of live stock at the City Market, as reported by the railways, were 91 carloads, consisting of 1529 cattle, 1624 hogs, 410 sheep and 270 calves.

Exporters.

Export steers sold at $5.25 to $5.50; export bulls sold at $4 to $4.50, export cows $4.60 to $4.75.

Butchers.

Prime picked lots, sold at $5.35 to $5.50, loads of good at $5 to $5.25, medium, $4.50 to $4.80; common, $3.85 to $4.40, cows, $3.25 to $4.40, canners and commons cows, $1.50 to $2.65.

Stockers and Feeders.

Harry Murby reported the market as being quiet for stockers and feeders. Mr. Murby bought between 80 and 100 stockers and feeders, 600 to 1100 lbs. each, at $3.35 to $4.65.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a good trade in milkers and springers, at steady prices, which ranged from $35 to $60, with two or three choice heavy cows at $70 each.

Veal Calves.

Receipts were larger, which caused the market to be a little easier at $3 to $7 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep and lambs were a little bit easier, on account of there being a few more offered. It does not take a large number at the present high prices to satisfy the demand, as mutton and lamb have got to the price where the general public cannot afford to buy. Sheep, $4.50 to $5 for ewes; rams, $3.50 to $4.25; lambs grain fed, $7.25 to $7.75 per cwt.; lambs common, $6 to $6 per cwt.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris reported the market steady at $7.15 for selects fed and watered at the market, and $6.90 f.o.b. cars at country points. Two or three drovers and commission men reported having got $7 f.o.b. cars at country points.

Buddhist Ceremonies.

Some Buddhist ceremonies present a striking analogy to certain Christian rites. An old missionary says: "The very titles of their intercessions, such as 'goddess of mercy,' 'holy mother,' 'queen of heaven,' with an image of the virgin having a child in her arms holding a crescent, are all such striking coincidences that the Catholic missionaries were greatly stumbled at the resemblances between Chinese worship and their own when they came over to convert the natives to Christianity."—London Standard.

"I suppose it's off between you, then."

"I don't know about that either. We lunched at Rector's today. That don't look like it's off, does it? Four sixty-five, including the tip. She don't look twenty-nine, does she?"

"I've never noticed her."

"Never! Well, holy mackerel! You must be blind then. She says she's seen you in the elevator a thousand times. Never noticed her? Gee!"

"I mean I've never noticed any one who looked less than twenty-nine. By the way, do you ever see Mr. Rigby? I believe she is in his office."

"I don't go to Rigby's any more," said Eddie, with sudden stiffness. "He's a cheap skate."

"I heard he threw you out of the office one day," with a dry cackle.

"He did not! We couldn't agree in certain things regarding the Bansemer affair, that's all. I told him to go to the devil, or words to that effect."

"Something loose about your testimony, I believe, wasn't there?"

"Oh, the whole thing doesn't amount to a whoop. I'm trying to get Rosie another job. She oughtn't to write in there with that guy."

"Well, you're twenty-one. Why don't you open an office of your own? Your mother's got plenty of money. She can buy you a library and a sign, and that is all a young lawyer needs in Chicago."

"Mother wants me to run for alderman in our ward next spring. I'll be able to vote at that election."

"Sure. Mother owns property. The west side ought to be as well represented as the north side. Property interests is what we need in the council. That's"—

"I don't care to hear a political speech, boy. Are you busy this afternoon?"

"No. I wouldn't be here if I was."

"Then get up there and hand those books down to me. Nobody loafs in this office today."

"Well, doggone, if that isn't the limit! All right. Don't get mad. I'll do it." The young gentleman leisurely ascended to the top of the stepladder and fell into line under the lash.

"Young Mr. Graydon Bansemer will be here this afternoon," said Droom. "I want to get things cleaned up a bit beforehand."

"How does he feel about his father?"

"He doesn't know about him, I'm afraid."

"Gee! Well, it'll jar him a bit, won't it?"

The office door was opened suddenly, and a tall young man strode into the room, only to stop aghast at the sight before him. Droom's lank figure swayed uncertainly and his eyes wavered.

"What's all this?" cried Graydon, dropping his bag and coming toward the old man, his hand outstretched. Droom's clammy fingers rested lifelessly in the warm clasp.

"How are you, Graydon? I'm—I'm very glad to see you. You are looking well. Oh, this? We—we are moving," said the old man. The helpers looked on with interest. "Come into the back office. It isn't so torn up. I didn't expect you so soon. They said it was twenty-four hours late. Well, well, how are you, my boy?"

"I'm quite well again, Elias. Hard siege of it, I tell you. Moving, eh? What's that for?"

"Never mind those books, Eddie. Thank you for helping me. Come in some other time. You fellows—I mean you—pack the rest of these, and then I'll tell you what to do next. Come in, Graydon."

Eddie Deever took his departure, deeply insulted because he had not been introduced to the newcomer. Graydon, somewhat bewildered, followed Droom into his father's consultation room. He looked around inquiringly.

"Where is father? I telegraphed to him."

An incomprehensible grin came into Droom's face. He twirled the umbrella in his fingers a moment before replying. His glance at the closed door was no more significant than his lowered tones.

"What do you mean?"

"I mean the trial. There was a trial, you see. Haven't you heard anything?"

"Trial? He—he was arrested?" came numbly from the young man's lips.

"I can't mince matters, Graydon. I'll get it over as quickly as possible. Your father was tried for blackmail and was convicted. He is in—he's in the penitentiary."

The son's face became absolutely bloodless. His eyes were full of comprehension and horror, and his body stiffened as if he were turning to stone. The word penitentiary fell slowly, mechanically, from his lips. He looked into Droom's eyes, hoping it might be a joke of the calloused old clerk.

"Yes, my boy, it is true. I didn't write to you about it because I wanted to put it off as long as I could. It's for five years."

"God!" burst from the wretched son. A wave of shame and grief sent the tears flooding to his eyes. "Poor old dad!" He turned and walked to the window, his shoulders heaving. Droom stood silent for a long time, watching Bansemer's son, pity and triumph in his face.

"Do you want to hear about it?" he asked at last. Graydon's head was bent in assent.

"It came the day after you left Chicago with the recruits. I knew you would not read the newspapers. So did he. Harbert swore out the papers, and he was arrested here in this office. I believe he would have killed himself if he had been given time. His revolver was—er—not loaded. Before the officers came he discharged me. I was at liberty to go or to testify against him. I did neither. Of course I was arrested, but they could only prove that I was a clerk who knew absolutely nothing about the inside workings of the office. I offered to go on his bond, but he would not have me. He made some arrangement through his attorney, and bail was secured. In spite of the fact that he was charged with crime he insisted on keeping these offices and trying to do business. It wasn't because he needed money, Graydon, but because he wanted to lead an honest life, he said. He has a great deal of money, let me tell you. The grand jury indicted him last spring, but the trial did not come up until last month, nearly a year later, so swift is justice in this city. In the meantime I saw but little of him. I was working on an invention, and, besides, there were detectives watching every movement I made. I stuck close to my rooms. By the way, I want to show you a couple of models I have perfected. Don't let me forget it. They"—

"Yes, yes—but father? Go on."

"Well, the trial came up at last. That man Harbert is a devil. He had twenty witnesses, any one of whom could have convicted your father. How he got on to them I cannot imagine. He uncovered every deal we've—er—he had in Chicago and"—

"Then he really was guilty?" groaned Graydon.

"Yes, my boy. I knew it, of course. They could not force me to testify against him, however. I was too smart for them. Well, to make it short, he was sentenced five weeks ago. The motion for a new trial was overruled. He went to Joliet. If he had been a popular alderman or ward boss he would have been out yet on continuances, spending most of his sentence in some fashionable hotel, to say the least."

"There'll be something off for good behavior, my boy. He wanted to behave well before he went there, so I suppose he'll keep it up. The whole town was against him. He didn't have a friend."

"How did you escape," demanded Graydon, looking up suddenly—"state's evidence?"

"No; not even after he tried to put most of the blame upon me. He tried that, my boy. I just let him talk. It saved me from prison—usually the case with the man who keeps his mouth closed."

"But, Elias—Elias, why have I been kept in the dark? Why did he not tell me about it? Why has"—

"You forget, Graydon, that you turned from him first. You were really the first to condemn him. He wanted you to stay away from this country until he is free. That was his plan. He didn't want to see you. Now he wants you to come to him. He wants you to bring Jane Cable to see him."

"What!"

"Yes, that's it. I believe he intends to tell her the names of her father and mother. I think he wants her to forgive him, and he wants to hear both of you say it to him."

Graydon stared blankly from the window. The old clerk was smiling to himself, an evil, gloating smile that would have shocked Bansemer had he turned suddenly.

"He wants both of us to—to come to the penitentiary?" muttered the son.

"Yes, as soon as possible. Do you think she'll go?" demanded Droom anxiously.

"I don't know. I'm afraid not."

"Not even to learn who her parents are?"

"It might tempt her. But she hates father."

"Well, she can gloat over him, can't she? That ought to be some satisfaction. Talk it over with her. She's here, isn't she?"

"Elias, do you know who her parents were?" asked Graydon quickly. "I've thought you knew as much about it as father."

The old man's eyes shifted.

"It's a silly question to ask me. I was not a member of the Four Hundred, my boy."

"Nor was my father. Yet you think he knows."

"He's a much smarter man than I, Graydon. You'll go with me to see him?"

"Yes. I can't speak for Miss Cable."

"See her tomorrow. Come out to my place tonight, where the reporters can't find you. Maybe you won't care to sleep with me—I've but one bed, you see—but you can go to a quiet hotel downtown. I'm packing these things to store them for your father. Then I'm going back to New York to live on my income. It's honest money too."

"Who sent me the draft for five hundred?"

"I did, Graydon. Forgive me. It was just a loan, you know. I thought you'd need something"—

"I haven't touched it, Elias. Here it is. Thank you. No, I won't accept it."

Graydon resumed his seat near the window and watched Droom with leaden eyes as he turned suddenly to resume charge of the packing. "We'll soon be through," he said shortly.

"God!" burst from the wretched son.

For an hour the work went on, and then Droom dismissed the workers with their pay. The storage van men were there to carry the boxes away. Graydon sat still and saw the offices divested. Secondhand dealers hurried off with the furniture, the pictures and the rugs. An expressman came in for the things that belonged to Elias Droom.

"There," said the clerk, tossing the umbrella into a corner, "it's finished. There's nothing left to do but remove ourselves."

"Elias, did Mr. Clegg know about father's conviction when he offered me the place in New York?" asked Graydon as they started away.

"Yes; that's the beauty of it. He admires you. You'll take the place?"

"Not until I've talked it all over with him tomorrow."

Droom called a cab, and the two drove over to the Wells street rooms, Graydon relinquishing himself completely to the will of the old man. During the supper, which Droom prepared with elaborate care, and far into the night the young man sat and listened without interest to the garrulous talk of his host, who explained the mechanism and purpose of two models.

One was in the nature of a guillotine by which a person could chop his own head off neatly without chance of failure, and the other had to do with the improvement of science in respect to shoelaces.

CHAPTER XXIX.

MR. CLEGG was not long in convincing Graydon that his proposition to him was sincere and not the outgrowth of sentiment. A dozen men in the office greeted Graydon with a warmth that had an uplifting effect. He went away with a heart lighter than he had once imagined it could ever be again. In two weeks he was to be in absolute control of the New York branch. He assured the firm that his physical condition was such that he could go to work at once if necessary.

As he hastened to the Annex misgivings again entered into his soul. The newspapers had heralded his return and had hinted broadly at romantic developments in connection with Miss Cable, "who is at the Annex with Mr. and Mrs. Cable." There were brief references to the causes which sent both of them to the Philippines, and that was all.

Without hesitation he came to the point by asking if she knew what had befallen his father. Jane had heard the news the night before. He thereupon put the whole situation before her just as it had been suggested in Droom's ironical remark. It was not until after the question had been passed upon by Mr. and Mrs. Cable that she reluctantly consented to visit Graydon's father solely for the purpose of gleaning what information she could regarding her parentage.

They left the next day with Elias Droom, depressed, nervous, dreading the hour ahead of them. Neither was in the mood to respond to the eager, excited remarks of the old clerk. The short railroad trip was one never to be forgotten; impressions were left in their lives that could not be effaced.

James Bansemer, shorn and striped, was not expecting visitors. He was surprised and angry when he was told that visitors were waiting to see him. For four weeks he had labored clumsily and sourly in the shoe factory of the great prison, a hauler and carrier. His tall figure was bent with unusual toil, his hands were sore and his heart was full of the canker of rebellion. Already in that short time his face had taken on the look of the convict. All the viciousness in his nature had gone to his face and settled there. He had the sullen, dogged, patient look of the man who has a number, but no name.

The once dignified, aggressive walk had degenerated into a slouch. He shuffled as he came to the bars where he was to meet his first visitors. He was not pleased, but he was curious. Down in his heart he found a hope that his attorney had come with good news. It was not until he was almost face to face with his son that he realized who it was, not until then that he felt the full force of shame, ignominy, loathing for himself.

He started back with an involuntary oath and would have slunk away had not Graydon called out to him—called out in a voice full of pain and misery. The convict's face was ashen and his jaw hung loose with the paralysis of dismay. His heart dropped like a chunk of ice; his feet were as leaden weights. A look of utter despair came into his hard eyes as he slowly advanced to the bars.

"My God, Graydon, why did you come? Why did you come here?" he muttered. Then he caught sight of Jane and Elias Droom. His eyes dropped, and his fingers twitched. To save his life he could not have kept his lower lip from trembling nor the burning tears from his eyes. His humiliation was complete.

A malevolent grin was on Droom's face. His staring blue eyes looked with a great joy upon the shamed, beaten man in the stripes. The one thing that he had longed for and cherished had come to pass. He had lived to see James Bansemer utterly destroyed even in his own eyes.

Group Photo of 102 Men Taken at Lendrum's Studio Last Night

The Inthon Bible class of George street church is one of the largest men's Bible classes in Canada. Several Sunday school and religious periodicals in Canada and the United States have written, asking for a photograph of the class, in order that they might publish a cut of the same. To comply with these requests, the class was photographed last night at Lendrum's studio. A hundred and two of the members were present and an excellent picture was secured. The class is composed entirely of men, and the enrolement is between 150 and 200.

IMPROVEMENT TO THE PLANT OF THE CALCUTT B. AND M. CO.

Filtering Plant, Pasteurizing and Labelling Machines Added to Equipment—A New Brand of Lager, "The Trent Valley."

The Calcutt Brewing and Malting Company are not going to be behind the age in improvements to their lager plant. In order to meet competition in bottle and draft lager they have lately installed a filtering plant which they have purchased from the Loew Manufacturing Co. of Cleveland, Ohio, one of the best and most reliable filter manufacturing firms in the United States. The brewery has also placed a pasteurizing machine to its plant, which insures the export bottle lager keeping in any climate and to get the bottled lager out much more easily the firm had added to their bottling room a labelling machine, which performs the work of labelling much more quickly than when it is done by hand.

NEW BOTTLED LAGER.

The Calcutt Brewing and Malting Company are going to turn out a new brand of bottled lager, which the company is confident will be one of the most popular lagers on the market—the Trent Valley lager. Considerable money has been spent by the brewery in order to have its lager recognized as ranking with any of the most popular American and Canadian beers.

The name Trent Valley is a very appropriate one, not only for the company's goods, but the name is known between Toronto and Montreal and will keep the city of Peterborough before the public as the Trent Valley headquarters. The local trade will no doubt be pleased to know that just as good if not better goods can be obtained at home as from outside centres and by purchasing them will keep their money in town and help to build up local industries.

ROYAL ASTRONOMICAL SOCIETY IN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

The regular fortnightly meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society was held last evening in the Collegiate Institute and proved most profitable and entertaining.

Mr. Herbert Collier, the vice-president of the society occupied the chair, while Mr John A Paterson, MA. KC, of Toronto, delivered the main address of the evening on "The Astronomy of Tennyson."

The chairman in his opening remarks mentioned a number of the special features of the sky at present and explained the reason for the phenomena seen in regard to the new moon as it appeared last evening The whole moon was visible to the naked eye, appearing in the form popularly known as "the old moon in the new moon's arms." This to the eye gave the moon an elliptical form. The cause of the whole moon being visible to the eye was expained by the reflection of the sun's light upon the earth over to the moon and then back to us. It was to the moon, "earth light," as we have here, "moonlight."

The lecture by Mr Paterson was decidedly a literary treat and showed conclusively that the speaker was a devoted student to the works of the great poet laureate Alfred Tennyson. He showed the poet in his character as a man of wide knowledge a polyhedral man, his works giving evidence of the scientist, the botanist, the astronomer, etc. coupled with the genius of thet rue poet. By the death of Tennyson, England lost her greatest poet, and the poet of the greatest knowledge of science and nature.

"Poetry has been said to consist of beautiful thoughts wedded to beautiful words," said the speaker, and then gave instance how Tennyson wove into his charming poetry the beautiful thoughts of science and nature. Tennyson studied man A Chinese proverb said "A man is more like his time than he is like his father or mother." So Tennyson's works showed clearly the period in which he lived.

The lecturer then gave evidence of the knowledge the poet had of the study of astronomy. His intimate knowledge of this science is shown in many passages throughout his works and it must have been a knowledge gained by personal observation, else the poet could not have expressed himself so definitely and clearly. He could not possibly have secured such breadth of knowledge simply from books or from other men. Mr Paterson then read with most excellent elocutionary effect a number of selections from Tennyson bearing upon his knowledge of astronomy, and explained the references. It was not merely an occasional astronomical fact that appeared in his works, but his poems were tinged throughout with the sublimity of the great universe beyond.

In speaking of the distance of the stars from us Mr Paterson stated that someone had carefully computed the number of words and even the letters in the Bible. From the first letter "I" to the last one "N" there were over three million letters. If we can imagine each of these letters separated from the next one by the space of 7,500,000 miles, and that would mean over three million in such spaces, we have an idea of the distance to the very nearest fixed star.

On conclusion of the lecture a vote of thanks was moved and seconded by D W Dumble and Rev J G Potter, respectively each in eloquent words expressing the extreme pleasure the lecture had given them.

SHORT SHIFT FOR MANITOBA SIR WILFRID SNUBS MINISTERS

Ottawa March 23.—The Manitoba Ministers, Hon. Messrs. Rogers and Campbell, had another interview today with Sir Wilfrid Laurier relative to the Province's demands for better financial terms in connection with the proposed extension of the Provincial boundaries. Sir Wilfrid said the Government could not agree to Manitoba's request for an extra cash subsidy similar to that given Alberta and Saskatchewan, and that the bargain made when Manitoba entered confederation, with reference to the ownership of the Crown lands, should not now be revised. Manitoba, Sir Wilfrid maintained, could not, after the lapse of so many years, be considered as being on the same footing as the new provinces just starting in to administer vast territories, with all the incidental expense of organization, to maintain law and order, build roads, etc. But in lieu of granting Manitoba the ownership of the Crown lands in the territory to be annexed to the province, he said, the Government was willing to allow an annual cash subsidy sufficient to cover the cost of administration of the new territory. At present the enforcement of law and order in the portion of Keewatin to be allocated to Manitoba only costs about fifteen hundred dollars per year.

AFTERNOON SESSION OF THE LAYMEN'S CONFERENCE

The Presbyterians of Peterborough city and Presbytery were in session all day yesterday and last night discussing the laymen's missionary movement. The conference was an important one and the result should bear fruit. The object was to fully explain the meaning of the movement and to devise the best ways of impressing the laymen with the genuineness of the proposition and their person obligation to contribute towards the missionary funds. It was pointed out that if each communicant in the Protestant churches gave $5 a year to the fund sufficient money would be raised to send the gospel to every section of the globe within the next 25 years.

The conference was opened with a morning session, and was very well attended, including a large number of laymen from outside churches. At noon hour the ladies of the three Presbyterian churches in the city served luncheon to the delegates in St. Andrew's hall. Three large tables were laid and about 180 delegates sat down. There were some twenty of the churches in the Presbytery represented. The luncheon was exceptionally well served and the men were much pleased with the attention they received from the ladies. The chairman at dinner and also at the afternoon session was Mr. R. F. McWilliams.

The speaker of the afternoon was Mr. Matthew Parkinson, of Toronto, a prominent business man. He spoke for about half an hour on the objects of the movement and taking up particularly the work the individual churches should do in order that the objects of the movement may be accomplished. If each communicant gave $5 per year the world would be evangelized in 25 years. This does not mean christianized.

Other speakers in the afternoon were Rev. F. W. Henderson, of Toronto, who took up the educational work in the churches, Sunday schools and societies, and pointed out what was being done in the way of spreading information Rev. Mr. Armstrong, of Toronto, spoke on the ways and means of carrying out the objects.

FIRE ON THE VERANDAH

A hole was burned in the floor of a back verandah on Gilmour street this morning between 6 and 7 o'clock, the fire resulting from burning sawdust in a barrel for meat smoking purposes. The flames were making for the summer kitchen at the rear of the house when discovered by a neighbor who extinguished them.

The family knew nothing of the blaze until they arose after eight o'clock and were naturally very glad it had been discovered.

"STRIPES" SAYS PARIS

New Stripe Effects for Spring in Dress Fabrics

SETTLING DOWN

MILLINERY openings are over, and the trade is settling down to more normal condition—the stock is at its very best now and the woman who wishes to get her Easter hat should consider her experience of previous years in leaving the purchase until the Spring and Easter rush began which doubtless resulted in a disappointment, both for the patron and ourselves.

The creations this season are particularly beautiful and especially so when nature's own garlands are used in the decorating to a very large degree—flowers predominate, with ribbons and plumes in great favor. The new shades include several tones of Taupe Grey, Wistaria, Rose and Rosewood shades, also Saphire Blue. See the beautiful display in our millinery parlors now.

"Plain color fabrics, and self color stripes will have the main call and the lustrous satin finishes will be most in demand" —Dry Goods Review

GLANCE over the most beautiful and extensive displays in the largest fashion centres of America and Europe and you will see that 'Dame Fashion' decrees that 'stripes' in dress fabrics are to be vogue. The self stripe is by far and away the most papular for Spring in narrow, medium and wide widths. The new Directoire finished cloths are the leading fabrics and such cloths as the Venetians, Broadcloths, Alexandrias, Herringbone Twills, Whipcords, Homespun effects, D & A Brilliantine [new light weight materials] Taffeta Cloth, etc. are strongly in demand.

The shades for Spring comprise a very pretty range of greys [elephant and taupe] light and dark navys, greens [reseda, the best] also browns. Prices, 50c, 75c, 1.00, 1.25 to 2.25.

See our stock now before the assortment is broken and place your order with the dressmaker as early as possible to avoid disappointment at Easter

FRATERNITY VERSUS MONEY

"Resolved, that money has done more for the elevation of mankind than fraternity," was the subject of a debate held at an open meeting of Marathon Lodge, Knights of Pythias, in their hall, Simcoe street, last night. The affirmative side of the question was taken by Messrs. Percy Hetherington and Jas. Squires, while the claims of fraternity were upheld by Dr. J. E. Middleton and Mr. Oscar Waring. Strong arguments were put forth in an able manner, by both sides. The judge, Mr. G. K. Martin, decided in favor of the negative.

In addition to the debate, there was a good programme. Mr. F. H. Dobbin occupied the chair. Among the numbers given were a vocal solo by Mr. J. King, banjo selection by F. Clark, and a recitation by Mr. Oscar Waring.

THE $15,000 POWER BY-LAW

Sir,—We wish on behalf of the Special Power Committee of the City Council, to explain to the electors the position in regard to the by-law to authorize the borrowing of $15,000, which is to be voted upon on March 30th. This sum is intended for the purpose of paying for the foundations forebays, wheelpits, tail-race and power house for developing electrical power at the eastern end of the proposed new waterworks dam, leaving the matter of providing money for purchasing the machinery for the power house to a future time, but making provision to have everything ready for the installation of the machinery when it is purchased.

The water commissioners having come to the conclusion that it is necessary to build a new concrete dam at the waterworks property asked the Council to submit a by-law to the electors for that purpose, which the Council has done. At the same time the Commissioners informed the Council that when the new dam is completed there will be 1,200 horse-power available there and that of this 500 horse-power will be enough to supply the needs of the waterworks department. This would leave 700 horse-power that would be available for other purposes and the Council is of opinion that it would not be good business to have this quantity of power running to waste, and that steps should be taken towards developing it so that it would be utilized in the interests of the city.

One way in which this power could be used would be to utilize it to supply the street lighting. At present the city pays nearly $9,000 a year for street lighting. This contract will not expire for nearly five years yet, so that the city cannot count upon doing its own lighting sooner than that. But it will not do to wait until the contract expires before taking action towards being ready to do that work when the time comes. It will take two or three years to complete the work of building the new dam, pumping station, power house, etc., so that when that work is completed there will be from two to two and a half years left in which to instal the electrical machinery. That would, no doubt, leave time enough to erect the power house and do the work that it is intended to do under the authority of the by-law which is now submitted to the electors. But when the unwatering is done and the machinery and appliances are on the ground for the purpose of constructing the dam the foundations, forebays, wheelpits, tail race, etc., for the power house can be constructed much more cheaply than if that work is left to be done some time in the future after the work on the dam is completed. The estimate of Mr. W. J. Kennedy, of Montreal, the Water Commissioners' engineer, is that this power-house, etc., work will cost $15,000, the amount stated in the by-law. The amount on that sum will be $637.50 a year, so that if the power-house should be completed two years before it is required it would cost $1,275 for interest for those two years, but it is believed that more than that will be saved on the cost of the work by having the plans made out and the work done at the same time as the dam is being constructed.

While the waterworks department reserved 500 horse-power, the street lighting will take from 200 to 300 horse power, which will leave 400 to 500 horse-power still available. If a market for this power is found, as for instance, by the location of a new factory here, another by-law could be submitted and the electrical machinery could be put in at once, and the whole cost of the two years' interest would not have to be charged against the saving of having the power house, etc., constructed at the same time as the dam.

By going on with the work the city will be ready in ample time to do its own street lighting when the contract expires, it will save money by doing it while the dam is being constructed and may gain a great deal by being in a position to furnish power to some good industry.

These are some of the considerations which have influenced the Committee of the Council to ask the ratepayers to approve of the by-law authorizing the issue of debentures for $15,000, and if they are good business reasons, as we believe they are, we hope the ratepayers will vote for the bylaw.

Yours respectfully,
H. RUSH,
Mayor.
A. A. McINTYRE,
Chairman Power Committee.

INTERESTING ADDRESS ON THE LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT LAST NIGHT

At St. Paul's Church by Mr. Matthew Parkinson, of Toronto – Conversion of the Heathen is a Work That Demands Attention

An eloquent and inspiring address on the Layman's Missionary movement was given by Mr Matthew Parkinson of Toronto, last night in St. Paul's church. The speaker was introduced by Mr Wm. Madill and commenced his address by outlying the progress made by the Christian church since the High Commission had been given to the Apostles which was "Go ye out into the world and preach the gospel." It was our duty to carry the truth to those who have not heard of it, and this was why the missionary movement was formed. The reason why the church is not any better today than it is, is because it has not done its duty in this respect. There are 1,000,000,000 heathen in the world and God has ordained that the people He has raised up must evangelize them. The Laymen's missionary movement is not formed more for home than it is foreign missions. He dwelt for some time on the duty that Canada owed to the Missionary movement and said that Canadians had a big problem to solve in the next twenty years which would mean the loss of Canada for our children if the problem was not solved. There was $4,500,000 needed for the cause and as there was 900,000 people concerned it only meant a small sum from each person to help the movement. If the church was to be successful it must look out for those who were not so fortunate. The movement had done a lot of good in the churches that had taken it up and the homes had been benefitted by it also.

A number of questions on how the movement was conducted through the churches was answered by the speaker in a clear and interesting manner.

At the conclusion of the address, a hearty vote of thanks was moved by Rev Mr. Webb and was seconded by Mr J C Shook.

HAD ARM ALMOST SEVERED BY A SAWING MACHINE

While Engaged in Cutting Wood at Norwood—The Latest News Happings From That Town.

Norwood, March 24.—Last Friday evening the members of the adult Bible classes of the Method at church held a very enjoyable social in the school room when they entertained a large number of their friends. The evening was spent with games and music and social intercourse and about 9.30 the guests were invited to the basement where the tables were set and all enjoyed a dainty lunch of coffee and cake and sandwiches with oranges for dessert. Before adjourning to the dining room Mr. Squire teacher of the senior Bible class addressed a few remarks to the assemblage and extended a hearty invitation to all present to become members of either his or Mrs. Adams class in Sunday school.

On account of the absence of the Rev. G. A. MacLellan of the Presbyterian church the Rev. W. H. Adams conducted union services of the two congregations. In the morning he preached in the Methodist church and in the evening in the Presbyterian church. Large congregations were present at both services.

Mr. John Graham son of Mr. Robt. Graham of Asphodel, met with a very painful accident last Wednesday morning at Mr. John Rorabeck's. A gang of men were engaged in cutting wood with a circular saw run by a heavy threshing engine and young Graham who undertook to relieve the sawyer for a few minutes had the misfortune to get his arm in the way of the rapidly revolving saw, with the result that the hand was almost severed at the wrist. Two doctors were immediately summoned and dressed the wound. The hand was saved but it is expected it will be always stiff.

Mr. George Buck, of the late firm of Buck & Buck, left this (Wednesday) morning for the Northwest, where he has a section of improved land. Mr Buck is going out to make arrangements to have the crop attended to this year and expects to be away about a month.

Mr. Bob Pullybank who has been employed for the past couple of years in the blacksmith shop of Mr C. J. Blake, left Norwood on Tuesday for Springville, about seven miles from Peterborough, where he is going to engage in business for himself in the old Bidgood stand. Mr. Pullyblank's many friends in Norwood wish him success in his new undertaking. Mr. Ryan, of Westwood has leased his property there to Mr. McCracken, the present cheese maker in that village, and has rented one of Mr. W. A. Finlay's brick houses on Queen street, where he will reside in future. Mr. Ryan is engaged in the lumber business being one of the firm of Lynch & Ryan.

Mr. Drummond, aged 29 years, passed away on Tuesday night after a lingering illness at the residence of his wife's mother, Mrs. Thrall, Peterborough street. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife and one child. The funeral will take place on Tuesday morning. The service will be held in St. Paul's church, Norwood, at 8 o'clock and thence proceed to the R. C. cemetery, Marmora.

Miss Ella Johnston left last week for Peterborough, where she has received a good position in one of the confectionery stores in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs J. McNichol visited their daughter, Mrs. J. Grady, in Peterborough, last week.

Miss John has returned to her home in Toronto after spending several weeks visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Dutfield.

Mr. Leo McNichol has gone to Toronto, where he has secured a good position.

Mrs I. Puffer went to Nicholls Hospital on Monday where she will undergo a operation on Thursday next.

Miss Rose Davidson, of Havelock, visited her friend, Miss Lodemia Johnston, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Laing visited friends in Hastings on Tuesday.

Miss Albert Armstrong of Havelock was in town on Sunday.

The Missionary Committee of the Epworth League had charge of the meeting on Monday night. The evening was spent in guessing the names of missionaries whose photographs were distributed around the audience. Miss May Loughbridge and Mr. Harland Keefer gave an instrumental duet, and Miss Edna Adams gave a piano solo. Both selections were enjoyed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Beavis of Hastings, visited Mr. and Mrs. E. Laing on Sunday last.

TWO YOUTHS WERE ALLOWED TO GO

They Were Accused of Taking Post Cards From Bookstore—Given Some Good Advice by Magistrate

The two youths who were accused of stealing a quantity of cards from a local bookstore, were discharged by Magistrate Dumble at the four o'clock session of the police court yesterday. Mr. Goodwill appeared for the prisoners on behalf of the Children's Aid Society.

The proprietor of the store gave evidence to the effect that he caught one of the boys with a number of the cards that had been put in among some papers which the accused was carrying. A number of small thefts had occurred in his store lately, and he was anxious to have the practice stopped.

Both prisoners stoutly denied having taken the cards, and could not account for them being in the papers. The magistrate gave the boys some good advice, which they promised to follow, and then allowed them to go.

TELLS US HOW TO MAKE MIXTURE

Splendid Remedy for Stomach and Kidneys and Rheumatism

"The people here do not drink enough water to keep healthy," exclaimed a well-known authority. "The numerous cases of kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism are mainly due to the fact that the drinking of water, nature's greatest medicine, has been neglected.

Stop loading your system with medicines and cure-alls; but get on the water wagon. If you are really sick, why, of course, take the proper medicines—plain common vegetable treatment, which will not shatter the nerves or ruin the stomach."

To cure Rheumatism you must make the kidneys do their work; they are the filters of the blood. They must be made to strain out the blood the waste matter and acids that cause rheumatism; the urine must be neutralized so it will no longer be a source of irritation to the bladder, and most of all, you must keep these acids from forming in the stomach. This is the cause of stomach trouble and poor digestion. For these conditions you can do no better than take the following prescription: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime, but don't forget the water. Drink plenty and often.

This valuable information and simple prescription should be posted posted up in each household and used at the first sign of an attack of rheumatism, backache or urinary troubles, no matter how slight.

REV. MR. KEITH'S ABLE LECTURE

A good number gathered in the school room of George street Methodist church last evening to listen to Rev Mr. Keith's very interesting illustrated lecture on India. The views were both interesting and instructive, showing the country, the people, their mode of working and gaining a livelihood, all of which was very primitive.

Mr Keith also showed some views of the people before and after they had come in contact with the gospel and the contrast was a striking one. Other phases of Indian life were shown, all of which were interesting and delightful to the audience.

During an intermission candy was sold by members of the Mission Band. Before closing a vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Keith, which was readily responded to by an appeal to the people for greater zeal in the great missionary enterprise. The enjoyable evening was closed by singing the National Anthem.

A PIONEER OF OTONABEE DEAD

Special to the Review.

Keene, March 23.—The death occurred Sunday morning at the age of seventy-four, of an old and highly respected resident of Otonabee in the person of Miss Agnes Johnstone. The deceased was a native of Scotland, but emigrated with her parents to Canada at an early age, living for some time near Grafton, Ont., and moving to this township about forty-three years ago. She had been ill for some time, and her death was not unexpected. She is survived by two brothers, Adam, of Lang, and John, of Grafton. Her sister, Alice, predeceased her by about three months. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon. Rev. D. D. McDonald, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Keene, of which the deceased was a member, conducted the services, and the interment took place at Fife's cemetery.

HAMILTON AND BRANTFORD'S STAND IN SEMI PRO. LEAGUE

Brantford, March 23.—At a meeting of the Brantford and Hamilton representatives here last night, organization of an Inter-City Baseball League was discussed. While the gathering was of a preliminary nature, good progress was made. It was decided that the best arrangement would be a four-team league with two teams representing each city, and a game in each city every Saturday.

The only alternative proposition was that a six-team league be formed with two Toronto teams, representing Scarboro Park, whose managers are anxious to get into baseball in order to attract crowds to the park, behind which is the Toronto Street Railway. Two crack Toronto teams were assured in the event of the organization of such a league.

Both Hamilton and Brantford however, are considerably removed from Toronto for Saturday afternoon games, and as local teams would lose all day in travelling, this proposition was not adopted.

A resolution was passed declaring in favor of the Hamilton-Brantford league, and local delegates were named to take up the question with Hamilton representatives. Local games will be played at Mohawk Park, on the line of the Bancroft and Hamilton Radial. The Street Railway will also build a new loop to the park, Hamilton games will be at Britannia Park, so that local sports may attend, and get back the same afternoon by radial.

It is likely the league rules will be drafted at the next conference. Each team will have charge of its home gates in all probability. In arranging a schedule it is proposed to have it drawn up in two series, the winner of the first to play off with the winner of the second.

Provision will be made for exhibition games with Niagara Falls, Buffalo, and other city amateurs. Another meeting will be held at Hamilton, probably Friday night. Two good local teams will be secured without difficulty, drawn largely from four teams in the city league of last year, which is solidly behind the proposed new organization.

TENNIS CLUB FOR Y.M.C.A.

Organized at Meeting Last Night —The Officers Elected

At a meeting held last night in the Y.M.C.A. parlor a tennis club was organized with the following officers:—

President—Dr. A. W. McPherson.
Vice-President—C. E. Sisson.
Sec.-Treasurer—H. B. Collier.
Executive Committee—The officers F. Cressman C. Cossey and W. D. Campbell.

A meeting of the Executive Committee is called for Monday March 29th, at 7.30 p.m.

THE BELMONT TOURNAMENT

Second games in 1st round Belmonts Club pool tournament will be played to-night. Four games will be run off, and the play starts at 8 o'clock. The following members will play to-night:

T. Carson vs. R. C. Waram.
R. Hunter vs. B. Fisher.
H. W. Clark vs. J. E. Pollard.
M. Rosenburg vs. O. Milburn.

BASEBALL

R. J. (Bob) Menzies, says we will have good baseball in Lindsay this year. R. J. has followed the game in Lindsay for so long and has ekpt his hand on the pulse of the public taste in various brands of baseball that he should, and does, know a lot about the inclinations of Lindsay fans. "Look here," said Mr Menzies in a reminiscent mood last night, "this town used to be the best baseball town in the Midland league. Why, we took in twice as much money at the games as any other town in the league." When asked what he thought gue." When asked what he thought would be best for the fostering of the late Father Chadwick's game in Lindsay he said he thought it would be advisable to enter a team in some sort of an amateur league. —Lindsay Warder.

BASKETBALL

At the Y.M.C.A. to-night in the Spring League the Coronas will play the Mariners and the Business College will meet the Eurekas.

BOWLING

ALLEYS FOR LINDSAY

A bowling alley, it is reported will be started in Lindsay in the near future in Lang and Maher's old stand—Lindsay Warder.

The Grits beat the Tories last night at the PBC. alleys in a game for an oyster supper which was held at Long and Hooper's palm parlors at the conclusion of the game. The contest was a great one from start to finish, the Grits only winning out by 31 pins after a great struggle. The scoring was excellent and both teams showed good form.

The Conservative ten pin men are confident that they can put it over their opponents and have challenged them to another match;

The scores were;

GRITS—
Sutherland	149	171	225—545
Ferguson	176	127	186—489
Glover	125	174	156—445

TORIES WANT ANOTHER GAME

The Tories hereby challenge the Grits to a return bowling game in the Peterborough Bowling club alleys to take place next Tuesday night. Conditions to be the same. There was no "split" in the Tory party as rumored. The Grits have nothing to "blow" about. Cairn's horse shoe, stolen from the Tories, was responsible. They gave the Tories the "double xx" in the last half of the last game, but the Tories will not "spare" them the next game. The Tories will get they "alley" all right.

WILL PLAY IN BELLEVILLE

Local Y.M.C.A. Basketball Team and Kingston Five

The Y.M.C.A. basketball team will play the Peterborough team in the near future. The game will be played at Belleville. Arrangements are being made for the use of the Armories at that place. The senior team will have a practice to-night. The local team are in excellent condition, and as the Peterborough boys are said to be fast players an interesting game is expected.—Kingston Standard.

CHURCH LEAGUE CHAMPIONS TO BE BANQUETTED

A meeting of the church hockey league was held last night at the YMCA. and representatives were present from the different clubs concerned, It was decided to banquet the champions of the senior league and also of the junior church league. The event will take place on Friday evening, April 2nd, at Jacobi's restaurant. Mr. Burnham, the donor of the cup to this league, has promised to attend and will present the same to the champion St. Andrew's team. A committee has been selected to make the necessary arrangements and the banquet should be a very successful affair.

WRESTLING

Chicago, March 23— The first exhi-sensation. McIntosh served as an-bition of the moving pictures of the Chicagoans yesterday and created a Burns-Johnson fight was given to nouncer. The figures are more than life-size and are clear in every detail. Johnson wears an expansive smile through most of the bout.

Well known sporting men and referees of the city attended the first exhibition and it was the universal opinion that Burns has not received full justice in descriptions of the match, due to the disparity in size. Johnson towers more than a head above him and Burns was unable to land the right and left uppercuts and hooks which seem to be his most deadly blows. Johnson propped him off at will.

The fashion in which Burns kept up his share of the boxing excited admiration among the spectators, and the applause which some rounds evoked was practically all for him. By the time he was knocked down in the fourteenth Tommy's face was plastered with blood and Johnson's back can be seen glistening in the sunshine, due to the perspiration which poured from him.

Even when Burns seems to be helpless on the floor in the 14th, he is seen to arise to his feet and struggle to renew the bout just as the police jump on the edge of the ring and order the bout stopped.

Fred Beell will wrestle Yussif Mahmout at Sohmer Park next Friday night. The pair have met before, and the Turk won in straight falls.

CONKLE AND BARTLE

Hamilton, March 24.—The one great topic in sporting circles in this city is the wrestling match here on Saturday night between Charlie Conkle and Al Ackerman for the welterweight championship. Both men have claimed the title for some time and different promoters have been trying to bring the two together for two years, but not until a Dunkirk man got on the job last week was any person successful. After the agreement to wrestle was drawn up it was decided to have the match here, as it will be a bigger drawing card on account of this being Conkle's home city. The match will take place at the Armory rink, and judging by the interest taken the hall will be filled to the roof.

JACK JOHNSON

Chicago, March 23— One world's champion served as referee for another at the Empire Theatre, Saturday when Jack Johnson presided over the bout in which Frank Gotch threw both Jack Leon and Paul Martinson. Gotch threw Leon with a crotch hold and half Nelson in 2.30, and Martinson with a hammerlock and half-Nelson in 10 flat.

LINDSAY MAY HAVE A BOWLING GREEN

Lindsay, March 23—Will the favorite out door pastime of bowling on the green be introduced in Lindsay this year? It certainly will if the local lovers of the game can arouse sufficient enthusiasm among a number of teh citizens, so that the project can be taken hold of and the organization of a club effected.

Lindsay has a continental reputation as a curling centre, but strange to say it has no lawn bowling club, when nearly every town of importance in the country has a flourishing organization. Lindsay certainly should get into the game. It is a grand sport for a summer's afternoon and evening and once the game is started here it will flourish like a green bay tree.

There are a number of bowling enthusiasts in town anxious to see a club organized.

SHORT RUNAWAY THIS MORNING

This morning a horse attached to one of Cressman's delivery rigs, which was standing outside the store, became frightened and ran for a short distance, colliding with and overturning a buggy that was in its path, and incidentally providing some excitement for those who were on the street. The horse attached to the buggy became badly scared, but was caught before it could break away. The delivery horse was also captured before it had gone very far, and no damage resulted to either of the outfits.

The new Sunday school building of Knox church, Galt, was opened yesterday.

WILL NOT PAY BACK WHAT HE BORROWED

Local Chinaman is in Trouble With two of His Fellow Countrymen -- Had Been Gambling

There is trouble in a certain section of the local Chinese colony. It appears that some time ago a number of the Celestial citizens were having a quiet game of "tan-tan" and one of the players was having a poor streak of luck. In order to keep in the game he borrowed some forty dollars from one of his fellow-countrymen and about seventy greenbacks from another. Now he refuses to pay back the money, and the two lenders have invoked the aid of a lawyer to get back their coin. A law suit will likely be the result.

FAMOUS SOPRANO WILL SING HERE

Mme L. Bertossi With the Royal Italian Grand Opera Company

Among the sopranos who will appear with the Royal Italian Grand Opera Company at the Grand on Friday, March 26th, is Mme. L. Bertossi, born in Milan, Italy. She is the songbird of international fame and a woman of magnificent vocal power, she has the dramatic instinct to become, if indeed she is not already, one of the great figures on the operatic stage. When at her best she sweeps everything before her, as in "Leonara." Mme. Bertossi came to this country with an European reputation. She made her debut in Liege, Belgium, in the role of Sifuard. She was the first Italian artist to sing the role of Marguerite in Biote's "Mephistopheles." She created the part of Anita in "La Navarisse" for which she received the personal commendation of Massenet. She also created the role of Fedora in France. Seats are on sale now.

PIANO RECITAL BY MISS McCAW

A piano recital will be given by Miss Mabel McCaw at the Conservatory Music Hall on Friday evening, April 2nd. Miss McCaw will be assisted by Miss Carrie Reesor and Miss Julia Choate.

A brilliant and satisfactory programme may be expected.

ITALIANS ARE COMING BACK

Peterborough Italians who went home to their native land last fall to spend the winter, are returning to Canada again. Seven of them arrived in Peterborough last week and more are coming during the next few weeks.

CHARGE AGAINST HOTELKEEPER NOT PROVEN

A local hotel keeper was up before the Magistrate this morning charged with supplying liquor to a man who was on the black list. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared in the interests of the accused and pleaded not guilty to the charge. After hearing the evidence of both sides the case was dismissed. Inspector Stewart was the first witness called and he stated that he had served notices on both the man to be black listed and the hotelkeeper.

P. C. Newhall was next called and said that he saw the black listed man enter the hotel last Saturday and he was intoxicated. He telephoned to the police station to have the man arrested and this was done.

A number of witnesses were called for the defence and after summing up the Magistrate dismissed the case.

JUMPED INTO RIVER WITH HER CHILDREN

Special to The Review.

Weatogue, Conn. March 24—Clasping her baby boy and girl, aged three years and five years respectively, close to her breast, Mrs. Amos Miller jumped into the Farmington river today and drowned them and herself. No cause is known for the tragedy as she had lived apparently happy with her husband.

BLACK LIST MAN IN POLICE COURT

At the police court this morning, Thomas Quinlan was charged with being drunk after he had been put on the black list. He pleaded not guilty. After hearing the evidence a fine of $10 to be paid at once or twenty days in jail was imposed on the prisoner. He was not able to pay the amount and will have to serve the time.

Relief Officer Miller testified to having seen the prisoner last Saturday about 4.30 and he was under the influence of liquor. The accused asked for wood and used insulting language.

Inspector Stewart gave evidence to the effect that he had served the accused with the notice, and had posted the hotels.

Wm Robertson said he met the prisoner about two o'clock Saturday and he did not appear intoxicated.

The defendant explained to the court that he was not drunk on Saturday nor did he get any liquor from any of the hotels. He had taken a large dose of medicine and it might have been composed of whisky.

The Magistrate thought the evidence against the defendant was such that he must find him guilty, and imposed the above fine.

MANY CANDIDATES TO BE INITIATED

A special meeting of Camp Clan Alpine, Sons of Scotland, was to have been held tomorrow night but it has been changed to Monday night. On that evening twelve candidates will be initiated and it is expected that there will be a large attendance of the members. Mr. Robert Grieve, the organizer, has been meeting with much success in his work here.

"LITTLEST GIRL" TO BE GIVEN

Next Monday night at the Grand Opera House "The Triumph of Truth" will be produced and in addition to that sterling four act drama, Mr Charles Barber and Irving Beers will give the beautiful one act play "The Littlest Girl" with little Miss Garden in the title role. This is an entertainment which will be well worth patronizing.

Rehearsals are being held every day for "The Triumph of Truth" in the Catholic Foresters hall.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The YWCA. gymnasium exhibition and concert will be held on Tuesday evening next at the Collegiate Hall. A long and varied programme of beautiful fancy and artistic drills, marches and exercises has been prepared. Highland lassies in characteristic movements. The Teddy Bears and Rubber Dolls will be among the special attractions.

This is the only opportunity given the public during the year to see just what is included in the gymnasium course given during the season at the YWCA.

It promises to be an evening of great interest and enjoyment. You cannot afford to miss it.

All members of Mr A Mowat's Literary class, also the members of Dr. Greer's class are cordially invited to spend tonight with us. A very pleasant social evening is anticipated

The life story of David, the Shepherd King, will be studied on Friday evening at eight o'clock. This hour is for all whether members of the Association or not.

Keep in mind the stereoptican lecture to be given on Friday evening, April 2nd, by Prof A H Young, of Toronto. Further information will be given in a day or so.

Trade disputes in February lost 4,395 work days.

OBITUARY

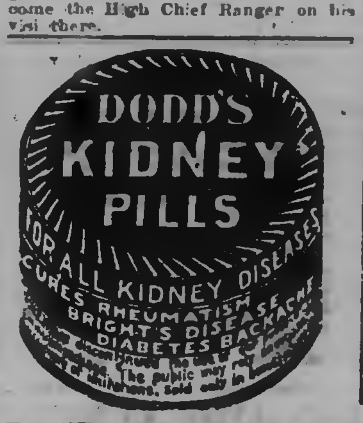
MRS. JOHN ROBSON

The death occurred yesterday of Jane Grant, relict of the late John Robson. The deceased, who was 71 years of age had been sick for a considerable time and death came peacefully yesterday. Two sons and four daughters are left to mourn her loss. The sons are, William of North Monaghan, and John of town, and the daughters are Misses Bella, Emma, Annie and Lily of this city.

The funeral will take place from her late residence, 176 Dublin street, on Friday afternoon at two o'clock and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery for interment.

MEETING OF COURT STANLEY

There was a very large attendance of members at the regular meeting of Court Stanley, A.O.F., in S.O.E. Hall last evening. Chief Ranger R. J. Goodenough presided. Considerable business was transacted and arrangements made for the visit of the High Chief Ranger Bro. W. Richards of London, who is coming on Thursday the 25th. The meeting will be held in the Knights of Pythias Hall, Simcoe street, and he will address the members and companions to which all visiting brethren are invited. At the conclusion of the business a very pleasant presentation was made to Bro. H. Hanwell P.C.R., of a P. C.R's. jewel, to which the brother feelingly replied thanking the officers for their kindness received during his term of office. Bro. Huycke, court pianist, favored the gathering with music and several songs; the court choir also sang some Forester songs under the leadership of Bro. Record, an old-timer of Court Stanley. The court wishes for a good attendance of members to welcome the High Chief Ranger on his visit there.



Rev. T. D. Wallace, of Woodstock, preached at Hamilton yesterday to the I.P.B.S. at St. Thomas church.

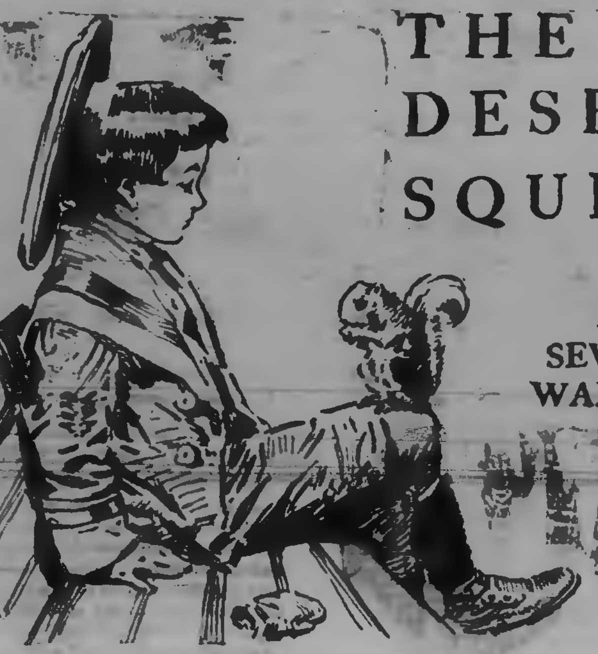
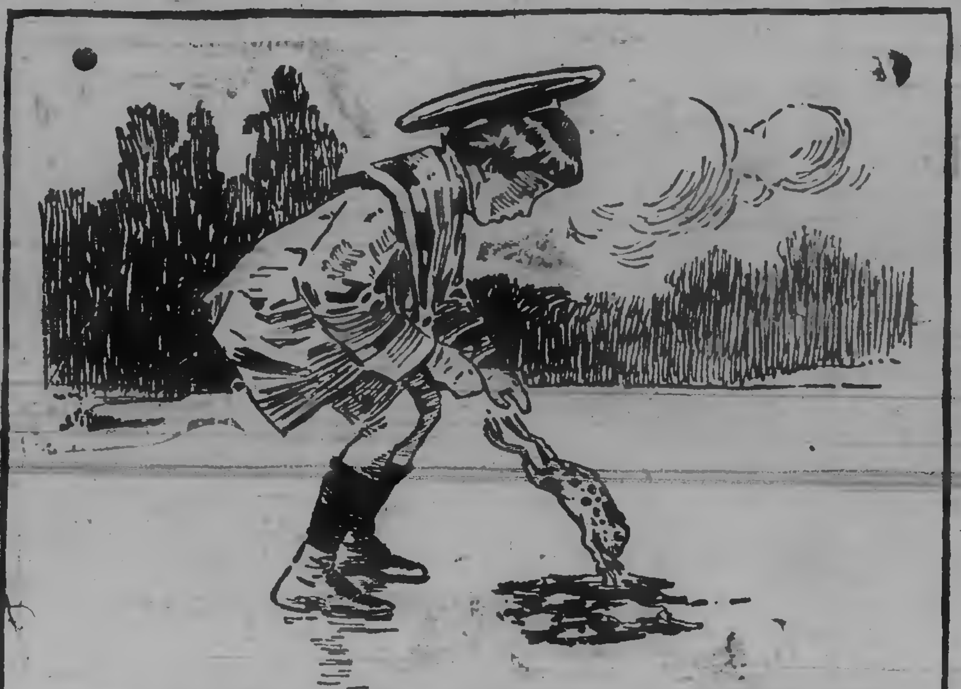
THE DESERTED SQUIRREL

BY SEWARD WALLACE





"Before Murty could catch him the frog was in the water"

MURTY DIMMOCK was tired of coasting, and he walked over by the Park fence, with mischief twinkling in his blue eyes. For some time he sat on the stone wall, watching a squirrel that was trying to dig through the frozen crust of snow. Presently the squirrel sat up and seemed to observe him out of her large black almond shaped eyes.

"It's a wonder," said the squirrel; "you will sit there on the wall and watch me trying to dig through the hard snow and not offer me any aid.

"You always were a lazy boy," the squirrel added, jerking her tail angrily, "and that's a nut for you."

Murty leaped down into the Park in a temper.

"I'll pull your scrawny tail out if you scold at me and call me lazy!" he cried hotly. And the squirrel sprang hastily upon a tree trunk and clung with outspread paws. Then she retorted over her shoulder at Murty, "Well, I never! You are quick tempered with a lady, aren't you?" and whisked up into her nest in the tree top.

"I-it's a s-sad c-case, I th-think," said a hoarse voice at Murty's feet; "but you needn't cry."

He glanced down and saw a large green bullfrog seated on the snow. He was shivering plainly. "But they all d-do over h-her," went on the frog. "I'm so cold I c-couldn't swim o-over a sp-spring," he shivered. Murty reached down and gently took the frog up in his warm mits. "That's fine; warm as a mud bath in August," said he gratefully; "if you'll not squeeze too hard."

Murty promised.

"Yes, they all cry about her—or, rather, it's about him they weep; it's a sad case."

"Why are you out here in the snow?" asked Murty. "I thought frogs stayed in their houses all winter."

"It's my own fault. You see, I awoke suddenly yesterday and found the air so warm, the snow all gone, and that silly squirrel capering about so, I guessed spring was here. I always have jumped at things, and so I came out to have a hop about, and then the ice formed, and before night, when I was returning, this horrid snow fell. And now I am shut out of the pond. I tried for a long time to swim back, but the ice is too thick. I wonder"—— (The frog winked his eyes gravely.)

"Well, what do you wonder at?" laughed Murty, scratching the frog's back. It closed its eyes sleepily.

"I was wondering if you would do me a great kindness?"

"I tell you what," broke in the squirrel, from her tree, "you'd best let that ugly green fellow alone—he's a crank."

"Crank your self, Mrs. All Ears," croaked the frog hoarsely. "Better mind your own affairs—they are in a pretty mess already."

Murty, to end the quarrel, walked toward the Park lake, whose cold, icy glitter showed through pine trees laden with caps of snow.

"I was going to ask, when she rudely broke in, if you would break the ice for me. If you will I'll tell you about her sad case. Is it a bargain? These warm, mossy paws of yours are very nice, but I am positively drying up for want of a bath," said the frog.

"Yes, I should like to hear about that poor squirrel, she seems so cross," and Murty walked cautiously out on the ice to a thin place. He stamped his heel, and the black water rose bubbling through the hole, spreading out over the surface.

"Well, by the Seven Sleepers!" exclaimed the frog, "you are strong. I tried a number of times there, but it wouldn't break. Winter's a dreadful bad time. It ought always to be summer. Here's wishing you many happy swims." Before Murty could catch him the frog was in the water. He poked his nose out and said:—"I'll tell you about that squirrel when I come up next spring." Then he disappeared.

"Well, the ungrateful old frog! Wait till I catch him again, though!"

The squirrel, who had followed them, chattered from a stump near by:—"I'm thinking better of you, Murty; it was kind of you to help that cranky old frog; but you might have helped me, too. I wouldn't have fooled you so."

"He promised to tell me about you," said Murty, sitting down on a snowbank. "He said yours was a sad case."

"I'll tell you myself it is. I'm a poor, deserted, forlorn squirrel. It was just because of a slight nibble I gave a little girl's ear last summer—in October."

"Won't you come and sit on my knee? I won't hurt you, Mrs. All Ears, if that's your name," coaxed Murty.

"It's no such thing; he called me that for spite," chattered the squirrel, climbing cautiously on Murty's knee. "Now you be good. My name among the children is Madame Fond o' Fun—but, dear me, I am not so playful since he left me. Oh, dear, no!" She cautiously put a wet paw into Murty's coat pocket and found a piece of cracker there.

"You see," she said, with her mouth full, "my mate, who was a real black squirrel named 'Buffy,' was such a dreadful fighter. Why, that fellow just lived by fighting. He'd never hunt nuts or beg, but just steal and drive the other squirrels about when they were given peanuts by the children. But he had one friend, a little girl, who used to let him sit on her shoulder and stuff himself. I never could teach him manners. But there—I miss him now, bad manners and all." She reached down into another pocket and pulled out a bit of chewing gum. Murty ventured, while she was occupied trying to bite the hard substance, to stroke her fur. The pretty squirrel whisked down on the snow and then returned. "Don't do that; it makes me nervous. Well, I was saying—one day there came to our tree a squirrel I never saw before. He was a thief, too, but you never saw such a curious, ugly creature. His ears were torn, he had no tail—it had been bitten off, I guess—and down his back were three stripes of dead leaf color. With cool effrontery he began robbing my nest."

"Queer, he must have escaped from the menagerie," laughed Murty.

"Well, I was that scared—you haven't any nuts about you?—I just scampered off for Buffy. He came back and began scolding that big thief. I saw there would be a fight, and it looked as if my mate had met his match, too. So an idea came to me—perhaps two squirrels could fight better than one. I hurried off again to fetch my brothers, who lived all together in a big chestnut bole. There were two or three—I never knew just how many—at home; and they all came over in the nick of time. Buffy had chased the ragged robber down into a hazel thicket, and they were hard at it when we got there. My! it was a dreadful fight. Those squirrels fought all over the grass, and a crowd of children came to watch. At last they killed the thief, but Buffy was torn some, I tell you."

"But what has that to do with your being deserted?" asked Murty.

"Oh, that was the trouble. You know, Buffy was so angry because I interfered and brought my brothers. He wanted to fight it out all alone. He scolded me all over our tree. I guess I was cross, too. But it would have been all right, only that horrid little girl friend of his pretended he had won, and petted him until I was real jealous—yes, I know it was wrong, but I was. So next time she was feeding him in the summer house I waited until he jumped down from her shoulder and took his place quick. Then I bit her ear good."

"Why, you naughty, sneaky squirrel!" cried Murty. "Did she scream?"

"It was mean of me," said the squirrel, her mouth full of Murty's cracker, "but I have paid for it; she chattered on awfully, and my mate just did his best to make up with her, because, of course, she thought it was he who bit her."

"I remember a friend of mine, a little girl who had her left ear bitten by a squirrel last October," said Murty, stroking the pretty, companionable Fond o' Fun.

"Well, Buffy left me then and I never saw him again. It was her ear, though which ear I disremember. I don't know one paw from another. I have been alone ever since, because of that horrid old frog, who told all the other animals that I was a chatterbox, and named me Mrs. All Ears."

"Well, it served you right, for if you had just brought Buffy nice nuts and been kind to him, he would soon have forgotten about it."

"Yes, that's what the Seven Sleepers all say; but I must find that nut now. I wonder"——

"You aniamls are always wondering," laughed Murty, as he rose to go home—it was nearly lunch time—and pushed the squirrel off of his knee. "What is it now?"

"Perhaps you could poke a hole in the snow for me, like you did in the ice. There's a delicious nut I buried there last fall."

Murty went over to the place and poked his toe into the snow. Then Fond o' Fun quickly found a large almond under the frosted leaves.

"Thank you, Murty. Next time you come over call me, will you?"

"Yes, if you'll tell me who the Seven Sleepers are whom both you and that frog mentioned," called Murty from the wall.

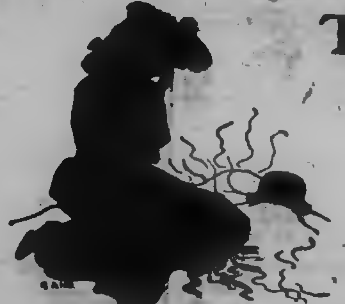
"It was a wonder," chuckled the boy, and as he went home he planned how he would play a trick or two on that old bullfrog in the spring.

THE SNOWMAN—A SHADOW TRAGEDY

By Arthur Guiterman—Silhouettes by Evelyn G. Flynn



(For the production of a shadow play well stretched sheets should be hung so as to form the screen on which the shadows are to be thrown, and a strong light, like that of a lamp, should be placed from six to ten feet behind it. Little rehearsing is necessary. The actors should keep as close as possible to the screen, so that their shadows shall be sharply defined. Gestures should be free, exaggerated and grotesque, and a profile view should be generally maintained. Mary and Jennie build the Snowman of pillow shams stuffed to the proper size. The boy who takes the part of the Snowman in the action may creep behind the screen formed by these pillow shams, rise in their shadow—which may readily be increased by one or both of the girls stepping in front of the pile of "snow" as if in the act of modelling the image—remove the shams in front of him, unseen, and, when the hat is placed on his head and the girls step to either side to admire their work, he will appear as the finished Snowman. The Snowman can be made to melt most pathetically if the boy will slowly collapse to the ground and lie with his feet to the light, so that only the shadow of his hat will be in evidence. A handful apiece of scraps of cloth, or peas or beans, will enable the girls to shed realistic shadow tears over the melted Snowman. Snowballs for pelting purposes may be made of paper, and a snowstorm may be produced by means of paper scraps. The reader, who should preferably be visible to the audience, will, of course, time the delivery of the lines to suit the action.)

The time is winter; the scene is anywhere out of doors; the shadows are Mary, Jennie and the Snowman, and the costumes are whatever you please:

Jennie and Mary, their cheeks aglow,
Ran through the whirl of the falling snow,
Watching the "miller and baker" fight,
Plunging along through the drifted white,
Sliding and coasting the billowed hill,
Pelting each other with right good will—
Merry the sport, in a world of peace,
When "the old woman is plucking geese!"

"Oh!" panted Mary, "I'm fairly done!
Let's build a snowman! It's lots of fun.
Here's an old hat if he wants to bow.

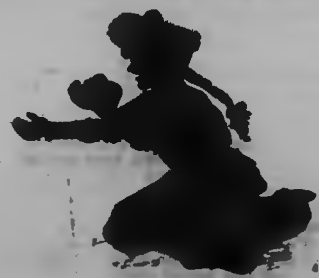
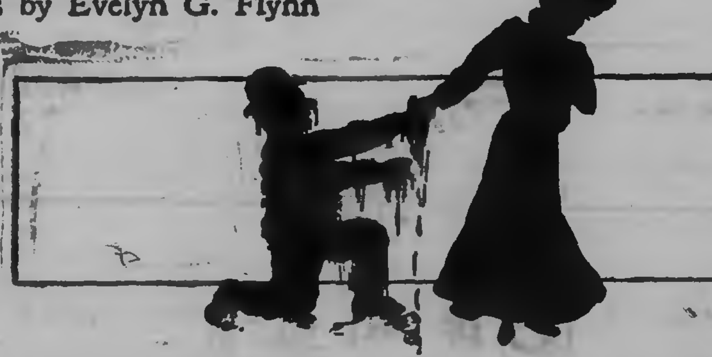
Busy as beavers, they packed and rolled
Snowballs as big as their arms could hold—
Two for the body, and Jennie's sled
Brought up another to make the head.
Son of the snowdrift, he grew apace;
Deftly they molded his jolly face.
Gave him a visage of matchless charm
Grecian of feature; each sturdy arm
Firmly they set in the proper spot;
(Short was his neck, but it mattered not);
Buttons and pockets were all purveyed;
On went the hat—and the man was made!

Deeply enchanted, they stood apart
Viewing their triumph of frigid art
Speechless, till Mary recalled anew
Some little errand she had to do.
Off to the village in haste she ran,
Leaving her sister to watch the man.





Was it by magic of Wizard Frost?
Flying enchantment by Merlin lost?
Touch of warm fingers, or mystic word,
Nature or witchcraft?—the image stirred!
Up went the arms of the snowy shape;
Deeply he yawned, with a mighty gape.
Tested his neck with a jaunty jerk,
Wriggled each knee-joint to see it work;
Turning to Jennie, he bared his brow,
Lifting his hat in a sweeping bow!

Wouldn't it frighten you more or less
Hearing an image of snow address
Even the kindest of words to you?
Jennie was startled a bit, 'tis true,
But, in a moment, her first alarm
Went to the winds; for a gentle charm
Mellowed the manner of Mr. Snow—
That was his name—and his voice was low,
Pleasant and soft; and his courtly mien
Proved that his breeding was crystalline.

Soon they were chatting at ease together;
Skating and sledding, the change of weather,
All were discussed—when an Alpine glow
Swept o'er the features of Mr. Snow.
Up from his breast came a storm of sighs;
Icicles stood in his tender eyes—
Bright as auroras their glances shone—
Clasping her fingers betwixt his own,
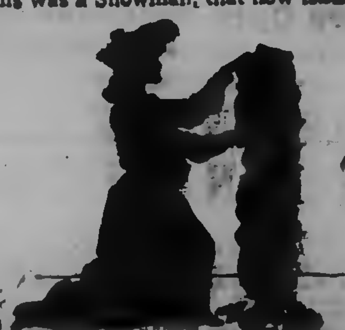
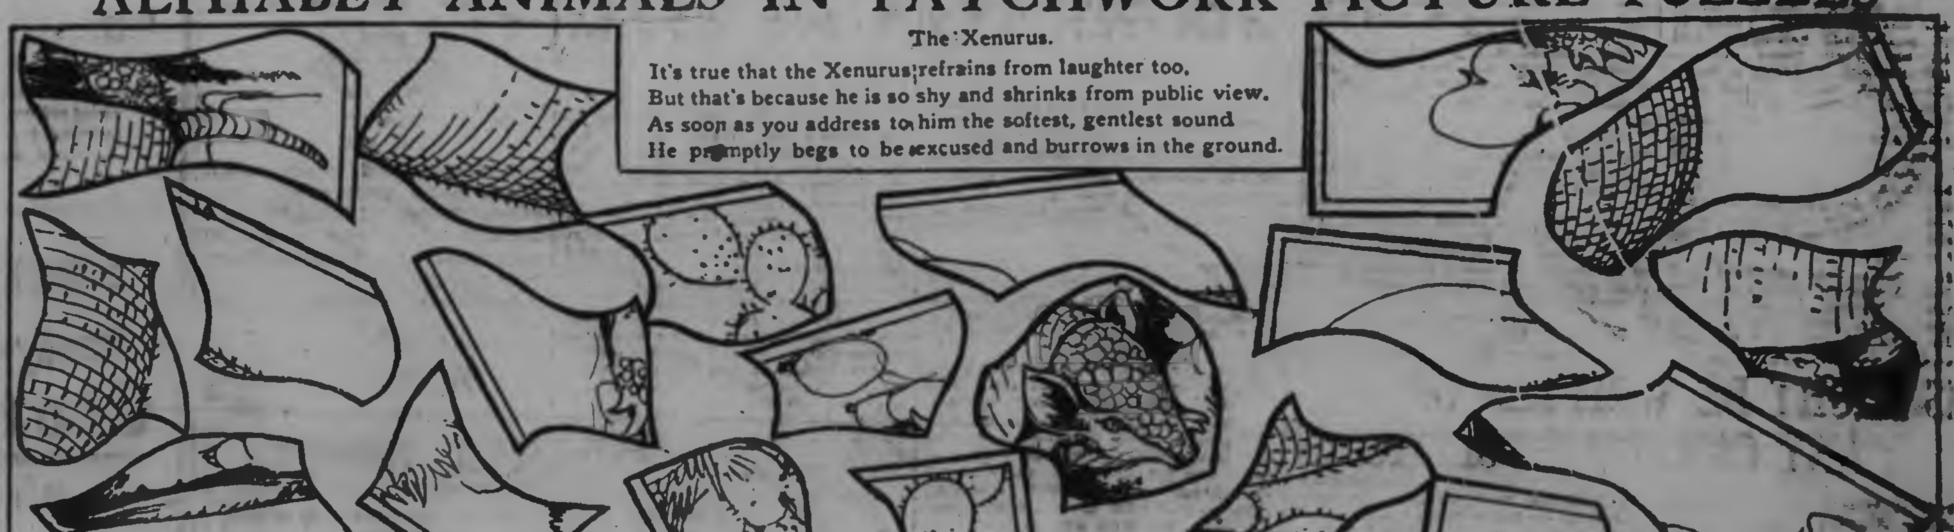
Sweetly the Snowman discoursed of love!

Coyly she turned; but, alas for woe!
Sad was the fate of that Man of Snow!
Deep in his bosom his spotless heart
Burned at the touch of the fatal dart;
E'en as its passionate warmth was felt,
Slowly the Snowman began to melt!
Crumbling and tumbling, alack! he sank,
Merging his form in the shapeless bank.
Over a desolate, dreary flat
Rose like a tombstone his battered hat.
Back hurried Mary. . . Ah, woe is me! . . .

Over the remnant that once was He,
Mary and Jennie, those sisters twain,
Mingled their tears in a gentle rain.
Write we his epitaph: "Mortal, hush!
This was a Snowman, that now is Slush!"



ALPHABET ANIMALS IN PATCHWORK PICTURE PUZZLES



The Xenurus.

It's true that the Xenurus refrains from laughter too,
But that's because he is so shy and shrinks from public view.
As soon as you address to him the softest, gentlest sound
He promptly begs to be excused and burrows in the ground.

To find the animal which is hidden in the patchwork picture puzzle proceed along the same lines as in putting together a jig saw puzzle. The verse at the top of the puzzle tells the story which the picture that is to be made from the pieces illustrates. First cut the entire mosaic and paste it on heavy wrapping paper before cutting out the separate pieces. This is merely to make it easier to handle the pieces. Then cut the separate pieces. The white parts are to be cut away. In cutting out the parts which make up the picture be very careful to cut just within the black lines or the pieces will not fit nicely.

AN AMERICAN WOMAN HITS AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS HARD

"I say unhesitatingly," cried Mrs. Trimble Woolsey, of Kentucky, the other day in New York, to the would-be voters of the William Lloyd Garrison Equal Rights League, "it was the greatest misfortune that ever befell American women that the colonies seceded from British rule. They gained nothing thereby, in any single particular, and in various directions they lost immeasurably.

"I ask you, would colonial women have gone through seven years of hardships, suffering, self-denial and privations, to sever their alliance from a government wherein a member of their sex could attain the pinnacle of all power, if they had known their female descendants would become citizens of a nation wherein even the first lady of the land is a political inferior to the negro coachman who drives the White House carriage? As you are rational beings you will reply with me: 'No! Ten thousand times no!' Then why did they struggle?

"It was because they expected that women would become voters — that each woman within herself would wield a sovereign power. In a monarchy the dividing line is rank, not sex; but a republic is a pure sexocracy."

Mrs. Woolsey had led up to her point by citing the famous women of colonial times — Margaret Brent, cousin of Lord Baltimore; Mrs. Warren, sister of James Otis, in whose house the promoters of the Revolution met; Mrs. Brevard of South Carolina, "the Mrs. Clarence Mackay of her time," and Helen Livingstone, who left the country forever when her state introduced the word 'male' into its constitution.

She referred to a president's inauguration, where all the attendants were male, and contrasted it with the ceremonies of royalty in Great Britain.

"Under the British flag," Mrs. Woolsey continued, "over five million women have as complete municipal suffrage as men; in the United States less than one-quarter of one million women have it. More women are murdered each year in the United States than are murdered in a fifth of a century in Great Britain. In the same proportion wives are deserted by husbands each year in the United States. I say an aristocracy is a safer government for my sex."

THIS MIGHT BE WRITTEN OF ANY CANADIAN POLITICIAN

We cannot pass over the retirement of Mr Roosevelt without adding a few words in review of his remarkable presidency and as a token of the very warm admiration for him as a man.

The same passion for high principled conduct has distinguished his career as chief magistrate of the American people. He has assumed that public life can have as high an ethical standard as private life, and that every failure to keep it up to that standard is an ignoble declension. He has made bitter enemies as well as countless friends. Part of the criticism of his methods may be true. What we do know beyond fear of dispute is that he has shown a consistent, wholesome and absolutely fearless character; that he has done much to purify and elevate his country; and that every one who speaks the English tongue will wish that he may live long to render the world new services.—London Spectator.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

Editor of the Review

Dear Sir—No doubt the ratepayers of this city are proud of the mayor and aldermen who are supposed to do business at the city hall. Every time the mayor is called upon to vote his knees give way and he bows to the powers that be and then says he is sorry. The chairman of the Finance committee was afraid to vote on the market question until forced to and he also turned the city down the same as the mayor and for the same reason. The council authorised the property committee to advertise for tenders for collecting tolls at the market. Six of us responded and mine happened to be the highest. The committee was practically unanimous in giving the contract to the highest bidder, and Mayor Rush and Ald. McIntyre were both present at the meeting and said not a word in protest, but on the contrary the Mayor supported the committee. In council Ald. Phelan on behalf of Mr Ball threw down the gauntlet and the week kneed and child-like city fathers collapsed. Mr Ball remains the salaried market clerk and the council casts aside with scorn nearly $400. A business proposition is beyond the comprehension of the mayor and some of the aldermen and for the sake of keeping in the good graces of Mr. Geo Ball, ex-alderman, ex-health inspector, etc and his friends, they permit themselves and the city to be held up to ridicule. Ald Metheral calls them "school boys." A bunch of school boys have a greater sense of honor and business. With boys it is a square deal, with some of the council it is policy. (?)

Now, Mr Editor, Mayor Rush, Ald Morrow and the rest of those who voted against the property committee have an explanation to make to the public. Why did they stay with Mr Ball? Why is he the only man who can fill that position. Why did the mayor and half the council throw away $400 in cold cash? Are the taxes not high enough now? Does the council not put through enough bad business without deliberately throwing away $400. The ratepayers have a right to an explanation from the mayor and his six colleagues.

Yours truly,

R BRADBURN

MR. D. S. HARVIE WRITES LETTER RE POWER BY-LAW

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I have lived in Peterborough for the last twenty-four years, and having had twenty years experience in erecting and testing hydraulic machinery, in twenty-five different power houses, with heads of water ranging from seven to thirty-five feet, from Quebec to Winnipeg river.

At the present time I am temporarily absent from Peterborough, but my family is still living there, and I have financial interests at stake in the city, therefore I claim the privilege of giving my opinion, with experience combined, on this power question.

I have erected the hydraulic machinery in three of the power houses between Peterborough and Lakefield, and have had charge of improvements, repairs and testing in every power-house on the Otonabee river I am not a civil engineer, but maintain there is not 700 horse power, nor the one-half of that power, as stated by Mayor Rush, available every day in the year over and above the 500 reserved by the water commissioners.

I have been in the Otonabee Co's power house, on several occasions, when the water was low and they could not put up 650 horse-power on the switch board. They have three of the best designed wheels in America, and they are the largest the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Co. ever built. These with about a fourteen foot head, as they have there, with plenty of water in the river, would develop 1468 horse-power on the wheel shaft, or 1101 horse-power on the switch board, and these three wheels will discharge, under full head 68,496 cubic feet of water per minute.

In explanation of the loss of power between the wheel shaft and the switch board, the best results I ever saw obtained from a vertical water wheel (such as would have to be put in on the new waterworks dam) had a loss of 25 per cent., and some of them had as much as 35 per cent. and the conditions must be very favorable to obtain the above results.

COMPARISON OF DAMS.

At No. 3 dam they have the same sized wheels, but four of them, as at No. 5. The head is a little less, but the power developed is about the same, as they have the extra wheel. Now, I have been in this power house when they could not get much over one-half the power they could develop, for the want of water. Both No. 3 and No. 5 dams are Government maintained, and they are as tight as can be made. Now my point is this with the same sized wheels installed in the new power-house, it would give ten feet effective head. It was only nine feet in 1895, when I worked on the installing of the water-works plant, but I see it is now raised to 11 feet. But, however, the effective head will be one foot less than whatever the actual head is, as when a wheel is running, the level of water is taken immediately over and under the same Now it will take three 68 inch wheels, at 10 foot head, to develop 664 horse-power, on the switch board, or a duplicate plant of No. 5 dam.

This new power being on the same river, but a little lower down, you will not get as much water, as part of this water is diverted to the canal at Nassau. If dams No. 3 and No. 5 can only get water enough for less than 2-3 of the power their plants are capable of producing, the same thing will apply to the new dam; so part of the year all the power available on the proposed dam is 442 horse-power put on the switch board. But the water commissioners reserves 500 horse-power, I presume this is on the wheel shaft.

Now, it does not take a very clever man to see where the new power house would land. It would be high and dry for part of the year. A chain is only as strong as its weakest link. Commercially a water power plant is only as valuable as the minimum flow of the river.

COST OF POWER HOUSE WILL BE $30 000.

With regard to the cost of this power house for $15000 complete, without machinery. According to the Mayor's letter in the Review of the 20th inst. we are to have forebays, wheel pits, a tail race and foundation. They have left out the retaining wall that will have to be built on the shore side of this power house, fifty feet on the upper side and 100 feet on the lower side, as the current to and from the wheels will eat the banks away as it is a gravel formation. The Water Commissioners went through this experience three or four years ago when the river started to run around the end of the dam, about the place where the new power house is to be built. A break water wall must be built about 100 feet long between the tail race and the river. The tail race will have to be dredged out because if it is not 6 or 7 feet deep, the tail water will back up on the wheels and reduce the head I will ask any contractor in Peterborough how he would like to take the contract for $15000 to duplicate the Otonabee power house with wheel pits 12 feet below the level of the tail water, and foundation to start on that level, dredge tail race, and build power house and retaining wall, having all foundations complete to erect hydraulic and electric machinery on. I claim it will cost $30 000 to duplicate the Otonabee Power Co's plant, and you cannot buy to-day hydraulic and electric machinery, and transmission line and put it up for $20 000.

THE AVERAGE POWER DEVELOPED WILL BE ABOUT 300 HORSE POWER AT A COST OF $166 PER HORSE POWER.

The most expensive power plant I ever put hydraulic machinery in is at Kenora, on the east bank of the Winnipeg River. To show that engineers' figures are not always reliable, I will state this case for the benefit of the ratepayers of Peterborough. The engineer advised the raising of $200 00 to build a power plant to be erected there in six units at 900 horse power each, three of these units to be installed at first. Through unforseen difficulties and bad management the town submitted the second by-law to raise $100000 more to finish the work and this did not complete it, for they had to raise $75 000 more, all told $375,000, with only one-half of their machinery bought. I was there when the last by-law was submitted to the people and it will cost them nearly $500 000 before they get this power plant complete, but they will have over 5 000 horse power, at a cost of about $100 per horse power.

The town of Orillia had a similar experience. They built three dams at Ragged Rapids, but they have the power, and they are selling power and light cheaper than any town in Ontario to-day.

The Peterborough Hydraulic Power Co. from their engineer's report, built a power house to contain three units. They have two of them in now, and every person in Peterborough is aware that last fall they did not have sufficient water to keep one unit running to its full capacity.

MAINTENANCE EXPENSIVE.

I will now take up the cost of maintaining a vertical wheel setting, as this would be the design, that would have to be put in a new power house if built, as the head is too low for a horizontal wheel design. In a vertical design the power is transmitted through vertical shafts, and heavy gearing to a horizontal design. The wheel shaft is directly connected with the generator. The cost of repairs on a vertical outfit is ten times as much as the other. To my knowledge it cost the Otonabee power company $2400 for repairs in one year. The cost of maintaining and repairing this proposed $50,000 power plant will figure out this way;

Interest at 5 per cent—$2500.
1 head electrician—$1500.
2 power house men each $750 —$1500.
2 line men each $750—$1500.
Depreciation, maintenance, and supplies, five per cent off total cost —$2500.
Cost—$9500.

COST OVER $30 PER HORSE POWER PER ANNUM.

This is a very low estimate or at a cost of over $30 per horse power to keep up this 300 horse power plant running part of the time.

Electors of Peterborough, they do not make this clear to you, when they state that it will only cost $2 per horse power on the wheel shaft. That $2 means the interest on the $15,000, the first investment. You will have to spend $35,000 more afterwards, before you will have a power house and with no permanent supply of water. I would strongly advise the electors of Peterborough to turn this wild cat scheme down. The promoters have not given you the total cost They do not know anything about the design of this power plant, or the number of wheel pits they will have to put down in the rock.

I AM STRONGLY IN FAVOR OF A MUNICIPAL POWER PLANT, — but I would not support or advise any elector to vote for a power plant that did not have at least a 16 foot head, so a horizontal design could be installed.

During the last few years I have given this power question considerably study and I have a number of things along this line I would like to say but my letter is already too long.

I will close by making this proposition to any of the power experts of the city council That I will now enter into an agreement that when the proposed power house is completed, each to deposit $500 with the city treasurer to lie for three years time at the end of that period, if there has been five hundred horse power available every day in each year on the switch board, over and above the five hundred horse power reserved by the water commissioners the other party to get his money back with a reasonable rate of interest the balance of my $500 to be handed over to the Charity Board, and I expect the same treatment if this five hundred horse power cannot be put up every day in the year, for three years. I have no money to give away, but I am sure I would have a good investment.

Yours truly,

D. S. HARVIE.

P.S.—One suggestion to the Water Commissioners. When you are putting in an auxiliary plant to look into the advisability of installing an electric driven pump instead of a steam pump. I know of a town, one half the size of Peterborough, that has the electric pump, and is successfully operated.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for your valuable space,

I remain,

Yours truly,

D. S. HARVIE.

LORD STRATHCONA GIVES TO CANADIAN SCHOOLS

Offers $250,000 for Military Training.

Writes to Sir Frederick Borden Offering $10,000 Per Year.

Ottawa, March 25.—For the encouragement of physical and military training in the public schools of Canada, Lord Strathcona has made the generous donation of $250,000, a sum which will yield $10,000 a year for the patriotic purpose designated by Canada's High Commissioner in London.

The announcement was made in the House yesterday afternoon by Sir Frederick Borden, Minister of Militia, and was received with applause and a resolution of thanks. Moved by the Prime Minister and seconded by R. L. Borden.

Sir Frederick Borden prefaced his announcement by referring to a portion of his recent speech upon the estimates, in which he referred to the importance of training in schools, and to the unanimity with which the idea had been accepted throughout the Dominion. Sir Frederick then read a letter, received Tuesday, from Lord Strathcona, which said in part:

"I write to inform you that I am prepared to place at your disposal, or that of any competent body which you may be in a position to constitute, with the object of encouraging such training, the sum of $10,000 per annum. I would suggest that the fund which this sum will form might be designated as for the encouragement of physical and military training in the public schools, and that it should be administered by a body of trustees appointed for the purpose.

"I think that the central committee might perhaps be composed somewhat as follows: Yourself, as the Minister of Militia for the time being, as president, and the Ministers who deal with education in the various provinces of the Dominion as vice-presidents, but subject to the condition that the province which each one represents has declared its adhesion to the principles agreed upon between the Department of Militia and the Province of Nova Scotia, which was sanctioned and made applicable to the other provinces of the Dominion by order-in-council of Aug. 30, 1908.

"The executive council to be composed of: (a) The members of the militia council; (b) representatives to be named by the Ministers controlling education in the various provinces, two each for the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec and one each for the remaining provinces of the Dominion; (c) the military officers commanding the commands and independent districts of the Dominion.

"While the fund as a whole should be administered and money grants allotted by the executive committee in general proportionately to the school population of the various provinces of the Dominion, it would, I think, be desirable that the administration of the grant within the several provinces should be made by local committees appointed under the authority of the central committee.

"While I attach the highest importance to the advantages of physical training and elementary drill for all children of both sexes, I am particularly anxious that the especial value of military drill, including rifle shooting for boys capable of using rifles, should constantly be borne in mind."

The Minister of Militia then read the following cablegram, which he had just sent to Lord Strathcona in reply:

"Gratefully accept your most generous offer to create a fund for the encouragement of physical and military training in the public schools of Canada. Organization outlined in your letter appears admirably adapted to attain end in view. Am forwarding by mail detailed proposals based thereon for carrying out the scheme. Hope you will consent to its being called 'The Strathcona Trust for the Encouragement of Physical and Military Training in the Public Schools.' His Excellency, the Governor-General, accepts the position of patron and the Premier consents to become vice-patron."

"Lord Strathcona has rendered many services to Canada," said the Premier, "but I believe none of greater importance than the present one." He added a word as to the importance of physical training and expressed the hope that it would become part of the education of all the boys and girls of the country.

"Lord Strathcona's offer," said Mr. Borden, "will be received with feelings of the deepest appreciation, not only by members of this House, regardless of party, but by all patriotic citizens. This action of Lord Strathcona's is entirely in harmony with the many patriotic actions which have distinguished his wonderful career. I am sure that all of us earnestly hope that it may be productive of all the great benefits and advantages to the people of Canada which are so eloquently set forth."

The motion was agreed to amidst cheers from both sides of the House.

TWO BOYS PLACED IN THE SHELTER

Will be Cared For While Their Mother is Ill.

Two little boys were placed in the Children's Shelter to-day. They were from the city, and will be cared for at the shelter for some time, owing to the illness of their mother. This makes fourteen children in the care of Mr. and Mrs. Henry.

A MAGNIFICENT ACHIEVEMENT

London, March 25.—Lieut. Shackelton's achievements and discoveries have brought a chorus of praise and admiration from other explorers, geographers and scientists. Louis Charles Bernacchi, who was with the Discovery Antarctic Expedition in 1901-4, said that the sledge journey of 126 days, under such conditions as were described, was one of the most magnificent feats in the annals of polar exploration.

Mr. Bernacchi is of the opinion that the geographical and other results of the expedition corroborate the belief that the Antarctic region was at some remote period far warmer than it is now and also that the signs of less severe glaciation show that the climate is growing warmer and the ice cap on the Antarctic continent diminishing and receding.

IS ACCEPTED GRATEFULLY

Britain Acknowledges New Zealand's Offer to Provide Mother Country With Warship.

London, March 25.—Great Britain has accepted the offer made by New Zealand to give the Empire free of cost a fully equipped Dreadnought.

Announcing the acceptance of this gift in the House of Commons, Premier Asquith read the telegram sent to New Zealand expressing the Government's "warmest gratitude for this generous and patriotic offer." Continuing, he said:

"So far as the coming official year is concerned the provisions of the naval estimates afford ample security, but in view of the uncertainty existing regarding the character and extent of the demands that may be made on our national resources the following year the offer of New Zealand to defray within that period the cost of providing a first-class battleship of the latest type, and a second vessel of the same type, if subsequent events show it is necessary, is most gratefully accepted."

38TH REGIMENT ENTHUSIASTIC OVER TRIP TO PETERBOROUGH

The Brantford Expositor says:

The officers of the Dufferin Rifles regiment at their meeting last night unanimously decided to make the trip to Peterborough on Victoria Day to participate in a military celebration there at the invitation of the Peterborough regiment. The trip will be a return of the visit made by the latter to Brantford a few years ago. The local regiment will leave here on Saturday night between 9 and 10 o'clock and will return on Monday night. The men will have tourist sleepers and for the officers a Pullman will be arranged. Every convenience will be arranged for the comfort of the travellers and it is expected that the trip will prove a delightful one. The regiment has the money and a good transportation rate on the T. H. & B. and C. P. R. has been secured. The arrival will be made in Peterborough on Sunday morning. The announcement will doubtless be received with considerable enthusiasm around the armories where preparations are already under way to get the regiment in bang-up shape for the outing.

TERRIFIC STORM

Fifteen Persons Dead in Denton County, Texas—500 Houses Destroyed

Special to the Review.

Fort Worth, Texas, March 25.—Fifteen persons are dead as the result of the terrific storm which struck the northwestern corner of Dexton county, Texas, shortly before midnight on Tuesday night. That there were not more fatalities is undoubtedly to many families seeking safety in storm cellars as nearly seventy-five residences were swept away.

Judges Flunked

The management of Kingston rink offered a prize for the prettiest girl at the rink on a specified night. Kingston girls have apparently a generous bunch of vanity, for mostly every maiden in the city—"big, little, short, tall, young, old, ugly and all"—turned out and put the gentlemen who were appointed to act as judges "up a tree," as they say in the vernacular. After long cogitation as to who was the prettiest girl—or the least homely, we don't know which — the judges gave no decision.

All Charlie's Fault

There will be a practice of that farce comedy, "All Charlie's Fault" in St. Peter's Assembly Hall this evening at the usual hour. All the members are requested to be present.

Witches Must Die.

New York, March 25.—A Times' despatch from Havana says: Three reputed witches have been convicted of murdering a white baby in order to procure the blood and heart wherewith to heal the sick. The women have been sentenced to death, and two others, convicted as accomplices, have been sentenced to from 14 to 20 years' imprisonment.

WAS THIS MENTAL TELEPATHY?

Smith's Falls, March 24.—A marked case of mental telepathy occurred in connection with the death of Mrs. Wm. Hogg, of Hall's Mills, Lanark County, which occurred recently. The deceased had a stepdaughter living at Grenfell, Alberta, who shortly before her mother's death dreamed that there was something wrong at home. She immediately wrote to her parents telling them of this and spoke of the anxiety she felt over it. The letter was received the very day her mother's death occurred and it was written the day Mrs. Hogg was taken seriously ill.

HAVE DECIDED TO BUILD NEW CHURCH

Adjourned Annual Meeting of Knox Church Last Night—New Building Will Cost About $24,000—Excavation Will Soon be Commenced.

The new church to be erected by Knox Presbyterians will be a little south or at the rear of the present church. This was decided upon at the adjourned annual meeting of the congregation of Knox church last night. A representative gathering was present although it would have been much larger had the night been at all favorable. Two sites were considered.

The Board of Managers now have the matter in hand with instructions to go ahead with the building as soon as possible. The congregation was shown sketches of the proposed new church as prepared by Mr. Simpson of Toronto, architect, and he will get the plans and specifications completed at once. The edifice will be considerably larger than the present building and will have a seating capacity with the gallery of about 800. It will be of brick with stone front and will cost somewhere in the neighborhood of $24,000. Just as soon as the frost is out of the ground the excavation work will be started.

The present and the new building will be in conjunction and the one now used for the church will be used as a Sunday school.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS

Suicide Ends Career.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 25.—In his room in the Hotel Lynch, from which there was no escape, F. H. Richardson of Elmira, N.Y., wanted for the embezzlement of $300,000, slammed the door in the face of the chief of police about one o'clock yesterday and a minute later killed himself with a bullet through his head.

The suicide marked the closing of the career of one of the most influential men in Elmira.

Black Hand Murder In Brooklyn.

New York, March 25.—Another killing which the police declare should be added to the list of crimes of the "Black Hand" Society was committed on the streets of Brooklyn yesterday, when Joseph Genaro, a cigarmaker and supposed to be the father of a vaudeville performer of that name, was killed in a fusilade of bullets that followed a meeting of Genaro and a crowd of several Italians.

New Navy For Spain.

London, March 25.—It is announced that the Spanish Government has arranged with a British syndicate to build a new Spanish navy and an arsenal. The navy, it is said, will consist of three 15,000 tons ironclads, three torpedo destroyers, 24 torpedo boats and four gunboats.

They will be built in Spain, but the armament will be supplied by a British firm.

Go Over Dominion Assets.

Ottawa, March 25.—The public accounts yesterday accepted a proposal by H. B. Ames of Montreal for the appointment of a sub-committee to go over the assets of the Dominion and weed out those which have lost their value, and A. K. Maclean, F. F. Pardee, F. H. Carvell, H. B. Ames and E. N. Rhodes were appointed such a sub-committee.

Automatic 'Phones In Brantford.

Ottawa, March 25.—The Canadian Machine Automatic Telephone plant, at an outlay of $100,000, has been completed, with a capacity of 1,300 persons. The company will commence operations in April and have offered residence 'phones at $15 and business connections for $25 per annum.

Need a Purchasing Agent.

Ottawa, March 25.—At the conclusion of the public account committee yesterday morning, Mr. Carvell gave notice that at a future meeting he will move a resolution affirming the need of a purchasing agent in the Public Works Department.

Caught In California.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 25.—Acting under instructions from the detectives of Winnipeg the local police have arrested Fred A. Lee, the former cashier of the Northern Crown Bank in Saskatoon, Sask., who is said to have left a shortage of $7,000 when he pulled out of his home town a few weeks ago. With him was a woman.

Kaiser's Yacht Sinks Steamer.

Hamburg, March 25.—The Imperial yacht Hohenzollern, bound for the Mediterranean, for the use of Emperor William in the event of his desiring to make a cruise to Corfu, collided Tuesday night in a dense fog near Norderney, in the North Sea, with the Norwegian steamer Por, which sank immediately.

Large Gift For Military Training

LORD STRATHCONA.

LONGUE POINT FOR TERMINAL

Montreal, March 25.—The statement is made that the C.P.R. will locate their steamship terminal at Longue Point, and it is stated that the move is the result of the coming competition of the White Star line in the port of Montreal. The White Star "Laurentic" and "Megantic" to run between Montreal and Liverpool this season, are larger than the Empresses of the C.P.R., and draw more water.

These vessels will be but the nucleus of a fleet which will work in connection with the Grand Trunk and the Grand Trunk Pacific, and it stands to reason that if a rival company can bring such vessels to Montreal, the C.P.R. will have to bring the Empress boats up, instead of stopping them at Quebec.

SHOULD ASSUME SHARE OF COST SAYS MR. FOSTER

Ottawa, March 25.—The Opposition made a strategic movement yesterday afternoon.

It is broadly hinted that the Government is seriously considering the advisability of building a battleship of the Dreadnought type for the service of the Empire. Mr. Foster, who some time ago gave notice of a resolution favoring a contribution to the general defence, yesterday gave notice that on Monday next he will move:

"That in the opinion of this House, in view of her great and varied resources, of her geographical position and national environments and of that spirit of self-help and self-respect which alone befits a strong and growing people, Canada should no longer delay in assuming her proper share of the responsibility and financial burden incident to the suitable protection of her exposed coast line and great seaports."

Mr. Foster asked the Prime Minister to make his resolution the first order on Monday, which was granted. [illegible] asked that the Government take over his daylight saving bill or appoint a committee to investigate the question.

Mr. Borden gave notice that on Thursday he will discuss the report of Judge Cassels on the Marine Department, if that would be convenient.

It was not. Sir Wilfrid said he was waiting for certain information, which he did not expect to receive till next week, before announcing the policy of the Government. He suggested a week from Thursday, and Mr. Borden agreed.

The banking and commerce committee again yesterday resumed consideration of the insurance bill. It was suggested that British and foreign companies should be required to add to their expenses in Canada an amount equal to five per cent. of their Canadian premiums, to provide for head office expenses. The companies also asked that industrial assurance be exempted from all restriction for expenses.

KIDNAPPERS IDENTIFIED

Young Whitla Says Suspects Were His Captors--Woman Commits Suicide.

Cleveland, O., March 25.—Willie Whitla yesterday identified the man and woman held on suspicion by the Cleveland police as the persons who kidnapped him from the school at Sharon, Pa., last Thursday, and held him for the $10,000 ransom which was paid by his father, Attorney J. P. Whitla, on Monday.

Willie said the man who gave the name of Jas. H. Boyle was the one who took him from school and carried him through a tortuous route to Cleveland, then to Ashtabula, back to this city, and placed him in the house in the east end where he was held until the money was paid. Willie also declared that the woman was the one who cared for him at the house where he was detained, and who acted the part of a nurse.

Immediately after Willie Whitla had seen the man and woman at the Central police station they were taken to the county court house.

A woman known as Mary Diener, who the police say may have been an associate of the kidnappers, or was implicated in the plot, committed suicide yesterday by drinking morphine. The woman drank the poison while standing in front of a drug store in the east end, not far from the house in which Willie Whitla was detained here. She died in an ambulance while being taken to a hospital.

ENNISMORE YOUNG MAN LOST HIS WAD IN LINDSAY

Ennismore, March 24—Jerry Toomey, a resident of Ennismore township who has been in town for the past few days is mourning for the loss of forty dollars which disappeared from his pockets in a mysterious manner.

He accused a well known local young man of purloining it and this afternoon County Constable Minthorne, who had been told of the theft planted the handcuffs on the accused as he was standing in front of the Moore House and hustled him off to the police station.

The young man protested his innocence and made satisfactory explanations to acting chief of police Thornbury, giving his word of honor that should he be required at any time he would certainly be on hand.

Toomey, it is understood has been in the woods and since his arrival in town has been knocking around with several chums and is not quite sure just how he lost his roll.

RYAN SENTENCED TO BE HANGED

Special to the Review

North Bay, March 25—Judge Latchford this morning sentenced Maurice Ryan to be hanged on Thursday, June 8 next, for the murder of his brother, Francis Joseph Ryan.

The prisoner when asked if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed on him, replied that he knew nothing of the crime.

His counsel asked for a reserved case, averring that the remains had not been identified conclusively. The application was refused but noted. His Lordship was visibly affected when passing sentence, while Ryan sank sobbing to his seat but recovered composure almost immediately.

COMMITTEE IS MEETING WITH SUCCESS

The merchants of Peterborough evidently appreciate the value of publicity in connection with the advertising in the prize list of the Peterborough Industrial Fair. The special committee in charge of subscriptions and special prizes, Messrs. R. H. Leary and J. A. Storey, have met with great success in their solicitations.

Mr. Leary told the Review this morning that the results of their canvass were most gratifying. He showed a substantial list to bear out his statement.

Eleven Lose Deposits.

Edmonton, March 25.—As a result of Monday's elections there are returned 34 Liberals, two Conservatives, two Independents, and one Socialists. Two members are yet to be chosen in Athabaska and Peace River, and will probably be Liberals. At least 11 candidates will lose deposits. Only three old members were defeated: John T. Moore (Lib.), Red Deer; A. J. Robertson (Con.), Nanton, and C. Heibert (Con.), Didsbury.

At Calgary the parties have decided to call off all protests.

BIG SUFFRAGIST DEPUTATION WAITS ON PREMIER WHITNEY

MAKE PUNISHMENT FIT THE CRIME

Albany, N.Y., March 25.—Assemblyman Leffingwell has put in a bill which goes so far as to make the punishment for kidnapping death or life imprisonment, as the jury may determine. Another bill by Assemblyman Cuvillier makes the maximum penalty life imprisonment. The maximum penalty under the present law is imprisonment from two to five years. Senator Hill of Buffalo introduced a bill yesterday making the punishment imprisonment from 5 to 50 years.

Under the criminal code in Canada, kidnapping is punishable with seven years' imprisonment.

Want Another Conference.

Scranton, Pa., March 25.—The report yesterday of the policy committee of the Anthracite Mine Workers reaffirmed the demands provides for a further conference with the operators and instructs the miners to remain at work until after April 1, until further instructions from the union. The miners want:

Complete recognition of their union.

Eight-hour day.

Five per cent. increase for men earning between $1.50 and $3.

CONSTABLES ASK REFORMS

Ontario Police Want to be Directed From Toronto---Convention Being Held.

Toronto, March 25.—At a meeting of the high constables of Ontario, held in the City Hall yesterday, it was decided to recommend to the Ontario Government extensive alterations in the present machinery of the law. The action was taken in pursuance of the request of Col. Graveley, who was authorized by the Attorney-General's Department to ask that they prepare a scheme of improvement which he might lay before the Department. The chief recommendations were:

That an inspector-general be appointed in Toronto in close touch with the Attorney-General, and that a force of provincial police be formed under him, to be composed largely of the present high constables, and described as superintendents.

That a board of police commissioners be appointed in each county and be composed of the senior judge, warden and county crown attorney.

That a force of township constables be appointed, the members of which would depend on local conditions, in the discretion of the superintendent and board of commissioners.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

The United States Steel Corporation is said to have secured control of the Michipicoten iron ore range, north of Lake Superior.

Charles Watson and Fred Allen of Toronto were arrested in Brantford, having been locked in a freight car while beating their way to London.

Mrs. Squires, an aged lady, living alone on Cameron street, Sarnia, was burned to death yesterday morning. She was lighting the fire with kerosene.

Admiral Lord Charles Beresford (commander of the channel fleet) hauled down his flag at Portsmouth on Tuesday, thus bringing to an end fifty years of active service.

Brantford merchants have decided to adopt the Guelph system of collecting bad debts by the appointment of a liveried collector on a regular salary paid by the merchant body.

It is reported at Winnipeg that an early provincial election will take place. Premier Roblin using the disagreement at Ottawa on the boundary question as the issue for the electors.

Make It Criminal Offence.

Ottawa, March 25.—Deputy Police Chief Clark and Rev. J. S. Shearer of Toronto were here yesterday interviewing several Ministers with regard to having greater restrictions in the criminal code of the distribution of immoral literature.

They want to make it a criminal offence to have immoral literature in one's possession, and to give the police the right to search places where they suspect such literature may be found.

And Ask Votes For Women.

Sir James Says Nothing Can be Done at the Present Session.

Toronto, March 25.—Two hundred women and twice as many students, Government employes and other curiosity seekers besieged the Parliament Buildings yesterday. The women went to ask for votes, and others went to see the women. Inspector James L. Hughes was in charge. He packed the women in the reception-room until the place was suffocating. The crowd was so large that Sir James Whitney had only a foot or two of space on which to stand. There were fifteen speakers. A petition, signed by 100,000 persons, was presented.

Sir James informed the women that the Government had no idea that the deputation would be so large, or more comfortable arrangements could have been made.

Controller Hocken introduced the deputation.

Dr. Augusta Stowe-Gullen said she did not know there would be so many women present. She read the petition asking that the franchise be extended to all women, the same as men. Sixteen million women in the world were interested in the question, she said, and in Canada the deputation had the support of women in every province. They were also supported by the mayor and council of Toronto and all the organizations they had approached. They represented the people of Ontario, not only a few faddists.

They all believed that the home was woman's sphere, but they went further and said the home was man's sphere. Man should protect his home, and should help the women to protect the homes. The women wanted to protect the children.

Women paid a large proportion of the taxes and should have some say as to what become of the money. Many municipal candidates qualified on their wives' property, and the same privilege should be extended to women.

Inspector Hughes said the province of Ontario was the first to make any move to extend the franchise to women, and he thought further progress should be made by extending the full franchise.

Mrs. F. MacD. Denison thought the present time was the psychological moment to extend the franchise. If the race was to grow it would have to grow together.

Rev. R. J. Hutcheon, Mrs. Miriam Brown, Mrs. H. N. A. Stevens, Mr. J. N. Bruce, Mr. James Simpson, Dr. Margaret Gordon, Mrs. Louisa C. Glasgow, and Mr. Wm. Minns all urged the claims of the women for the right to vote.

In reply Sir James made one or two observations. The end of the session was in sight, he said, and under ordinary circumstances it would be impossible to take any steps. He did not say that to dodge the question. They were asking for one of the greatest political changes which could be ever brought about in any country, and they could not expect the Government to take any action without considering the question from every point of view. No woman had a right to vote, and no man had a right to vote any more than he had a right to do mending. Voting was not a right, but was the means devised by which people could express their opinions. No one was born with the right to vote. No question could arise as to the influence of women. He hoped that in the future the women would again visit the Government.

A strictly business session in the Legislature yesterday afternoon disposed of a fair proportion of the order sheet. Five Government bills had a second reading, including Hon. F. Cochrane's to restrict the assessment of running companies to the properties on which they were making profits.

Mr. Brewster withdrew his bill to amend the Municipal Act.

A night session had been decided upon, but at 6 o'clock this was suddenly reversed.

Three bills were read a first time: To amend the act respecting agricultural societies—Hon. J. S. Duff; to amend the Assessment Act—H. Eilber; to amend the Public Health Act—G. C. Wilson.

Mr. Lucas is to move for an address to the Governor-General for legislation permitting the province to expropriate telephone services, or, in alternative, to grant Legislatures power to control rates within provinces.

BILL GOES THROUGH

Word to This Effect Received From Toronto This Afternoon.

The Review's special correspondent in Toronto wires us that the city's bill for the extension of the franchise of the Radial Railway Co. on certain terms has gone through. It requires the company to build to Lakefield by August 1st, 1909, to Stony Lake by Aug. 1st, 1910, to Rice Lake by Aug. 1st, 1911, and to complete the whole service by five years from May 1st, 1909.

SKIN TROUBLES

YOUR SKIN REFLECTS YOUR HEALTH!

JUST as your skin is, so is your health. If the pores of your skin are not acting properly, the wastes of your body are not getting away as they should, and this means that your kidneys, liver, lungs, and heart have to take on extra duty. Your skin requires periodical cleaning, just as the housewife knows that the stove requires periodical shaking down to make it burn brightly.

Just at this season, pimples, face sores, eruptions, scrofulous diseases, and eczema, are very common because the winter has thrown extra work on to the skin, and in many cases the skin has been unable to do this extra work. Zam-Buk is a skin tonic. Your skin needs a tonic just as much as your stomach or liver!

If you have any skin disease, scrofulous sore, festering ulcer, or an outbreak of pimples and eruptions, apply Zam-Buk. Apply it freely at night. Let its healing essences sink well in! You will be surprised at its wonderful healing power.

HOW ZAM-BUK REMOVES SKIN DISEASES.

Mrs. S. Jeans, of Queen Street, St. James, Winnipeg, says:—"Some time back pimples and sores broke out on my forehead, and spread over the whole of one side of my face and neck. Small red pimples, joining up into a kind of red rash, which discharged and then became very sore, was the form the disease took. The irritation from this was terrible, and whenever I went out of doors it was very painful. I consulted the family physician, who gave me a lotion to use. This only seemed to irritate the disease the more, and to cause more pimples to appear, so I left off using the lotion and began applying Zam-Buk. In a wonderfully short space of time this proved effective, and every pimple was removed from my face and neck, leaving my skin clear and smooth as before. I have had no return of this disease since, so I believe the cure is permanent. I have also used Zam-Buk for an open running wound on the calf of my right leg, which had troubled me for some time, and it cleared away all the foul matter and healed the wound up nicely."

Mr. William Parser, of 1355, Elgin Avenue, Winnipeg, Man., says:—"As a cure for skin diseases I do not think there is anything to equal Zam-Buk. Last year pimples and sores broke out all over my face, and I tried various remedies which, from time to time, I applied to them. Not only were these sores unsightly, but they were very painful. For over two months I was afflicted in this way, until I was advised to try Zam-Buk. I found this balm was entirely different to the ordinary remedies. It reduced the irritation and the smarting pain. The sores, from first being anointed with the balm, grew less and less angry, and then began to dry off. With perseverance I was able to clear my skin entirely from all the sores and eruptions. I highly recommend Zam-Buk to all who suffer from any skin disease."

Zam-Buk cures cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, piles, festering sores, ulcers, scalds, blood-poisoning, eczema, scabs, chapped hands, cold cracks, chilblains, ringworm, scalp sores, bad leg, diseased ankles, and all other skin diseases and injuries. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, three for $1.25, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

The Daily Review

THURSDAY, MARCH 25, 1909.

VERY SARCASTIC

La Patrie, the well-known French Journal, of Montreal, says, "The Bobcaygeon Independent says that Canada is the only country in the world which builds railways in order to make a present of them to companies. The Independent is in error. China and the little South-American republics follow the same policy."

It must strike every Canadian as very absurd that we should build at enormous expense the Winnipeg to Moncton line, lend ten millions to the G.T.P., and yet not own the road! What can possibly be the object of such an administration if it be not to retain support and power by giving up an equivalent to the grafters and money-getters.

ROYAL COMMISSION ON LABOR

The latest use to which a royal commission has been put in Britain is that of finding out the cause of unemployment. The general opinion of those who gave evidence seemed to be that lack of employment was due to lack of work. The commission, however, were of the opinion that in view of the immensely increased consumption of commodities it was impossible to believe that there was lack of work. The answer made to them was that machines were displacing men. To this the commissioners again replied that displacement was one thing, but lack of employment another.

The evidence of employers shows that the displacement has taken many forms: 1.—In many trades, instead of a whole shopful of trained mechanics, you have, perhaps, 100 workmen of all sorts tending machinery, guided and supervised by half a dozen intelligent foremen. 2.—The displacement of middle-aged men by younger men. The tendency has been greatly aggravated by the operation of the workmen's compensation act, since employers now show considerable diffidence in engaging men of middle age.

But what is the effect of these various displacements on the demand for labour? The commissioners say that their inquiries disclose a general consensus of opinion on three points: 1.—That the introduction of or improvements in machinery do temporarily reduce the demand for labour within the department where such changes occur. 2.—That the displacement does not, as a rule, reduce the labour employed in each producing unit, the workers dispensed with being readily absorbed within the same business—particularly in shipbuilding, where changes are slowly introduced and affect only a few men at a time. 3.—That the final result is that more labour is required instead of less.

Have all these industrial developments increased the demand on the part of employers for higher skill and intelligence on the part of the workers? The replies were conflicting. But in the majority of trades the answer seems to be "No," the most conspicuous exception being the iron and steel trades, especially in their highest branches. Though some consider it necessary to have intelligence to watch any machinery, one employer frankly said: "The less the human element enters, the better."

The commission invited employers to express their opinion as to the desirability of securing, if possible, a greater mobility of labour. Some doubted its practicability, owing to the increasing specialization of industry, but all were agreed as to its desirability. They would like labour to be able to pass freely and easily from one trade to another. But not so the trade unions. So long, for instance, as a bricklayer is prevented by his union from doing stonemason work, or a pattern-maker from being a joiner, it is hopeless to speak of mobility. This mobility, it is agreed, depends chiefly on education.

EDITORIAL NOTES

An application has been made to the Legislature to restore the ward system for electing trustees in Toronto.

According to statistics just published the consumption of alcohol in France has been steadily declining for the last ten years, especially in the towns. In Paris the consumption has fallen to less than half what it was ten years ago.

Police Commissioner Bingham, of New York has asked the board of aldermen of New York for a special appropriation of $100,000 to pay the expenses of a secret investigation. It is believed the fund if obtained, will be used to continue the work on which Lieut. Petrosino was engaged in Italy when he was assassinated.

"I was sitting with Kipling in his garden at Rottingdean when a street organ struck up "The Absent Minded Beggar." Kipling was silent one moment and then he said, "If it was not suicide I would kill the man who wrote that.". This interesting revelation was made by the Rev J. C. Harris, pastor of Kingston Congregational church in a lecture on Kipling. It was hard to believe, he said, that the man who could write "The Recessional" could descend to the level of "Pay, Pay, ...Pay," No man was more keenly alive to his own blunders than Kipling.

DR. GRENFELL COMING HERE

He Will Lecture in Grand Opera House on the Night of April 14th

Those who have been reading the fascinating stories of life on the Labrador coast, which have appeared from time to time in the press, will be delighted to hear the missionary hero, Dr. Grenfell, tell his own story in his own modest way. He will lecture in the Grand Opera House, Peterborough, on the night of April 14th, and the local committee of the Deep Sea Mission are making the arrangements. The lecture will be illustrated and should draw an immense audience.

The New Noiseless Gun

The new device to render the discharge of a firearm practically noiseless has already been noticed in these pages. We are now enabled to give detailed descriptions from an article contributed to the National Guard Magazine, Columbus, Ohio, February, by Capt. Earl D. Church, of the ordnance department, Connecticut National Guard. The inventor of the new "silencer" is Hiram Percy Maxim, son of Sir Hiram Maxim, inventor of the Maxim gun, and nephew of Hudson Maxim, inventor of maximite, the new high explosive. Says Captain Church:

"In this age of antilogy we have grown used to the horseless carriage, the wireless telegraph, the fireless cooker, and other contradictions of fundamental principles, but the noiseless gun comes with a shock, belying its action, upsetting as it does the traditions of a thousand years or more, destroying to a large degree the roar of cannon; the crack of small arms the malicious purr of the machine gun, and the other attendant explosive sounds which go to make up the noise of battle, and producing new conditions and problems in warfare which are revolutionary to the extreme. And all of this is brought about, not by the discovery of a new powder which would require an entire reconstruction of arms to meet its reactions, nor by the invention of a new gun, valved, vented, and gas-chambered, as might be possible, but of which would render obsolete every arm of whatsoever caliber now in existence, with a calamitous loss to the world running into the billions of dollars in the necessary rearmament; on the contrary the most radical results are obtained by the invention of the Maxim silencer, a small, ingenious product utilizing natural first principles in its operations and so constructed that it can be affixed to any gun made without rebuilding or interfering with the principles governing the action of such gun. Instead, therefore, of destroying the value of that already in existence, as do so many inventions, offsetting thereby their own good, this device preserves that which is, and adds to the world's resources by its own initiative and creative value."

The first suggestion for the "silencer," we are told, came from the "muffler" of an automobile, and for some time experiments were carried on by Mr. Maxim along this line. But a "muffler" for a gun, on the automobile principle, would have to be as big as a barrel. Evidently it was necessary to depart essentially from this idea, and success was ultimately achieved by such departure. Says Captain Church:

"If the slow expansion of the gases in a closed retort could not be utilized, it is manifest that they must be allowed to attain inertia in some other way. Here the principle of centrifugal force came to the inventor and he knew if he could interrupt the pencil of gas following the bullet at the muzzle of the gun (travelling in a Springfield rifle at the rate of over 2,600 feet a second and exerting a pressure of 10,000 pounds per square inch) and could impart to it a high swirling motion, the gas could not escape through the orifice until it had slowed down and its energy was spent. But how to leave a clear opening for the passage of the bullet and still catch and separate the gas and change its direction from moving forward in the horizontal plane of impetus to travelling in a vertical orbit at right angles thereto—this was the problem.

"Without taking space to describe the endless experiments which led to the final result, the operation of the perfected silencer may be described as follows:

"The bullet passes through a hole larger than the bore of the rifle and, touching nothing, passes on its way uninterrupted. The gases, leaving the muzzle and entering the first vortex-chamber, commence to expand, and a part, striking the opposite side off center and upon a surface partially convexed and leading to the side of the chamber, are diverted from the initial plane and by eccentric action are imparted a swirling motion between guides until they interrupt and cross at right angles, the remaining pencil of gas passing through the hole for the bullet, cutting and deflecting this, with the result that it enters the next vortex-chamber diminished in volume and velocity. Here a further expansion and cutting off some of the main pencil of gas occurs, which is set to swirling by the vortex and is directed across the remaining pencil, further retarding and cutting into it and tending to break it up into rapidly revolving circles of gas. This operation is repeated successively through twelve vortex-chambers in the silencer for the Springfield rifle, the pencil of gas holding together less compactly and expanding with increased rapidity and with more of it cut off and divided to a swirl as each successive chamber is passed and the velocity is correspondingly diminished until there is practically no gas travelling in the forward plane to emit from the end of the silencer with any force. In fact, an experiment along this line almost uncanny in its negativeness is to drop a pencil through a silencer or look through it to a light, indicating the a clear hole of considerable caliber and then try to extinguish a match held in front of the hole by blowing through it. One may blow until he is red in the face and the match will scarcely flicker. The incredulous experimenter will invariably, after failure, hold the silencer up to the light to see if the hole is still there.

"In weight, the silencer ranges from a very few ounces upon a light 22 target rifle to ten ounces, which is that of the largest and strongest now made, namely, that required by the new Springfield rifle. The shape of the silencer is a simple cylinder affixed to the muzzle of the rifle by an interrupted thread and attached eccentrically to one side so that the main body of it lies below the barrel and entirely out of the range of or interference with the sight. For the Springfield rifle the silencer is one and three-eighths inches in diameter, six inches long, and contains twelve vortex-chambers, the first of which are held in place against the severer shock they have to sustain by corrugations in the cylinder. In tests the small additional weight upon the muzzle has not interfered in the least with accurate sighting, but on the contrary has seemed to exert a certain steadying effect, particularly in offhand work at 200 yards.

"From actual tests made, the invention has shown that it does away with 97 per cent. of the sound of discharge. This has been demonstrated by trials before very ingeniously constructed sound-recording machines in use in factories manufacturing ammunition, a Springfield without the attachment having registered the extreme limit recorded by the machine of a four-inch swing of the pointer, while with the attachment the pointer scarcely stirred and registered exactly the same as a clap of the hand.

"The bullet noise is, of course, not eliminated. In all velocities exceeding 1,400 feet per second a bullet creates a vacuum in that it goes faster (than the air can close behind it. (The subsequent effect of the air rushing in upon the vacuum is similar to the sharp crack of thunder following a bolt of lightning, and a certain explosive sound, therefore, follows the bullet. Below 1,400 feet per second a bullet successfully passes with a hissing noise changing to a hum or sing as the speed diminishes, until in low velocities it passes with practically no atmospheric disturbance noticeable. There is still the crack of the bullet, therefore, from the Springfield or other high-velocity rifles, the hiss and hum from less powerful guns, but in the smaller target rifles absolutely no sound is heard other than the click of the hammer, causing one to scarcely believe that a cartage has been exploded at all. With the 22-automatic the inventor is accustomed to have rifle-practise by members of his family in his own house, using a box of sand for a back-stop, and the sound of the gun can not be heard in the next room."

It has been suggested that the silencer may interfere with the velocity of the bullet, or may lessen the accuracy of fire. Tests described by Captain Church show, however, that this is not the case. There are thus no disadvantages attached to the use of the silencer. Its advantages are thus stated by the writer: First, the abolition of noise will make it possible for a word of command to be heard along the whole firing-line, and the fire can, therefore, be controlled more efficiently by the officer in command. Secondly, concealment of an attacking force may be complete even after firing has begun. Third, the injury to eardrums by shock—a serious matter nowadays—is completely obviated. Gun-shy horses may be used for cavalry, as there will be no noise to frighten them. Fourth, the wound made by a bullet from a rifle equipped with a silencer is cleaner and more humane, the new device removing the high pressure gases which usually accompany the projectile, and give it a rending or explosive effect, especially at short distances.

CURE MEN AND WOMEN ALIKE

Cured Chas. Bell of Rheumatism and His Wife of Inflamation of the Kidneys—Mrs. Bell's Statement.

North Range, Digby Co., N.S., March 24.—(Special).—That Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidney ills of men and women alike is shown in the cases of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bell, of this place. A short time ago Dodd's Kidney Pills cured Mr. Bell of Rheumatism, from which he had suffered for ten years. This led Mrs. Bell to try them for Inflammation of the Kidneys, and she makes the following statement:—

"I was troubled with Inflammation of the Kidneys for twenty-four years. Some few years ago I got worse and was laid up for a long time. When I was able to be up again the doctor told me I must on no account do any work. I suffered from Dropsy and my feet would swell so I could not wear my shoes.

"My husband benefitted so much from taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I decided to give them a trial, and though I have taken only three boxes, I am well and can wear my shoes and do nearly all my housework. I cannot say too much for Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Dodd's Kidney Pills make weak Kidneys strong, and sick Kidneys well.

PRINCE RUPERT—BRITISH COLUMBIA

In response to many enquiries from all parts of the world with regard to the new Pacific Coast terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, Prince Rupert, a comprehensive and interesting pamphlet, has been issued giving information respecting this great seaport of the Pacific. The land acquired by the Railway Company for this new city is 24,000 acres for the purpose of the townsite and the development of the port. The first subdivision of the townsite will cover an area of about 2,000 acres, and will be opened to the public and sold on or about May 1st, 1909.

The publication contains a general plan of the new townsite, and a large interesting map of the North Pacific showing Prince Rupert Harbor and vicinity.

Copies of this publication may be had for the asking by applying to J. D. McDonald, Union Station, Toronto Ont.

UNIQUE WINDOW AT WARNE'S STORE

Cough Remedy is Advertised in a Novel Way—An Attractive Display.

The Warne Drug Company have a unique window in which Nyals Pinol Cough remedy is advertised. A miniature pine tree is placed at one side, and a spout is inserted near the bottom to which a can is attached. Although the oil of pine of which the remedy is composed is not secured this way, the illustration is a good one. The old-time way in which the oil was abstracted from the leaves is also shown in the window here a pot suspended from a tripod, is supposed to be boiling from the heat of an artificial fire underneath, which is very realistic.

SNOW USED AS MEDICINE AT MONTREAL

The Montreal Hospitals have adopted the use of liquid air in the form of carbonic acid snow, for the treatment of many forms of diseases and its curative powers have now been proven beyond a shadow of a doubt. Many forms of skin diseases have already been dealt with including moles warts, birth marks and different forms of small skin humors.

In one case at the Montreal General Hospital a woman was treated for a mole which went a long way towards impairing her beauty.

The carbonic acid snow made from liquid air was applied for less than a minute, the effect being that it immediately disappeared leaving a scarcely perceptible scar. Another case, which required the removing of a wart from under a finger nail was as successfully treated and other forms of skin blemishes and affections have also been dealt with.

Liquid air is made from carbon dioxide and liquifies at a pressure of two thousand pounds to the square inch.

When liberated at a low temperature it becomes carbonic acid snow, crystalizing into a substance which resembles common white chalk, though of greater brilliance.

Liquid air in the form of carbonic acid snow can now be purchased in bulk and the low temperature at which it is frozen causes it to preserve its form for many hours.

There is no doubt about the value of freezing as a therapeutic or healing, and it is predicted by medical men that carbonic acid snow will be used almost altogether in the future for the treatment of skin affections.

DEAD CHINAMEN RETURNING HOME

Thirty Bodies Shipped form Montreal to the Celestial Kingdam

Some thirty bodies of Chinamen who departed this life in Montreal, left New York Wednesday on the steamship Shimosa for the Orient. They died here within the last five years.

During the summer of 1908 the local Chinese presented an order from the Superior Court at the Mount Royal cemetery. It gave permission for the exhumation of all Chinese bodies, which were removed in their lead-lined coffins to the United States to await the Shimosa. The coffin-ship had 8,000 bodies on board. She is only a small vessel and the boxes were piled in the holds' 'tween decks, and on the deck itself. The crew was composed of Chinese only. No white man, with healthy marine superstitions that have been handed down from the salts of Nelson's days, would take the job.

Every Chinaman in Montreal is a member of a burial fraternity. The society, for a small weekly consideration, guarantees the burial of any son of Confucius in his native province. This is the next best thing to dying in China itself.

Of course, when a Chinaman dies in Montreal they do not immediately pack off his remains to the East. They place him in Mount Royal cemetery until a number of his brethren join him. As soon as word reaches here that the coffin-ship has fixed the date of her sailing, the bodies are exhumed, and sent to await her departure. In this manner did all the towns of Canada and the United States act, until the 8,000 accumulated.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, March 24.—(Special.)—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market the offerings this morning were 400 cattle, 60 sheep and lambs, 200 hogs, and 1000 calves. There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being steady on account of the small offerings, which, however, were quite ample to fill all requirements, as the demand showed little improvement over that of Monday's, consequently trade on the whole was slow. A few choice steers sold at 5½c to 5¾c; good, at 5c to 5¼c; fair, at 4½c to 4¾c; medium, at 4c to 4½c; good cows, at 4c to 4¾c; common, at 2¾c to 3¾c, and bulls, at 3c to 4½c per lb. Supplies of sheep and lambs were a little larger than they have been of late, for which the demand was good. Yearling lambs sold at 6¼c to 6¾c; sheep, at 4c per lb.; spring lambs met with a ready sale at prices ranging from $4 to $8 each, as to size. An active trade was done in calves, but on account of the increased supply, prices were lower at from $2 to $5 each, as to quality.

The market for hogs was unchanged, owing to a small run, for which the demand was good, but as the quality was not up to the average the top price realized was $7.75 per cwt., weighed off cars. At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market, the offerings consisted of 200 cattle, 45 sheep and lambs, 425 hogs and 1400 calves. As the supply of cattle was comparatively light and the attendance of buyers fair, the demand was ample and prices ruled steady. Some choice beeves sold at 5½c to 5¾c; good, at 5c to 5¼c; fair, at 4½c to 4¾c; medium, at 4c to 4¼c, and common, at 2½c to 3½c per lb.

The demand for sheep and lambs was good and as the supply was small a firm feeling prevailed, with sales of yearling lambs at 6¼c to 6¾c, and sheep, at 4c per lb., while spring lambs brought $4 to $8 each, as to size. There was an active demand for calves, of which the offerings were very large, and prices were weaker at from $2 to $5 each, as to quality.

A steady feeling prevailed in the market for hogs, but the prices realized were not as high as those of Monday, which was due to the fact that they were all from nearby sources and the quality was not as good as hogs coming from the west, therefore they only sold for $7.75 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 4600 head; active; wethers, 10c higher; others, steady; wethers, $6.25 to $6.60.

New York Live Stock.

NEW YORK, March 24.—Beeves—Receipts, 289; steers and fat cows, firm; bulls, 10c to 15c higher; common cows, slow, steady; steers, $4 to $6.75; oxen, $4 to $4.40; calves, $3.80 to $5.25; cows, $2.15 to $5; few extra stall-fed, $5.25 to $5.75; dressed beef, steady; exports, 2800 quarters of beef.

Calves—Receipts, 2341; active and strong; veals, $6.50 to $10; culls, $5 to $6.25; barnyard calves, $3.50 to $4.25; dressed calves, lower; city dressed veals, 9c to 15c; country dressed, 8c to 13c.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 8144; feeling firm; common to good lambs, $6.50 to $8.25; no choice here; culls, $5; cull sheep, $3.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 5671; market, steady; light to medium hogs, $7 to $7.30.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, March 24.—Cattle—Receipts, estimated at 15,000; market, 10c lower; beeves, $4.60 to $7.10; Texas steers, $4.40 to $5.50; western steers, $4 to $5.50; stockers and feeders, $3.25 to $5.40; cows and heifers, $1.90 to $5.50; calves, $5.75 to $7.75.

Broke In to Find Beer.

Brampton, March 25.—License Inspector Orr of Meadowvale, accompanied by Constable Harvey of Brampton, demanded admission on Tuesday night to James Farrell's hotel, at Streetsville Junction, and although allowed to enter the building, they were refused an entrance into some of the rooms. Orr promptly broke open the doors and secured eight cases of beer. Farrell grew ugly while the cases were being placed on the wagon, and seizing an axe, attempted to smash the bottles, desisting only when Constable Harvey drew his revolver.

"Globe" Banquet at Ottawa.

Ottawa, March 25.—A unique gathering took place in the Commons' dining-room last night, when Senator Jaffray entertained about 30 of the present employes and graduates of The Globe, who are now in Ottawa. "Father, I can't believe it. I can't tell you how it hurts me. I would willingly take your place if it were possible. Forgive me for deserting you," Graydon was saying incoherently when his father lifted his face suddenly, a fierce, horrified look of understanding in the eyes that flashed upon Elias Droom. Even as he clasped his son's hand in the bitterness of small joy his lips curled into a snarl of fury. Droom's eyes shifted instantly, his uneasy gaze directing itself, as usual, above the head of its victim.

"You did this, curse you!" came from the convict's livid lips. "And this girl too! Good God, you—knew I would rather have died than to meet Graydon as I am now. You knew it, and you brought him here. I hope you will rot for this, Elias Droom. She comes here, too, to gloat, to rejoice, to see how I look before my son in prison stripes!" He went on violently for a long stretch, ending with a sob of rage. "I suppose you are satisfied," he said hoarsely to Droom.

Graydon and Jane looked on in surprise and distress. Droom's gaze did not swerve nor his expression change.

"Father, didn't you expect me to come?" asked Graydon. "Don't you want to see me?"

"Not here. Why should I have tried to keep you from returning to this country? God knows how I hoped and prayed that you'd not see me here. Elias Droom knew it. That's why he brought you here. Don't lie to me, Droom. I know it!"

"What could you expect?" mumbled Droom. "Down in your heart you wanted to see him. I've done you a kindness."

"For which I'll repay you some day," cried the prisoner, a steady look in his eyes. "Now go away, all of you! I'm through with you. You've seen me. The girl is satisfied. Go"—

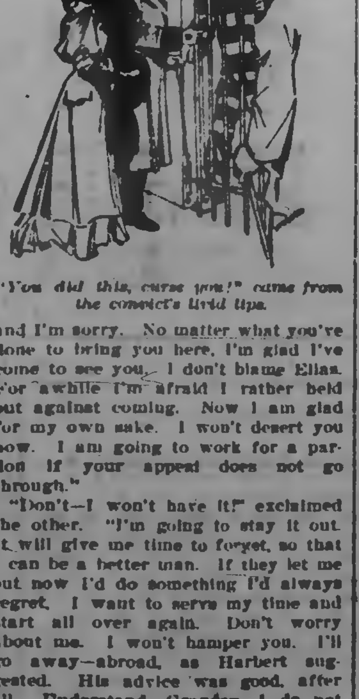
"Nonsense, father," cried Graydon, visibly distressed by his father's anguish. "Elias said that you wanted to see us. Jane did not come out of curiosity. She is here to ask justice of you. She's not seeking vengeance."

"I'll talk to you alone," said the prisoner shortly. "Send her away. I've nothing to say to her or Droom."

Jane turned and walked swiftly away, followed by Droom, who rubbed his long fingers together and tried to look sympathetic. The interview that ensued between father and son was never to be forgotten by either. Graydon heard his father's bitter story in awed silence; heard him curse deeply and vindictively; heard all this and marveled at the new and heretofore unexposed side of his nature.

There was something pathetic in the haggard face and the expressions of impotent rage. His heart softened when his father bared his shame to him and cried out against the fate which had brought them together on this day.

"It doesn't matter, father," said Graydon hoarsely. "I deserted you, and I'm sorry. No matter what you've done to bring you here, I'm glad I've come to see you. I don't blame Elias. For awhile I'm afraid I rather held out against coming. Now I am glad for my own sake. I won't desert you now. I am going to work for a pardon if your appeal does not go through."



'You did this, curse you!' came from the convict's livid lips.

"Don't—I won't have it!" exclaimed the other. "I'm going to stay it out. It will give me time to forget, so that I can be a better man. If they let me out now I'd do something I'd always regret. I want to serve my time and start all over again. Don't worry about me. I won't hamper you. I'll go away—abroad, as Harbert suggested. His advice was good, after all. Understand, Graydon, I do not want parole or pardon. You must not undertake it. I am guilty and ought to be punished the same as these other fellows in here. Don't shudder. It's true. I'm no better than they."

"I hate to think of you in this awful place," began Graydon.

"Don't think of me."

"But I've seen you here, father!" cried the son.

"A pretty spectacle for a son," laughed the father bitterly. "Why did you bring that girl here? That was cruel—heartless."

Graydon tried to convince him that Jane had not come to gloat, but to ask a favor of him.

"A favor, eh? She expects me to tell all I know about her, eh? That's good!" laughed Bansemer.

"Father, she has done you no wrong. Why are you so bitter against her? It's not right. It's not like you."

"Is she going to marry you, Graydon?"

"She refuses absolutely."

"Then she's better than I thought. Perhaps I'm wrong in hating her as I do. It's because she took you away from me. Give me time, Graydon. Some day I may tell you all I know. Don't urge me now. I can't do it now. I don't want to see her again. Don't think I'm a fool about it, boy, and don't speak of it again. Give me time."

"You love her?"

"Better than my life."

"Graydon, I—I hope she will change her mind and become your wife."

"You do? I don't understand."

"That's why I'd rather she never could know who her parents are. The shadow is invisible now. It wouldn't help matters for her if it were visible. She's better off by not knowing. Has Droom intimated that he knows?"

"He says he does not."

"He lies, but at the same time he won't tell her. It's not in him to do it. He has served me ill today. He has always hated me, but he was always true to me. He did me a vile trick when he changed the cartridges in my revolver. I discharged him for that. I told him to appear against me if he would. He was free to do so; but, curse him, he would not give me the satisfaction of knowing that he was a traitor. He knew I'd go over the road anyhow. He's been waiting for this day to come. He has finally given me the unhappiest hour in my life."

After a few moments he quieted down and asked Graydon what his plans were for the future. In a strained, uncertain way the two talked of the young man's prospects and the advantages they promised.

"Go ahead, Graydon, and don't let the shadow of your father haunt you. Don't forget me, boy, because I love you better than all the world. These are strange words for a man who has fallen as I have fallen, but they are true. Listen to this: You will be a rich man some day. I have a fortune to give you, my boy. They can't take my money from me, you know. It's all to be yours, every cent of it. You see"—

"Father—I—let us not talk about it now," said Graydon hastily, a shadow of repugnance in his eyes. Bansemer studied his face for a moment, and a deep red mounted to his brow.

"You mean, Graydon," he stammered, "that you—you do not want my money?"

"Why should we talk about it now?"

"Because it suggests my death?"

"No, no, father. I"—

"You need not say it. I understand. It's enough. You feel that my money was not honestly made. Well, we won't discuss it. I'll not offer it to you again."

"It won't make any difference, dad. I love you. I don't love your money."

"Or the way I earned it. Some day, my boy, you'll learn that very few make money by dealing squarely with their fellow men. It's not the custom. My methods were a little broader than common, that's all. I now notify you that I intend to leave all I have to sweet charity. I earned most of my ill gotten wealth in New York and Chicago, and I'm going to give it back to these cities. Charity will take anything that is offered, but it doesn't always give in return."

"Graydon, ask her to think kindly of me if she can."

"I'll come down again, father, before I go east."

"No!" almost shouted James Bansemer. "I won't have it! For my sake, Graydon, don't ever come here again. Don't shame me more than you have today. I'll never forget this hour. Stay away and you'll be doing me the greatest kindness in the world. Promise me, boy!"

"I can't promise that, dad. It isn't a sane request. I am your son"—

"My God, boy, don't you see that I can't bear to look at you through these bars? Go! Please go! Goodby! Write to me, but don't come here again. Don't! It's only a few years."

He turned away abruptly, his shoulder drawn upward as if in pain, and Graydon left the place, weakened and sick at heart.

Jane and Droom were awaiting him in an outer office. The former looked into his eyes searchingly, tenderly.

"I'm so sorry, Graydon," she said as she took his hand in hers.

All the way back to Chicago Elias Droom sat and watched them from under lowered brows, wondering why it was that he felt so much lonelier than he ever had felt before—wondering, too, in a vague sort of way why he was not able to exult, after all.

CHAPTER XXX.

JANE was ill and did not leave her room during the two days following the visit to the penitentiary. She was haunted by the face of James Bansemer, the convict. It was beyond her powers of imagination to recall him as the well groomed, distinguished man she once had known. Graydon was deeply distressed over the pain and humiliation he had subjected her to through Droom's unfortunate efforts. The fact that she could not or would not see him for two days hurt him more than he could express, even to himself. The day before he left for New York, however, she saw him in their parlor. She was pale and quiet.

Neither mentioned the visit to the prison. There was nothing to say.

"You will be in New York next week?" he asked as he arose to leave. His spirit was sore. She again had told him that he must not hope. With a hysterical attempt to lead him on to other topics she repeated her conversations with Teresa Valasquez, urging him, with a hopeless attempt at bravado, to seek out the Spanish girl and marry her. He laughed wickedly at the jest.

"We will leave Chicago on Monday. Father will have his business affairs arranged by that time. I would not let him resign the presidency. It would seem as if I were taking it away with him. We expect to be in Europe for six or eight months; then I am coming back to New York, where I was born, Graydon, to work."

He went away with the feeling in his heart that he was not to see her again. A single atom of determination lingered in his soul, however, and he tried to build upon it for the future. Rigby's wedding invitation had come to him that morning, almost as a mockery. He tore it to pieces, with a scowl of recollection.

Droom's effects were on the way to New York. He hung back, humbly waiting for Graydon to suggest that they should travel east on the same train. His grim, friendless old heart gave a bound of pure joy, the first he had known, when the young man made the suggestion that night.

Together they traveled eastward and homeward, leaving behind them the gray man in stripes.

Jane's six months in Europe grew into a year, and longer. It was a long but a profitable year for Graydon Bansemer. He had been enriched not only in wealth, but in the hope of ultimate happiness. Not that Jane encouraged him. Far from it. She was more obdurate than ever with an ocean between them. But his atom of determination had grown to a purpose. His face was thinner, and his eyes were of a deeper, more wistful gray. They were full of longing for the girl across the sea and of pity and yearning for the man back there in the west.

He had toiled hard and well. He had won. The shadow of '99 was still over him, but the year and a new ambition had lessened its blackness. Friends were legion in the great metropolis. He won his way into the hearts and confidence of new associates and renewed fellowship with the old. Invitations came thickly upon him, but he resolutely turned his back upon most of them. He was not socially hungry in these days.

Once a week he wrote to his father, but there never was a reply. He did not expect one, for James Bansemer, in asking him to write, had vowed that his son should never hear from him again until he could speak as a free man and a chastened one. True to his promise, Graydon instituted no movement to secure a pardon. He did, by a strong personal appeal, persuade Denis Harbert to drop further prosecution. There were enough indictments against his father to have kept him behind the bars for life.

Elias Droom had rooms in Eighth avenue, not a great distance from Herald square. He was quite proud of his new quarters. They had many of the unpleasant features of the old ones in Wells street, but they were less garish in their affront to an aesthetic eye. The incongruous pictures were there, and the oddly assorted books, but the new geraniums had a chance for life in the broader windows; the cook stove was in the rear, and there was a venerable Chinaman in charge of it; the bedroom was kept so neat and clean that Droom quite feared to upset it with his person. But, most strange of all, was the change in Droom himself.

"I've retired from active work," he informed Graydon one day when that young man stared in astonishment at him. "What's the use, my boy, in Elias Droom dressing like a dog of a workingman when he is a gentleman of leisure and affluence? It surprises you to see me in an evening suit, eh? Well, by Jove, my boy, I've got a dinner jacket, a Prince Albert and a silk hat. There are four new suits of clothes hanging up in that closet," he said, adding, with a sarcastic laugh: "That ought to make a perfect gentleman of me, oughtn't it? What are you laughing at?"

"I can't help it, Elias. Who would have dreamed that you'd go in for good clothes!"

"So Nervous—I Would Start at Least Sound."

Miss Minnie Reid, of Teeswater, Ont., says: "I caught a cold, but very foolishly let it go on without taking much notice of it, thinking that it would soon pass off again. Instead of this it fastened upon me, until I became downright ill, and when the cold did get better it left me in a terribly weak condition and a martyr to Catarrh."

"My health was quite broken up, nor did I make any improvement. I was tired all the time, lost my appetite entirely, while the pain in my head was at times intolerable. I got so nervous that I would start at the slightest sound, until life did not seem worth living under such conditions."

"I had almost despaired of getting rid of the trouble, when a friend advised the use of PSYCHINE."

"I took several doses of PSYCHINE and the result was marvellous. The continual feeling of heaviness which had been a burden to me for so many months, and made me so wretched, was removed as by magic. My appetite returned and I was able to enjoy my food again, and my system was thoroughly built up."

"I cannot express what your medicine did for me. From being a sick, broken-down, shattered woman, it made me strong and well. The nervousness has gone and I have had no return."

If you are run down Psychine will "pick you up" in good time. An unfailing remedy for Throat, Chest, Lung and Stomach Troubles. Sold by all druggists and stores at 50c. and $1 bottle.

IMPRESSIVE CONFIRMATION SERVICES AT ST. JOHN'S

Address Given by His Lordship Bishop Reeve, Assistant Bishop of Toronto—Forty-three Candidates

There was a large and interesting congregation at St. John's church last night on the occasion of the confirmation of forty-seven young candidates of the church. The solemn ceremony of the laying on of hands was performed by His Lordship Bishop Reeves, assistant bishop of Toronto.

The ceremony of the confirmation was performed by His Lordship Bishop Reeve, assistant bishop of Toronto and Rev. Canon Davidson assisted in the service. The hymns sung were of a character in keeping with the ceremony.

His Lordship's address to the candidates was an able and impressive one and he told them of their obligations and the solemn significance of their confirmation. His remarks were appealing and convincing and he told the young persons who were taking such an important step in their spiritual lives, that they would be expected to live in such a way as to prove that they fully realized the responsibility of the confirmation.

They would have to be born again, check their besetting sins, for all had besetting sins and show that they were possessed of the Holy Spirit. The bishop made reverent reference to the first confirmation day, and spoke of its continuance, to the present time, dwelling on the sacredness of all that it represented.

"Stir up the gift that is in you by constant prayer for the presence of the Holy Spirit," said His Lordship.

We all had an influence over someone, who took knowledge of what we said and did, and is in a measure shaping his or her life after our pattern. The candidates had a great responsibility.

The speaker was sure the confirmation lessons had been of great benefit and hoped they would continue to be. He urged those who had already been confirmed and who were in the congregation to remember to carry out their confirmation vows.

The members of the Church of England had come into a glorious inheritance and should show to others the blessedness of this inheritance.

After the address the rector read the first question in the confirmation service which was answered by the candidates. This was followed by prayer by the bishop and the ceremony of laying on of hands by his lordship to the beautiful words in the Church of England Confirmation service, "Defend O Lord, this thy child with Thy Heavenly Grace, that he may continue therin for ever and daily increase in Thy holy spirit more and more until he come to Thine everlasting kingdom."

At the conclusion of the ceremony, the bishop spoke only a few words, exhorting those who had been confirmed to "exercise yourselves unto Godliness," and showing their earnestness by coming to the first communion and fighting against temptation during their lives.

"Let this be your thought, I have promised and stand then in Christ's strength.

Canon Davidson announced that that on Sunday morning next the fi first communion for the candidates would be held and all were required to attend on Friday evening the special preparations for the communion.

While the offertory was being taken up Mr Devey played in a brilliant manner, "Gloria in Excelsis," from Mozart's Twelfth Mass

CONSECRATION OF BISHOP SWEENEY THIS MORNING

Special to the Review.

Toronto Ont., March 25th.—Archdeacon Sweeney was consecrated Bishop of Toronto this morning with solemn and stately ceremony. The consecration took place in St. James' Cathedral and was participated in by 150 clergy and officials. The Bishop of Harrisburg, N.Y., read the epistle. The Gospel was taken by Bishop Dunn of Quebec, the sermon was delivered by Bishop Dumoulin of Niagara and the questions were delivered and the words of consecration pronounced by Bishop Hamilton of Ottawa, the senior bishop. The cathedral was crowded uncomfortably, while a large crowd gathered outside to witness the procession of clergy from and back to the school house.

CANADIAN MACHINE PHONES FOR BRANTFORD BY MAY 1

Outlay of $100,000 in Connection With Plant in That City—$15 Year for Residence Phones and $25 for Business Phones.

Brantford, Feb 25.— The Canadian Machine Automatic Telephone Company which is installing a plant here at an original outlay of $100,000 for the system will be in operation by May 1st, provided the weather intervening is favorable for the continuance of work, which is now being rushed to completion.

Such in brief, was the announcement of General Manager MacKay of the company who was in the city today.

The work of installing the cables, consisting of drawing them through the underground ducts, is completed and all that now remains is the making of connections in the man-holes. The work at the central office is being carried on under the direction of Mr Lorimer.

The cable capacity at the outset will be 1300 phones, sufficient for the present while the central office plant battery will have a capacity for a 3000 or 4000 exchange. The present exchange room will have accommodation for 2000.

The rates in Brantford per annum will be $15 for residence phones and $25 for business phones.

REPRESENTATIVES WERE ELECTED

At Knox church last night Messrs. Kenneth Denoon and Richard Chiles and R. F. McWilliams were appointed delegates to the Missionary Congress in Toronto. Messrs. T. R. Kennedy and W. G. Galley were chosen as representatives to the Charity Board and Mr. R. D. Armstrong to the City Temperance and Moral Reform League.

ANOTHER CHARGE WAS NOT PROVEN

Another hotelkeeper was in the police court this morning charged with selling liquor during prohibitory hours. The charge was not proven and the case was dismissed. Mr. Haverson, K.C., of Toronto, was present in the interests of the hotelkeeper.

A witness was called to the box and said that he had secured liquor in the hotel on Sunday, March 21st.

To Mr. Haverson witness said he was in the hotel twice on Sunday. When he entered the first time the proprietor was in the sitting room conversing with some other men. Witness gave him "the nod," and the defendant arose and went into the bar, followed by witness and two or three others. Several drinks were served and shortly after he left the hotel. When he returned there were four or five in the sitting room but he did not recollect where the proprietor was nor could he remember how it was that the defendant was summoned to open the door. More drinks were supplied. He had spoken to a certain person about getting the liquor and had also conversed with the defendant after receiving a summons to attend court.

The father of the witness was called and stated that he had given orders at the hotel that no more liquor was to be supplied to his son.

Two other witnesses were called who the first witness had named as being in the bar on the date, were called but stoutly denied they had been supplied with any liquor.

The proprietor of the hotel also swore that he did not sell any liquor on the date mentioned.

This was all the evidence and the Magistrate dismissed the case.

REV. GEO. JACKSON'S SHARP RETORT

Rev. George Jackson has written an open letter to Rev. Dr. Elmore Harris, saying: "Dr. Elmore Harris explains to your readers that it was not to myself, but to my teachings, that he applied the term 'infidel.' I do not thank him for the distinction. What Dr. Harris owes me is not a quibble, but an apology. The man who can see no difference between my teachings, concerning the early narratives of Genesis and that of 'such infidels as Paine, Bradlaugh and Ingersoll' is past arguing with, and the only favor I have to ask of him is that he will spare me his compliment."

SAYS THE PRICE WAS TOO HIGH

Cobourg Paper Hands a Roast to the Doctors There

The small pox scare in Cobourg has about died out, the quarantine has been raised on a large number of the houses and the people are getting back their usual confidence. The doctors have had their harvest, and they should be able to insure the town against almost anything at the rush of cases for $1 for vaccination. It was a hold-up, as such a price has not been charged in other places as far as we can learn. We hope soon to be able to report that the last case of this scourge has been removed from the town and the people allowed to breathe freely.—Sentinel-Star.

CONTEST ECHOES

MR. MOWRY PLEASED

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir—I desire through your columns to thank my many friends who supported me in the European Tour Contest.

In regards to the China tea set donated to me by the Review, to say I am pleased would be putting it mildly indeed.

My sincere thanks are due Mr Dyce for his courteous treatment to me during the contest.

New Directoire Styles

TRY to get the proper effect of the new Directoire Gown with the ordinary style, hip conforming corset and you will readily see the reason that the corset plays an important part in the fit and drape of the gown of to-day—the new corset must abolish the waist line entirely and give the graceful lines that are produced by the designers of the Directoire Gown—Fashion says "hips in"—and the dress can not do this without the aid of the corset. See our window display to-night.

JUST LOOKED LIKE NEW VAN

The Fuel and Cartage Company's van has been improved to such an extent by being newly painted and otherwise embellished, that the Review did not recognize it as the original waggon, and thought a new van had been purchased. Inquiry at the company's office elicited the information that it was simply a matter of the exterior of the original van being transformed.

RETIREMENT OF AN OLD SHEPHERD

Uncle of Messrs. Albert and George Carpenter of Otonabee Held Positions for Over Fifty Years

The following interesting item from the Warminster Herald, Eng., of late date, refers to an uncle of Messrs. Albert and George Carpenter, of Otonabee township: "Jas. Carpenter has just given up the post of head shepherd on Rye Hill farm, after an active and faithful service of over fifty years as such. He commenced regular work on the farm in the spring of 1835, as a driver of one of the ox teams for Mr. Theophilus P. Coles. He was afterwards placed over sheep, and rose to the position of under shepherd, and in the spring of 1848, on the summary discharge of the head shepherd, was advanced to that office by Mr. Edward Jefferys, the occupier of the farm at that time, a situation he has held with credit ever since. Of this family, his only son is a prosperous butcher in Queensland and his two surviving daughters are married and doing well in Canada. Through his own frugality, and a legacy lately accruing to his wife, we are glad to hear he retires with a comfortable competency, and we hope the old couple may live many years to enjoy it."

NEWSY NOTES FROM BETHEL, EMILY

Special to the Review

Bethel, Emily, March 22— Messrs. Eugene Switzer and Wm Casey attended the service at Raeboro Sunday night which was conducted by a Baptist evangelistic band.

Mr and Mrs F. McBain purpose entertaining a number of the elders of Bethel at their home tomorrow evening.

Mr W J Irwin had the misfortune to have one of his horses kick him in the face last Tuesday. Dr Sutton of Omemee was called and attended to the injuries which we are pleased to hear are progressing favorably.

Miss Maud McConnell left last week for the west.

Miss E Lee has been the guest of Miss Annie Henderson for the last two weeks.

Mr R. McCracken of Westwood, and former cheese maker of East Emily is visiting friends in the vicinity this week.

A large representation of the Omemee Epworth Leaguers attended Bethel on Thursday evening and conducted a very interesting service. The topic entitled the "Pilgrim's Progress" taken by Miss Nugent and Messrs Wilkinson and Smith was very ably dealt with.

The quartette rendered was exceptionally good, as indeed the whole service was greatly appreciated. At the close of the service luncheon was served to all present by the social committee of Bethel League.

Mr W F Reeds attended the basket social under the auspices of LOL No 546 at Mr S Veak's of Lebanon vicinity last Friday evening and reports a very pleasant time.

Make no other engagement for Tuesday evening next—the Y.W.C.A. Gymnasium Exhibition and Concert programme promises an evening of great interest and enjoyment.

TRANSFERS ARE CONTEMPLATED

The Transfers Committee of the Methodist church will have rather more than the average number of transfers to consider this year. Among those contemplated are:

Rev W H Adams, from Norwood to Penetanguishene; Rev A R Sanderson from Penetanguishene to Oshawa, and Rev W B Tucker, of Oshawa to Norwood. Mr Adams has been pastor of the Methodist church at Norwood for four years; Mr A R Sanderson has been at Penetanguishene for three years; and Mr W B. Tucker at Oshawa for four years.

The fertile island of Ceylon has every requisite for growing tea of the finest quality. The excellent value absolute cleanliness and delicious flavor of "Salada" Tea produce a beverage that is the delight of thousands.

INSTRUCTIONS TO NO. 1 COMPANY

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

A most interesting stereopticon lecture will be given in the YWCA. hall on Friday evening, April 2nd, by Prof A H Young, of Trinity University, Toronto. The subject will be the paintings of Michael Angelo in the Sistine Chapel.

The life story of this great artist is intensely interesting and many pictures of the wonderfully beautiful sculptures and paintings found in this old chapel will be shown on the large canvas.

We hope a large number will enjoy this with us on Friday evening, April 2nd.

HER BROTHER THE BURGLAR

When Struck With Iron Bar Girl Cried "Oh, Fred, Don't Kill Your Sister"

Montreal, March 24—After a search that lasted over a week, Detectives Markey and Viens succeeded last evening in arresting Frederick Clark on a charge of attempted murder and housebreaking.

A week ago last Saturday, Clark and another companion who has since fled from the city, hid in the basement of his brothers house 947 Wellington street with the intention of pilfering the place when the inmates were asleep. Their presence, however, was discovered by Miss Sarah Clark and if it had not been for help rendered by an Irish terrier and a collie, who attacked the men, the young lady would probably have been murdered as one of the men had struck her several times over the head with an iron bar, until she fell bleeding and unconscious. The men then fled from the house by a rear door.

Miss Clark says that before she was knocked down she recognized her brother as one of her assailants and cried to him, "Oh, Fred, do not kill your sister."

When Clark was taken into custody he would not divulge the name of his accomplice, but remarked that he could not be found in the city now. When he was searched a loaded revolver and a number of loose cartridge were found in one of his pockets.

THIS MONGOLIAN HAD SHOT GUN

Chinaman Attracted Attention on George St. This Morning

A Chinaman carrying a shot gun, caused considerable observation on that individual this morning on George street. The gun was held in a very careful manner, as if the holder did not feel exactly safe. The Chinaman had a very determined look, which meant trouble for somebody, but as yet the authorities have not heard of any serious crime being committed.

REDUCED PRICES FOR CARMEN

In response to a number of requests, the prices for Carmen to-morrow evening have been lowered and are now only 50c, 75c and $1—A large number of tickets have already been sold and there will be a large house.

Market Tolls

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Permit me, as a ratepayer of the city of Peterborough, to protest in the strongest terms against the action of the City Council, with reference to the disposal of the market tolls. I observe that the only excuse offered by the men who were elected to serve the interests of the people was that they considered it would be "unfair" to Mr. Ball to dispense with his services on account of the fact that he had given up his position in the council two years ago to accept the position of sanitary inspector. But, sir, what are the facts of the case? We have a vivid recollection of the despicable tactics resorted to by Mr. Ball to obtain the position—an office especially created for him—tactics which would not be permitted or tolerated in any other town in Canada, and which, at the time, brought disgrace, both on himself and the other members of the council, who permitted the outrage of allowing an alderman to remain in the council and vote for his own appointment before resigning. Yet, we are told by presumably sensible men, that owing to the sacrifice (!) which Mr. Ball made to get the job in 1907, it would be throwing him down too hard to give him an opportunity of following some other occupation, for which he would be more adapted. As a result of his management of the market the city has lost, during the past year, hundreds of dollars, and still a majority of the council have refused to remedy such a state of affairs. And why? I am informed by a member of the St. Peter's T. A. S., that it was decided at a meeting of that society on Sunday afternoon, to bring every pressure possible to bear on the members of the council to vote down the recommendation of the property committee and secure the retention of Mr. Ball. A day of retribution will come, however, and the men who have betrayed the interests of the people in such a way in connection with this matter, will receive their just reward.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space in your valuable paper, I am,

Yours truly,
FIAT LUX.

THE FAIR WAGES AND HOURS OF LABOR REGULATION ACT, 1909

His Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Assembly of the province of Ontario enacts as follows—(First reading):

1 This Act may be cited as "The Fair Wages and Hours of Labor Regulation Act, 1909."

PRELIMINARY.

2 In this Act

"Employer" means—

a—Any person for whom a workman or shop assistant works, and includes any contractor, agent, manager, foreman, or other person acting or apparently acting in the control of any workman as herein defined;

b—Any person, company or association employing persons in a factory, ware house or shop or other places used as a factory, warehouse or shop as defined by the Factories Act;

c—Any municipal corporation, railway company using steam or electricity as a motive power, electric light and power company and telephone and telegraph company;

d—And generally all persons who employ workmen in any branch of work and labor.

"Workman" means—

a—Any person employed at any handicraft or in preparing or manufacturing any article for trade or sale by piece work or otherwise; and includes any person employed in a bake house, laundry or dye works;

b—Any person who is employed or works in a factory warehouse or shop of any kind of work whatever;

c—Any person who works at any trade or business including unskilled laborers;

3 Eight hours a day shall constitute a legal day's work for all workmen employed within the meaning of this Act, and no workman shall be required to work more than eight hours in any one calendar day except in cases of extraordinary emergency caused by fire, flood or danger to life or property.

4 A workman shall be deemed to work overtime when he works more than forty-eight hours in any week. Every workman who works overtime shall be paid at the rate of one and one-half times the rate per hour at which he is engaged and paid; and in no case shall he receive for such overtime less than forty cents per hour or fraction thereof.

5 Notwithstanding any agreement or understanding to the contrary made by a workman with his employer, no workman shall be employed and paid at less than twenty cents per hour, irrespective of any amount earned at overtime.

6 No male infant under the age of eighteen years, and no female infant shall be allowed to work longer than eight hours each day and at such rate of wages for work performed whether by piece work or otherwise as shall be fair and reasonable.

The Minister of Agriculture or such officer as he shall appoint is hereby empowered to investigate and fix the rate of wages to be paid to such infants in the various classes of work in which they may be employed.

7 If any employer fails to observe and carry out the provisions of this Act he shall be liable on conviction to a penalty not exceedinly one hundred dollars and the provisions of the Act respecting Master and Servant shall, so far as possible, apply to this Act.

SUPPLEMENTAL.

8—1 Every employer shall

a—Keep a record in the form prescribed, of overtime worked by such of his workmen or shop assistants as are males;

b—Produce such records and furnish extracts therefrom to an inspector appointed as hereinafter provided when called upon to do so.

2—If any employer fails to carry out any of the provisions of this section he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty dollars.

9—1 An inspector appointed under the Ontario Factories Act may, in addition to the powers thereby conferred on him.

a—At any reasonable hour, by day or night, enter any building, room or place where he has reasonable cause to believe a workman or shop assistant is employed;

b—Examine any workman or shop assistant, either alone or in the presence of any other person, with respect to any matter dealt with in this Act, and require him to sign a declaration of the truth of the matters in respect of which he is so examined;

c—Require the production of and examine and take extracts from any record required by this Act to be kept.

2—Any person who obstructs any such inspector in the exercise of his powers under this section, or who by word or act or by concealing any person, prevents the examination as aforesaid of any workman or shop assistant shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty dollars.

10—This Act shall not apply to domestics or farm laborers, nor where all the persons employed as workmen are members of the employer's family

GOVERNMENT WORKS

11—1 Every contract to which the province of Ontario is a party, which may involve the employment of laborers, workmen or mechanics, shall contain a stipulation that no laborer, workman or mechanic in the employ of the contractor, or subcontractor, or other persons doing or contracting to do the whole or a part of the work contemplated by the contract shall be permitted or required to work more than eight hours in any one calendar day except in places of extraordinary emergency caused by fire, flood or danger to life or property.

2—Every such contract hereafter made shall contain a provision that unless the person or corporation making or performing it complies with the provisions of this Act, the contract shall be void and the person or corporation shall not be entitled to receive any sum nor shall any officer, agent or employee of the province of Ontario pay or authorize payment from the funds under his charge or control to the person or corporation for work done upon or in connection with the contract which in its form or manner of performance violates the provisions of this Act.

3—This Act shall apply to work undertaken by the province of Ontario by day labor.

4—In all such contracts and subcontracts relating thereto the wages paid to workmen employed or engaged therein shall be the current wages for competent workmen in the district in which the work is being performed according to the scale of wages paid for each class of trade.

5—Contractors shall post in a conspicuous place on the works under erection the schedule of wages inserted in their contracts for the protection of workmen.

SPORTING NEWS

SIX DAY WALK BEGINNING ON MONDAY APRIL 26TH

Three Hours a Night and Nine Hours on Saturday—Will be a Contest of Speed—A Great Field Expected to Start.

Another 6 day walk will be held here this spring. It will be for 3 hours a night for 5 nights with 9 hours on Saturday.

Hoagland, Slater, Blake, Klubertans, Brown, Hubbell and the other good ones from across the line have been notified of the walk and it is expected they will all enter.

Three hours a night will provide the best possible kind of sport for the spectators as the walkers will be going at their top clip all the time and the contest will be one of speed rather than endurance.

NAPANEE SPECTATOR SAYS THAT HAWKEY WAS HISSED

Sporting Editor Star;

I notice in your paper today an article headed; "Biting in wrestling match" at Napanee. I wish to correct that account as there was no biting done.

Hawkey deliberately rubbed his hand across Hurtubise's teeth and made a scratch but no blood, and two minutes afterwards when in Hurtubise's power and in danger of a fall he squealed and was allowed a fall on a foul.

FAIR PLAY.
Napanee.

Hurtubise himself says there was no biting whatever done, but that Hawkey persisted in mugging and jabbing him in the mouth.

He was just about to get a fall on the Kingston man when the latter protested to the referee.

THE REAL REASON WHY JACK JOHNSON LEFT SYDNEY

San Francisco, March 19.—Sam Fitzpatrick, the man who brought Jack Johnson to the front and was discarded by the black champion after the fight with Burns, arrived from Vancouver yesterday and registered at the Hotel Stewart. Fitzpatrick, who is one of the few remaining members of the old school of managers, takes a philosophical view of the matter and has no tears to shed.

"We have broken up, and that's all there is to it," says Fitzpatrick. "I worked for two years to bring Johnson to the front and finally succeeded, with his assistance of course. But it's the same old story. He thinks he can manage himself and share all the profits. In the meantime, I guess I will have to dig up another champion for myself.

EXILED BY LAW.

"Johnson would have cleaned up a lot of money had he remained in Australia, but he was forced to leave when his six months' stay was up. There is a law in that country compelling all negroes, Chinese and Japanese to put up a bond for a six months' visit and at the end of that time they are compelled to beat a hasty retreat.

"I honestly believe that Jeffries is the only fighter in the world who would stand a chance with Johnson, and he must get into the best possible if he ever expects to make a showing with the big smoke. The whole thing hinges on this. With Jeff in shape, the fight would prove one of the greatest ever pulled off in any ring.

"It looks as though Jeff will be forced to declare himself one way or the other within the next week or so. Johnson will go around the country showing the big fellow up at every opportunity. Jeff must either say yes or no. He can't expect to keep on at his present clip, for I don't think that the public will stand for it.

"I have nothing to say against Johnson, only I don't like the way he has been knocking the moving pictures of the fight. He claims they were doctored, but this is not so. They are as fine a set of films as were ever taken, and they should make a great hit in this country. They proved a big success in Australia. Johnson says that the fifth round is being shown twice, but as there was a knock down in his favor there, it can easily be proved, but there is no truth in this assertion.

"I believe that the Johnson-Burns fight drew about $125,000 and perhaps a little more. Something like 20,000 people turned out to see it and some of them waited in line for their tickets from midnight the night before.

"Johnson, to my way of thinking, is just as great a fighter as Peter Jackson ever was. In fact, I think that this pair is about a standoff. Johnson has the nerve and the courage now, and is 100 per cent. a better man than he ever was. I don't think that he fears Jeffries or any man alive. He believes that he can beat them all."

THE INDIANS COMING STRONG

Took Three Games From Lockworks Last Night.

The Iroquois took three straights from the Lock Works last night, and one of their men, Gutterson, tied McIlroy's high score for the weekly box of cigars, 231. This is one of the very few 200 scores that have been made in a league game. Herb Martin distinguished himself by rolling an even 100 in the first game but he did better in the next two. It was the foul line that put him on the rough. The scores were as follows;

IROQUOIS.
Martin...	100	169	147
Gutterson...	183	167	231
Sutherland...	168	187	181

BILL O'HARA'S HUMBLE START

Would You Believe it, Great Ball Player Used to Live in Lindsay

The Lindsay Warder says;—When William O'Hara now centre fielder for the New York Giants played short-stop for the Lindsay Midland Leaguers in the days that were, he received the munificent sum of $2 a week for his services. Of course those two lonely dollar bills looked pretty small to O'Hara and he organized many a lament over the smallness of the returns from playing baseball. To add to his salary he was forced to work ten hours a day, and altogether life wasn't just a picnic.

Now O'Hara commands a pay roll of about $500 a month and lives on the fat of Yankee land. His ability as a ball player has caught the eye of Mugsy McGraw and Bill is in clover.

W. Latimer traveller for Chas Bush, Ltd., of Toronto, and a former ball player on the Lindsay team was in town to-day. It was Latimer who secured O'Hara the job playing ball for Lindsay. Latimer played second sack and O'Hara tore up grounders at short stop. Before O'Hara had appeared on the Lindsay diamond the team was lacking a good short-stop and Latimer suggested the Toronto youngster.

As an infielder O'Hara has hardly been a success, but he is a fiend to hide the ball. Even in those days the latent instinct of a born slugger was often manifested. Fans who followed the team will never forget when O'Hara pounded the ball over the farthest fence at Oshawa for a home run with a couple of men on bases and the Lindsay crowd nearly went crazy with excitement. Bill was just a youngster in those days. The Lindsay team was entered in the Midland League and were climbing to the top fast when the organization blew up.

WRESTLING

Yaneke Rogers, the popular wrestler, expects to have a hard task when he goes on the mat at the Star Theatre on Friday night with Hassan Abdallah the famous Turkish champion, who made small pie of Fritz Mohl a week ago. That this Turk is a great wrestler cannot be denied. He won the first great American tournament held in Sohmer park, Montreal two years ago, and also won the tournament at the Folies Berger a, Paris and another in Brazil. He is considered the strongest wrestler in the business today and intends to make Yankee know he has been wrestling. It is certainly be a fine bout. Hassan is training with the boys at the YMCA and is very popular.

Kansas City, Mo., March 24—Frank Gotch, the champion preparing for his wrestling bout with Raoul De Rouen tomorrow night took on a number of local wrestlers today and then had a warm workout with Farmer Burns. De Rouen said he had trained faithfully for three weeks and felt that the best results would be obtained from resting now. The betting today was 2 1-2 to 1 on Gotch.

Banks, under the Market Clock has a few guaranteed Bicycles at $10.

BOWLING

Pittsburg, March 24—James Cook, Canadian champion in the individuals and now residing in Sebring, Ohio and defeated in the international title event by Martin Kern, St. Louis, who rolled a total of 1,753, defeating the former by 59 pins. The Canuck rolled in fine form, and should have been the victor had he had the ordinary amount of luck on his side. He defeated Wengler of Chicago, the A.B.C. champion by 102 pins.

LEAGUE GAME

The Pacifics and H.A.C. team will play a league match at the PBC alleys tonight. The players are asked to be on hand at 7.45.

COMES BACK WARM FOR PRO. BALL

March 25, 1909.

Sporting Editor of Review.

Dear Sir,—I notice that some communications are being published on the baseball situation in Peterborough and the advisability of having a semi-professional team here. If anyone is enterprising enough to get a good bunch of players together I for one will be quite willing to patronize the games. I take no personal interest in the development of players, but if they are local men or not I like to get my money's worth just the same as when I pay for a show or any other kind of attraction.

I think this talk of people being expected to support amateur this or that is all nonsense, for when our amateurs do become good they generally leave town to join an "amateur" organization in another place or turn professional and quite legitimately employ their talents in entertaining the public and making a living for themselves.

And what's more, if any person or persons want to form a professional nine in this city its none of "Fan's" business. He won't be called upon to pay the player's salaries and even if he stays away I think the league should be profitable.

Yours truly,
SPECTATOR.

SPORTING TALK

Telegram:—Go west young man and grow up with the politicians. Here's Billy Buchannan former secretary of the O.H.A., a full-fledged M.P.P. for Lethbridge City. Bill always had bright smile and winning ways and he'll be cheerful company in the Alberta Legislature for Attorney-General Charley Cross formerly of the Tecumseh lacrosse team.

THE BELMONT TOURNAMENT

The games in the Belmont pool tournament held at the club rooms last evening, afforded considerable excitement for both players and onlookers. Much interest is being displayed in the tournament and it bids fair to be very successful. The winners were as follows;—J. E. Pollard, R. C. Waram, R. Hunter and O. Milburn, who won by default, as his opponent was unable to be present.

LACROSSE

A meeting of all interested in lacrosse is called for to-night at 8 o'clock at the Y.M.C.A. A large attendance is requested.

OFFICERS OF THE GOLF CLUB

At a meeting of Peterborough Golf and Country Club on Tuesday evening the following officers were elected;

President—W. H. Denham.

Secretary-Treasurer—H. W. Hoopwood.

Chairman Tennis and Boating Committee.—F. D. Kerr.

Chairman House Committee—T. F. Matthews.

A meeting will be held in April to elect executive, green and house committees.

PREPARING FOR SYRUP SEASON

The driver of the Warsaw stage, Mr. Joseph Crowe, who was in the city to-day, took back with him a large number of pails and other utensils which are used in maple syrup making. He reports that the farmers are making preparations for this material, hence the demand for more stock.

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

HOW ICE PALACES EXAGGERATE IDEAS REGARDING CANADIAN WINTERS

In a letter recently received from a gentleman who was prominently connected for many years with one of the leading universities in Canada, and who now occupies a similar position in England, the following comment is made:

"The carnival has created some excitement in all parts of Great Britain, and the temperature in Montreal is apparently unusually low."

What better evidence is required that advertising ice palaces creates exaggerated ideas abroad regarding our winters! The present winter has been unusually moderate, yet it is not to be wondered at that the publicity given to the carnival and ice palace should have caused even our well-informed kinsmen across the sea to imagine that we were having unusually severe weather, the necessary accompaniment, according to their minds, of ice palaces.

ONE ON THE DOCTORS.

Madame J. Rioux, St. Moise, Que., says:—"Fruit-a-tives cured me of severe Liver Disease. Neither doctors nor any other remedy did me any good, but Fruit-a-tives promptly cured."

"Fruit-a-tives" always cure Liver Trouble, Biliousness and Constipation because they act directly on the liver. They stimulate the secretion of Bile, which decreases the quantity of blood in the liver and thus relieves the Congestion or Biliousness. With plenty of Bile to move the Bowels, there is an end to the Constipation.

"Fruit-a-tives" are the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes—prepared by a newly discovered process, and combined with valuable tonics and antiseptics. They are, without doubt, the most popular remedy in Canada to-day.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. If you can't get "Fruit-a-tives" in your neighborhood, these wonderful tablets will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by addressing Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

STREETS COULDN'T BE MUCH WORSE

This is what pedestrians are saying today, coupled sometimes with something a good deal stronger. Not for months have the streets been in worse condition. And no one is to blame except the weather. The sidewalks were in fine shape yesterday afternoon and everyone was remarking on the lovely weather. Not so today.

The snow and the rain have made the walking just as bad as it can possibly be.

It surely is lovely spring weather.

5000 Facts About Canada

The 1909 edition is out of that most useful and valuable booklet, "5,000 Facts about Canada," compiled by Frank Yeigh, of Toronto, who is widely known throughout the Dominion as an authority on things Canadian. Nearly 25,000 copies were sold of the 1908 edition, the demand coming from every part of this continent and the British Empire. The idea worked out, that of a concrete fact in a sentence, is an excellent one, the data being arranged under such self-indexing titles as area, agriculture, banking, commerce, finances, mining, railways, wheat fields, etc. The wealth of material contained in small space is a revelation to even a well informed Canadian of the standing and resources of the country. The book is published at 25 cents a copy by The Canadian Facts Publishing Co., 667 Spadina Avenue, Toronto, Canada, or may be had from newsdealers.

THE WRINGER

Wring out, wild Belle, with swish and swash,
With cloud of steam and rub-a-dubs,
With squeak of wringer, creak of tubs—
Wring out, wild Belle, the weekly wash.

Wring out the old, wring out the new;
Wring lightly, Belle, and have a care
That sheet is tearing. Let it tear,
'Tis thus we tell the false from true.

Wring out that shirt-waist home-designed;
It ne'er shall vex my spirit more,
I'll send it to the heathen poor
To help re-dress some womankind.

Wring out that slowly fading frock
Of ancient form and last year's sleeves,
That shirt quite a la mode of Steve's
And Maud's new-fangled fancy stock.

Wring out odd shapes of every size—
The ever-narrowing undervest,
The worn-out socks, and all the rest,
Wring out, wild Belle, to the wild skies!

NEW CULT FOR SOUL MATES

Society Formed in Suburb of Boston Has Peculiar Object

Boston, Mass., March 24.—A society having for its aim the cultivation of the human figure until it becomes absolutely symmetrical, has been formed in Auburndale and has already extended its influence into the neighboring suburbs, the Newtons, Winthrop, Revere, Brookline, Lincoln and Dorchester.

The club is formed on the plan of having an equal number of men and women on the rolls, and so popular has the new science of symmetry become that no less than 200 of both sexes attended a recent gathering in Norumbega Hall. The creed of the cult is embodied in a book which has already been written and is ready for the printer. Its title is "The Human Limit," and it deals with affinity extensively and especially the power to recognize affinities, so that soul mates may know each other at a glance with a view to perfect and happy marriage.

The founder and teacher of the new idea is Edward Chase Merrill, formerly instructor in the Boston School of Practical Psychology. Both he and his wife, he declares have become ten years younger as the result of practising the precepts of the new science, which is asserted to be based on the philosophy of Froebel. The club is known as the Good Idea Club.

The 12-year-old daughter of William Ryan, of Courtland, who was accidentally shot by her little brother, is dead.

When the whistle blew at No. 6 colliery of the Dominion Coal Co. at Glace Bay yesterday none of the men responded.

GALVESTON SCHEME IS SAID TO BE A GREAT SUCCESS

City is Now Run Like a Private Business and the Taxes Are Light—This Should Interest Peterborough Ratepayers.

President Eliot, of Harvard, finds after two weeks of investigation and observation that the business of the city of Galveston "is run as a private business would be run." Some opponents of administrative reform in Boston have told us that it is impossible to manage the affairs of a municipality strictly on business principles. However, the people of Galveston have succeeded in applying ordinary business principles to the management of their municipal affairs. And what Galveston has done the people of Boston are competent to do if they will. The city of Houston, starting to apply business principles to city affairs is contemplating notable results. In four years of business administration a floating debt of $400,000 has been paid, a sinking fund has been created for the bonded debt of the city, $7,0000,00 out of current revenue has been invested in permanent improvements, the water works system has been bought by the municipality and placed on a paying basis and the city has been made more attractive and profitable for business enterprise. Des Moines has a similar record of business success. In two months the Massachusetts city of Haverhill has found business methods in municipal affairs possible and profitable. There is no reason why Boston should confess lack of ability to manage its affairs with equal wisdom.

President Eliot found a representative type of business men serving the city of Galveston. The other cities to which reference is made have found it possible to secure the services of their most representative citizens for the administration of municipal business. The characteristic complaint of cities under the old political system of administration is that desirable men will not become candidates for public office. The contrasting experience of Galveston, Des Moines, Houston and Haverhill, suggests that the fault is not with men who shrink from public service, but with the environment of public service which forces self respecting men to avoid it. British and European cities find the best administrative talent responsive to their call for public service. In the earlier history of American cities municipal service was regarded as an honor for any citizen. The presence of the political boss and the service of desirable citizens are incompatible. In admitting the boss American cities have driven desirable citizens out of public service. Galveston has found a way to draw them back. And in so doing she has, as President Eliot says, given to the country a most valuable lesson in municipal science. Will Boston confess that it is incompetent to learn the lesson that other cities through the country are mastering?—Boston Herald.

THE WATER COMMISSIONERS AND PROPOSED NEW BY-LAW

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I notice by the local press that the Water Commissioners actually intend taking the people into their confidence and telling them how they propose to spend their, the peolpe's, not the commissioners', money. It is true very considerable pressure has been brought to bear on these gentlemen, this loving, happy trio, before they would deign to explain to the people how they intended to dispose of the money taken, though not required, from the over-taxed water consumers.

First. Do we need a new dam? If so, why? It has been but fifteen years in use; was erected by the directors of a private company, who engaged the most skillful and competent men obtainable at that time; no expense was spared in material or otherwise; it was constructed on a par with the rest of the plant, (and that the work was not scamped is in evidence to-day after twenty-seven years. The expense of maintenance has always been at a minimum, all except apparently this much-maligned dam. William Kennedy, jr., was their consulting engineer. His plans and specifications were followed, and Messrs. Edward Wade and William Martin, two most capable and experienced men, had charge of the actual work of construction. It was day work and instructions were to get the best, while the present efficient superintendent was always in evidence. Why is it, then, that after so short a period of time, this costly structure is to be demolished and the taxpayers' money, to the value of the work, thrown away? Is it that the commissioners wish to erect a monument to their incapability?

The plans were for pumps in triplicate, while two only have been placed and in use. The wheel-pit and connections are all ready to put in a pump capable of discharging, with those not in use, double the quantity of water at present discharged. The dam has never been completed. About eight inches more head can be obtained—a very considerable percentage in a nine-foot head, as any engineer will state. The east side of the power was never finished by protecting the banks from wash-outs, as intended.

It is up to Mr. Kennedy and the commissioners to show who are in fault. If the commissioners carried out the details of Kennedy's plans, and the construction has been found faulty, he should be the last person to re-engage to furnish other plans or give expert evidence as to this work.

If the work has not been completed according to plans and specifications, these commissioners should not be entrusted with new work of such magnitude, as it will just as likely be neglected. To build a dam 500 feet below the present one, new pumping station and pumping plant, practically does away with all of the expenditure at the present dam, as it will only be a bill of expense and will waste away and deteriorate, as new work properly finished, should not require auxiliary power, and to keep it in readiness to use, will cost many times what is necessary to look after the anchor or frazile ice. The old pump house at Auburn has been left there for fifteen years, to be called on for auxiliary power without any cost to the city, thanks to Mr. Kendry, but it has never been required.

Where is the engineer who will not give it as his opinion that new costly work will give better satisfaction than some that has been in use? Have these experts said definitely that the present dam is actually beyond repair? If so, get one who will say it is not and as to the cost necessary to make it perfect. This dam is not as appears to the uninitiated, a mere wooden structure, but is, on the contrary, a solid embankment that cannot be displaced for many years to come if proper precautions are taken to protect the east side from washouts. Power can be developed from the east side of the present dam and openings and plans originally provided for same. The pumping capacity of the present pump in triplicate was estimated to supply an ordinary city population of 45,000 people by the same Engineer Kennedy.

Have the commissioners estimated what it will cost to remove 500 feet of solid crib work filled with immense boulders and an embankment extending up-stream covered with water. What estimate on this have the people to face?

The people should know now, definitely, what the cost will be, and in detail. The theoretical return in dollars for the horse power generated is a rosy proposition on paper, see Culverwell, but the initiated find that there are certain fixed expenditures, as with all other business, and many unforseen ones. That the expenditure of $120,000 will not add to the rate and, therefore, presumably will not cost the ratepayers anything is such utter rot and an excuse so childish that it is not worthy of any consideration, and I am surprised that a number of businessmen should so express themselves to an intelligent body of ratepayers and be endorsed by the press of the city. An increase in the rates to the water consumers who pay seventy-five per cent. of the taxes, increases their annual tax rate, whilst the surplus earnings from the water consumers if not returned to them in reduction of rates as they should if handed to the city, cannot but reduce the alreally very high rate. This appears to be a most outrageous and uncalled-for expenditure, and should not be encouraged.

Thanking you for the space,
G. W. HATTON.

INTERESTING INFORMATION RE DREDGE AT HUNTER-ST. BRIDGE

From Hansard, March 22nd.
DREDGING IN OTONABEE RIVER, PETERBOROUGH.

Mr. Bradbury asked;

AMICABLE ENDING TO JACKSON-CARMAN CONTROVERSY RE BIBLE

After a temperate discussion lasting a little over two hours last night the regents of Victoria College adopted the report of the faculty of theology with regard to the situation which has arisen in consequence of the Rev. George Jackson's lecture on Genesis and Rev. Rev. Dr. Carman's reply. The decision not to take any action confirms Mr. Jackson in his appointment to the recently-created English Bible chair at Victoria College. Dr. Carman presided at the meeting of the regents last night, and it was early apparent that the board had met with the determination to decide upon the question in an amicable spirit.

The resolution before the meeting of regents last night was one from the faculty of theology at Victoria College which met yesterday afternoon in the President's office. At that meeting there were present: President Rev. N. Burwash, Dean, Rev. F. H. Wallace, and professors Rev. A. H. Reynar Rev. John Burwash, Rev. J. F. McLaughlin, Rev. R. P. Bowles, Rev. J. G Blewett, Mr. A. P Misener and Rev. Geo. Jackson. The resolution sent by the unanimous voice of the faculty to the regents was moved by Prof. Reynar and seconded by Prof. John Burwash.

FACULTY RESOLUTION ACCEPTED

The resolution of the faculty was proposed by the board of regents last night in the following resolution;—

"Resolved, that the report of the President of the university in reference to the recent theological controversies be received and adopted by this board as a statement of the position of Victoria University in the matter; and further resolved, that it is considered desirable that whatever has been written of a personal character calculated to wound the feelings of brethren or interfere with their work be withdrawn and further resolved that the report of the President and the resolution of the faculty of theology be published in the Christian Guardian and in the secular press, accompanied by a copy of this resolution the resolution to be certified by the Chairman and Secretary of the Board.

"Certified to be a true copy of a resolution unanimously adopted at a meeting of the Board of Regents of Victoria University this 23rd day of March A.D., 1909.

"(Signed) A. Carman, Chairman.
(Signed) N. Burwash, Secretary.

"It is required of the theological faculty of Victoria College that nothing shall be taught to our students which will in any way prove destructive to faith in the inspiration and authority of the Divine revelation given to us by God in the Holy Scriptures or in their integrity and trustworthiness as taught in the fifth article of religion on the basis of which our Church and college were both founded. This article reads as follows;—'The Holy Scriptures contain all things necessary to salvation so that whatsoever is not read therein nor may be proved thereby, is not to be required of any man that it should be believed as an article of faith or be thought requisite or necessary to salvation. In the name of the Holy Scripture we do understand those canonical books of the Old and New Testament of whose authority there never was any doubt in the Church.'

WILL NOT BUY THE ESTURIAN

Lindsay Business Men Do Not Think it Would be Profitable

Lindsay, March 24.—Recent negotiations to purchase the steamer Esturion from the Trent Valley Navigation Co. have come to naught. A few of the leading business men of the town were endeavoring to purchase the steamer to place her on the route from Lindsay to Sturgeon Point, but the project has almost been abandoned.

"There are so many power boats owned by summer residents of Sturgeon Point who reside in Lindsay, that it would hardly be a business proposition to buy the Esturion and place her on the route," a man who was interested said this morning. "Every owner of a power boat means the loss of passengers and it is just as expensive to run a boat empty as one heavily laden with passengers. It would take considerable money to run the Esturion."

Elliott & Moynes will run the Kathleen this summer, and according to the look of thinks are going to have a monopoly of the passenger traffic. Whether, as the business man stated, it would be profitable to run another boat, is a question.

It has been hinted that other navigation companies in the lower lakes may place a small steamer on the route.

Are you going to hear Signor Zara, baritone, as Escamilla, to-morrow evening when he will sing the famous 'Toreador' song.

CARNEGIE'S "PROBLEMS OF TO-DAY"

The Historical Society of Peterborough wishes to announce the fourth and last of their series of lectures for the season. Mr. J. H. Burnham will lecture upon Mr. Andrew Carnegie's celebrated "Problems of To-day" in the Collegiate Institute on Friday evening, March 26th, at eight o'clock. The general public is cordially invited. Admission free. The society takes pleasure in extending a special invitation to the various industrial societies and unions of workingmen in the city and also to the employers of labor. Mr. Carnegie's book, which has been the talk of two continents, is an able and impartial review of the industrial conditions in the world to-day, together with a number of suggestions for the general betterment of those conditions and observations upon the responsibilities of the rich and the proper incidence of taxation.

WEDDING BELLS

MORROW—JOBE

A very pleasing event took place at 51 Weir street on Tuesday afternoon, March 23rd, 1909, at 3.30 o-clock, it being the occasion of the marriage of Miss Edith Lillian Jobe to Mr. John Morrow. The bride, who looked charming in a white taffeta silk empire gown trimmed with chiffon lace and ribbon with bridal veil and orange blossoms and carrying white roses, was escorted downstairs by her grandfather, Mr. Edward Clark.

Here her father met her, and leaning upon his arm she entered the room to the strains of the Wedding March played by Miss Lizzie Morrow, North Monaghan, cousin of the groom.

She was assisted by Miss Ella Morrow, sister of the groom, who was attired in a natural colored raw silk gown trimmed with chiffon lace and ribbon and carrying pink roses, and little Miss Edith Jobe, niece of the bride, and Master Geordie Benton, cousin of the bride, as ring bearer, both dressed in white.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Manning, pastor of St. James' church, beneath a bower of evergreens, ferns and cut flowers. The groom was assisted by Mr. Arthur Jobe, brother of the bride.

After the ceremony and congratulations the guests, about 40, repaired to the dining room, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served. The house was decorated throughout with evergreens, smilax, ferns and cut flowers. The bride's going-away gown was a tailor-made gown of green broadcloth, trimmed with buttons and strappings of self. They left amid a shower of confetti and rice for points west. Among her presents, which were numerous and beautiful, was a centrepiece of hand-made lace from England, and table linen from Rochester.

Have you ever heard The Toreador song from Carmen? If not, you will enjoy hearing it sung by Signor Zara at the Grand Opera House, to-morrow evening — Prices all reduced.

UNEMPLOYMENT AND THE REMEDY

Following will be found an interesting contribution from Mr. Sidney Webb, the English critic, on one of the questions discussed by Mr. Carnegie in his "Problems of To-day," which Mr. Burnham will lecture upon in the Collegiate Institute building next Friday evening:

"Mr. Sidney Webb, as a remedy for the existing evil, advocated some national system for ascertaining where there was employment and where there was labor. It was important to know where there was a surplus and where there was a deficiency. We had mercantile marine offices at every port, and that was why there were hardly any sailors among the unemployed. There should be some such system which would help to abolish casual labor. The scheme would require but two or three years to carry through, and the total cost would be but as that of one or two dreadnoughts. For between one and two millions a year they could solve the unemployed question, he thought, for ever."

PORT ARTHUR TAKES C.N.R. PLEA FOR SUBSIDY TO OTTAWA

Says Ontario Offer is Not Large Enough.

Insurance Men Oppose New Bill—The Pension Lists Discussed.

Ottawa, March 26.—A deputation from Port Arthur waited upon Hon. W. S. Fielding and Hon. Geo. P. Graham yesterday and urged that the Government grant assistance to the Canadian Northern for its proposed line from Sudbury to Port Arthur.

Towards this enterprise the Ontario Government is willing to give a land subsidy of 2,000,000 acres, but it was argued by the delegates that not only was this grant hampered by restrictions, but it was insufficient to enable the C.N.R. to raise the necessary capital for construction upon favorable terms. It was suggested, therefore, that the Dominion Government guarantee the bonds of the company, the bonds to be issued in three-year instalments as construction work proceeded, the plan being to have the gap completed in three years.

Obnoxious and socialistic were characterizations applied by J. K. Macdonald, appearing for the Life Officers' Association before the banking and commerce committee in discussing the insurance bill. He said that the managers considered that the bill had been framed in the interests of the policyholders as opposed to that of the shareholders, in providing for the election on every board of eight directors for the policyholders. Mr. Macdonald said five out of every twelve would be acceptable.

Hon. W. S. Fielding accepted responsibility for the clause.

The bill authorizing the Canadian Northern Railway to construct a line on Lake Superior to the National Transcontinental Railway, with several branches, caused some discussion in the railway committee yesterday morning.

The bill was reported.

In the Upper House yesterday, Senator Power called attention to the "unsatisfactory condition of the law with respect to the retirement of judges."

Senator Choquette referred to the case of a retired judge on pension taking his full allowance and going on the hustings as the chief organizer of a political party. He also commented on the case of a judge who had obtained his retirement and two-thirds allowance on the certificate of a doctor that he was physically incapable, and then contested and won a seat in the House of Commons, drawing an indemnity of $2,500 a year. This was hardly fair, just and honorable.

Sir Richard Cartwright agreed that this was an abuse, requiring an amendment to the statute.

By a vote of 15 to 9 the Senate railway committee yesterday afternoon accepted an amendment by Senator David in the form of the bill which the Senate last year substituted for the Lancaster bill, and which died with Parliament. The substitute bill goes to the Commons, but will be placed at the foot of bills and orders, which cannot be reached again this session unless the Commons unanimously consents. This was what happened last year.

Senator David's amendment will have the effect of putting the railway commission in motion immediately to order the protection of level crossings, thus throwing upon the commission the responsibility. This is the interpretation of Senator Beique.

The Littlest Girl

Mr. Charles Barber and Irving Beers will put on "The Littlest Girl" at the Grand Opera House next Monday night as a curtain-raiser to "The Triumph of Truth." Little Eleanor Garden will play the title role.

STRANGER DIED ON THE ROAD

Unknown Man Passed Away on Highway Near Guelph.

Guelph, March 26.—An unknown man, about 45 years of age, was found dead on the Elmira road, about two miles from Guelph on Wednesday. He had been lying there all day. His body was brought into the city on Wednesday night, and an inquest will in all probability be held.

He had a bundle of new clothes and $1.95 in his possession when found by County Constable Young. He was lying in a fence corner in a pool of water and snow. He was seen lying in the same spot in the morning by Wm. Brooder, a Guelph Township farmer, who was coming into the city. On returning at two o'clock Brooder was surprised to see the man in the same place, and he notified Robert Mason, a farmer who lived near there. Mason asked the man who he was, and why he was lying there. "My name is Hockins," he replied, "and I think I have got on the wrong road: I am sick, and I can't walk any further."

Mason notified Reeve MacDonald, who sent for Constable Young. When the constable arrived the man was dead, though the body was still quite warm. There is quite a strong feeling of resentment felt generally in this district over the fact that the poor fellow was allowed to lie all day in the snow until he died. The man was lame, and used two canes in walking.

DEBATE AT THE NORMAL SCHOOL

Collegiate and Normal School Students Will Take Part

At the Normal school to-night at eight o'clock a debate will be held by the students of the Collegiate Institute and Normal school. The subject will be, "Resolved, that independence is the likely destiny of Canada." The affirmative will be taken by Mr. Colin Lees and Miss McKellar of the Normal school. Miss Mary Smith and Mr. John Garvin of the Collegiate will take the negative. A short musical programme will also be given, and the general public is invited. Silver collection at the door.

ACCIDENT AT BOWMANVILLE

Montreal Flyer Ran into Engine and Caboose — The Fireman Was Badly Injured

Special to the Review.

Bowmanville, March 26— The Montreal flyer ran into an engine and caboose returning to a siding after taking on water about 300 yards west of the station here about 1.30 o'clock this morning. The flyer, which was about half an hour late does not stop here and therefore had the right of way. Engineer David McKibbin of Toronto, applied the brakes but could not avert an accident. Notwithstanding that his engine was turned over, on its side he escaped unhurt, but Fireman Almon Arnold who jumped was badly cut about the face, one ear being almost cut off. None of the passengers was injured.

Tornado Kills Two.

Wichita Falls, Texas, March 26.—The tornado which swept across Oklahoma struck the school house in Howard and killed two girls, and seriously injured another. Thirty-three students were in the building.

Eight Killed by Falling Wall.

Chicago, March 26.—Eight workmen were killed by a falling wall at the stock yards yesterday. The wall had been left standing after the fire.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS

Steel-Coal Fight Ends.

Montreal, March 26.—The famous steel and coal dispute is settled at last. At the annual meeting of the coal company yesterday morning, President Ross announced that a settlement had been practically reached. The coal company will pay over a large amount on account as soon as the steel company furnishes vouchers. It is understood the steel company will receive between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000.

Obscene Letters Under Cover.

Ottawa, March 26.—The case of W. O'Connor of Papeneauville, near Hull, accused of sending obscene letters through the mails, was decided in O'Connor's favor. The letter had been opened in the dead letter office.

The defence was that the act appertaining to the sending of doubtful literature through the mails did not refer to letters under private cover, and in which there were no photos or prints.

Gas Men Want Rebate.

Ottawa, March 26.—Requesting a rebate of duty on bituminous coal used in the manufacture of gas, and that the by-products of the gas works, such as coke, coal tar and ammonia, be made dutiable, representatives of the Canadian Gas Association waited yesterday on the Ministers of Finance and Customs. The delegates who were accompanied by Major Beattie, M.P., London, and Senator Gibson, were: J. C. Hay, president of the association; W. H. Pearson, Jr., Toronto; Chas. Forbes, Ottawa, secretary; John Keillor, Hamilton, P. S. Coates, Chatham, and J. S. Morris, Montreal.

Farmer's Tumble Fatal.

Smith's Falls, March 26.—Andrew McGuire, a prominent farmer of Wolford, met with a tragic death yesterday morning.

He loaded his gun with the intention of going out to shoot crows in his yard, but a short time later a member of his family had occasion to go to the woodshed and was horrified to find McGuire lying on the floor with a gaping wound in his head. It is supposed that he stumbled on a block of wood which was near him, causing the rifle to discharge. Deceased was 50 years of age.

Held Up In a Pullman Car.

Denver, March 26.—Two highwaymen entered a sleeping car in the Denver & Rio Grande yards at West Denver early yesterday, "held up" six of the seven passengers, the conductor and porter, and got away with about $400 in cash. The only woman passenger was not molested.

Won't Defend Himself.

Cleveland, March 26.—Jas. Boyle, arrested for the Whitla kidnapping, said yesterday afternoon he would not oppose extradition and would engage a lawyer to defend his wife only. He said she had financial backing in Cleveland.

Girl Takes Poison.

St. Thomas, March 26.—Minnie Patterson, aged 30, daughter of Daniel Patterson, farmer, near Dutton, committed suicide yesterday by taking carbolic acid. After taking it she went to the barn and told her father what she had done.

NEW BISHOP OF TORONTO DONS THE ROBES OF OFFICE

St. James Cathedral is Crowded to Doors by Clergy and Laity When Five Visiting Clerics Invest Bishop Sweetman's Successor With Insignia of New Position.

Toronto, March 26.—Surrounded by bishops of the church, and robed for the first time in the robes of office, the Ven. James Fielding Sweeny, M.A., D.D., was yesterday morning consecrated Bishop of the Diocese of Toronto.

The consecration ceremony in St. James' Cathedral was performed by the senior bishop of the Church of England in Canada, Bishop Hamilton, of Ottawa.

The ceremony opened at 10 o'clock with morning prayer. At 10.30 the bishops retired to the southwest vestibule, and robed. The clergy went to the schoolhouse. At 11 o'clock, headed by the choir of twenty-four boys, the procession formed up in the schoolhouse, and filed through the long awning-covered passageway connecting the school and the cathedral.

The order of procession was as follows:

First came the choir, twenty-four boys in their small white surplices, their leader at their head; then came the clergy, twenty-seven in number, in the order of their seniority; next the honorable secretaries of the synod, and following them the canons of the Church as follows: Rev. Canons Tucker, Broughall, Clark, O'Meara, Davidson, Ingles, Cody, Spragge, Tremayne, Farncomb, Murphy, Reiner, Greene, Cayley, Macnab, Macklem and Welch.

Then came Archdeacon Warren, of Peterborough; and immediately behind him the bishop-elect, the Ven. James Fielding Sweeny. He was attended by Canon Dixon and Canon Broughall, his chaplains.

Then came the bishops, Bishop Hamilton, of Ottawa; Bishop Dunn, of Quebec; Bishop Dumoulin, of Niagara; Bishop Mills, of Ontario; Bishop Williams, of Huron, and Bishop Worrell, of Halifax and Assistant Bishop Reeve, of Toronto, were all present. The only bishops not present were Archbishop Matheson, of Rupert's Land, and Bishop Thorneloe of Algoma.

The head of the procession entered the church at six minutes after eleven o'clock. It took ten minutes for it to file through. The course was down the west aisle, turning east at the south end of the church, and up the centre aisle. The choir boys took their places and the clergy then formed a lane through which the secretaries, Archdeacon Worrel, the bishop-elect, the senior bishop, and the visiting bishops passed.

When all was still Bishop Hamilton, of Ottawa, commenced the communion service. The Epistle, 1 Timothy, 3-1, was read by Bishop Darlington. Following this, Bishop Dunn, of Quebec, read the Gospel, St. Matthew, 28-18. The Nicene Creed was recited, and Bishop Dumoulin, of Niagara, took his place in the pulpit.

Following the sermon, the bishop-elect was presented to the senior bishop by Bishop Mills, of Ontario, and Bishop Reeve, with the words, "Most reverent Father in God, we present unto you this godly and well-learned man to be ordained and consecrated bishop." Then the mandate for consecration was read, and following it, the oath of obedience was taken.

The church was crowded, and many people lined the sidewalks outside. Eighteen policemen were on hand to keep them in check. Admission to the cathedral was given only by ticket.

In the evening St. Alban's Cathedral was thronged to the doors with an interested and reverent congregation to witness the installation, enthronement and induction of the newly-consecrated bishop.

At 8 o'clock the choir and clergy entered, singing a processional hymn. Then Bishop Sweeny appeared at the west door, attended by his chaplains, Revs. Canon Dixon, and Broughall, and was "received with due observance" by the chapter of the cathedral. Having addressed the installant (Canon Welch), praying to be installed and enthroned, the letters of consecration were read by the chancellor of the cathedral, Rev. Canon Macklem, and "received with great willingness."

Proceeding to the chancel, the bishop knelt at the holy table in private prayer, rising after the collect. "Prevent us, O Lord," had been said by Canon Welch, president of the chapter.

The bishop then made the following promise:

"In the name of God, Amen. We, James Fielding, by Divine permission, Bishop of Toronto and Dean of the Cathedral Church of St. Alban the Martyr, do promise that we will keep all the statutes, regulations, ordinances and rules of the said cathedral church now or hereafter to be made and published by lawful authority, and that we will discharge all such duties as shall thereby appertain to the office of dean of the said cathedral church.

"So help me God, and these holy gospels."

He was thereupon conducted to his stall at the west end of the church and seated therein, the installant saying:

"Mayest thou adorn this seat amid thy brethren, given thee of God, with justice and with sanctity. God is mighty, and may He increase thy grace," the bishop answering "Amen."

Conducted thence and seated in the episcopal throne, the installant took him by the right hand and said:

"The Lord keep thy coming in and thy going out, from this time now and forever. Amen."

Then came the induction, the Bishop of Ottawa addressing Bishop Sweeney.

Choral evensong followed.

RADIAL RAILWAY CO. MUST HURRY

Line From Peterborough to Lakefield Must be Completed by August 1st, 1910---Schedule Prepared by Railway Committee.

Peterborough-Lakefield line to be completed by August 1st, 1910.

The above is the schedule set for the Peterborough Radial Railway Company by the Railway Committee of the Ontario Legislature yesterday morning. The application of the Company for an extension of time in which to commence work upon their proposed lines outside the city came up, and the judgment of the committee is very pleasing to the Stony Lake cottagers and other citizens, who have been pressing for the early construction of the line to the lakes.

Mr. J. H. Larmonth and Mr. E. A. Peck appeared for the Radial Railway Company; Mayor Rush and Ald. McIntyre, Phelan, Duffus, Duncan, Buller and Bradburn for the city, and Messrs. Robert Neill, F. Brownscombe and Jas. Acton for the Stony Lake Cottagers' Association. A large number of Toronto citizens who summer at Stony Lake were also present.

The Radial Railway Company asked for an extension of two years dating from May 14th 1909, in which to commence work on the extensions, and five years in which to complete the same.

The case of the company was presented by Mr. Larmonth and Mr. Peck, the city's stand was explained by Mayor Rush, and the Stony Lake Cottagers' Association's views were presented by Mr. Robert Neill and Mr. James Acton of Toronto.

The Railway Committee took the stand that the Peterborough Radial Railway Company had not been proceeding fast enough and prepared the schedule given above, and the company will be held to it.

Mr. J. Thompson, M.P.P., for East Peterborough was present and opposed the extension of time on behalf of the village of Lakefield.

MUCH EXCITEMENT IN AMSTERDAM

Amsterdam, March 26.—The entire Dutch nation is awaiting momentarily the expected signal from the royal palace, announcing the birth of an heir to the throne. Preparations have been made to announce the event with flags by day and with colored fire by night, and gunners are being held in readiness to inform the public of the event of a prince or a princess by the firing of cannon. Officials are waiting in their home or their offices in the expectancy of a hasty summons to the palace formally to chronicle the birth, while telegraphers have been warned to be in readiness for extra duty. Picture postcards in connection with the accouchment of Queen Wilhelmina are being sold on the streets. The favorite among these novelties shows a stork bringing a baby boy to the palace.

YOUTH ADMITS THE SHOOTING

Windsor, March 26.—Wm. Thompson, 16 years of age, was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary by Justice Teetzel, after his counsel withdrew the plea of not guilty of murder, and presented a plea of manslaughter, in connection with the shooting of his father, Elijah Thompson, in Malden Township, December 24 last.

The prisoner's mother displayed no emotion in telling of the crime, of which she was an eye-witness.

His lordship held up the case as a warning to parents to teach their children self-control, and to keep firearms out of their reach. He would show leniency because the shooting was not without provocation, the lad thinking he was about to be roughly-treated by his father.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Chief of Police Allan Wright of Ingersoll is dead.

The Dominion Government will put a stop to the exportation of natural gas.

The Cabinet will meet on Saturday, when the question of Canada's assistance to Britain in the present crisis may be considered.

Clause two of the Canada Life bill was thrown out by the standing orders committee at Ottawa, and the whole measure will have to stand over until next session.

The Cleveland & Sarnia Lumber Co. has bought Waldie's limit and the mill at Spragge, and will move the mill to Sarnia. The price is said to have been $1,800,000.

STILL LOOKING FOR REVOLVER POLICE GIVEN MANY CLUES

Hamilton, March 26.—Search is being continued for the revolver with which the murder of Ethel Kinrade was committed. In connection with this, the detectives are getting some interesting suggestions from people who have dreamed of the location of the weapon, or profess to have learned about it from other sources. One woman said she dreamed it was in a jar of fruit. A man who is interested in psychic phenomena, states that he has been told by the spirits that the murderer hid the revolver in a little brook, digging a hole for them (he says there were two) and afterwards tramping the mud over them. Another man called on Detective Miller personally with an infallible plan to catch the murderer. So sure was he of it, in fact, that he considered the $2,000 as good as his. The detective didn't see it that way, however.

"The inquest will be kept open until we finish following up all the clues we have," was the statement made by one of the detectives yesterday. "There is a number of little things that have to be looked up, and these will take us several hundred miles, perhaps. It all takes time."

CROWN PRINCE OF SERVIA HAS RENOUNCED THE THRONE

New Bishop Has Been Consecrated

RIGHT REV. J. F. SWEENY, M.A., D.D.

DRESS FROZEN TO THE GROUND

Toronto, March 26.—A woman, evidently insane, was arrested yesterday by Chief Constable Collins of North Toronto, and sent to St. Michael's Hospital until she can be identified, if possible. The woman was seen entering a piece of woods back of the Wilshire farm near Glen Grove late Wednesday afternoon. Late at night another person saw her sitting under a tree. Yesterday morning she was found still seated there, where she had evidently been all night long in the rain and sleet, for her garments were frozen to the ground where she sat, and were soaked through with water.

And Prepares to Leave the Country.

Charged With Murdering Servant and Committing Acts of Brutality.

This action is the result of a bitter press campaign in which the Crown Prince was accused of being the cause of the recent death of one of his servants, a man named Kolskovits.

In a letter to Premier Novakovitch yesterday morning the Crown Prince announces that he has taken this step rather than rest under the suspicion of having murdered his servant, and that by the renunciation he foregoes special privileges and immunities that attach to the person of the heir to the throne. Continuing, he expresses his willingness to proceed abroad for a lengthy sojourn.

His riotous living has alienated the affections of the Servian people, and it often has been said that they would welcome the substitution of his younger brother, Alexander, as heir to the throne.

The renunciation of the Crown Prince brings a new and perhaps important element into the crisis between Austria-Hungary and Servia, which is indirectly affecting all the great powers of Europe. The prince has been recognized as one of the radical "fighting element" and while this is not the reason publicly assigned for his withdrawal, it may yet exert an important calming influence on the present crisis.

The servant, Kolskovits, was removed to a hospital last week suffering from serious internal injuries and he died after an operation. According to the report of the doctors who performed an autopsy on the body, the man suffered from hernia and his death was due to serious injury consequent upon falling down stairs.

According to current reports, Kolskovits, before his death asserted that the injuries to his head and abdomen had been inflicted by the Crown Prince.

There have been many previous reports of the brutalities of the youth since he came to Belgrade after the murders of King Alexander and Queen Draga in 1903. Statesmen and officials of high and low degree are said to have been beaten and fired on by the prince during fits of crazy anger. Another story credited him with the murder of a gamekeeper, and still another with an attempt to kill firemen who opposed his efforts to force his way into a Belgrade nunnery.

A Step In the Direction of Peace.

London, March 26.—The Balkan difficulty has assumed a somewhat new aspect, owing to the sensational news of the abdication of the Servian Crown Prince. The prince hitherto has been considered the leader of the war party at Belgrade and his firebrand speeches have done much to influence the feelings of the Servian people. They are not wanting those both here and at Vienna who believe that a political move underlies his renunciation. Whether or not this is the case, it is certain that the removal of the Crown Prince from the scene is a step making for peace.

TO START BORING

Machinery Being Shipped Here to Drill for Natural Gas.

Drilling for gas will be started on the block of land in North Monaghan and Smith Townships just west of the city, upon which gas leases have been secured. Mr. R. H. Leary informed the Review to-day that drilling machinery was being shipped here from the Niagara peninsula, and would arrive in the course of a few days. Boring for gas will then be started immediately but at what point has not yet been decided.

Several tests will be made if gas is not struck when the first well is sunk.

LEFT ALONE IN HOUSE, FOUR CHILDREN MEET TERRIBLE END

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, March 26—A West Shefford, Quebec, special says; "Another case of leaving children alone at home, while parents went out, has resulted very seriously for Mr. and Mrs Henry Everett, who suffered the loss of their four young children, two girls and two boys aged seven and two years, five years and three years respectively.

It appears Mrs Everett went to visit neighbors about a mile away and while absent from the house, it took fire in some unaccountable way, the flames spreading quickly and when discovered it was impossible too do anything to save the children, who all perished with their pet dog."

TAXES ARE QUITE FAIR SAYS PREMIER OF ONTARIO

Toronto, March 26.—A vigorous protest was made by Mr. Reed, member for South Wentworth, when the Legislature yesterday took up Hon. Frank Cochrane's bill in committee to provide, among other things, that Burlington Beach shall contribute $250 annually as its proportion of the taxes of the County of Wentworth.

Mr. Reed referred to the Beach Commission as partisans and created a distinction which he would not expect to meet in a white man's country.

Premier Whitney was promptly on his feet to inform the hon. gentleman there was no distinction in this county, thank God, between white and other men. There was an overwhelming reason why the legislation embodied in the bill should be passed. The people of Burlington Beach had asked for it.

G. C. Wilson, member for North Wentworth, agreed with the Minister that there was nothing objectionable in the bill, and the amount of the proposed annual payment was much greater than that which the commissioners had suggested.

Hon. Adam Beck accepted certain suggestions to exempt police villages from the provisions of his bill to compel municipal councils to refer lighting contracts of more than one year's duration to the ratepayers.

On request of the Provincial Secretary, Mr. McLarty withdrew his bill to empower hospitals to expropriate land required for extension, and any special case could be dealt with by a private bill.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane registered another vigorous objection in the railway committee yesterday to speculative railway charters, when the Canada Central Railway for the fourth session asked a year extension to the time to begin construction on the line from Sudbury to Little Current. "This committee has no right," said he, "to keep charters alive this way." A last chance will be given to the promoters to-day.

The Tillsonburg & Southern Counties Radial Railway Co. was not given the right to use highways without consent of the municipalities, and with a few minor amendments the bill was reported.

A clause to operate Sunday cars was struck out of the Southwestern Traction Co.'s bill. Another clause in order to liquidate a floating debt and to increase the bonding privilege in defaulted interest payments stood over.

The Simon Railway & Power Co. secured a charter to build from Penetang to Coldwater, and can develop power at Big Chute on the Severn river.

PROTECTING THE PEOPLE

"The first venturous promoter of Gowganda mining enterprises to be legally charged with fraud has been arrested at [illegible]. It is questionable if the new district will ever acquire the fame of Cobalt. The fashion of holding mining company promoters to the truth had not grown up when the older place got its start."—Gazette.

During the last election one of the points made in favor of the Whitney Government was its laws governing mining and mining administration. Instead of a system of so-called laws rights of entry &c, that enabled the crook to lie and swindle to his heart's content, a regulation was instituted compelling all company promoters to stick to the truth in their prospectuses. The credit of this belongs entirely to the Whitney administration. Up to that time the honest explorer or investor had about as much hope of getting a fair deal as he had of getting the moon, with the difference that the moon could be seen while it is doubtful if the chance of the honest prospector was visible either to the naked or the assisted eye.

THE SEPARATE SCHOOL ACT

The amendment proposed to the Separate School Act in the Ontario Legislature provides that where a Roman Catholic holds property which is liable to pay the Separate School debenture-debt he cannot escape the liability by selling out to a Public School supporter. The liability incurred in the first place is to remain, as it were, a mortgage registered against the property of the Separate School supporter for the time of the debenture-debt. We have made inquiry from the legal department of the local municipality as to whether the public schools are in the position which is being laid claim to by Separate Schools. The answer is "No." The statement made by the municipal legal department is that when Public School supporters sell lands to Separate School supporters these lands become liable at once for Separate School debentures up to 30 years, the time allowed by law for Separate school debentures and cease to be liable for Public School debentures. The claim set up, therefore, would seem to be for something more than Public School supporters enjoy. Unless a much stronger and more equitable case is made out the request cannot with justice be granted and we see no just cause for the Catholic Register's strong and determined language respecting it. The claim that they are entitled to their share of the tax on public utilities goes with the right and privilege already conceded. That is not disputed. But it is quite a different thing to decree that transfers shall not be free. It is introducing a new element into business. Surely the great body of Separate School supporters can trust their co-religionists without putting a brake on them. We clip the following from the Catholic Register upon the subject:—

"Mr. McGarry, M.P.P. for North Renfrew, has introduced in the House a "Bill to amend the Separate Schools Act" so as to secure to the Catholic schools their rightful share of the taxes from public utilities.

By the North American Act the Dominion's Constitution the rights of the minority in education are protected in the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario.

In Quebec not merely the letter of the law but its spirit, are considered and the result is that Protestants have their Primary High and Normal schools and also their fair share of taxes according to the number of children attending school. In Ontario the Catholics are not allowed High or Normal schools and are deprived of their fair share of taxes on what are called public utilities, such as railroads, factories, etc., to which Catholics are obliged to pay bonuses the same as other people. Since Catholic ratepayers contribute their full share of these public utilities, it follows as a mere matter of justice that they should receive their full share of taxes coming to them.

The Protestants of this rich Province are well able to support the Public Schools without taking what does not belong to them. Not only that, but the great majority of Protestants are willing to support their own schools and to allow Catholics their proper share of the school taxes for the support of theirs. A few newspapers and lodges do not represent the people of Ontario in this matter but these few shout so loudly about Rome and the Hierarchy, "aggressive ecclesiasticism" etc., that some people get stampeded and imagine that the Pope of Rome is plotting to destroy all freedom in Canada.

"However Catholics have a right to these schools—they have a right to a fair share of the school taxes, they have the duty to perform of taking proper means to secure all their rights guaranteed and they do not propose to be bluffed, bulldozed or side-tracked in attempting to do it properly. Catholics are no interlopers in Canada; they have done their full share in building up this great country; they are only asking what they concede to others in this matter of schools, and they expect and have a right to expect, at least justice at the hands of their fellow-citizens of other creeds or no creed at all if not generosity. Sir James Whitney and his Government in many things have dared to do the right thing and we hope in this case that they will take the trouble to find out what is just and equitable and to act accordingly."

THE RAILWAY FRANCHISE

The Radial Railway Company was turned down hard by the Whitney Government and the representatives of the people in their request for a further extension of time. We have not heard of any offer of the company to give up its franchise, so it must be presumed that it wishes to keep it. Why, then, should it expect the public to be content with what it has done since 1902? The City Council has "got going" in this affair and backed by energetic representatives of the public to be served, has asked for a more energetic prosecution of the work. The House Committee, however, was not so lenient as the council, and declined to give so long an extension as the city was willing to grant. While private companies which invest their capital, should be protected within reason, they are not the only "pebbles on the beach." The public like youth will be served. It will do good all round.

EDITORIAL NOTES

No mistake can be made in offering our contribution to the naval defence of the Empire. Let not another day pass without it.

In the matter of law reform it would be unfair not to say that the Whitney Government has done its best. —The Globe.

According to a report tabled in the House of Commons the work of construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific during the past year cost the lives of 45 men. To soothe the sensibilities of our people, the further information is given that these victims were nearly all Italians, whose names are unknown as if the life of the poor sober, industrious Italian were not as precious as that of any other citizen. —Catholic Register.

The recent convention of Irish leaders held in Doublin spent an hour in bowling down Wm. O'Brien. The men who did the bowling were evidently somewhat fearful of the results of free speech. The episode reflects very little credit on John Dillon and his followers taken as a whole. It gave too much ground for the assertion that Home Rule in Ireland would mean nothing but ceaseless warfare amongst contending political factions. —The Catholic Register.

Socialism contains enough of half truths to make what appears to the uninstructed to be an exceptionally good case. It would be an attractive government if it were not economically and morally wrong. It has been tried times without number, but except in case of religious orders it has always ended in failure.—The Catholic Register.

Why the exception? An answer to this question might prove an interesting contribution to a much discussed topic.

LINDSAY TO HAVE BOWLING ALLEYS

Good News for the Lovers of Trundling in That Town

Lindsay, March 26—Chief of Police Albert Bell and Messrs Wm Hogard, elevator manager, and Chas Aikens, merchant tailor of Midland, were in town yesterday and leased the premises formerly occupied by Lang and Maher for a term of five years for the purpose of opening up a bowling alley.

They take possession of the premises on April 1st and in the meantime the store will be remodelled and put in first class condition. They will erect three of the most up-to-date alleys made at a cost of nine hundred dollars each.

These will be the first up to date alleys ever erected in Lindsay and already a number of local teams have been formed, with the intention of entering a league in the near future.

A Double Life

New revelations of the astonishing career of Azeff, the notorious agent provocateur, are given in an article on "the Russian spy system" in the new England Review, by a writer who screens an apparently authoritative identity behind the initials "D. S." They throw a grimly sensational light on some events in European history yet fresh in the public mind, and at the same time give a picture of the state of Russian administration and society which, despite the many pictures that have been drawn of the same subject, conveys an impression both fresh and powerful.

"D. S." was introduced to "Ivan Nicholaevitch" (as Azeff was known), and describes him as looking "a typical stockbroker or bookmaker." "His stout, well-nourished, well-clad figure, short neck and broad, round face, with its very thick and sensual lips, flat nose, and carefully cropped hair, were of that international type of professional financier you can meet upon every stock exchange in Europe. I tried in vain to find in his eyes that expression of welt schmerz so characteristic of the Russian idealist. They bore no expression at all. Protrudant, dark, filmy, they reflected as little of his mind as those of a fish. And yet his narrow, low forehead and heavy jaws showed great strength of will and resolution as well as insatiable instincts."

This was the man who led the most amazing double life that political history records. All the world knows now how, in the one role of revolutionist he played a leading part in the assassination of Plehve, the Grand Duke Sergius, and many other high personages of the Russian bureaucracy, even promoting plots against the life of the Tsar himself; while in his other capacity of police spy he betrayed to the government comrade after comrade in the terrorist movement. Of the medley of his crimes, however, the writer of this article reveals two which have an outstanding interest.

The story of the first of these clears up the mystery of "Father Gapon," of "Bloody Sunday" fame. How that remarkable man came to be found hanged in an empty house near St. Petersbourg has been the topic of many conflicting stories. This is the truth of the matter, according to "D. S."

"Gapon's death was due to Azeff, who, learning of Gapon's relations with Ratchkovsky (Vice-Director of the Department of Police), feared that he might become a dangerous rival, and still more that he might get wind of his, Azeff's, own role. He had been informed by Ratchkovsky that Gapon had agreed to betray him, Azeff, and another leader of the Social Revolutionists, for a large sum of money. Acting on the strength of this, in the spring of 1906 he prepared a fictitious plan, and proposed it to the party.

"Informing the party that he had heard that Gapon had promised to betray him and another to Ratchkovsky, he proposed to the party that Ratchkovsky should be murdered. His real object was to rid himself of Gapon. In the meantime, Gapon, with the object of keeping his promise to Ratchkovsky, had approached his old and formerly devoted friend, the engineer Rutenberg, offering him 50,000 roubles to help him in the betrayal of Azeff and the other leader.

"Rutenberg, inwardly indignant, affected to agree, and bearing in mind the proposal of Azeff to murder Ratchkovsky, suggested that the details of Azeff's betrayal, should be arranged in the presence of Ratchkovsky. A meeting was thereupon planned between Gapon, Rutenberg, and Ratchkovsky. Azeff thereupon proposed that at this meeting both Gapon and Ratchkovsky should be killed. But on the day of the meeting Ratchkovsky failed to keep the appointment and Gapon alone fell into the trap.

"Upon Gapon's body was found a visiting card of Ratchkovsky. Needless to say the whole thing had been previously arranged between Azeff and Ratchkovsky."

"About a year ago warnings of Azeff's role of provocateur had become so persistent that, with the object of playing a big trump to ensure his position in the revolutionary party, he prepared an attempt upon the life of the Tsar.

"Several attempts were arranged" says the writer "and though they failed it was through no fault of Azeff. The last attempt, of which Azeff had full knowledge failed exclusively through want of firmness on the part of the person who was to be the actual perpetrator. Twice he had the Tsar entirely at his mercy and twice his courage failed him."

The story of how Ratchkovsky came to occupy his present office is in keeping with the whole fantastic history.

"At the time of Witte's premiership Ratchkovsky was vice director of the department of police. In one of the rooms of the department a secret printing press was established and worked by the subordinates of Ratchkovsky. They printed proclamations inciting the people to organise pogroms for murdering the Jews. These proclamations were spread over Russia by secret agents.

"When Witte learned this fact he was smitten with a nervous paroxysm. Ratchkovsky was immediately dismissed from his post, and the printing press disappeared. But the very next day after the dismissal, Ratchkovsky was comfortably sitting in his former office at the same table and with the same authority. Only instead of vice director of the police department he was now called "Special Secretary of the Minister of the Interior."

"As a compensation for his change of title he received by order of the Tsar, a cheque for 75,000 roubles. This new post in the old surroundings he preserves until today."

The state of things at court is hardly less intricate. The writer alleges that there is a party at court who would be highly content to see young Michael — "dull-witted and spiteful"—in the place of his brother, the Tsar.

"The reigning empress knows this very well, and constantly trembles for the life of her little son, to such a degree that she has developed a perfect mania of persecution. Her fears were first aroused over three years ago through a sudden seizure of her son, which really seemed to be of a suspicious character. During the last eighteen months she has suffered from several nervous breakdowns due to this constantly increasing fear."

The Tsar himself is declared to be in sympathy with the methods of the secret service system.

"On my table is now lying a unique document, the 'Tsar's Gazette,' issued periodically in one single copy for his personal use, and containing an account of revolutionary events.

"The Tsar reads the report immediately, and marks it. Then it is sent back to the department of police, where it is kept in the greatest secrecy as a most precious relic, because of the marks made by the Tsar upon it. At the end of every year all the numbers of the 'Tsar's Gazette' are catalogued and magnificently bound.

"The number I speak of is for the year 1897. On the top of the first page of it is a broad blue pencil line made by the Tsar himself, and close by this mark is written in the minister's hand:

'His majesty has deigned to examine this in Tsarskoe-Selo.' (Signed), Minister of the Interior, Goremykin.

"Looking through the Gazette we find in it numerous articles with reports of 'secret collaborators,' i. e., agents provocateurs, upon the doings of the revolutionary parties. We find there, also, letters stolen from Count Leo Tolstoy, Felix Volkhovsky and others. We have, therefore, proofs that the Tsar knows of the existence of the agents provocateurs; that not only does he approve of the methods of Okhranka, but is personally interested in their activity."

THE COUNTY CONSTABLES

The high constables of Ontario had a meeting at the City Hall yesterday afternoon to discuss the reorganization of the provincial police force and adopted a number of resolutions, which they will present to the Attorney-General this forenoon.

A number of important changes are recommended by the constables. The first is the appointment of an inspector-general of police for the province with headquarters in Toronto who would be under the Attorney-General's Department.

Next it is suggested that in each county there be a county inspector, who would be under the inspector-general; in each township constables who would be under the orders of the county inspectors.

It is also recommended that in each county there be a board of police commissioners composed of the senior judge, the County Crown Attorney and the warden with the power to appoint the county inspectors and the township constables and that all be paid a salary at the expense of the Government. The constables are to be equipped with uniforms, etc. It is also suggested that the present constabulary be retained and that the men be paid at a rate of three dollars per day and expenses for the services they perform under the direction of the inspector or somebody authorized by him. The high constables should be submitted to an examination and demonstrate to the police commissioners their fitness for office.

There has been considerable talk of late of a mounted force, but those present at the meeting yesterday were not in favor of the proposition except perhaps in northern Ontario in the Cobalt and Muskoka districts. High Constable Merryweather of Wellington presided and Chief Constable Jamieson of Whitby, moved the resolution embodying the changes.

GOW GANDA WANTS A ROAD AND ALSO A POST OFFICE

Gowganda, March 24—The people of Gowganda are at present most interested in the question of getting a road. Every day shortens the life of the sleigh routes to Sellwood and Charlton. It is some two months now that a deputation waited upon the Government in regard to the building of a highway but as yet nothing has resulted and it looks as if the people of this community would have to depend on their own resources.

The Latchford-Elk Lake route is apparently a good one. Between these two places is good water communication, with only eighteen portages and from Elk lake, thirty-two miles of wagon road would give easy access to Gowganda.

It is said that one hundred and fifty men could construct some kind of a road over this thirty-two mile stretch inside a month if the Government would allow the timber to used in corduroying the swamp. It is reported that the Gowganda Transport Company has started with an all land route from Sellwood. Whoever builds the road, and whatever route is adopted it behooves someone to get busy on it immediately.

CONSTABLE IS NEEDED

A magistrate and constable are desired in Gowganda. The community is a paragon of law and order for a mining camp but several thefts committed lately have impressed everyone with the necessity of proper supervision. Teamsters have had their bags of flour and other articles stolen off their loads along the trail and even right on the street here. On Thursday night a tent store was broken into the canvas being ripped open and quantities of goods appropriated. The thief escaped.

The same night slumberers were aroused from their dreams of elusive calcite veins by the noise of revolver shots and shouting. But it was not any western gun play or poker game dispute. Those responsible for this nocturnal tumult were only some belated revellers.

WANT POST OFFICE

"When are we going to have a post office?" Everyone wants this question answered favorably at once. It does seem strange that South Gowganda, as yet composed of practically nothing but transportation company's stopping houses and stores, should have a post office before Gowganda, which with over one thousand inhabitants has none. The nearest place where one can buy stamps is South Gowganda—8 miles away.

Were it not for the tinkle of the telephone bell ensuring connection with the outside world, Gowganda would feel isolated. That, and the noon-day toot of the sawmill whistle are comforting sounds to the sojourners from the far-away city.

SLEEP IN THEIR CLOTHES

People sleep in their clothes up here and men who take their morning bath faithfully at home unblushingly confess that weeks have elapsed since they performed this ablution and shaving. Stubbly faces are the rule and if the erstwhile immaculate city man deigns to remove his beard at all it is generally, at weekly intervals.

The arrival of the recorder is impatiently awaited. The nearest office is at Elk City, to which place all prospectors wishing to register claims must travel. The appointment of this official was reported some time ago but so far he has not made his appearance. It is supposed that the necessary transfer of entries from the Elk City records to the new books is causing the delay.

DYNAMITE ACCIDENTS

Yesterday two men were badly injured in a dynamite explosion at one of the mines near here, one man being reported fatally wounded. A doctor left immediately for the scene of the accident.

It seems that the men were thawing out five sticks of frozen explosive in the blacksmith shop.

Several magazines have been erected in the vicinity and are being stocked with quantities of high explosives. There is a big demand for dynamite and frequent shots are heard in the neighborhood of claims where the owners are busy getting their assessment work done.

Most of the town lots offered for sale by the Government have been bid for, and prospective purchasers are anxious to see if their tenders have been accepted.

G.T.R. Cuts Freight Rates.

Montreal, March 25.—L. I. Henderson, general manager of the Montreal Transportation Co., yesterday announced a rate of 5 1-2 cents per bushel from Fort William to Montreal. J. W. Loud, freight traffic manager of the G. T. R., announces a rate of four cents per bushel from Georgian Bay ports to Montreal. Both announce also that they are prepared to cut these rates if necessary to keep the grain trade in Canada. That is the Canadian answer to the decision of the Trunk Lines Association on Monday in New York.

Jane Cable

... By ...

GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON,

Author of "Beverly of Graustark," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1908, BY DODD, MEAD & COMPANY

"I used to dream about it long ago. I swore if I ever got back to New York I'd dress as New Yorkers dress—even if I was a hundred years old. I've got a servant too. What d'ye think of that? He can't understand a word I say, nor can I understand him. That's why he stays on with me. He doesn't know when I'm discharging him, and I don't know when he's threatening to leave. What do you think of my rooms?"

It was Graydon's first visit to the place, weeks after their return to New York. He had not felt friendly to Droom since the day at the prison, but now he was forgetting his resentment in the determination to wrest from him the names of Jane's father and mother. He was confident that the old man knew.

"Better than Wells street, eh? Well, you see, I was in trade then. Different now. I'm getting to be quite a fop. Do you notice that I say 'By Jove' occasionally?" He gave his raucous laugh of derision. "Dined at Sherry's the other night, old chap," he went on with raw mimicry. "They thought I was a Christian and let me in. I used to look like the devil, you know."

"I've got these carpet slippers on because my shoes hurt my feet," explained Droom sourly. "My collar rubbed my neck, so I took it off. Otherwise I'm just as I was when I got in at Sherry's. Funny what a difference a little thing like a collar makes, isn't it?"

"I should say so. I never gave it a thought until now. But, Elias, I want to ask a great favor of you. You can"—

"My boy, if your father wouldn't tell you who her parents are, don't expect me to do so. He knows; I only suspect."

"You must be a mind reader," gasped Graydon.

"It isn't hard to read your mind these days. What do you hear from her?" Graydon went back to the subject after a few moments. "I am morally certain that I know who her father and mother were, but it won't do any good to tell her. How's your father?"

After this night Graydon saw the old man often. They dined together occasionally in the small cafes on the west side. Droom could not, for some reason known only to himself, be induced to go to Sherry's again.

"When Jane comes back I'll give you both a quiet little supper there after the play maybe. It'll be my treat, my boy."

The old man worked patiently and fruitlessly over his "inventions." They came to naught, but they lightened his otherwise barren existence. There was not a day or night in which his mind was wholly free from thoughts of James Bansemer.

He counted the weeks and days until the man would be free, and his eyes narrowed with these furtive glances into the future. He felt in his heart that James Bansemer would come to him at once and that the reckoning for his single hour of triumph would be a heavy one to pay. Sometimes he would sit for hours with his eyes staring at the Napoleon above the bookcase, something like dread in their depths. Then again he would laugh with glee, pound the table with his bony hand, much to the consternation of Chang, and exclaim as if addressing a multitude:

"I hope I'll be dead when he gets out of there. I hope I won't live to see him free again. That would spoil everything. Let me see, I'm seventy-one now. I surely can't live much longer. I want to die seeing him as I saw him that day. The last thing I think of on earth must be James Bansemer's face behind the bars. Ha, ha, ha! It was worth all the years—that one hour. It was even worth while being his slave. I'm not afraid of him. No! That's ridiculous. Of course I'm not afraid of him. I only want to know he's lying in a cell when I die out here in the great, free world. By my soul, he'll know that a handsome face isn't always the best. He laughed at my face, curse him. His face won her—his good looks! Well, well, well, I only hope she's where she can see his face now!"

He would work himself into a frenzy of torment and glee combined, usually collapsing at the end of his harangue. It disgusted him to think that his health was so good that he might be expected to live beyond the limit of James Bansemer's imprisonment.

At the end of eighteen months Jane was coming home. She had written to Graydon from London, and the newspapers announced the sailing of the Cables.

"I am coming home to end all of this idleness," she wrote to him. "I mean to find pleasure in toil, in doing good, in lifting the burdens of those who are helpless. You will see how I can work, Graydon. You will love me more than ever when you see how I can do so much good for my fellow creatures. I want you to love me more and more, because I shall love you to the end of my life."

The night before the ship was to arrive Graydon dined with the Jack Percivals. It was 1 o'clock when Graydon reached his rooms. There he found a note from Elias Droom.

"I have an especial reason," he wrote, "for asking you and Miss Cable to dine with me on Monday night. We will go to Sherry's. Let me know as soon as you have seen her."

CHAPTER XXXI.

GRAYDON was mystified and not a little upset by this almost peremptory summons from the old man. He hurried over to Droom's quarters the next morning after ascertaining that the steamer would not reach the dock until 2 or 3 o'clock. Droom was at work on one of his amazing models.

"Hello!" he said ungraciously. "I thought I invited you for tonight."

"I want to know something about it, Elias," said Graydon, sitting upon the end of the workbench. "She'll not get in before the middle of the afternoon, and she may not feel like going to Sherry's tonight."

"Just as she likes," said Droom pettishly. "You mean that she would not like to be seen there with me unless there is to be something in it for her, eh?"

"Nonsense! You've got something on your mind, Elias. What is it? Why do you insist on going tonight?"

"I don't. It's tonight or not at all, however. I'm not in the habit of letting people decide when I shall dine at Sherry's. If she doesn't want to come, let her say so." That was all Graydon could get out of him, so he left in a more perplexed frame of mind than before.

He was at the dock long before the steamer came to a stop after its eight days of ceaseless throbbing. She was waving to him from the rail, her face beaming with happiness. It was just as he had seen it in his dreams of this day. More than ever he arrayed his love against her principle. More than ever was he determined to overcome the obstacles which she had thrown up in her self arraignment.

There was a cold, biting wind blowing, with the suggestion of snow in the skies. The passengers came down with rosy cheeks, colored by the frost laden hours on deck. After the tedious, disagreeable hour with the customs officials the Cables were driven to their hotel. Graydon Bansemer, sitting opposite to Jane in the carriage, was almost speechless with joy and eagerness. The old restraint was still upon him, but it was being worn down by degrees as he gathered encouragement from the clear, inviting eyes of the girl he worshiped. The love in those happy, glowing eyes could not be mistaken for loyal indifference.

She was more beautiful than ever to his hungry, patient eyes. She was more desirable, more priceless. David Cable and his wife had been immensely benefited in every way by their months abroad. Jane had found the sunshine for them, and it had been her purpose in all these months to keep them free from the shadows. They had traveled Europe over, and they had lived in the full warmth of pleasure.

Cable took Graydon aside as they entered the hotel. The latter had implored Jane to give him a few minutes alone at the earliest possible moment.

"Tell me about your father, Graydon," said David Cable.

"He is still in—in Joliet," replied the young man quietly.

"He has not offered to help us in clearing up the mystery?"

"I have had no word from him, Mr. Cable. He seems to be in his tomb. I am afraid he will not help us, sir. He has said he would not. That means a great deal, I am sorry to say."

He then told him of Elias Droom's strange invitation, adding that he believed the old man was ready to reveal all that he knew.

"She must go with you tonight, then," said Cable. "It is necessary. She wants to know the truth. She has said so."

"It won't matter, sir, so far as I am concerned. She"—

"She has come back, my boy, determined to go on with her plans. I am sorry, Graydon, but I am at last convinced that she means to give her life to the work."

"By heaven, Mr. Cable, she shall not do it! I can't live without her!" cried Graydon miserably. Cable smiled sadly as he shook his head.

• • • • • • •

At half past 7 o'clock Jane Cable and Graydon met Droom at Sherry's. She was paler than usual, and there was a queer chill in her heart. Bansemer was more nervous than he had ever been before in his life.

Elias Droom, the strangest creature in the big restaurant, arose to greet them as they entered the doors. He had been waiting inside and out for half an hour, and his welcome was quite in keeping with his character. He uttered a few gruff words of greeting to her, accompanied by a perfunctory smile that gave out no warmth; then he started with rude haste toward the table he had reserved. Not a word concerning her welfare, her health, her return to the home land—no sign of interest or consideration. They followed him silently, anxiously.

The old man was conspicuously repulsive in his finery. It is unnecessary to say that his clothes did not fit his lank figure; tailors cannot perform miracles. His long chin was carefully shaven, but the razor could not remove the ruts and creases that hid the thick stubble of gray and black. Not one, but a hundred diners, looked with curiosity upon the nervous, uncouth old man. There was a buzz of interest and a craning of necks when the crowd saw the handsome couple join him at the table in the corner.

"I wish you'd order the dinner for me, Graydon," he said rather plaintively. "I can pay for it, Miss Cable," he added, with an attempt at joviality, "but I'm no good at ordering. These young swells know all about it. Get champagne, Graydon. Order something nice for Miss Cable. Anywhere up to $20. I'm not a millionaire, Miss Cable. Tell the waiter I'll pay for it, Graydon. This is a swell place, isn't it, Miss Cable? I've never been in Europe, but they say they can't touch our restaurants over there. Get oysters, Graydon."

"By Jove, Elias, you are giving us a treat," laughed Graydon. The old man's mood had changed suddenly. He was beaming in his effort to be agreeable. A glance around the room had convinced him that the prettiest woman there was sitting at his table. He felt a new sense of pride.

"I am proud of myself," said Droom, and he meant it.

"It's very good of you to ask me to come, Mr. Droom," said Jane, her bright eyes meeting his before they could lift themselves into the customary stare above her head.

"I'm not so sure about that," said Elias. From time to time he glanced uneasily toward a table at his left. It was set for six persons, none of whom had arrived. "I trust it will not be the last time you will honor me, Miss Cable. I am getting very hospitable in my old age. If you don't mind, Graydon, I won't drink this cocktail. I may take the champagne. I'm quite a teetotaler, you see. Milk, always. By the way, Graydon," he said, turning suddenly to the young man, "I suppose you've led her to believe that I had a motive in asking her to dine tonight—I mean other than the pleasure it would give to me."

"I—I rather thought something of the sort," stammered Graydon.

"Well, there is a motive. I've decided at last to tell all I know. Don't look like that, Miss Cable. You'll attract attention. Calm yourself. It will be some time before the story is forthcoming. Besides, I doubt very much whether you'll get any great satisfaction out of it, although it may clear things up a bit for you. If you've been hoping that your father and mother—well, we'll take our time. Here are the oysters. Oysters make me think of your father, Graydon. Don't choke, my boy," he chuckled as Graydon stiffened quickly. "He had a woman arrested at her own dinner party one night—right over there in Fifth avenue too. Search warrant and all that. The oysters were being served when the papers were served. Ah, he was a great man for effective revenge. She had dared him, you see. Did you ever hear of the other time when he permitted an ignorant host to invite two deadly enemies to the same dinner? One fellow had robbed the other fellow of his wife. Terrible scandal. Your father knew that they expected to kill one another on sight. And yet when the host told him whom he expected to invite he let him ask the two men. He told me about it afterward. It amused him. Everybody but the host knew of the row, and there was a panic in the drawing room."

"Good Lord," gasped Graydon, helplessly pushing the oysters away, "why are you telling me this?"

"Oh, it was a great joke. It's a good dinner story. The joke comes in at the end. Both those fellows got tight and went home with their arms about one another. By the way, Graydon, what do you hear from your father?"

"I beg your pardon if I've offended," said Droom abjectly. "I—I don't know the etiquette of small talk. Forgive me. I was interested; that was all."

"It may interest you to know that I had a long talk with Mr. Clegg this afternoon. He says there is a movement on foot to secure a pardon for father. Father hasn't asked any one to intercede. It is known that he will go to England as soon as he is released. That's an inducement, you see," he said bitterly.

Droom's face turned a frozen white. His steely eyes took on a peculiar glaze, and his hand grasped his leg as if it were a vise intended to hold him in his chair.

"I haven't told you about it, Jane," went on Graydon. "Mr. Clegg has seen father, and he says he is indifferent about it. He intends to leave the country in any event. I am going to write to him tonight, asking him to let them apply for a pardon. It may save him from three years more of servitude. Mr. Clegg is sure he can get his release. What's the matter, Elias?"

Roosevelt Has Sailed.

New York, March 24.—Theodore Roosevelt sailed yesterday on the first stage of his journey to the wilds of East Africa in search of the big game in which this region abounds. From his country home at Oyster Bay to the steamship dock in Hoboken, the ex-President's route resembled a triumphant march. At the dock, the crush was tremendous. The Italian Chamber of Commerce of New York presented him with a bronze shield as a testimonial of the U. S. assistance to the earthquake victims.

Farthest South.

London, March 24.—The polar regions are gradually yielding up their secrets to human perseverance and determination. Lieut. Ernest H. Shackleton of the British navy, who left his permanent quarters last autumn for a dash to the pole, having succeeded, after an arduous sledge journey of 1,708 miles, occupying 126 days, in reaching within 111 miles of the south pole, or 354 miles nearer than attained by the Discovery expedition, of which he was an officer. The British flag was left flying.

His expedition, which sailed early in 1908, reached New Zealand yesterday.

French Socialist Jubilant.

Paris, March 25.—The leaders of the Socialist party and the Socialist newspapers comment with jubilation on the outcome of the strike of the French telegraphers and postmen. They call it a victory over the Government which the Government can never retrieve.

Released From Jail.

London, March 25.—The women suffragists who were sent to prison on account of the demonstrations in Parliament square on Feb. 25, received an enthusiastic reception upon their release from Holloway Jail yesterday morning. A procession was formed, headed by a band, and made its way to Holborn, where a "welcome breakfast" was given. Lady Constance Lytton is among the women released.

Harpoon Explodes.

Victoria, B.C., March 25.—George Kent is dead, the result of an accident. Some days ago some old whaling harpoons were found in a box in a vacant lot. Tuesday, Kent used one to poke a fire, when an unused charge of explosive went off, terribly injuring his leg.

Tenant Was Libelled.

Ottawa, March 25.—Mr. Groves must pay a tenant of his $100 damages for libel, says the high court jury. A. H. Kilgore rented a shop at Kinburn. As he owed some rent the landlord, A. H. Groves, placed a placard on the shop forbidding the removal of the machinery until arrears were paid.

LABOR CONDITIONS HERE DURING MONTH OF FEBRUARY

Mr. J. A Sharp, Peterborough correspondent of the Labor Gazette, sends the following report of labor conditions here in February;

The general condition of the labor market was slightly more active than in the preceding month, employment in the various factories being fairly active. The Canadian Electric Manufacturing Company started working full time on the 2nd of the month and expects to keep busy having secured large contracts from the hydro-electric commission.

There was very little outside woork beind done, excepting in cutting and storing of ice and woork caused by snowstorms, etc. Work has commenced on the construction of the new dam and locks at Lindsay, to cost about $50,000. From an industrial standpoint, the general condition of labor in better than a year ago and the outlook on the whole, is good. The banks reported business improving. Wholesale and retail trade was active, also railway traffic. Rates of wages remained unchanged.

The conditions of local industries is reported as folloows;

Agriculture —Farmers were busy marketing wood, hay and other produce, which brought good prices

Lumbering — The lumbering trade was rather dull, but the planing mills were working full time.

Other Industries —Carpet workers reported an improvement in trade, some of the departments working overtime, with prospects good.

Bricklayers and masons were not very busy, which is a usual condition at this time of year. Carpenters and joiners were similarly situated. Painters reported trade fair, with plumbers active. Iron moulders, machinists, brass workers and electrical workers reported a slight improvement. Pattern makers were fairly active, with car workers rather dull. As is usual at this time of the year, coopers were not very busy. Printers reported trade fair; tailors were dull; bakers fairly active, ice cutters and drivers busy, cigarmakers dull, leather workers and railway employees fairly busy with very little work for unskilled labor.

BUSY ON CANAL WORK AT HASTINGS

New Dredge Being Built--Timber Being Brought From British Columbia

The Hastings Star says;

The local engineering staff of the canal are busy with the survey work up towards the lake getting the work laid out ready for the contractors.

Mr Bryant Scriver last week completed the new boat house, for the use of the local canal staff. The building which is 46x30, is situated just east of the flour mill, and when painted it will be quite different from the general run of such edifices on our waterfront.

The Radiator building and land in front of, which have lain idle since the company ceased operations, presents a verl lively scene to residents of the village these days. The gangs of men are busy putting up the piers for building the new monster dredge on and getting out the timber ready for the scows for the coming work. Considerable timber has arrived and more is on the way from British Columbia. This timber is worth walking up to the yard to see. Some of the sticks are over 130 feet long and about 18x18 in. square. As soon as the balnce of the timber arrives extra gangs will be put on and the work pushed ahead as rapidly as possible. We understand that the new dredge will be one of the largest in the country.

HIGH CHIEF RANGER GAVE AN ADDRESS

At a meeting of Court Stanley, A.O.F. held last evening in the Knights of Pythias Hall, on Simcoe street, an address was given by Mr. W. Richards, of London, High Chief Ranger of the order. Members of Queen Alexandra and Lift Lock circles were also present. Mr. Richards gave an inspiring address on the work of the A.O.F., which was much appreciated by those present. Short addresses by other members, with vocal selections by the Forester choir and instrumental solos by the court pianist, Mr. Asa Huycke, added much to the enjoyment of the evening's entertainment. During his visit here Mr. Richards has been the guest of Mr. R. G. McWilliams, secretary of Court Stanley,

OLD RESIDENT CALLED AWAY

Death of Mr. Robert Duncan, Father of Ald. Duncan—Had Lived Here Sixty-Six Years

A well known and highly respected citizen of this city passed away this morning in the person of Mr Robert Duncan. The deceased, who was 66 years of age was born and had lived all his life in Peterborough and had conducted a cartage business. He was a member of the Independent Order of Foresters and was a Presbyterian in religion, attending St. Paul's church. Besides his wife, one daughter, Mrs. Robert Jones of town, and four sons, Messrs Thomas, George, Albert at home, and Robert of Cleveland, are left to mourn his loss.

The funeral will take place from his late residence, 115 McDonnel street on Sunday afternoon at three o'clock and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery where interment will take place.

OBITUARY

WESLEY WHITFIELD.

The death occurred yesterday at his home in North Monaghan of Wesley Whitfield in his 49th year. The late Mr. Whitfield had been a sufferer for some time with Bright's disease, but death came suddenly, as the deceased gentleman was in town last Saturday. Besides his wife, three sons and four daughters are left to mourn his loss. The sons are, Messrs. Harold, Frank and Melville, and the daughters are Mamie, Bertha, Maggie and Beatrice. Mr. Lewis and William Whitfield, of North Monaghan, are brothers. The deceased was well and favorably known, both in the country and in town by a large number of friends, who will sympathize with the family in their bereavement. The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery, where interment will take place.

MR. G. L. GALLEY IS SUCCESSFUL

Board of Directors of Port Hope Y.M.C.A. are Pleased With His Work

The Port Hope Times in its issue of Thursday, March 25th, has an excellent picture of Mr. G. L. Galley, a former Peterborough boy, who is at present physical director of the Port Hope Y.M.C.A. Mr. Galley has only held the position for a short time, but during his stay in that town as an official of the Y.M.C.A., his work has met with the approval of the directors. The Times says:—

"A new order of things is to be undertaken this summer at the Y.M.C.A. Heretofore the association has only had a physical director six months in the year. Last fall Mr. G. L. Galley was engaged for eight months and his work has been so satisfactory that the Board of Directors has seen fit to continue his services for the summer."

BANQUET WILL BE HELD APRIL 5TH

Champion Lakefield Team Will be the Guests of the City Hockey League -- Will be Presented With the Cup

Arrangements have been nearly completed for the annual banquet of the City Hockey League, at which the champion Lakefield team will be presented with the cup. The event will take place on Monday, April 5th in the dining parlors of the Oriental Hotel. The Hon. J. R. Stratton, who has always been present at the other banquets, will again this year present the cup to the winning team. This year's banquet promises to be a most successful affair, due to the hard work of the committee, who have charge of the arrangements.

PROF. SHORTT TO ADDRESS THE CLUB

Much interest is being taken on the lecture that is to be given before the Canadian Club on Tuesday, evening, March 30th. The speaker will be Prof Adam Shortt, late of Queen's university, Kingston, but now of the Railway Commission of Ottawa and the subject will be "Canada's Foreign Relations." Prof. Short has had a large experience and his address should be highly interesting.

WEDDING BELLS

FITZGERALD — ELLIOTT

A very pretty wedding took place Wednesday at 7 o'clock p.m. at the home of the bride's parents, Mr and Mrs. Isaac Elliott, in Smith, when their daughter, Laura, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Gordon Fitzgerald. Rev Mr Cruickshank of Selwyn officiated. The bride wore a princess dress which was tastefully trimmed with lace, and was assisted by Miss Laura Middleton, who was also handsomely gowned. Mr Bruce Fitzgerald, a brother of the groom, was best man.

Many handsome presents were received by the bride which testified to the high esteem in which she is held by a large number of friends.

The newly wedded couple will reside in Smith.

FROM NORWOOD TO STONY LAKE

Telephone Line Likely to be Built in Near Future

A gentleman from the front was in town last week in connection with the proposed telephone line to Stony Lake and on Saturday a representative of the North American Telephone Company was here on the same business. From what we can learn, there seems to be little doubt but that the line will be built this coming season. The farmers along the line are getting out the poles so that we may look for early connection with "Norwood on the lake." — Norwood Register.

GET STUNG BY BUSY BEE IF YOU HAVE RHEUMATISM

Dr. Swann, of Roosevelt Hospital, Tries Old Country Method on Hard Cases and Reports Success.

New York, March 25.—Contact with the business end of a bee as a cure for rheumatism, is an old wrinkle among the farmers up in Connecticut, but a new one at Roosevelt Hospital, where it is now being tried. In two weeks the cases under treatment will probably indicate whether or not bees should be regularly added to the hospital force.

The experiment was proposed by Dr. Arthur W. Swann, a member of the hospital staff. Winter drove into his wards some bad cases of rheumatism of the gouty species. One man who had it in acute form could not sleep, and opiates gave him only temporary relief, besides deranging him otherwise.

There were three chronic cases in well advanced stages, one of them being so far advanced and involving so many of the joints that the patient was practically ossified. None of these cases would yield to the usual treatment.

Now the man with the acute case has returned home, ready to go to business again; one of the chronic cases has also left the hospital, so much relieved that he thinks he may resume light work, and the other two cases show daily improvement.

When Dr. Swann had treated these cases long enough to decide that the usual remedies would not reach them, he reported his conclusions to the head doctors of the staff, and proposed the bee treatment. He said that, when he was a boy up in Winsted, Conn., the country people believed that bees cured rheumatism. He had often seen them apply bees to rheumatic joints with apparently good results.

The head doctors examined the patients, became satisfied that there was no help for them in the usual way, and delivered the unanimous verdict: "Sting 'em."

The patients declared themselves willing to be stung by bees or anything else that would ease their miseries. So Dr. Swann wrote to his mother, who resides at Winsted, asking her to ship him until further notice 100 bees per week. The first shipment arrived two weeks ago.

Dr Swann put a bee in a tumbler, and tipped the tumbler upside down against the afflicted joint. The first experiment was with the man who had rheumatism in acute form and couldn't sleep. Dr. Swann put the tumbler over the patient's shoulder joint which had been giving the worst pain. As soon as the tumbler was in place Dr. Swann stirred up the bee.

True to its instinct, the bee lost its temper and stuck its stinger where it thought it would do the most harm. That happened to be the afflicted joint. Then Dr. Swann removed the tumbler, for after one service with its stinger life has no further charm for a bee.

The patient moved the joint a little and said he thought he felt better. Another bee was applied in the same fashion. It also left its sting and died. This time the patient was sure the treatment worked well. Dr. Swann suggested that unless the patient objected he would like to try a third bee. That suited the patient, and the same programme was followed with bee number three.

For the next triplet of bees Dr. Swann decided that the "ossified" man should be the subject. After three bees had done their deadliest he surprised himself by shrugging his shoulders. Nothing like that had happened to him for so long that he asked the doctor to let a set of bees tackle his knee pans.

MEETING IN APRIL TO FORM A TENNIS ASSOCIATION

My proposal to form a Lawn Tennis Association in Peterborough, having been endorsed by the larger Tennis Clubs in Peterborough, and individual enthusiasm and support promised by members of other clubs which have not held their organization meetings yet for the ensuing year, and having been advised that other tennis clubs would be formed to enter the Association, such as possibly one from the 57th Regiment, Collegiate Institute and Normal School, and after consulting certain players it has been arranged to call a meeting of every man interested in tennis for the purpose of forming a "Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association." The meeting will be held in the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday, 3rd April. The officers and committee will be elected at this meeting.

SIMPSON MAY HAVE CHANCE FOR THE MARATHON DERBY

Tom Longboat may be the favorite in the betting for the Marathon Derby, but there will be a few others who will get support. In New York they like Dorando and Shrubb and local pencillers are taking in a few little wagers on this pair's chances.

LIKES DORANDO.

"Dorando is the man to watch in the coming Marathon Derby," declared Alfred Shrubb, when interviewed in Ottawa Tuesday night. His own chances of winning he declined he declined to discuss simply saying that any competiton is likely to win a Marathon, but that if he was defeated he would take his failure in good part.

Shrubb is a bustling, mild-mannered young man, whose every appearance marks him as one of ability. Five feet seven inches in height, he is thirty years of age and appears to be in the finest of condition.

Asked his opinion of Longboat as a runner he laughingly elduded the matter of superiority. "Longboat is simply a patient plodder," he replied. "But he has absolutely no speed." Shrubb is anxiously awaiting the return race with the Indian on April 17th in Toronto, and is confident of beating Longboat at fifteen miles.

SHRUBB'S CHANCES.

The New York Mail says;— Alf. Shrubb the English pro., lost a host of followers when he lost that Marathon match with Tom Longboat at the Garden a few weeks ago but not so many that he will be unbacked when he starts in the Derby at the Polo grounds a week from Saturday. The Englishman, on the contrary, will give Longboat and Dorando a hard rub for the post of honor. There will be a lot of "wise" money on him against the field, despite the fact that Longboat holds a decision over him and regardless of the truly wonderful race that Dorando ran against Johnny Hayes.

The conditions of the race should suit Shrubb to a dot. It will be run outdoors on the grass. Practically all of Shrubb's records were made on the Turf, and though he has not been on the green for some years, his former experience will come in handy, particularly if the going is just the least bit wet. All of the other starters have done more or less road running, but it is another thing to run on the grass.

There are rumors around here that Svanberg, the Swede, and Pat White, the Irishman, will be allowed in the Derby. Tom Eck pricked up his ears when he heard this. "If there is a chance to get Simpson in I am going to go after it," said Eck last night as he left for Montreal. "I am going to Montreal to arrange (a) 20-mile relay race for Simpson against Hans Holmer, of Halifax, and W. F. Cummings, of Toronto. I'll wire Pat Powers from there, and if he gives me any encouragement I'll be right down to see him in his own office. I want Simpson in because I think it's a cinch that he copp a good lump of that $10,000 prize money."

"I would advise every young runner to leave the Marathon alone," said Alf. Shrubb, in an address Tuesday night in Ottawa. "Fifteen miles is far enough for if a man runs Marathons frequently he will hardly last more than two or three years. But if he runs shorter races, he will be good for ten or twelve years as I have been."

TORONTO BOWLERS WILL PLAY HERE

Manager Clancy of P. B. C. Alleys Brings Good News From the Queen City

Manager "Matt" Clancy, of the P. B.C. alleys, is home from Toronto, bringing with him some good news for the local trundlers. He issued a challenge for a matched game between five picked men from Toronto and five picked men from Peterborough. The challenge was accepted, and the game will be played on the local alleys as soon as a date can be arranged satisfactory to the Toronto bowlers. It will, however, be in the near future.

Mr. Clancy also states that the Parkdale bowlers want a game with Peterborough as do also a team from the Toronto Bowling Club, and these two games will also be played here soon.

It is expected that several new balls will be added to the equipment of the local alleys at an early date.

PACIFICS TOOK TWO FROM B.A.C.

ONE WHO PAYS NOW WRITES

To the Sporting Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—I think that sufficient has been said concerning the baseball situation in Peterborough, and I may be a little late in sending you this communication. However, I should like to say that I thoroughly agree with "Spectator's" letter of last night.

Peterborough is big enough for fast ball, and I should think it would be well supported here. If local players can furnish interesting ball, why they should be given the preference. If they can't, then the only thing to do is to import players who can. It is just on the same principle as a walking match or any other kind of sport. It seems to me that "Fan" did not weigh the subject very thoroughly before he rushed into print.

Yours truly,

ONE WHO PAYS.

The subject referred to has been pretty freely discussed by writers to this paper, and the public should have both sides of the case pretty well expressed to them by this time. As the matter of bringing a pro. ball team to Peterborough is pretty much of a private enterprise, in a business sense, depending, of course, on the public for support. No more communications are desired.

SPORTING TALK

Yussif Mahmout has not been making as favorable an impression among Canadian fans as he was expected to. Those who saw him go with Yankee Rogers in Toronto don't think he made such a fierce bout of it with the big Yankee as Gotch did, but the conditions of the bout were that he was to throw Rogers twice in an hour, and he only got one fall—all he wanted perhaps. But its bad business to base an opinion of Yussif on that match.

That he is one of the most wonderful catch-as-catch-can wrestlers that has been developed in recent years is beyond doubt. He has cleaned up Raoul De Rouen, the powerful and brutal champion of France; Tom Jenkins the great American wrestler; Fred Beell, who is looked upon as the American wrestler who is second to Gotch and who has a couple of wins from Gotch to his credit. He has defeated Americus and other top-notchers and has a clear title to meet Gotch and may be regarded as a dangerous opponent to the lion tamer. The Turk certainly is a magnificent grappler.

But although he will have his work cut out for him Gotch should beat Mahmout, although he is probably the only catch-as-catch-can man in the world who can do so. In the matter of strength both are about even up. Gotch is somewhat quicker, has a wider knowledge of the game and can use his head to better advantage in those tight corners in a mat struggle when the result of a match often goes to the man with a little more of the gray matter, and when a skilful turn or sudden tricky move puts his opponent off his balance and opens the direct way to a fall.

There is considerable doubt apparently as to whether Fred Simpson will be allowed to enter the Marathon Derby. The only conclusion is that Fred is looked upon as having a good chance to win and the promoters of the race think it will bar him so as he could be used later on against the winner of the Derby and draw good gate.

LACROSSE

There was no meeting of the lacrosse club last night at the YMCA. It was regularly called but not a sufficient number displayed enough interest to attend. The prospects for a lacrosse team for Peterborough this year are good if a club were organized and the players got out to practice.

BASKETBALL

The Arabs and Tigers will be the contesting teams in the Saturday night basketball match at the YMCA. Both fives will be strong and the game should be a lively one.

WRESTLING

The sporting event of the season scheduled to take place in Hamilton on Friday, April 2nd, when Yankee Rogers and Hassan Abdullah, the two heavyweight wrestlers, will hook up for a purse of $250. This go is to be held in the Grand Opera House being put on by the opera house owners.—Hamilton Spectator.

Fred Beell and Yussof Mahmout will wrestle tonight in Montreal.

Yankee Rogers meets Hassan Abdallah at the Star Theatre tonight. When Hassan was wrestling under the name of Karkanoff he was defeated by Rogers at Sherbrooke, Que., in quick time. Rogers was to throw Hassan five times in an hour and succeeded in beating him in 32 minutes. As a top rank heavyweight Hassan is somewhat of a joke.

THE RING

New York, March 25.—Can Philadelphia Jack O'Brien stay ten rounds in front of Stanley Ketchell, the middleweight champion, at the National A.C. to-night? Whenever boxing is discussed this question causes a wide difference of opinion. O'Brien insists that he will be in perfect condition when he crawls through the ropes, and that his science will offset Ketchell's fierce attacks. O'Brien believes he will have such an advantage on points over Ketchell at the end of the bout that there will be no doubt as to the result.

O'Brien is undoubtedly the cleverest pugilist who has ever faced Ketchell, so that the latter will surely be put to a test. Ketchell, however, is the most dangerous slugger that O'Brien has ever tackled, and as he is also fast and aggressive, it is believed that O'Brien will have all he can do to avoid a knockout punch.

Ketchell, while training for the mill near Woodlawn, has used up half a dozen husky sparring partners, who have been unable to stand up before his heavy blows.

JOHNSON'S NEW MANAGER.

Johnson, who has picked up a new manager, evidently believes that it will be the proper move to make Jeffries come out of his shell without further delay. In Chicago to-day Johnson's manager said that the pair would be here next Monday and that they would put up such a convincing argument that Jeffries would either have to say yes or no to their challenge. Johnson declares that he will let Jeffries name the date for the mill and that the boilermaker can take all the time that he cares to get in proper condition. The negro says he will hand $1,000 to Jeffries if he will say one word indicating whether he will make a match or not. But Johnson's money is safe, for Jeffries will not do business under such conditions.

LANGFORD IS POPULAR.

Sam Langford has a big following just now, judging by the reception the crowd at the Fairmount A.C. gave him Tuesday night. Langford, big and powerful, made a hit when he declared that he would fight any man in the world except Jeffries. Johnson, by the way, has finally stated positively that he will not go to London to meet Langford at the National Sporting Club on May 2. He says that if his former manager, Sam Fitzpatrick, signed the articles for such a mill, he will repudiate them. The fact that the London club advanced the money with which Johnson paid his expenses to Australia to tackle Burns, apparently makes no difference with the negro.

The Wide World for Next Month

The Wide World invariably contains such an amazing collection of stories "Strange but True" as to place it in a unique position among magazine literature. There is nothing exactly like the Wide World published, and for this reason it has readers in every quarter of the globe. Apart from its general interest, the magazine has an educational value which cannot be overestimated and the fact that it is being used as a text book in many public and private schools both here and abroad proves that as an adjunct to the geography lesson it is unsurpassed. The April issue contains its full complement of interesting material. Harry de Windt the famous explorer and first European to enter the sacred city of Lhassa, contributes a thrilling tale of the Klondike; Irene Lyon relates the strange adventures of "Two Girls in Japan"; John Mackie tells of his eventful journey through the Australian bush; Harold Shepstone describes Mr. Carl Hagenbeck's wonderful system of "Wild Animal Catching"; E. F. Martin of the Royal Niger Company's Service gives a vivid description of a powerful rebel Chief, and Helbourne Inman the well-known billiard player writes an amusing account of his trip "Round the World with a Billiard Cue." "When Tenderfeet Go Hunting Bears," is an article that will have especial interest for Western readers while Will Larkins' account of "The Life of a Steeplejack" should do much to dissuade the venturesome from entering his exciting profession. Detective Brissard's description of his search for a "wanted" man through France, England, Belgium and America makes good reading and Frederick Lees' account of superstitions which are still rife in certain parts of France is full of curious and little-known facts.

Rev. Father McColl's Statement

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir—In your issue of yesterday there appeared a letter written by a person who assumes the very appropriate title "Fiat Lux." If one is to judge from the letter itself, it is quite evident that the writer is very much in need of that very light which he assumes to possess.

In his letter he says;—"I am informed by a member of St. Peter's T.A.S. that it was decided at a meeting of that society on Sunday afternoon to bring every pressure possible to bear on the members of the Council to vote down the recommendation of the Property Committee and secure the retention of Mr. Ball."

Now if by Sunday afternoon he means last Sunday, we assure him there was no meeting of the T.A.S. on that day. If he means the Sunday previous March 14th, when a regular meeting was held and at which I was present and know what took place, permit me to inform him that nothing of the kind was discussed.

He says: He was informed by a member of the T.A.S. which statement I take the liberty of doubting. If any member of the T.A.S., however, has been guilty of such a statement, let our friend and his informer come out of the darkness and we shall arrange a meeting between them and the executive of the T.A.S. when Mr. Fiat Lux may get the light he needs so badly.

Mr. O'Brien Finds Present Equipment Inadequate to Meet Demands

Mr. O'Brien, the Chambers street liveryman is making preparations for a busy season. He says he has done a most satisfactory business during the past winter and looks for an increased patronage the coming summer.

He has found the demand so great that he has been unable to adequately serve his customers with his present equipment and has decided to add new buggies and carriages and purchase three or four more horses.

O'Brien's livery is one of the most popular in the city, and is in a position to give an unexcelled service.

NEW HORSES FOR HARDWARE CO.

Local Firm Have Secured New Team of Horses for Their Delivery Service

With an object of being up-to-date and keeping abreast of the times, the Peterborough Hardware Co. have purchased a handsome pair of horses of the percheron breed for their delivery service. The animals were secured from Mr. Ernest Deyell, of Otonabee. Both horses are strong-looking, and appear to be lively, which are the necessary qualities needed for horses at this line of work.

EFFORT BY PROXY.

Involuntary Attempts to Help Athletes at Exciting Moments.

If it is a picture of an athlete leaping, ten chances to one the spectator has involuntarily raised his right leg, twisting his body in automatic expression of a desire to help the jumper. With hurdle race photographs this often may be noticed, too, and in the case of sprinters not a few men stand with faces twisted up and holding the breath in correct imitation of the athlete actually competing.

So, too, with football views. In one of a big game there was a photograph of a man on the side line watching a tackle who was crouching down in almost exact imitation of a waiting defense man who was shown at the moment making ready for his leap at the runner.

Men who follow athletics know how involuntary this is. One athletic trainer has appeared in hundreds of pictures as watching some one of his charges high jumping, with his leg swung out just as if he were making the leap himself. There is a sort of relief for the feeling of trying to help the jumper in swinging the leg up so, and almost any person is likely to find himself doing it instinctively.

It may be noticed at prizefights that some men go through the entire battle punch for punch, crossing and countering an imaginary opponent as they watch the struggle before them. Men drive and ride horses in races from the stand, making the effort in the stretch along with the jockey of their fancy. This is one of the well known features among the race crowd where there are many "grand stand riders." In wrestling matches almost any one will try, purely by instinct, to help the athlete who is down and who is bridging desperately to avoid the fall.

And yet there is rarely enough telepathic suggestion in the air surcharged with desire to bring about a result different from what naturally might be expected at the moment when the greatest wish for something else is born—that is to say, the high jumper doesn't necessarily clear the bar, nor the sprinter squeeze out the inch or so that he needs, nor the jockey whip his mount in for the head that means victory.

Belleville Streets Flooded.

Belleville, March 26.—Owing to the heavy rain of Wednesday night and yesterday the drains in many parts of the city were choked up, causing streets to be flooded. On Coleman, Everett, Boswell and other streets people had to leave their houses and workshops in boats and water a foot deep ran over the roadways.

GREAT ACTIVITY IN BUILDING TRADE THROUGHOUT CANADA

Very Bright Outlook for Future Work—Peterborough Registered a Gain of 22.30 Per Cent. in February.

While the building statistics for the month of January were indicative of a record breaking year, those for the month of February are positively assertive of it. It is extremely doubtful if ever before in the building annals of the Dominion there has been recorded at this season of the year anything quite like it for universal activity.

Returns for the month as submitted to "Construction" from representative cities in every province of the Dominion show, conclusively that building operations from coast to coast, have not only been fully revived but that gains of such huge proportions are being made as was little anticipated even by the most optimistic at the first of the year.

Of the sixteen cities reporting for the month twelve submit comparative figures, and of these only one shows a falling off from the corresponding month of 1908. This decrease is noted in the case of Edmonton, which after a series of successful months, experiences a slump for 91.22 per cent. However, it must be taken into consideration that last year's amount for February included the parliament building to cost [illegible] and apart from this, Edmonton is really far ahead on the total value of permits for the past month.

In fact the West in general shows every evidence of a flourishing condition and the immediate prospects are that the present pace in the building line will be manitained during the whole season.

Winnipeg follows strongly on the lead gained in January, by another tremendous advance of 1.425 per cent while Calgary eloquently attests to her prodigious growth by again coming to the front with a gain of 230.86 per cent for the month.

A material increase is also to be noted in the case of Regina, which turns up with 169.90 per cent in her favor and again in the amounts of Vancouver and Victoria both of which overlap last year's figures for the month by 11.61 per cent and 68.15 per cent in order named.

It is interesting to note the strong re-action on the part of Fort William, Toronto and Halifax the only three places which registered a decline for January.

Fort William has not only regained a large portion of what she lost, but tops the list for the month with the striking gain of over 2,925 per cent, the largest increase to be recorded during the month. Toronto has more than redeemed herself by an increase of 68.19 per cent and is so far away ahead on the year's work while the gain in Halifax of 40.79 per cent more than offsets any loss in January and gives the city a total valuation of permits for the first two months slightly in excess of that for the corresponding period of last year.

There is also a strong forward movement in Montreal where a splendid increase of 104.86 per cent added to the gain made in January, gives the metropolis a very substantial margin in her favor which promises to be materially extended as the season advances.

Quebec city also shows a most healthful condition and has a gain for the month of 109.30 per cent.

Peterborough registers a gain of 22.30 per cent while Kingston, Windsor and Berlin show much activity for so early in the season.

Reports as to the future are of a most sanguine nature. Edmonton sends word that the "outlook is 'bright" while others report as follow; Brandon, "fairly good,"; Calgary "looks bright"; Fort William "very bright"; Kingston "very good"; London 'splendid"; Regina, "many 'buildings in contemplation"; Winnipeg, "bright."; Berlin, 'good."

Permits issued for Feb 1909 are given in the first column and permits for Feb.1908 in the second;

Berlin	9000

RATEPAYERS WRITE ON THE $15,000 POWER BY-LAW

Ald. Hicks Letter

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—In your columns I noticed a letter from Ald. Gillespie recommending the passing of a bylaw to raise $15,000 for a power house. The conspicuous part of this letter is that it is void of all information on the subject. No positive statements are made, and while I, out of courtesy to the writer, would like to reply to his letter, there is no material to work from.

With regard to the other letter signed by Mayor Rush and Ald. McIntyre I cannot say the same, because neither of the gentlemen wrote the letter, but what was supposed to be their ideas on the matter was very ably put together for publication and inserted in the papers. The statements, however, are misleading, and the people are also paying for the cost of boosting the wild scheme of the mayor and his chosen few. If the figures were doubled would the mayor sign the bills just the same if he were asked by certain members of his remarkable cabinet.

When the statement is made in the letter that the city is paying nearly $9000 for street lighting, I challenge this statement as the figures referred to includes the bonus to the street railway. This, however, has no bearing on the merits of the question as these have not been intelligently discussed because the council lacked information.

I credit Mayor Rush, Ald. McIntyre and Ald. Gillespie and the others responsible, with creating a new precedent in municipal affairs—that is, publishing statements, under the guise of facts, and recommending in council the payment of all expenses for the same. At the same time those who are trying to keep the council and ratepayers safe, must, if they wish to distribute or advertise the true facts, pay the same out of their personal funds.

Writing, however, at this date, with five days between now and polling day, there is this redeeming feature in the situation—the minds of the mayor and cabinet, being like a wholesale price list on a rising market, "subject to change without notice"—are likely to take a turn once or twice in the meantime, and I believe when they get in the polling booth on the 30th of March, with a curtain drawn between them and outside world, they will be faithful to the trust the people have placed in them, and will mark their ballots against the power bylaw for $15,000.

Yours truly,
R. HICKS.

The Power By-law

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—As a manufacturer and a user of power in this city I am naturally interested in every movement which bears upon the power question. As a citizen I have an added interest in such question when the project is being handled by our representatives—the City Council.

Municipal ownership of water powers, water supply, gas and light supply has been proven a success very often, and to-day a number of Canadian towns are reaping a golden harvest as a result of these investments. Unfortunately there are other towns and cities about us which cannot boast of their success. They blundered, and now prefer to cover their mistakes.

The lure of added power to our city has caught our city fathers. It is a worthy motive. But as far as I can determine the present power scheme is a mistake. The power is not there. It is simply another instance of an engineer handing out book figures with a hungry financial smile. Those are the goods he sells and he must present them in their most favorable light. With very little trouble one can be shown by any one and every one of the power houses on the Otonabee to-day that the actual possibility does not by any means come near the engineer's statement of the probability. In the case of our largest power plant a loss of fully 1,000 horse power is recorded—a matter of over 30 per cent. When the city sells power there will be no allowance made for a similar failure in probable power. It must be remembered also that it is not the power which can be developed for seven or eight months of the year that is cashable. It is the minimum only that counts—the twelve-months possible.

It is unfortunate that this power scheme has been associated with the Water Commissioners' proposition; for with the probable death of the one the other may die in sympathy. Good business, commendable zeal, has marked the reign of the commissioners thus far and their present plan should meet with general approbation.

Many claim the change is not needed to-day. Yet it is certainly wisdom to buy a new suit of clothes ere the old ones drop off.

To me the step appears wise. It is forethought which any businessman must encourage and commend. "Take thought of the morrow" seems to apply favorably in this case.

Yours truly,
PETER B. POWER.
Peterborough March 26, 1909.

Endorses Mr. Harvie

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I would like to emphasise the letter of Mr. Dan Harvie in reference to power available at the waterworks dam and more especially to that part where comparisons are made with other dams, and the experience of power owners on the river, which shows conclusively that for the City Council to attempt to develop power at the waterworks dam is childish and absurd. You could not get a capitalist in America to invest a dollar in such a scheme as that proposed by the water commissioners and endorsed by the City Council. If the water works scheme is worked out along the same lines, then the ratepayers would confer a favor on themselves by voting down both bylaws until such time as a thorough practical scheme is submitted to them. Mr. Harvie's statements which are correct, and cannot be gainsaid, should make the promoters of such a scheme look like thirty cents.

Not that the promoters have not got the ability but because that they have not used their ability to get at the facts.

Is it any wonder that the ratepayers are getting scarey about going into ownership of public utilities when engineers will advise a scheme which shows up in the face of actual experience as this one does. All the information in Mr. Harvie's letter could have been secured by the council from operators on the river, and I dare bet dollars to doughnuts that if these gentlemen had been investing their own money in a scheme of this kind they would have not only had Mr. Harvie's information but other information which is just as pertinent to any scheme of development on the river as the information given by Mr. Harvie, as you can never get too much information on dams and power. No one knows it all, be he engineer, water commissioner or water power owner, but a little consultation and friendly criticism of opinions and deduction of facts would save the city many thousands of dollars at this time.

A gentleman well remarked the other day referring to the waterworks dam, that if you gave the waterworks power for nothing you could not get a man or a syndicate to invest the money necessary to develop and electrify it as a commercial enterprise, and I must say I quite agree with him.

I notice Mr. Harvie makes some suggestions which are alright, but I will not follow sug, because the authorities are not taking suggestions just at this time. But I think the ratepayers, if wise on polling day, will give the authorities the suggestion that they want their money spent in such a manner as to give them some return on their investment.

The writer is in favor of a well thought out and carefully planned scheme of city owned power and light. I believe the large majority of the ratepayers are, but they want to see where the profit comes in before they vote the money.

Yours truly,
W. H. MELDRUM.

MR. W. H. MOORE REPLIES TO MR. HATTON'S STATEMENTS

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—It is evident, from Mr. Hatton's letter to the press, that he has suffered disappointments in the past, which he would much like to have compensated by the defeat of the Waterworks By-law. We all remember he opposed the city acquiring the waterworks, and that he condemned the incorporation of the city and the frontage tax, and is generally found against what the people think is good, and for what they consider, not for their welfare. What he supports or opposes of a public character has an unfortunate disposition, somehow, to go the wrong way for him, but it does in the end appear right for the people. These defeats no doubt account for his present attitude, which is quite consistent with his past. The commissioners will operate the city's waterworks, but who are translated by him into "these gentlemen," "this happy, loving trio," "these incapables," "these men who talk utter rot," do not pretend to know all about water power, but he can rest assured it did not take them very long to learn how to cut in two the charges the water users paid while he helped as a shareholder to manage the Water Company, and in addition to obtain a yearly surplus that will enable them with the people's approval, to erect a new concrete dam without asking anyone to contribute a cent beyond the present water rates. They make no boast, and feel no particular pride in accomplishing this result, and though Mr. Hatton frets and worries, and like John Gilpin, has a frugal mind, and bewails the loss of profits he has suffered by the change, yet he should be more composed when he reflects on the bargain he got for his water supply for a long term, just before the transfer to the city. Not only does he make sad complaint of the childlike ignorance of the commissioners, but eminent engineers he would teach their duty. Wow! Wow!

To ease Mr. Hatton's mind as to the cost of the removal of the old dam when the new one is built, I would inform him that provision has been made for this in the estimates of the total cost. The new dam will stand just where the commissioners direct their engineer to place it, on level rock bottom, and not on gravel and mud, and will be upwards of one hundred feet shorter than the site selected by Mr. Hatton. More, it will be water-tight; Thirty or forty per cent. of water will not go through or under it, as it does through and under Mr. Hatton's "solid embankment."

Mr. Hatton thinks the commissioners should give details of the expected cost on separate items. Surely he has some particular contractor in his eye that he would like the commissioners to assist to a fat job.

I regret that Mr. Hatton is so badly disappointed. It was enough that the "trio" should be guilty of the "preposterous" proposal they have made, but that "a number of business men should so express themselves to an intelligent body of ratepayers with approval, and that the thing should be "endorsed by the press of the city," was simply awful! It was "most outrageous." The commissioners will now go to the bow-wows. It is their just and natural destination, I presume.

Yours,
W. H. MOORE.

VOL. LVIII., No. 73. PETERBOROUGH, ONT., CANADA, SATURDAY, MARCH 27, 1909 TEN CENTS PER WEEK

THE CITY TO-DAY WELCOMES CANADIAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

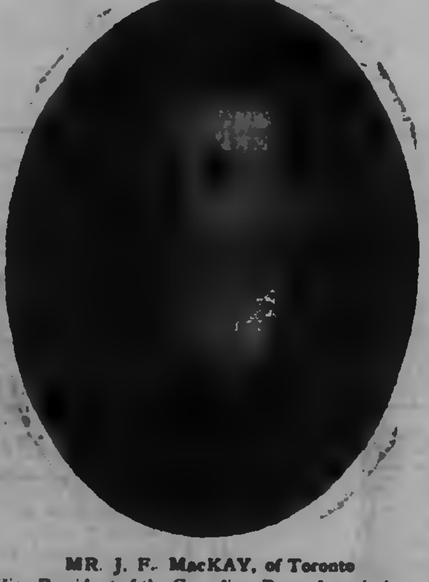
Visiting Newspapermen Arrived From Toronto on Special Train and Are Given a Hearty Reception.

Visiting the C.G.E. Works, Cordage Co. and the Quaker Oats Co.

Luncheon at Local Hotels and Civic Welcome Extended—Seeing the Lift Lock.

To-day the City of Peterborough welcomes the members of the Canadian Press Association who come here on a fraternal visit on the closing day of the annual convention. Unlike many other conclaves, the gentlemen of the Association bring their wives and daughters. Peterborough is yours. If you don't see what you want—take it.

At the annual gathering these people get together and do some practical work in the interests of the business side of newspaper publishing. Not by any means a combination for offence, but in some respects for defence. While the Press is powerful, it is vulnerable as has been proven. For often, in serving the public, it serves both wisely and too well.



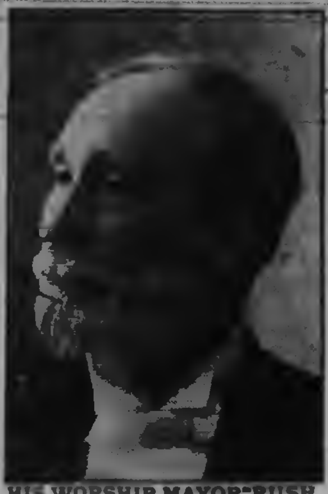
MR. J. F. MacKAY, of Toronto
Vice-President of the Canadian Press Association.

These annual gatherings serve a double purpose. There is the opportunity for exchange of ideas and to meet the other fellow and find, after all, that he is only human—that he does not wear horns, and while a competitor, has his excellent points. The discussions cover theoretical, technical and practical matters. Much good is accomplished and each one carries away suggestions making for better work and better living.

The gentlemen of the press are observant. Their creed and practice make them so. They are invited to view the city and note, so far as a late winter may afford, its characteristics. It is the regret of the local committee that the good old summer time is not here, when nature supplemented by the taste and industry of citizens, dresses the city in summer garb. The visitors may take away impressions that it is a place of much energy and advancement.

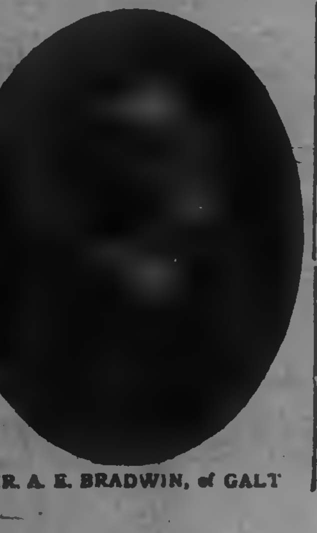
The youngest of our Ontario cities respectfully presents its compliments and trusts that what is said may be in its favor and such as is written be to its credit.

IN PETERBOROUGH.



HIS WORSHIP MAYOR RUSH

The visitors arrived in the city shortly after ten o'clock on a C.P.R. special train which stopped at Park street crossing. His Worship Mayor Rush and the members of the Reception Committee of the City Council had gone out to Burketon on the eight o'clock train and met the special carrying the newspaper men. Introductions took place on the remainder of the journey to Peterborough. The visitors were given a warm welcome by the civic representatives. The plant of the Canadian General Electric Company was the first place of interest, and the city's guests were shown over the extensive works by Mr. E. G. Patterson, the superintendent, and the staff. The Canadian Cordage Co's plant was next inspected and after that luncheon at the Oriental, National and Snowden Hotels was in order. Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P., presided at the Oriental; Mayor Rush at the National and Ald. J. J. Turner, jr., at the Snowden House.



MR. A. E. BRADWIN, of GALT

In the afternoon the plant of the Quaker Oats Co. and the lift lock will be visited, the special leaving for Toronto at five o'clock.

Most complete arrangements had been made for the reception and entertainment of the visitors, and everything passed off in the most harmonious manner.

ATTRACTIVE MENUS.

The printed menu used in connection with the luncheon at the three hotels was of a unique design. They were in the form of miniature copies of the three local newspapers, the Review, Examiner and Times, and attracted much comment.

AT TORONTO

The sessions of the Canadian Press Association on Thursday and Friday, at Toronto have been largely attended and much practical work accomplished. On Friday at noon the Association adjourned to wait on the Attorney-General at the Provincial buildings in relation to the proposed changes on the laws relating to libel. The claims of the publishers were presented and urged by several of the press men and their representatives were favorably received.

The trip to the North-West is slated for early in June, going by the Great Lakes, Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific. It is proposed to spend about twenty-four days on the trip.

The Daily Section held a session on Thursday afternoon and threshed out matters brought to the attention of the meeting, while the Weekly Section gathered in publishers of weekly papers and dealt with such things as of most interest to the members.

The election of officers took place during the afternoon, resulting as follows:—

President—L. S. Channell, Record, Sherbrooke.

Vice-President — J. F. McKay, Globe, Toronto.

2nd Vice-President—C. Young, Freeholder, Cornwall.

J. R. Bone (Star) Toronto, Secretary.

Asst. Secretary—J. H. Cranston, Star, Toronto.

Executive Committee—A. E. Bradwin, Reporter, Galt; F. H. Dobbin, Review, Peterborough; W. E. Smallfield, Mercury, Renfrew; W. M. O'Bierne, Beacon, Stratford; W. J. Taylor, Sentinel-Review, Woodstock.

So far the entire Association is coming to Peterborough en bloc. They will be accompanied by newspaper men of the Toronto city papers, officials of the railroad and others interested.

Among those who will visit Peterborough many of who will be accompanied by wives and lady friends, are the following:—D. Williams, ex-President, Bulletin, Collingwood; W. M. O'Bierne, Beacon, Stratford; W. B. Burgoyne, Standard, St. Catharines; R. L. Mortimer, Free Press, Shelburne, Que.; J. W. Rutherford, Times, Owen Sound; A. D. McKenzie, Times, St. Thomas; L. A. Sydney, N.S.W., March 27.—Public opinion here is sharply divided over the question of the British navy increase, the Federal Government having declined to follow New Zealand's example and grant the funds to construct the additional vessels many clamored for.

Wildly enthusiastic demonstrations were held simultaneously at Sydney, Melbourne, Hobart and Perth. Resolutions were adopted urging that the payment be increased for a subsidy for the imperial navy and asking for subscriptions to defray the cost of presenting a battleship. Patriotic songs were sung at all the meetings.

Mr. O'Sullivan, formerly a Cabinet Minister at Sydney, declared that Great Britain should terminate Germany's rivalry by at once seizing the Kaiser's fleet, said that the Germans were the most callous, sordid and selfish people in the world, and declared that England should repeat Nelson's performance at Copenhagen.

The mayors of Brisbane and Adelaide refused to participate in the demonstrations by calling meetings, and in their respective cities counter meetings of the Labor parties were held to deprecate what was termed patriotic hysteria.

Claiming that the Commonwealth can best assist the mother land by relieving her of responsibility in defending Australia in the present position, the Federal Government here looks with disfavor upon both the subsidy and the additional Dreadnought. The Premiers of five states support the subsidy plan without the Dreadnought, the Victorian Premier alone favoring both, and declaring it to be his determination that his Government shall present a battleship in behalf of the state of Victoria.

How Mistake Was Made.

London, March 27.—Premier Asquith has explained to the Commons the discrepancy between his own statement and that made in the Reichstag by Admiral von Tripitz, Secretary of the Admiralty, concerning the number of new battleships which Germany would have by the end of 1912.

He said that Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary, had been verbally informed on March 10 that the German Government did not intend to accelerate its naval program, and that it would not have thirteen Dreadnoughts until the end of 1912. Comparing this statement with the information of the British Admiralty, to the effect that the number of such ships would be seventeen, the British Government had concluded that the new battleship and the new cruisers had not been included in the total of thirteen.

Speaking in the Reichstag on March 17, Admiral von Tirpitz made it clear that these cruisers were included, and on March 18 the British Government was further informed that, while two of this year's ships on the German program had been promised by the constructing firms in advance of the usual time, this fact did not nullify the previous statements regarding the date of production.

Premier Asquith intimated that the information might affect the British naval program.

King Cables Thanks.

London, March 27.—(C.A.P. Cable.) The King has wired Premier Ward, through Lord Crewe, expressing his gratitude and high appreciation of the fine patriotism and generosity shown by New Zealand in the magnificent offer made so promptly and spontaneously.

The Lord Mayor of Sydney, Australia, has appealed to the people of New South Wales for $1,000,000 towards a Dreadnought, while Premier Wade of New South Wales advocates an increase of the naval subsidy to $2,000,000.

Infants Were Being Looked After by the Kings Daughters

One of the Nash Twins, towards the support of whom subscriptions have been taken in the city, died this morning. The baby girl was only four weeks of age.

The infants were taken in charge by the King's Daughters and were kept at a home in the north of the city. The father had been out of work for months and the mother was taken to the hospital in a delicate state of health.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE WILL CLOSE ABOUT 8TH OF APRIL

Work is Being Hurried Through—Motion is Entered to Block Cheap Power.

Premier Whitney Ruled That it Was Out of Order.

Downey Argues for Tuberculosis Notification Bill — Beck Power Legislation.

Toronto, March 27.—Pressure is growing on the business capacity of the Legislature in view of the intention of the Government to get through by April 8. A batch of third readings was rushed through yesterday, to which his honor the Lieutenant-Governor will give assent on Monday at 2.30 p. m. The chief items of business were the completion of the validating and dealing with the Hydro-Electric power contracts, and the debate on Joseph Downey's consumption bill requiring notification, which was adjourned at 6 o'clock by Dr. R. F. Preston.

J. C. Elliott, seconded by D. Racine, who is the counsel for J. M. McEvoy of London, one of the leading opponents of the Government policy of cheap power for the people of Ontario, presented a long motion on the third reading of the bill by which the electric power bylaws and contracts with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission are validated. It wound up with a proposal to re-submit the whole question once more to the ratepayers; another to repeal the power transmission measures, and one declaring the Hydro-Electric Commission a body corporate.

Premier Whitney called attention to the fact that Mr. Elliott's motion was quite out of order under the rule that no motion shall be prefaced by recitals or preambles. Besides it professed to repeal three different acts by which the power scheme is instituted.

"I brought the bill into committee this afternoon and went through it from end to end, amending every section," remarked the Premier. "That was the time to introduce motions and discussion, and we never heard a word from the Opposition." The motion was ruled out of order and the bill read a third time.

Joseph Downey introduced his bill requiring notification of all cases of consumption. There are from 12,000 to 15,000 infected people in Ontario, with 3,000 deaths annually, and Mr. Downey made a strong and eloquent plea for his bill. New York began with compulsory notification and it had brought about a reduction in the death rate. Education of the people to the advantages of open air treatment would follow the bill.

The House went into committee again on Hon. Adam Beck's bill respecting certain municipal bylaws and agreements.

J. D. McDougall (Ottawa) admitted the bill was meritorious, and was as anxious as any member to further it, but he thought that the ratepayers of a municipality should vote on all questions involving the expenditure of money, and contracts with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission should not be excepted.

Sir James Whitney stated that, as the law stood at present, it was impossible for any municipality to enter into a contract with the Hydro-Electric Commission without first submitting the question to the ratepayers.

Sir James Whitney's bill to validate the power bylaws and contracts which had been passed by various municipalities was again considered in committee, and several amendments made. The Premier was anxious to have this bill passed by the House and thereupon moved the third reading.

J. C. Elliott, member for West Middlesex, complained that the provisions of this bill would work a hardship upon farmers and others through whose lands the transmission lines would pass. They did not receive the same benefit as a farmer would through whose lands a railway might pass. They had no redress for injury or damage to stock, crops or buildings.

The Canada Central was given another opportunity to utilize its charter to build from Sudbury to Little Current and on Manitoulin Island by the private bills committee. A clause will be inserted guaranteeing that certain work will be commenced.

The Southwestern Traction Co., which will run to Port Stanley, were given power to issue new bonds to the extent of $6,000 per mile to liquidate a floating debt of $150,000.

WHAT IS HAPPENING IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

Lord Strathcona Replies to Acceptance of Trust Fund Saying That He is Touched by Parliament's Action—No Policemen Allowed.

Ottawa, March 27.—Suggestions for the development of the fruit-growing industry were made in the Commons yesterday afternoon by many of the rural delegates.

Martin Burrell (Yale-Cariboo) first called attention to some of the weak spots in the Fruit Marks Act. He held that imported fruit should be graded and marked as Canadian fruit is. In the west, they had to face strong competition from the U.S., and there were only two ways to meet that competition; by the protection afforded by the tariff, and by a rigid enforcement of the regulations. Two dangers in imported fruits had to be met, pests and insufficient grading; and the fruit men of British Columbia had learned by experience that eternal vigilance was the price of safety. They had rejected thousands of consignments of all kinds of U. S. fruits as a result of the work of the provincial inspectors, but in the neighboring Province of Alberta the regulations were very feebly enforced and the province was made a dumping ground for culls and diseased fruit.

Mr. Armstrong pointed out that Ontario produced last year 14,600,000 barrels of apples, and he made a plea for more inspectors in that province. He alleged that fruit not up to the act had been exported to England, and if we were to retain our trade there must be a more rigid inspection.

According to militia orders no policeman may hereafter join the active militia. They are exempt from military service and therefore cannot be counted upon in the event of necessity arising for calling out troops. It is therefore not considered advisable that they should be carried upon the rolls of active militia.

Sir Frederick Borden has received from Lord Strathcona a cablegram in reply to the cable accepting the offer of a quarter of a million dollars for the promotion of physical and military training in the schools.

The high commissioner is "touched" by the action of Parliament, and regards it as a "special privilege to be permitted to assist a movement which I cannot but think will have an important influence in strengthening the self-reliance and usefulness of the rising generation as citizens of the Dominion and the Empire."

Discussing Lord Strathcona's gift of $250,000 for the encouragement of physical and military training in the schools, Senator Choquette in the Upper House yesterday said that the provision that the whole of the money should be devoted to educational establishments, which are maintained entirely out of public funds, would exclude all the schools, colleges and academies of Quebec from the benefits of the fund.

Sir Richard Cartwright promised to bring the question to the attention of the Minister of Militia.

THE LOCAL OPTION MOVEMENT IN THE CITY

The Matter Appearing in This Department is Furnished by the Peterborough Temperance and Moral Reform League Which Has Arranged for its Publication.

Instead of being ahead of the times, the effort that is under way to carry local option in Peterborough might well have been made some years ago.

In the United States several whole states have carried prohibition laws. In these states there are numerous cities that are many times larger than Peterborough, in which such a thing as the open bar is unknown.

We are told by those interested in the liquor trade that we could not enforce local option in Peterborough, were it carried. If we cannot, then we are not as good at enforcing our laws as are the people in the United States. Most of us would not like to confess that.

Kansas City, Kansas, has a population of over 100,000. It is over six times as large as Peterborough. And yet it has both abolished the bar and succeeded in enforcing its prohibitory law.

All the arguments that we hear raised in Peterborough against local option were raised in Kansas City, when prohibition was first talked of there. As the results in Peterborough, when local option carries, are likely to be similar to what they have been in Kansas City, let us look at them to see what we may expect to happen here. These results are described as follows in the Chicago Record-Herald by Assistant Attorney-General Trickett, of Kansas:

Former Conditions

"Kansas City is the second largest livestock and meat-packing centre west of Chicago. It has an extensive grain and flour trade, eighteen elevators, large smelting and refining works, the Missouri Pacific, Union Pacific, and Rock Island railroad shops, etc. The population, 100,000, is composed very largely of foreigners, accustomed to drinking wine and beer; and the slum element is said to have been larger (before the saloons were closed) than in any other place in the nation in proportion to population. Moreover, the liquor element controlled the elections and the officials.

"On June 8, 1906, there were 256 saloons in Wyandotte county, Kansas, of which Kansas City is the seat; there were 200 gambling houses and more than 60 houses of evil repute. On July 3, all were closed. There have been none since. When the fight started delegations of business men said that to close the saloons would stop our growth, destroy business, deplete bank deposits, stop the erection of buildings, render houses vacant, increase taxation, reduce the price of real estate, cause people to go over to Kansas City, Missouri, to do their shopping and spend their money, and would ruin the town generally.

Present Conditions

"The business men who had so many fears, will now tell you that they were mistaken. The abolition of liquor selling has been of decided benefit instead of injury to the business interests of the city. Bank deposits have increased more than two millions of dollars since the saloons were closed. More clerks have been hired to attend to mercantile business. A letter from the president of the largest bank in the city says that within one year after saloon closing his deposits increased $1,700,000. He testifies that a majority of business men are pleased with the results, with which a large majority of professional men and other intelligent citizens agree.

"The president of the Home City Bank writes that Mr. Atkinson, vice-president of a suburban bank in Armourdale, says that business has increased 36 per cent. A savings bank president writes that its business has increased 50 per cent., and also that 75 per cent. of the new customers are of the class that formerly spent all their money for liquor. A real estate man of seventeen years' standing, writes: 'There are more houses—and good houses—being built; more people are buying houses, and good houses, and seeking investments than in any year since I have lived here.'

Prohibition and Cities

"'From July 1, 1906, to July 1, 1907 there was an increase of 200.7 per cent in building operations, the largest of any city in the union. Three times as many laboring men bought homes in our town last year as ever before.

"The Police Judge writes me that day after day goes by without a single arrest in this city of over 100,000 people, 20,000 people gathered at the carnival here, and there were only four arrests.

"'There has been a wonderful reduction in the number sent to the poor farm. For the first time in 25 years the associated charities have not a burden greater than they can bear.

"Saloon rule brought 56 children to the Orphan's Home. Today there are only 20.

Effect on the Schools

"Three months after the saloons closed, the schools reopened. Instead of the usual six or eight additional teachers we had to employ 18. There was a list of 600 boys and girls of 12 to 18 years who attended the public schools last year for the first time. They gave as a reason why they had not attended in former years that they had to assist a drinking father in earning a living for the family.

"These same conditions have been practically duplicated in every city where the prohibition law has been enforced, in Topeka, Wichita, Junction City, Fort Scott, Coffeyville, Independence and other places, and population in all of them is rapidly increasing."

With such evidence as the foregoing in regard to the effect of the abolition of liquor selling from cities—and similar evidence can be furnished in the case of many other cities—what use is there for people to try and convince the citizens of Peterborough that this city will not be benefitted greatly when we carry local option here next January?

SPLENDID WORK IN CATHOLIC QUEBEC

People who think that the local option movement is making rapid progress in Ontario are apt to be surprised when they find that, owing largely to the aggressive campaign against the saloon conducted by Roman Catholic clergy, the province of Quebec is really ahead of the province of Ontario in temperance reform. In Ontario as yet, less than half of our municipalities have abolished the bar. In Quebec, there are 1006 municipalities, of which 664 have no licenses for the sale of liquor. Mr G. G. Huxtable, of 120 Colonial Avenue, Montreal, who is acquainted with temperance conditions in that province writes as follows, about them;

"The clearly defined attitude of the Catholic Church is a tower of strength to the work of temperance. Let me give you two or three illustrations;

"His Grace Archbishop Bruchesi, at the annual rally of the "Y" made this statement; "I lay my hand on the heads of 20,000 children every year in the rite of confirmation. I never lay my hand on the head of one of them who has not signed the pledge of total abstinence." He emphasized in the most powerful manner the grand motto, "Save the Children,"

Work of Franciscan Fathers

"'The Franciscan Fathers, an eloquent and powerful band of speakers have been sent out on a crusade in the work of temperance. In their mission they have made 84,000 pledged abstainers, and they have closed some 80 bar rooms. These gentlemen have done a mighty work in the creation of temperance sentiment.

Anti-Ancohol League

"The Anti-Alcoholic League, which has been organized about a year has been another power factor in temperance work in this province. They have closed 54 saloons in the City of Quebec and in three counties they have swept every license out of existence.

"This splendid organization admits to its membership Protestants as well as Catholics, and women as well. It anticipates a membership of 50,000.

Roman Catholic Total Abstinence Sentiment

"The "Roman Catholic Total Abstinence Union" is still another temperance organization which has been recently formed. Its constitution and methods are strictly identical with those of the Dominion Alliance. It has officially affiliated itself with the Alliance.

Crime in Ontario and Quebec

"In the year 1905 Ontario had 7,459 criminals; Quebec had 3,802 criminals. Ontario had 3.36 per thousand; Quebec had 2.76 per thousand. Whence this important difference? We have in Quebec a larger area under prohibitory law. We have vastly more municipalities under Local Option and we have legislation as between temperance men and liquor men that is more in harmony with the rooted principles of truth and justice."

DOES LOCAL OPTION PROHIBIT?

Here and there we find a man endeavoring to convince people that there will be just as much liquor sold in Peterborough after the local option by-law carries as there is now. The same argument has been used for years under similar conditions in the United States, but without much success. It is answered by Rev. Prof. Scanlon as follows;—

"If more liquor is sold where there are no saloons than where there are, would brewers, distillers and wholesale dealers, who are about seventy-five per cent. of all saloons, pay license, rent, taxes, insurance, attorney's fees, and contribute large sums of money to influence the press to publish and distribute literature, and in other ways to obtain license, all to lessen the amount of their sales?

"Would the liquor men now be maintaining five national organizations in the United States at heavy expense, to oppose all prohibitory measures, if such measures did not interfere with the traffic? Would they keep an expensive lobby at the national capital to urge the restoration of the canteen or army saloon if they were not financially interested?"

NORMAL STUDENTS WON THE DEBATE

Large and Appreciative Audience Were Greatly Pleased With the Arguments of the Debaters

A large and appreciative audience was present last evening in the assembly hall of the Normal School to listen to the debate: "Resolved, that independence is the likely destiny of Canada." The affirmative was taken by Miss McKellar and Mr. Cota Leen of the Normal School, while Mr. John Garvin and Miss Smith of the Collegiate Institute took the negative. The speakers showed by their clever arguments that the subject had been well prepared by them, and the pleasing manner in which they presented their respective points was well received by those present. Messrs. F. D. Kerr, D. W. Dumble, K.C., and Andrew Brown were the judges, and the decision was given to the affirmative in a neat and appropriate speech by Mr. Kerr, who complimented the chairman, Mr. Frank Austin, and the speakers on the success of the debate. Mr. D. W. Dumble also delivered a few complimentary remarks on the debate.

During the evening a short musical programme was rendered, and the different numbers were heartily applauded by the audience.

The gathering dispersed after the singing of the National Anthem.

SUMMARIZED STATEMENT BY THE WATER COMMISSIONERS

"The present dam has not that degree of permanency its vital importance to the ratepayers demands, and having been placed on a gravel or earth foundation its leakage is very great, probably one-third or more. For these reasons in mid-summer it has about reached its pumping capacity.

The Underwriters Association demands increased pumping power and for default will require higher insurance rates on city property.

The cost of maintenance and repair on the dam are very great, representing a capital of $20,000.00 if put into a new dam. The engineers' estimate of putting even new sheeting on the present dam will cost over $10,000.00.

The surplus annual revenue from water rates is now nearly $8,000.00 more than enough to pay both the sinking funds and interest on the cost of a new concrete dam and the other plant required, and no sum will need to be raised by taxation, or in any other way except by the present water rates.

The electors should not confound the proposal of the commissioners with any other relating to power. They simply have to do with water supply, but nothing with power for any other purposes. They have no authority to enter into any general power project.

If the new dam should develop more power than is required for pumping, as the Commissioners are assured it will very greatly do, they will sell such power undeveloped at the dam at so much per horse power to the city or any one else, and what is received in this way will go to the credit of water consumers and be applied for their benefit.

For the reasons given the Commissioners strongly recommend the passage of their bylaw for a new dam.

GOHEEN IS ACQUITTED ON CHARGE OF ASSAULTING SHORT

Lindsay, March 26.—The case against Leslie Goheen, charged with assaulting night Constable John Short, on the night of March 4th, was heard before Police Magistrate Jackson this morning at 9.30 o'clock, and after hearing the evidence of Messrs. Penrose and Goheen, His Worship dismissed the case and Leslie Goheen was clearly exonerated of the charge. The evidence that Constable Short swore in the last case was used against Goheen. His Worship in summing up the evidence in part, stated; The charge is against Leslie Goheen for assault committed on March 4th. We have the evidence of the other day, and of Penrose and Goheen today. The evidence of Short and Goheen and Penrose differ in many ways. At Moore's Hotel Mr. Short swore that there were three people, and the other two swore that there were four people. Penrose swore positively that Mick Carlin was there when Short came across the road from Adams' corner, and it seems very peculiar to me that he was seen there by Short. As soon as Short asked Goheen and Penrose to go home they started off. Penrose went directly home and Goheen was called back by Leo Carlin. Goheen swore positively he he pulled Mick Carlin off Short and that he did not assault Constable Short in any way. His Worship then stated that he had nothing in the evidence to find Goheen guilty, and what did really happen only one person knows, and that is Mick Carlin. I have not the slightest evidence to convict Goheen and I cannot put a mark on him that will remain with him for life. I dismiss the case." Mr. Geo. A. Jordan appeared for Leslie Goheen, and Mr. A. P. Devlin, Crown Attorney, for the prosecution.

THIRD CLASS CAR ON THE G.T.R.

Will be Put on the Montreal-Toronto Route in Near Future

The next few days will see the announcement of the establishment of a third class car service at a two-cent per mile rate on the Grand Trunk railway between Montreal and Toronto.

Mr B. S Logan, assistant to the general manager of the Grand Trunk stated yesterday that there would be an official announcement made during the course of the next two or three days and that the matter was now before the passenger department.

Asked about the nature of the third class cars to be put on Mr Logan stated that the probability was the company would take some of their somewhat antiquated second class cars and re-fit them up for this purpose.

"However," said Mr Logan, "these cars will be made perfectly comfortable although plain and will be lighted and heated like a first class coach. On the whole they will be superior to the third class cars run in the Old Country.

In reply to a question he stated that the company would run as many of these cars as were needed, but that at present one car would in all probability be quite sufficient to carry all who desire to travel third-class.

PROOF THAT NO ONE CAN DOUBT

That Dodd's Kidney Pills Always Cure Rheumatism.

Conclusive Evidence Given by Durham Brown, of Brantford, Ont.—How and Why the Cure is Effected.

Brantford, Ont., March 26.—Special —That Rheumatism is caused by diseased Kidneys and that Dodd's Kidney Pills cure both the sick Kidneys and the Rheumatism, is again proved in the case of Mr. Durham Brown, of No. Spring Street, this city.

"I was troubled with Backache and other well-known symptoms of Kidney Disease," Mr. Brown states. "I also suffered from Rheumatism in my right side and hip to the extent that I was always while at my work in agonizing pain.

"After taking one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills I found an improvement and after taking six boxes I found both my Kidney Disease and Rheumatism entirely cured."

Mr. Brown is only one of many cases in which it has been proved beyond a doubt that the natural way to cure Rheumatism is to remove the cause. The cause of Rheumatism is uric acid in the blood which crystallises at the muscles and joints. Well Kidneys strain the uric acid out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills make well Kidneys. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure Rheumatism.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

One of the happiest of the many happy social evenings which have been given at the YWCA during the winter was enjoyed on Thursday evening when the members of Dr Greer's first aid class and the members of Mr. A. Mowat's literary class met together for a social evening as a fitting closing to the course of lectures which have been given weekly for the past five months by these gentlemen. A bright hour was spent in a progressive literary contest, followed by a musical medley played by Miss Hazel Dean, at the conclusion of which it was found that Mrs Greer and Miss Amy McKee had succeeded in winning the first prizes.

Then followed a pleasant part of the evening's programme, when Mr. Mowatt and Dr Greer were addressed by a representative from each class who in a tangible way, expressed on behalf of the class members, their appreciation of great benefit received through the lectures.

Both gentlemen replied expressing their pleasure in having had some share in the educational work of this Association and signified their willingness to continue to help another season.

After the hearty singing of "Blest be the tie that binds," our hearts in christian love," tea was served.

The closing lecture of the literary class will be given next week on Friday evening in the YWCA gymnasium hall when Prof A H Young, of Trinity University will give a most interesting stereoptican lecture. His subject is "The paintings of Michael Angelo" in the Sistine chapel. The public are invited to enjoy this stereoptican lecture with the members of the Association on the evening of April 2nd.

The closing of the gymnasium season takes place on Tuesday evening in the Collegiate hall. A long programme of beautiful fancy drills, marches, etc, will be given by the different classes, seniors, intermediates and juniors.

Premier Rutherford will have a majority of 41 in the Alberta Legislature.

A Woman's Sympathy

Are you discouraged? Is your doctor's bill a heavy financial load? Is your pain a heavy physical burden? I know what these mean to delicate women—I have been discouraged, too; but learned how to cure myself. I want to relieve your burdens. Why not end the pain and stop the doctor's bill? I can do this for you and will if you will assist me.

All you need do is to write for a free box of the remedy which has been placed in my hands to be given away. Perhaps this one box will cure you—it has done so for others. If so, I shall be happy and you will be cured for 2c (the cost of a postage stamp). Your letters held confidentially. Write to-day for my free treatment. MRS. F. E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

SEVEN YEARS AN INVALID

Then She Took "Fruit-a-tives" And Is Now Well.

Arnprior, Ont., Nov. 27, 1908.

I was an invalid for seven years from fearful Womb Trouble. I had falling womb, with constant pain in the back and front of my body and all down my legs. There was a heavy discharge and this made me weak, sleepless, restless and miserable. Often I was obliged to be in bed for a month at a time. I was treated by several doctors, but their treatment did me no permanent good.

A few months ago, I was persuaded to try "Fruit-a-tives." I took several boxes, and from the outset of this treatment I was better, the Constipation was cured, and the discharge lessened. I took, for the paleness, several bottles of the Iron Mixture as recommended in the "Fruit-a-tives" book, but I feel that it was "Fruit-a-tives" alone that cured me.

How to get a pure white loaf

THE object of all expert bakers and cooks is to make a pure white loaf

And this object is attained by the use of

PURITY FLOUR

Purity is a hard-wheat flour of decidedly superior whiteness. It bakes into a pure white loaf. So, you see, to get the really beautiful white loaf you must use PURITY hard-wheat flour.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The Wallaceburg Sugar Co. will pay dividends, after nearly six lean years.

The C.P.R. has let a contract for [illegible] miles of irrigation ditches in Calgary district.

Col. Charles Clarke, late Speaker of the Legislature, is seriously ill at his home in Elora.

The Grand Trunk will establish a two-cent-a-mile passenger rate between Toronto and Montreal.

Assistant Fire Chief Scott of London, Ont., who fell down a shaft at a fire, is now expected to recover.

A pianist in a Montreal burlesque theatre, driven crazy by the jokes, had himself committed to the asylum.

Flyer in Collision.

Bowmanville, March 27.—While running at a fair rate of speed the Montreal flyer of the Grand Trunk collided with an engine and a caboose on the front of a freight train at 6.30 yesterday morning.

The only one injured was Fireman Arnold Johnston, who had his face badly cut by jumping from the engine of the freight.

Had it not been for the nerve and pluck of the engineer, McKibbon, of the fast train, who stuck to his post and applied the brakes, many of the passengers might have been seriously injured.

The passengers subscribed $100 for the engineer.

The accident was due to freight engine No. 748, in charge of Engineer Zimmerman, failing to reach a siding in time to open the switch for the flyer, which was one-half hour late.

The engine of the passenger train was turned over on its said and the escape of McKibbon with his life was a miracle. The engine and caboose of the freight train also left the rails.

David Brooks, three and a half years old, son of a clothing dealer at Belleville, was drowned in an old well.

Miles of ice fields and bergs mountains high were passed by the Furness liner Evangeline now at Halifax.

A Filthy Condition

See that dandruff
See that dirty coat

Many a man, otherwise scrupulously clean is dandruff dirty. The small parasitical germs of dandruff working all day as well as night are constantly throwing off the small white dandruff scales which falling on the shoulders of a coat gives it a filthy appearance, which is repulsive to the friends of the victim.

Many men allow this condition to exist because they believe there is no cure for dandruff; they have tried various so-called cures with unsatisfactory results and naturally condemn all.

The famous prescription called Parisian Sage now put up in America, but only by the Giroux Mfg. Co., of Buffalo, NY., It is for sale in Peterborough by Wm. Madill druggist, who guarantees it to cure dandruff in two weeks or money back.

Parisian Sage is guaranteed to do more; it will make short, thin hair, grow long, lustrous and luxuriant; it will stop hair from falling out; it will cure all diseases of the scalp. W. Madill guarantees it —every bottle of it. The price is only 50 cents and if you want to stop the filthy dandruff flakes from lodging on your coat and disgusting your friends, get a bottle at once.

Jane Cable

... By ...

GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON,

Author of "Beverly of Graustark," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY DODD, MEAD & COMPANY

The old clerk's body had stiffened, and the look on his face was something horrible to behold. Terror was visible in every lineament. His companions started from their chairs in alarm. With a mighty effort the old man succeeded in regaining a semblance of self control. His body relaxed, and his jaw dropped. His voice was trembling and weak as he responded, an apologetic grin on his face.

"Nothing—nothing at all. A momentary pain. Don't mind me. Don't mind me," he mumbled. "I have them often. I think it's my heart. What were you saying, Graydon? Oh, yes, the pardon. I—I hope you'll mention me in writing to your father. Tell him I hope to—to see him if he comes to New York."

"I don't believe he likes you, Elias," said Graydon, half jestingly.

"Wha-what has he said to you?" demanded Droom sharply.

"He rather resented your taking Jane and me to Joliet that day." The old man's grin was malicious. "He won't forgive you that."

"I shall never forget how he looked at you, Mr. Droom," said Jane, with a shudder. Droom trembled with a new spasm of fear.

Attention was diverted by the arrival of the party of six. The men were distinguished in appearance, the women aristocratic, but spirited. That they were well known to many of the diners in those days at Sherry's was at once apparent. They were bowing right and left to nearby acquaintances. After much ado they finally relapsed into the chairs obsequiously drawn back for them, and the buzz of conversation throughout the place was resumed.

Graydon, lowering his voice, named the newcomers to Jane, who looked at them with fresh interest. The names were well known to New York and European society. For the moment Elias Droom was unnoticed. He took the opportunity to collect his nerves and to subdue his too apparent emotion. Jane was recalled from her polite scrutiny of the women at the next table by hearing her name mentioned in Droom's hoarsest voice, modified into something like a whisper.

"Miss Cable, I not only asked you to come here in order to tell you the name of your father, but to point him out to you."

There was an instant of breathless silence at the table. So startling was his announcement that every other sound in the room escaped the ears of his two listeners.

"There was a new hundred dollar bill found in the basket with you. Your grandfather's signature was on that bill. He was the president of the bank which issued it. Your mother was"— Here he leaned forward and whispered a name that fairly stunned his hearers. Graydon caught his breath, and a new light appeared in his eyes. He was beginning to believe that the old man's brain was affected. Jane leaned forward in her chair, an incredulous smile on her lips.

"Don't jest, Elias," began Graydon, somewhat roughly.

"I am not jesting. It is the truth; I swear it," snapped Elias.

"But, great heaven, man, consider what you've said! It's one of the best families in this country. It's preposterous to say"—

"Of course her family is one of the best. She was a bluestocking. That's where Miss Cable gets most of her good blood."

"Elias, I can't believe it!" cried Graydon.

"Your father will tell you the same. For more than twenty years I have known the secret. There is no documentary proof, but this much I do know—James Bansemer received $50,000 for keeping his mouth closed. He found out the truth, and he profited by it, as usual. Oh, he knew that hundred dollar bills are not left with pauper babies. I don't know how he unearthed the truth about Miss"—

"Sh! Don't mention the name aloud!"

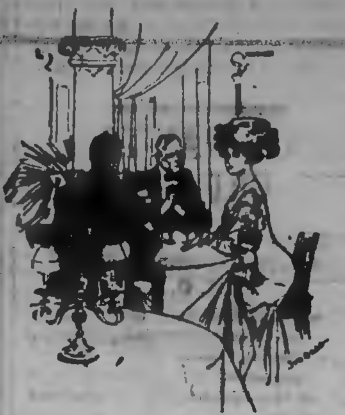
"But he did unearth it, beyond all possible chance of mistake. Your father, Miss Cable, is sitting at that table. Don't look up just yet. He is staring at you. He doesn't know you, but he does know you are a pretty woman. The gentleman with the gray hair, Graydon. See? That man is her father."

Graydon half started up in his chair, his lips apart, his eyes riveted on the man designated. Every drop of blood seemed to have frozen in his veins.

"Good God, Elias!" he whispered. "Why, that is"— The name stuck in his throat.

"The son of the man who signed the bank note. He is Jane's father. There's blue blood in him—there has been since King Henry's day—but he is a villain for all that. Now, Miss Cable, I've done my duty. I've told you the absolute truth. You could not have expected more. You could not have asked a greater climax. The name of Vanderbilt or Astor is no better known than that man's name, and no ancestry is better than that of your mother. I will now give to you one of the articles of proof that connects you with their history." He handed to her a small package. "It is the letter written to James Bansemer by your paternal grandfather, agreeing to an appointment to discuss a question of grave moment. I found the letter that same day, and I've kept it all these years. It bears your grandfather's signature. That is all. I heard part of that interview, and I stake my soul that what I've told you is true."

Jane sat looking at him as if paralyzed. Her mind was quite incapable of grasping the full import of his words—the words she had craved for so many months and yet dreaded.



"Your father, Miss Cable, is sitting at that table."

"I knew he was coming here tonight. He gives a theater party. Tomorrow he goes abroad. That is all."

"He's living in Paris," muttered Graydon mechanically. Jane spoke for the first time, as in a daze.

"I—I have seen him many times in Paris. My father? Oh, oh, it can't be true!"

"Jane, let me take you away from here," began Graydon, observing her pallor.

"No; let me stay. It can't matter, Graydon. I want to look at him again and again," she said shrinking back as if the whole world were staring at her. By the most prodigious effort she regained control of her fleeing composure. It was a trying moment.

"He's worth millions," said Droom. "It will be worth while for you to"—

"No!" she exclaimed passionately. "Do you think I will present myself to him after he has cast me off? No—a thousand times, no!"

At that instant the party of six hurriedly arose to leave the place. The tall man with the gray hair—the handsomest man of all—was staring boldly at Jane's averted face, now red with consciousness. As he passed her in going out of the room his look grew more insistent. She glanced up, and a faint smile crossed his face.

"Handsome girl," he remarked to the man behind him, and then he passed out of her sight, perhaps forever.

"The woman with him," cried Jane, her eyes following the beautiful creature at his side—"is she my mother?"

"No," said Graydon, averting his eyes to avoid her expression; "she is his wife."

Droom waited until the party was out of the restaurant before uttering a word.

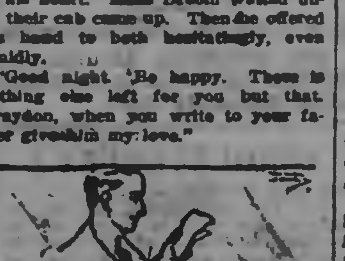
"Inside of two years I have pointed out two fathers to their children—yours and his, Jane. Your mothers are dead. There isn't much choice as to fathers. If I were you, I'd say I had the better of the bargain. Take an old man's advice, both of you, and let bygones be bygones. Start life now, just as if nothing had happened before, and get every atom of happiness out of it that you can. Don't you two pay for the sins of your fathers."

"I couldn't live in New York if he were living here," murmured Jane.

"Hey, waiter, your bill," said Droom, with sudden harshness.

It was snowing and the wind was blowing a gale when they emerged from the place. Jane hung heavily upon Graydon's arm. He could feel that she was sobbing. He did not dare to look into her face, but he felt something cruelly triumphant surging in his heart. Elias Droom waited until their cab came up. Then he offered his hand to both hesitatingly, even timidly.

"Good night. Be happy. There is nothing else left for you but that. Graydon, when you write to your father give him my love."



CHAPTER XXXII.

DROOM stood for a few moments in the battling snowstorm, abstractedly gazing toward Longacre square. The chill in his marrow was not from the blizzard that swept down upon him. The gaunt gray look in his face was not that of hunger or want. There was fever in his brain and chill in his heart. He had forgotten Jane's trivial tragedy. His one overwhelming thought was of James Bansemer.

The heavy ulster was unbuttoned, and the snowflakes pelted in against his neglected shirt front. A doorman called his attention to the oversight. He came to himself, drew the coat close about his long frame and hurried off down Fifth avenue. The storm was so vicious that he boarded a crosstown car at Forty-second street. A man elbowed him in the narrow vestibule. He looked up and gasped aloud in sudden terror. An instant later he laughed at his fears. The man was not James Bansemer. A cold perspiration started out over his body, however. Through his brain there went racing the ever revolving cry:

"He'll come straight to me—straight to me!"

The hour was not late, but the blizzard had driven the crowds from the streets. Eighth avenue sidewalks were deserted except for the people who were obliged to brave the storm. As Droom hurried south to his lodgings he became possessed of a racking belief that some one was following close upon his heels—some one who was rushing up to deal him a murderous blow in the back. The old man actually broke into a frantic run in covering the last half block.

It was not until he was in his rooms, with the door bolted, that he could rid himself of the dread. The fire had gone out, and the light was low. His teeth chattered and his hand shook as he raised the wick in the lamp. The palsy of inexplicable fear was upon him. Kneeling before the stove, he began to rebuild the fire. His back was toward the door, and he turned an anxious face in that direction from time to time. Footsteps on the stairway sent a chill through his gaunt frame. They passed on up the next flight, but he waited breathlessly until he heard the door of the apartment above slam noisily.

For half an hour he sat huddled in front of the stove without removing his hat and ulster.

"Curse the luck!" he was saying over and over again to himself, sometimes aloud. "Why should he have a pardon? What are the laws for? Curse that meddling old fool Clegg! They'll set him free, and he'll hunt me out; I know he will. He won't forgive me for that day's work. He may be free now. It may have been he who followed me. But, no! That's a silly thing to think. It takes weeks and months to get a pardon. Maybe—maybe they won't get it, after all."

He tried to throw off his desperate feeling of apprehension, chattering all sorts of comforting reasons and excuses to himself as he scurried about the rooms with aimless haste. Try as he would, however, when the time came he could not read—not even of his courage inspiring Napoleon. The howl of the wind annoyed and appalled him. He caught himself listening intently for sounds above and not of the storm. A nervous, intermittent laugh broke from his lips as he went on cursing himself for a fool to be so disturbed by Graydon's report.

"What have I to fear from him? Why should I let that look of his unnerve me so? Why can't I forget it? It—it didn't mean anything. I'm a fool to think of it. Nearly two years ago, that was. Why, he may be"— A new thought chased the old one out before it was formed. His eyes caught sight of one of his completed models standing in the corner. It was the model for the guillotine.

For a long time he sat staring at the thing, a hundred impressions forming and reforming in his brain.

"I wonder if I'll really die before he is liberated," he was saying dumbly to himself. "I wonder if I will. There's no sign of it now. I'm strong and well enough to live for years. Suppose he is freed inside of a month or two. What then? By heaven, I'd be losing the dearest hope of my whole life. My last sight of him—that beautiful vision behind the bars—would be spoiled, undone, wiped out. He'd be as free as I. I won't die inside of a month, I'm sure. He'd come here and laugh at me, and he'd kill me in the end. God, I know he would. He'd have the joy of seeing my pain and terror and defeat—he'd—[illegible]! I'd be bloody and crushed and"—

He checked himself in the midst of these dire forebodings to rise suddenly and cross to the ghastly looking frame with the cords, the hinges and the great broadax that lay harmlessly in the grooves at the top. For many minutes he stood and gazed at the ax, his flesh as cold as ice. Then he tested the cords. The ax dropped heavily to the block below.

The odor of geranium leaves assailed his nostrils. With an ugly impulse he turned and swept the pots from the window box, scattering them over the floor.

He lifted the broadax to its place, tenderly, almost lovingly. "By my soul, it's a beautiful piece of work. It's as sure as the grave itself."

Again he stood off and looked at the infernal bit of his own handiwork, his eyes glistening with dread of the thing. He turned and fled to the opposite side of the room, keeping his back toward the silent guillotine which seemed to be calling to him. He glanced slyly, fearfully, over his shoulder and then faced the thing deliberately, his jaws set, his eyes staring.

"It is a quick way—a sure way," he muttered. "I haven't anything to live for and but a few years at most. Nobody cares whether I live or die—not even I. James Bansemer could not batter me down, as he surely will, if I"—

He crossed to an old chest and unlocked its lid with feverish haste. A bundle of papers came up in the grasp of his tense fingers. Casting dreadful glances at the insistent ax, he seated himself at the table and began looking over the papers.

"He won't take his father's rotten money, but he'll take mine. It's honest. It represents wages honestly, bitterly earned. There's more than $20,000 to give him. He'll be surprised. Twenty thousand!" He laid the first paper, his will drawn in favor of Graydon Bansemer, signed and addressed, upon the table and then carelessly tossed the other documents into the chest. "By the Lord Harry, I'll have the best of James Bansemer yet. His boy will take my money even though he spurns his. God! I wish I could see him when he knows all this. It would be glorious!"

He fingered the document for a tense moment and then arose to remove his coat and vest. These he hung away in his closet with all his customary carefulness. In the middle of the room he stopped, his quivering face turned toward the gaunt thing of execution. His feet seemed nailed to the floor. His brain was urging him to go on with the horrid deed; his body was rebelling.

Suddenly he found his strength of limb. With a guttural howl he clasped his hands to his eyes and fled blindly into his bedroom. Hurling his long, shivering frame upon the bed, he tried to shut out the enticing call of the thing of death. How long he quivered there, shuddering and struggling, he could not have told. In the end—and as suddenly as he had fled—he leaped up and with a shrill laugh dashed back into the other room.

There was no hesitation in his body now. With a maniacal glee he rushed upon the devilish contrivance in the corner, tearing the ax from its place with ruthless hands. Throughout the building rang the sounds of smashing wood, furious blows of steel upon wood, and high above the din arose the laugh of Elias Droom. In two minutes the guillotine lay in chips and splinters about the room.

Dropping back against the wall, wet with perspiration, a triumphant grin upon his face, Elias surveyed the wreckage. His muscles relaxed and his eyes lost the dread that had filled them. The smile actually grew into an expression of sweetness and peace that his face had never known before.

As he staggered to a chair a great sigh of relief broke from his lips.

"There!" he gasped. "It's over; it's over! My head is on my shoulders—it really is after all! It is not rolling into the corner—no, no! By my head—my own head, too—it was a close call for you, Elias Droom. Now I'll take what comes. I'll wait for James Bansemer! I'll stick it out to the end. If he comes, he'll find me here. I've conquered the infernal death that stood waiting so long for me in that corner, and I never suspected it either. How near it was to me! It stood there and waited for me to come. It knew that I would come sooner or later! But I've smashed it. It's gone! It's not there!"

With eager hands he gathered up the pieces of wood and cast them into the stove. As the remains of that frightful minister of death crackled and spit with defeated venom Elias Droom calmly pulled on his worn dressing gown, lighted his pipe and cocked his feet upon the stove rail, a serene look in his eyes, a chuckle in his throat.

Sold Liquor to Italians.

St. Catharines, March 27.—Serverio Scalese of St. Davids, and William Hendershott, a driver for J. J. Bampfield of Niagara Falls, appeared before Magistrate Campbell, charged with illegally selling liquor to Italians at St. David's. Hendershott pleaded guilty, and was fined $50. Scalese was remanded.

Blew Out the Gas.

Windsor, March 27.—Albert McGee, elderly, blew out the gas in his room at the Dominion House, and was found unconscious yesterday morning. He was admitted to the hotel three days ago, although without funds, and secured temporary shelter with the expectation of getting some work to do.

Four Children Burned.

Foster, Que., March 27.—Four children belonging to Mr. Everett, who lives a short distance from Iron Hill, were burned to death. Their names are Gitty, 7 years; Harry, 5; Freddy, 3, and Tommy, 2 years. Mrs. Everett had gone to a neighbor's.

A MEDICINE FOR THE SPRING

Do Not Dose With Purgatives---A Tonic is all You Need

Not exactly sick—but not feeling quite well. That's the way most people feel in the spring. Easily tired, appetite fickle, sometimes headaches and a feeling of depression. Perhaps pimples or eruptions may appear on the skin, or there may be twinges of rheumatism or neuralgia. Any of them indicate that the blood is out of order; that the indoor life of winter has left its mark upon you and may easily develop into more serious trouble. Don't dose yourselves with purgatives, as many people foolishly do, in the hope that you can put your blood right. Purgatives gallop through the system and weaken, instead of giving strength. What you need in spring is a tonic that will make new blood and build up the nerves. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the one medicine that can do this speedily, safely and surely. Every dose of this medicine helps to make new blood, which clears the skin, strengthens the appetite, and makes tired, depressed men and women bright, active and strong. Miss Mary C. Ayer, Ward Brook, N.S., says:—"I cannot speak too highly in favor of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I was weak and run down and quite unable to work. I often had headaches and my appetite was poor. I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and in a short time there was a marked improvement, and to-day I am in better health than I have been for years."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Welland town is suing the Mutual Natural Gas Company for $15,000.

Snowstorm Causes a Fire.

Smith's Falls, March 27.—Snow played havoc with the electric wires here and as a result the telegraph and telephone service is badly demoralized to-day. The weight of snow caused an electric light wire to break and in falling the stay wire of a huge telephone cable was burned and the cable fell to the ground. The telephone, telegraph and electric light wires all became crossed, and this narrowly escaped causing a serious fire in The Record office, where the G.N.W. office is located. The fire was carried into the building. Fortunately it was early in the evening and it was noticed at once and extinguished.

Kidnapped Girl Found.

Chicago, March 27.—A kidnapping which remained a mystery for a quarter of a century, apparently was cleared up here yesterday by the finding in South Chicago of Mrs. John Warner, long sought by member of her family in Montreal. The police here received a letter Wednesday from Madame Dame Longevin, of 415 La Gameustier street, Montreal, asking them to search for her sister Elizabeth, who when five years old was kidnapped from her home in Montreal 25 years ago. The hunt was kept up for six years.

Aerial Science Society.

Ottawa, March 27.—In connection with the visit here Saturday of Dr. Alexander Bell, it is understood that preliminary arrangements will be made for the formation of a National Association for the Promotion of Aerial Navigation.

Dr. Mark G. McElhinney, a local experimenter, has had some correspondence on the question and some of those interested in the science in Montreal and Toronto are expected to meet here.

Dampens the Ardor.

London, March 27.—Considerable doubt is expressed here as to whether the ardor of both Canada and Australia will not be dampened by Premier Asquith's reply to New Zealand saying that the immediate position is "amply secured" and postponing until next year the acceptance of the ship which New Zealand apparently wanted to have laid down immediately.

Subjects for Press Conference.

London, March 27.—The matters to be discussed at the Imperial press conference from June 7 to June 10, are cable news services and press inter-communication, the press and imperial defence, the navy and the army, literature and journalism. The chairmen will be Earl Crewe, Hon. Mr. McKenna, and A. J. Balfour and Lord Morley.

The St. Raymond Paper Co. has applied to go into liquidation.

BEFORE TREATMENT

AFTER TREATMENT

He was surprised at how the sores healed—"I took your NEW METHOD TREATMENT for a serious blood disease with which I had been afflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians, taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the NEW METHOD TREATMENT for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I certainly can recommend your treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish." W. LOCAL NEWS NOTES

Inthon Bible Class

Rev. J. G. Potter will address the Inthon Bible class of George street church to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock on the subject of temperance.

Funeral of Wesley Whitfield

The funeral of the late Wesley Whitfield took place this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the late residence, North Monaghan, to the Little Lake cemetery. Rev. J. G. Coon officiated in place of Dr. Marsh, who has been ill.

At the Knowles Lecture

During the evening a delightful programme was rendered by Miss Foy, who played brilliantly at the piano, and by Mr. Kenneth Shook, who greatly pleased the audience with two excellent vocal numbers.

MRS. MOWATT GAVE ADDRESS AT LINDSAY

The Lindsay Post says:

The musical entertainment, under the auspices of the Talent Workers of St. Andrew's church which was held last night, was a most decided success. The church was well filled with the lovers of sacred music and they were delighted with the programme. Although the entertainment was long the audience remained until the end and paid strict attention until the closing number was finished.

Mr J. P. Donald made a very efficient chairman for the evening and in a few well chosen words opened the programme.

Mrs. Mowatt, of Berlin, formerly of Peterborough was present and she explained ten of the most familiar hymns used by all congregations. Mrs. Mowatt, showed by her explanations that she had searched thoroughly, and deeply into the history of the hymns and the audience was greatly enlightened. It would be hard, indeed to pick out the star of stars who took part as every one performed his or her part exceedingly well. The organ selections by Mr Henry Hamilton, organist of St Andrew's, delighted the audience and marked the player as a thorough master of the instrument. The anthem by the choir was also well rendered and reflects much credit upon their leader.

Buy your ticket now for the Y.W.C.A. gymnasium exhibition and concert to be given in Collegiate hall, Tuesday evening next.

OPERA CO. ACHIEVED ANOTHER SUCCESS

The Royal Italian Opera Company presented "Carmen" at the Grand Opera House last night, and repeated the success which they achieved here a week ago when they produced "Il Trovatore." There was a large audience, and the opera was sung in a manner that aroused the greatest enthusiasm. Messrs. Turner and Sons deserve great credit for affording the Peterborough public an opportunity to see grand opera in their own city.

PROF. GRAHAM WILL LECTURE

Prof Graham, of the Agricultural College Guelph, and one of the best authorities of poultry breeding, for both profit and show, has been secured by the Peterborough Poultry Association to give an illustrated lecture in the Council Chamber on the evening of Wednesday. April 7th. This will be the best lecture on poultry ever delivered in Peterborough, and will no doubt be heard by a large number of breeders and fanciers.

"THE TRIUMPH OF TRUTH" THE STORY OF THE PLAY

The play of the above name, which will be put on in the Opera House next Monday night by local artists, under the direction of Irving Beers, who will play the principal role, is taken from an older piece written by the immortal "Moliere," who is looked upon by the French as Shakespeare is by the English, and while the piece in question is not a classic and is somewhat melodramic in tone, as is the "Wolfe," and many of the other latter day successes, it nevertheless holds the mirror up to nature and compels attention throughout. The scene is laid in the south, the first act being a garden—where a tramp (who was once a gentleman) enters and James Black an advertiser, who makes love to an innocent young girl and is at the same time planning on her destraction, overhears a conversation to the affect that the girl is only an adopted daughter of the people with whom she is living, and bribes the tramp whom he furnishes with proofs sufficient to establish his identity to claim the girl as his daughter. The first and second acts are humorous and the third takes us to a cabin in the woods where the girl, by means of a family Bible, finds out who she really is. Black is thwarted in all his evil schemes and the story, which has a very beautiful ending, is too long to give in detail. The tramp is a gentleman at heart, treats the girl kindly and it may safely be said that there is no character in the whole range of the drama with such power to compel alternate laughter and tears as is shown in this one. There is no blood and thunder in this play, no shooting and it is thoroughly refined. Another feature will be a one act playlet entitled "The Littlest Girl," taken from a short story written by Richard Harding Davis, entitled "Bibber and Others," which will be put on artistically by Messrs. Barber, Beers and little Eleanor Gardem.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH WILL BE FORMALLY OPENED TO-MORROW

A Splendid Edifice---Is Modern and Complete in Every Detail

Marks Great Growth of Methodism in Peterborough---A Sketch of the New Church

The growth of Methodism in Peterborough in the past has been most marked and when the new St. James' church at the south end of the city is formally opened on Sunday the Methodist district will have more places of worship in Peterborough than any other denomination. St. James impresses one as being from an archetectural standpoint a most modern and complete edifice. In its construction not a single desirable effect has been overlooked it would seem and the members of the church have every reason to congratulate themselves on their handsome new edifice. The church is attractive, both from the exterior and interior and no pains have been spared to make it convenient and comfortable.

Pending the construction of the church the services have been held since July last in a tent, pitched on the lot to the north of the site of the building. The attendance at these services have been gratifying to the pastor, Rev. H. M. Manning, and the need of the church has been sorely felt. It will be a source of great pleasure to the congregation to have the services conducted in their splendid new place of worship.

When it was decided to erect St. James a board of managers of representative members of the George street and Charlotte street churches was chosen and they have displayed an active and useful interest in the welfare of the new church. The board is composed as follows;—D. W. Dumble, B. F. Ackerman, H. C. Stabler, A. W. Cressman, W. G. Morrow, A. Prest and Rawlings. There were appointed after it was decided by the Conference that the church should be built. The sum of $400 as subscribed by George street towards the maintenence of the church and $200 was subscribed by Charlotte street for the same purpose.

In the last week in August the work of excavation was commenced and excellent progress has been made since the operations commenced. W. E. N. Hunter, a Canadian architect of distinction now residing in Detroit, prepared the plans of the building, and Messrs. Finnie and Gordon of this city, were the contractors. The building is of red brick and has a Longford stone foundation and trimmings. Exclusive of the porch it has a frontage of 66 feet, and a depth of 42 feet. Its appearance is added to by the belfry at the south-west corner.

The Akron Sunday school scheme has been followed in the matter of the Sunday school. The woodwork has been finished in Georgia pine and for the plastering sand finish plaster has been used. The church will seat 500. A feature is the folding chairs which were supplied by a Dundas firm.

Under the whole length of the church is a basement, which is suitable for holding teas etc. It could also be used for class rooms if required.

A beautiful large central window has been contributed by Mrs. Samuel Jeffrey, of Port Perry, and placed in the church in honor of the pastor who was formally pastor of the Port Perry Methodist church. The organ which will be used at St. James' is a compensating organ, a reed instrument with pipes attachment.

NO CHANGE IN TEA PRICES AS RESULT OF NEW TARIFF

Much interest is being aroused among local tea merchants as to the effect the new United States tea tariff will have on their business. A prominent tea importer informed the Review this morning that there was no reason for any uneasiness as to prices being raised for the consumer here. Tea, as in former years, will come into Canada from the land of growth, free of duty, while a duty of eight cents per pound will be charged on tea going into the United States from the land of growth.

What is causing the trouble is the fact that a duty of nine cents will be charged on tea shipped from Canada to the United States, where previously no duty was charged. It will therefore be seen that Canadian tea merchants doing business in the United States will be at a disadvantage to the extent of one cent per pound, the difference of duty from the land of growth and from Canada; but this can be overcome by appointing an agent across the border to whom their shipments could be consigned direct from the land of growth.

Up to the present time Canadians could do business in the United States on an equal footing with home merchants, whereas Americans could not do business in Canada on account of the ten per cent ad valorem duty on tea from the United States to Canada.

With the new tariff in effect it may become necessary for Canadians to confine their efforts to home business as the United States merchants have had to do in the past.

UNIQUE WAY TO GET MEMBERS

Campaign Being Conducted on the Boys Department of the Y. M. C. A.

"The April Get One Club" is the name under which the campaign will be conducted.

The purpose of the campaign is to increase the membership in the boys' department.

Every member is given a small red button with the words "Get One" in white letters, and as soon as a boy secures one member he is given a blue button with the words "I Got One" in white letters.

When a boy secures his second new member he is given a neat little button with the universal Y. M. C. A. monogram on it.

The boys are very much interested in the idea, and are working hard for new members.

LOCAL PROPERTY CHANGES HANDS

Mr T. Hooper Purchases the Property of the Mann Bakery Business

Through the real estate dealers, Messrs. A. Brown & Co. the entire property of the Mann bakery business, at the corner of George and Dublin street, changed hands yesterday, and Mr. T. Hooper is now the new proprietor. The price paid for the property is in the neighborhood of $20 000. The property, which consists of a large store and bakery equipment, is modern in every respect, and the business which it commands is a large one. The business was first started by Mr. Robt. Mann now deceased, who first delivered bread with a hand cart, but the quality of the goods was such that the demand became larger, until the recent high mark was reached. Mr. Hooper will take charge of the business in the near future, and is to be congratulated on his enterprise.

A RELIABLE MEDICINE FOR YOUNG CHILDREN

On the word of thousands of mothers in all parts of Canada who have used Baby's Own Tablets there is no other medicine so good in curing all the minor ills of babyhood and childhood. And we give you the guarantee of a government analyst that the medicine is safe and contains no opiate or poisonous drug. Mrs. L. Murphy, St. Sylvester, Que., says:—"I find Baby's Own Tablets the safest and best medicine for all stomach and bowel troubles and strongly recommend them to other mothers." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Paper Wall Hangings
Artistic From the Floor Up
You may not know that you are indeed a true lover of Art—you unconciously have a feeling that you are not satisfied with the hangings of your rooms and when you see an effect that is the something that appeals to your ideas of what is pleasing, you say, "Now there is just the style I have wanted for a long time but it must be very expensive and difficult to make". Yes, perhaps you are right, but again you may not be—there are many elaborate effects attained by simply "knowing how". We make a specialty of "knowing how" and will be pleased to give any person the benefit of our advanced knowledge of the proper 1909 styles in paper hanging and also of a stock that is right up to now in correctness.

LARGE AMOUNT OF BUTTER AND EGGS

Was Offered in the Market This Morning---The Prices Which Prevailed

There were not many farmers on the market square this morning on account of the stormy weather and as a result not much was offered in the meat or vegetable line, and the prices were the same as prevailed lately. There was a large crowd of buyers and sellers up in the stalls and eggs and butter were offered in large quantities. Eggs brought 16 and 17 cents while 27 cents was asked for butter. Chickens brought $1.00 per pair, but were sold at from 40c. to 60c. each. Other lines commanded the usual prices.

No Police Court

There were not any cases at the police court yesterday or today and the authorities are enjoying a brief breathing spell. Heart to heart talks interspersed with some good advice by the Magistrate to those accused of disorderly conduct and petty offences, has probably had a beneficial effect and it is to be hoped it will continue so.

A MORNING HYMN

The following hymn was composed by Miss Camilla Sanderson, daughter of the late Rev John Sanderson, of Peterborough. It appeared in a recent number of the Guardian;

Air—"Abide with me."

Stay with me, Lord, the gloom of night is gone,
Soul-foes are near, life's daily fight is on,
Grant me the strength to use Thy Spirit's sword,
And through the hours of strife, stay with me, Lord.

Stay with me, Lord, another day is here,
I know not what it holds of hope or fear.
Teach me to trust the promise of Thy Word,
And through each testing hour, stay with me, Lord.

Stay with me, Lord, through all my daily toil,
That pride nor greed my soul's sweet peace may spoil,
Bind thou my heart with love's enduring cord,
And while I toil, do Thou stay with me, Lord.

Stay with me Lord, and let Thy light Divine,
Through this new day, in all my actions shine,
May all my words with Thy dear will accord,
And in my every thought, stay with me Lord.

—Camilla Sanderson

ROD AND GUN ISSUES SPRING FISHING NUMBER

The first sight of the fine cover of the excellent Spring, April, Fishing Number of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W J Taylor, Woodstock, Ont, will stir the blood of the thousands of fishermen throughout the Dominion and start them on the congenial work of preparing for the coming fray. The long and varied nature of the contents of the number, in which fish and fishing topics predominate will still further stimulate them, and the opening of the fishing season will probably see an increase in the anglers' ranks as one result of the interest aroused through the wide dissemination of these stories. Three articles stand out as of value to the country,— "Preserving the Nation's Fish," by Cyrus McMillan, an illustrated descriptive account of the work of the Prince Edward Island hatchery; "The Unsolved Mystery of the Salmon," by Bonnycastle Dale, who has spent two years on the Pacific Coasts studying the ways of the salmon and, with the exception of one point, leaving the mystery still unsolved, and "Conservation of Non-Nest Building Fishes of the Great Lakes," by W E Meehan, Chief Fish Commissioner for Pennsylvania, in which a plea is put forward on behalf of a policy on which there will be great differences of opinion, but which closely concerns the future of the Great Lakes fisheries. Then fishing trips in four separate provinces are told in a manner irresistibly reminding fishermen of incidents in their own experiences. "A New Brunswick Lost Lake Found," is particularly good, though each story has an interest all its own. A similar variety of fare will be found for those interested in other forms of sport, "A Lady's Moose Hunt in New Brunswick," by Miss Emach being a good specimen. On every page of an excellent number the sportsman will be able to find material which cannot fail to prove of the deepest possible interest to him.

Special rates to the Collegiate and Normal students for "The Triumph of Truth" next Monday night, and they are accorded the privilege of sitting in the best seats for 25c.

LAST OF LECTURES OF HIST. SOCIETY WINTER SERIES

The last of the series of lectures under the auspices of the Peterborough Historical Society took place last evening at the Collegiate Institute. Subject of the evening was Mr Carnegie's "Problems of To-day," and Mr. Burnham read from that work the ideas set out and the principles laid down by the author amplifying from time to time where necessary to convey the author's meaning, the short epigrammatical summing-up of the writer.

No one has had, Mr Burnham said a better opportunity of observing the whole industrial situation the world over, than Mr Andrew Carnegie. He began life as an ordinary and poorly-paid workman who retired at 70 worth $250,000,000. There have been strenuous objections to the corporation to which he belonged and it was alleged that he made much of his money by grinding the face of the steel workers of Pittsburg. If he did so he has spent his time since in every effort to aid them by pension-funds, loans of money, gifts to the poor and deserving and by the establishment of means of self-education in and about the most wonderful system of libraries and night schools ever set up. Mr. Carnegie is a strong disbeliever in Socialism since it will, he alleges, make man who was once the slave of his fellowman, the slave of the state or of that part of scheming humanity which will seek to control the state. His observations upon the nature and character of wealth are most instructive. His comments are made in every instance whether upon Labor or capital with fairness of view and loftiness of spirit. He believes in a heavy inheritance tax and that the community is entitled to take its share of the increased value given by increased population in this way. The destructive force of Socialism is best illustrated, he remarks, by the obliteration of "the home" and this more perhaps than any other cause arouses his hostility to that theory. While Mr. Carnegie may not meet with the approval of either Labor or Capital in everything he says, much good must come from so practical a discussion of a subject that has been the practical and actual life-work of the man discussing it. The remedy uppermost in the minds of the critics just now is one for the adjustment of population to the demand for work in other words, the proper distribution of the workers. There is plenty of work, it is contended, but not all at hand or in the right place. A discussion of the theories of the author took place, after the lecture and a resolution of thanks moved by Mr J. Coyle Brown, seconded by Mr H. O. Fisk, was tendered the speaker. The chairman, Mr T. A. S. Hay, President of the Society, then announced the series closed.

MAGNIFICENT LECTURE BY THE REV. R. E. KNOWLES

On "The Cotter's Saturday Night," at Conservatory Music Hall Last Night—A Much Interested Audience.

The A.Y.P.A. of St. Luke's church were not mistaken in their confidence that the ability of Rev R. E. Knowles, M.A. pastor of Knox church, Galt, would be appreciated by Peterborough people. His lecture on the "Cotter's Saturday Night," given under their auspices at the Conservatory of Music hall last night was well attended and had there not been so many counter attractions the few remaining seats would assuredly have been occupied and the accommodation overtaxed. As it was the assembly was of no mean proportions, and in point of appreciation for the lecturer's skill in portraying the beauties of Burn's poem of humble peasant life in Scotland, the reception accorded him was indeed a compliment.

Mr. Knowles stated that if you love a great poem it is because your nature is entertwined with a poetic strain. It may be concluded therefore that each individual who listened to his treatment of the Cotter's lowly but happy home, at the close of the week's toil possesses a poetic nature judging from the manner in which his every word was received. He helped to place the minds of the audience in the same position as the poet who saw beneath that thatched roof a family wherein the grace of God abided and where there was peace and happiness which neither luxury nor material richness could augment.

REV. R. E. KNOWLES

Mr. Knowles lent to the poem a sympathy and tenderness which Scotchmen say were two noble characteristics of their favorite bard. Burns brings us out to meet the peasant returning to his home in the growing twilight of a November Saturday night. He is met by his little children whose glad carresses vanish any cares that may have been wearing upon his sturdy, furrowing his weary brow. Arrived at the threshold of his cottage he was met by his wife and was once more received into his own little happy realm. Afterwards the older children came home probably with their small earnings to add to the family purse.

In this manner the story is followed out. Mr Knowles presents the conditions that exists in this family in a most appealing manner. Everything that goes to make a happy family is found in this humble home. The family hearth spreads its cheer and warmth drawing the members together in closer union. In this respect the speaker stated that the poor enjoy the essentials of life in the same measure as the rich. The pure air is theirs, likewise is health and vigor. The hearth fire burns just as brightly and as cheerily and happiness is the heritage of the one just as much as it is the others.

Incidentally Mr. Knowles drew a beautiful picture in eloquent language of what happy home life really means. Moore's poem was not slighted under his interpretation, and he particularly emphasized the poet's genius in treating this sublime though humble subject with the power and naturalness that is displayed in its every line. Those who were fortunate in hearing Mr. Knowles assuredly went away with a better and more intimate knowledge of Burns and a deeper appreciation for his nature which assisted him in or inspired him to write this poem and lines which appeal to the humblest of us all as "An honest man is the noblest work of God."

Rev. Dr Langfeldt was chairman for the occasion, introducing the lecturer and the other artists on the programme.

TWO BY-LAWS WILL BE VOTED ON NEXT TUESDAY

On Tuesday the ratepayers of Peterborough will vote on two by-laws, one to authorize the issuing of debentures for $120,000 for a new waterworks dam and increased pumping facilities and the other for $15,000 to provide for the preliminary work for developing power for the city in connection with the new dam. The polls will be open at nine o'clock and close at five.

WILL BE A GOOD LIVE FIELD FOR THE SIX DAY WALK HERE

Hoagland has written as follows concerning the six-day walk to be held here commencing April 26th.

Besides the Canadian walkers on this side we can get H. O. Messier, of Milwaukee, Wis., R. H. Hubbell, Erie, Pa.; Geo. Klubertanz, Rochester, N.Y.; George Brown, Auburn, N.Y.; the "Boy Wonder." Lewis West, New York City; "Jim" Dixon and John Blake, both colored. There is also a few others to choose from and no doubt six or eight would go, so we are sure of a fine field of starters. We would not want any dead ones on the track people want to see men who can deliver the goods. If the management think kit-best I will give all comers one mile start. There has been some talk of a race in Toronto four days, three hours per night, April 14th to 17th. If that takes place it would get plenty of entries, then all go to Peterborough. I am waiting to hear from Mr. Graham, then you will hear more of the race.

Give my regards to all my friends. I hope to see you all next month.

Yours truly,
W. A. HOAGLAND.

SPLENDID SEASON

Peterborough Curling Club Has Had Best Year in its History.

It is generally pronounced by the members of the Peterborough Curling Club that the past season has been the most successful one in the history of the club.

Great credit for the highly satisfactory state of affairs is due Mr. J. H. Ferguson, the capable secretary, and Mr. H. Foote, who was chairman of the Schedule Committee and made arrangements in connection with the club's bonspiel.

In the general congratulations Mr. Angus McIntosh, the veteran icemaker, must not be overlooked. Mr. McIntosh has provided excellent ice throughout the season, and the splendid condition of the ice has given rise to much favorable comment on the part of local and visiting curlers.

CANADIAN POOL CHAMPIONSHIP

Edward Pelletier Will Defend His Title Against Dr. Oro.

A match in which Mr Edmond Pelletier, of Montreal, will defend his title of professional pool champion of Canada, against Mr. Alfredo DeOro, the celebrated American billiard and pool professional expert, has been arranged to be held in the St Patrick's hall, Ottawa, on the 13th, 14th 15th and 16th of April, next.

Mr. John Gleeson, the chairman of the St. Patrick's club billiard and pool tournament committee and Mr W. J. O'Neil have been responsible for the accomplishment of the above arrangement and much enthusiasm prevails as to the chances of the Canadian against the American. Ottawa, is perhaps the first city in the Dominion from the point of view of interest in billiard and pool and with the many fine billiard halls in connection with clubs, etc. has furnished some of the best amateur players. Much enthusiasm prevails in connection with the forthcoming match and a big attendance is looked for.

The match will be for a prize of five hundred dollars which has been arranged for by the St Patrick's Literary and scientific society and will be played under the American rules on a 5x10 regulation table fitted with Monarch cushions installed by the Brunswick Balke Collender Co.

Tickets and full particulars of the match can be obtained on application to the St Patrick's club, Ottawa, or to the Brunswick Balke Collender Co. 11 Notre Dame, West, Montreal.

Mr. Pelletier, the Canadian, is playing a good game and can be seen in practice any evening at the King's hall billiard room on St Catherine street. Mr. Leonard Howison, Montreal, has kindly consented to act as referee.

CURLING

A meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club will be held in the rink parlors on Monday evening at eight o'clock, when the bonspiel and schedule games prizes will be presented.

WINTER HATES TO TAKE LEAVE

A Little More Snow Will Make Sleighing Again

Winter is "hanging hard," to use an expression of the wrestling fraternity. A heavy snowstorm commenced early this morning and if it continues for a few hours more sleighing will again prevail. As a result of the storm there are fewer country folk in town today than usual.

PICTURES IN ROY'S WINDOWS

In the show windows of the Roy studio are some excellent pictures of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 5th rugby teams of the Trinity College School, of Port Hope, in which the figure of Mr. Gordon Campbell is quite prominent. A picture of the Grove hockey team, of Lakefield, is also shown.

In the east window there is an enlarged portrait of the late Col. J. Z. Rogers, which is draped with the Union Jack. The picture is an excellent likeness of the late colonel.

THERE IS MUCH SNOW IN COUNTY

Those Travelling To and Fro From the Country Meet With Much Inconvenience.

There is lots of snow in the country yet, but it is mostly in places sheltered from the wind. The recent storm has put the roads in bad condition for the farmers, and it is extremely hard work to bring a heavy load into town, as a sleigh can not be drawn in some parts, while in other places a waggon could not get through the heavy drifts. Yesterday several buyers left his city, who undertook to make a journey to the country on wheels had to return to town and get the runners.

PLAYED THE ROYAL MARCH

At the Grand Last Night in Honor of Peterborough Italians at "Carmen"

The great majority of the Italians in the city attended the performance of "Carmen" at the Grand Opera House last night by the Royal Italian Opera Company. After the final curtain had fallen and when the orchestra had played "God Save the King," the "Royal Italian March" was played in honor of the Italians present. The latter asked Mr. Turner to have the orchestra play Italy's national anthem, and they very gladly agreed to do so.

SAYS NEW LINE WILL BE RUSHED

A Post representative had a conversation last evening with a C.P.R. official who was passing through town in connection with the new C.P.R. grain route, which will pass through Lindsay, and which, it is understood, will be commenced this spring. The gentleman stated that operations on the new route would be commenced with all possible dispatch and that Lindsay would be one of the busy centres. The railway authorities want to see the line completed, and in running order, and would push the undertaking until the last spike was driven.—Lindsay Post.

The moral in "The Triumph of Truth" is a good one, and the young folk ought to see it.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

The Power By-law

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—As citizens, we must soon decide what we will do with this $15,000 power proposition. The only real information we have thus far is furnished by Mr. D. S. Harvie.

He certainly is in a position to know and is a practical expert in this line, his statements are well worth considering. His experience and familiarity with local conditions makes his statements of more value than a mere mathematical calculation.

The power question is a very important one for Peterborough. We are practically at the limit of efficient service now, and if the city takes up the question it must acquire something worth while. It will only be a waste of money to deal in remnants on this line.

This power question looks like a piece of superficial calulation. We do not question the motives of those in favor of it, but it requires more intelligent thought along practical lines.

This $2 horse power is a "gold brick" it may appeal to the sudden enthusiasm of inexperience, but where will it end? What will the final cost be? What will machinery cost? What will transmission distribution maintenance, supervision, operation, street lamps, etc., cost?

But the all important question is have we the power? Engineers hand books say yes, but every power plant on the river proves otherwise.

This is where Mr. Harvie's experience and of greater value than any theoretical calculation.

The power committee state this plant may stand for two years before it is used, no need therefore to go it blind we had better postpone it until any question of doubt concerning the flow head, power, etc., has been intelligently investigated.

There is no doubt the citizens would support a practical comprehensive power scheme, such as Burleigh Falls if it can be secured, but waterworks and Auburn remnants would only prove an expensive farce.

We hope this premature by product will not interfere with the by-law for a new waterworks dam. We should support our water commissioners in this most important requirement.

Yours truly,
A. B. CUNNINGHAM,
March 26th 1909.

The Newmarket Canal

Editor of the Review

Sir,—In the Ottawa Parliamentary report of the 23rd inst, we find a discussion led by Tom Wallace, M.P. for Centre York. He urges that when the revenues are decreasing and the necessary public expenditures increasing it was time to dispense with useless public works, such as the Newmarket canal, or as it has been called, the Newmarket section of the Trent Valley Canal.

It will be noticed that the Government leaders defended this expenditure and on a vote being taken they were followed by 112 supporters. To one who is acquainted with the locality of Newmarket it is inconceivable how anyy one could sanction the expenditure of over one million to connect that town with Lake Simcoe by canal and thereby with the Trent Valley Canal. A more useless, wicked and abandoned use of public funds has never been sanctioned by any Canadian parliament and it is now the duty of every municipal council and Board of Trade on the Trent canal from the Georgian Bay to the Bay of Quinte to protest and demand from the Government that further sums are not withdrawn from the Trent Valley appropriations for this Newmarket folly and I would suggest that the matter be at once taken up by the public bodies above mentioned who I believe irrespective of party, will unite in an endeavor to protect the canal appropriations from further misuse.

Yours truly,
J. F. LILLICRAP

CATARRH CURED

Canadian Manager Praises Psychine.

Mr. W. Stahlschmidt, the well-known head of the Canadian School and Office Furniture Co., of Preston, says: "I was afflicted with Catarrh of the Throat for thirty-five years, and although I have at different times been treated by many doctors, including some of the best Throat specialists on the continent, they gave me little, if any, relief and certainly did nothing towards curing me of this distressing and oftentimes painful malady."

"About three years ago I began using PSYCHINE and it did for me in a few months what all the medicine and the best medical skill had failed to touch in 35 years. It has completely restored me and I have not had the slightest trouble with my throat since."

"It has built up my vocal chords so that I can now sing again as well as in my youth, and so thoroughly strengthened my throat that it is not in the least affected by changes in temperature as it used to be before taking PSYCHINE."

"PSYCHINE has toned me up altogether. It invigorates the whole system, and I can truly say that at the present time I am feeling better than I have for years. PSYCHINE is undoubtedly the best tonic I have ever used, indeed I do not think any other medicine could have done as much for me, and I am strongly recommending it wherever I can. No singer should be without it."

PSYCHINE is the only specific known to medical science that will cure Chronic Weakness, Catarrh, Decline, etc. A wonderful tonic and infallible remedy for all disorders of the Throat, Lungs, Chest and Stomach. PSYCHINE restores the Digestive and Bloodmaking organs to perform their proper functions. All druggists and stores sell PSYCHINE, 50c and $1 bottle.

THE OLD FORT AT TORONTO FALLS SACRIFICE TO AXE

The "Old Fort" clause of the Toronto bill occasioned another battle before the Legislative Private Bills Committee Thursday. Mr. J. E. Alexander, representing the West End Ratepayers' Association opposed the clause on the ground that a vote of the ratepayers should be taken before it was approved. Major Collins on behalf of the Army and Navy Veterans stated that he had been informed by the manager of the Toronto Railway Company that the railway did not want to run through the Fort only to secure an eastern entrance which could be arranged by another route. The Major protested against demolishing the stockade.

"It is absurd to talk about demolishing anything I saw there," put in Mr. Ferguson, Grenville. "There was not enough there to built a hen-coop."

Mr W. H. Hoyle (North Ontario) favored the clause on the ground that the rural constitencies were interested in the Exhibition though he adhered to the proposition that the ratepayers should first vote upon it.

Mr. W. Rankin said he favored the eastern entrance but he opposed the principle of legislation without a vote of the people.

Mr. E. Biggar, for the Historical Society spoke on the same lines.

"I went there and examined the ground," said Major Craig (Wellington), "and a more desolate, forsaken, neglected spot does not exist within a hundred miles of Toronto.

Mr. W. F. Nickle (Kingston) opposed the clause unless a vote of the people were taken.

Mr. T. W. McGarry (South Renfrew) strongly championed the clause. After seeing the Fort, he said he could see no possibility of desecration. "There is too much sentimental hypocrisy," he said. "Too much talking and too little action."

Miss FitzGibbon, leading a deputation of the Daughters of the Empire, spoke against the clause on patriotic grounds.

Mrs. Nordheimer also spoke in the same cause.

The clause was adopted, Mr. Nickle (Kingston) being the only negative vote.

Mr. John Shaw (North Toronto) asked for a reopening of the clause to grant superannuation to police officers.

Hon Mr Hanna said that the clause should not in his opinion, be dealt with until the Premier had been consulted.

The committee decided that notification would have to be given prior to the reopening of the clause.

Mayor Oliver expressed himself well pleased with the action of the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature in passing the portion of the city's bill relating to the Bathurst street bridge. His Worship said the city would start in at once to construct the bridge as it was desired to have the eastern entrance to the Exhibition grounds completed in time to be used during the next Exhibition. He intimated that the talk the G.T.R. and C.P.R. Companies elevating the tracks at Bathurst street two feet, in connection with the viaduct plans would not stop the city proceeding to construct the Bathurst street bridge. The bridge is to cost $125,000.

THE UNITED AGENCY COMPANY, Limited

427 GEORGE STREET

STATEMENT TO THE ELECTORS BY WATER COMMISSIONERS CONCERNING THE BY-LAW

To be Voted on Tuesday, March 30th, For the Erection of New Dam—Consideration and Importance of the Subject—A Comprehensive and Detailed Review.

During the past four years the Water Commissioners have had under consideration the propriety of advising the erection of a new dam, and new power station, with enlarged pumping capacity. They are now of opinion the work should be proceeded with, with as much expedition as the subject is capable of. The present dam, they are convinced, is not satisfactory, in view of the vital interests that are at stake which interests are wholly dependent on it. At the time it was erected by the Water Company the use of cement for the purpose of building a dam was untried, and in fact had not reached the experimental stage in such use. The Company did its best with the material then generally employed. For several years after and up to quite a recent date the Government of Canada built the same character of dam, but it is very certain it will not do so in the future. The one feature in which this old kind of dam has always failed is its leakage which nothing that has been devised can overcome, even the best losing from one-quarter to one-third or more of the power they would otherwise develop. The city's dam is no exception. Another reason that has led the Commissioners to make representations to the City Council for the submission of the bylaw, is that the present dam does not ensure that degree of security and permanency of structure so essential when ratepayers reflect that the city is wholly relying on it for water supply and fire protection. Again, the pond above the dam is small as is the case with all dams on the river, and therefore it is requisite the city should have a dam that not only would develop to the full all the power the flow of the river will give but be of that modern type by which the height of the water in the pond can at all seasons be kept at the same level a most important feature.

PETERBOROUGH ARMOURIES

COST OF REPAIRS AND FIRE INSURANCE.

Since the city's purchase from the company, the cost of repairs to the dam has been $6,150.00, or an average of a little over $860.00 yearly, which if applied to the building of a new dam would answer nearly $20,000.00 of its cost. Last year the cost of repairs was $1235.72. The Underwriters' Association, which fixes the rates for fire insurance, has required the city to provide a very largely increased pumping capacity, or in the alternative has threatened a general advance in rates for fire insurance upon city property. To provide this demand at the present dam would entail a cost of over $70,000 in enlarging the power station, wheel pits, fore-bays, etc. and yet leave the composition of the dam much as it is. In the judgment of the commissioners it would be false economy of the rankest kind to invest so large or any large sum in that way. During one period of the past year the present pumping power had been reached by the demand made by water consumers, and had a large fire occurred at this time, effective service could not have been given; but it is just to state that to a considerable extent this was caused by the wanton waste on lawns, and by reason of bad plumbing. During the year 1908 the daily pumping was 1710,000 gallons, equal to about 140 gallons per day, per head, of the population. In London, England, where the plumbing must be of the best, and yet the water supply plentiful, the quantity is under 25 gallons per head daily. While building a new dam, there must be amendment in this particular.

CONDITION OF PRESENT DAM.

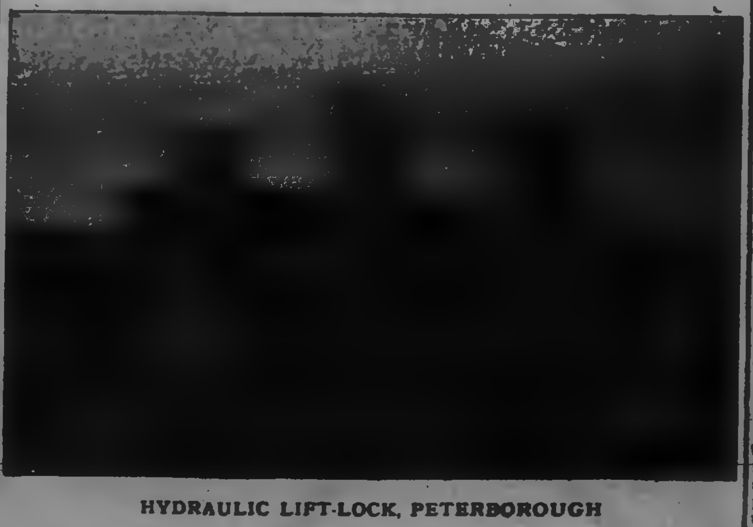
The report of Mr. Keefer, C.E. to the Commissioners, contains this statement in regard to the condition of the dam.—"The present dam was built above eleven years ago, and is what is known as a crib timber dam, a form of construction which is commonly used by lumbermen on our rivers, and is dependent for its ability to hold the water entirely on the plank sheeting driven more, or less, into the bed of the river on its upstream side. The remainder of the dam, that is, for the overflow section, is rough open cribwork which has no value to hold water, but is simply to supply the necessary weight to ensure its stability. The foundation of the dam rests on the gravel bed of the river and there is nothing to prevent leakage under it except the sheeting I have mentioned and to do this it would require to be driven either to the rock or into a good clay stratum—if it existed—overlying the rock. At the time I made examination of the dam, at low water stage, there was a very considerable leakage under the dam, and though it is difficult to estimate its exact amount, I should estimate it as amounting to at least thirty per cent of the flow, and that it might amount to as much as fifty per cent.

"No doubt at the time the dam was constructed the form of construction adopted was fully warranted, and it has served a good purpose as a sufficient quantity of water could be held to furnish the necessary power for the present equipment of the pumping station. As, however, with the growth of the city, the present consumption seems to have about reached the limit of the pumping capacity and there is no reserve capacity—a most important feature in a direct pressure system—it is a question whether you will not very soon have to provide for an extension of your works, which of course, will involve a greater consumption of water for power purposes, in which case it will be necessary to reduce the leakage in the dam as much as possible.

"The difficulty experienced from from the excessive leakage under and through the dam is that it reduces the effective weight of the structure, and therefore, its stability. Your Superintendent, Mr Wm. Henderson, has taken a wise precaution in filling in a large quantity of gravel, as shown on the plans, above the dam, which has no doubt been the means of averting serious trouble, though it cannot stop leakage."

RECOMMENDATION FOR NEW DAM

For above reasons the commissioners believe they are justified in the recommendation to pass the by-law; but there are other considerations. The works originally cost the city $240,000 and $312,000 are now invested in them by issued debentures. This has already been reduced by $35,000 paid from sinking funds to the City Trust towards the redemption of the debentures. During the seven years ownership by the city, vast benefit has been gained. The water rates have been reduced between forty-five and fifty per cent. without a dollar of direct assessment on ratepayers for the cost of purchase or the improvements, save water rates, and in the one item of fire hydrants the yearly saving is $1,000 in the taxes. The sinking funds and interest and cost of management have been paid out of the income from the rates, and also a reserve fund laid by of $33,000, which, with the city's approval, may be applied towards providing a filtration plant when the dam, etc., are completed. For the past year the net surplus amounted to $9,259.13. The annual sinking fund and interest fixed by the by-law for the new dam is $7,424.56, leaving $1,834.57 to be further added to reserve fund, or go in reduction of water rates. The excess during the past seven years has constantly increased year by year, and there is no doubt this will continue as the works are extended. Therefore, the new dam, power station and plant will add nothing to the taxation of the people beyond at most the present charge for water.



HYDRAULIC LIFT-LOCK, PETERBOROUGH

PROPOSAL TO SPEND $120,000.

The proposal of the commissioners is to employ the $120,000 in construction of a new dam, etc., five hundred feet below the present dam, where good, level rock bottom can be reached, and where the river is nearly one hundred feet narrower than at the present dam. Both ends of the dam will rest on city property. The dam is intended to be constructed of concrete piers, built on a solid concrete base or low dam—the latter founded on rock bottom—with sluices between the piers of sufficient capacity to discharge the entire river flow at high water periods without causing flooding or unduly high back water in the pond; the sluices to be closed or partly closed, by stop logs, as may be required, to control the river discharge; thus making available the entire low water river flow for pumping and power purposes. The stop logs will be handled by power winches, probably electrically operated. There will be a log slide in the dam; and the dam throughout its entire length will be covered by a steel reinforced concrete floor or bridge. The pump house, situated at the westerly end of the dam, will have concrete foundations, penstocks and forebays—all founded on rock bottom, with rock bottom wheel pits and tail races. The superstructure will be of brick, with iron window sashes; steel concrete floors in the pipe vault and machinery room, thus being of the most durable construction and absolutely fireproof. The pumping plant will consist of one new unit of three millions imperial gallons capacity per twenty-four hours, when pumping against 130 pounds pressure in the air vessel, for fire purposes; also, the two 2 1-4 million gallons each pumping units in the present pump house. The new unit will be first installed and set to work, after which the old units will be repaired, if necessary, and removed to the new pumping station, thus providing an uninterrupted water supply to the city. The pumping capacity will then be 7 1-2 million gallons per day, with provision in the pump house for an additional unit of 3 millions — thus ultimately providing for 10 1-2 million imperial gallons per day. The pump house will be well lighted and provided with a travelling crane capable of handling any part of the machinery in the building. There will be a concrete decked crib—situated in the pond—for the intake or suction pipe, with centre well and revolving screens for convenient cleaning.

The suction and discharge pipes will be well supplied with stop valves for cutting off any pump or set of pumps, as may be necessary. It is intended that the dam, pump house and pumping plant—in fact the entire development—shall be so designed, constructed and equipped as to be thoroughly modern and efficient throughout, as well as absolutely fireproof. The materials of construction will be almost entirely of concrete, iron and steel; thus securing the greatest degree of permanence, and reducing the cost of maintenance and operation to a minimum. It is the intention to provide a continuous roadway across the river, on the dam, thus requiring slight changes from the preliminary plans, but include in the estimate of cost. When the dam and power station are finished, two years hence, if proceeded with this year and next, it is intended that the present power station and intake pipe will be used with a steam auxiliary plant, to provide against a case of anchor ice or other contingency which would deprive the city of water supply for general purposes, or in case of fire. This $120,000 will be disposed of as follows, as shown in the Engineer, Mr. Kennedy's report. The figures for many of the items are omitted, as giving them would be indiscreet, before tenders are asked for.

Wheel pits, foundations, pump house, forebays, etc.
Intake crib, with connecting bridge, valves, screens, etc.
Turbines, 3 million gallons moving present pumps, travelling crane; suction and discharge pipes; stop valves, castings, etc., in place
Contingencies
	$111,375.00
Engineering and inspection 5 per cent	5,569.00
Total	$116,944.00

The total will be observed is $3,156 less than the sum called for in the by-law, but as the money cannot be applied to any other purpose than the dam, etc., debentures will not be issued for more than is necessary.

HEAD OF DAM—HORSE POWER.

In November, 1904, the commissioners employed Mr. C. H. Keefer, hydraulic engineer of Ottawa, to examine carefully and thoroughly into the whole subject of the old, and a new dam, the power that would be obtained and various other matters. His report states that "at low water a head of ten feet could be maintained by holding the water to level of the crest of the present dam," and that "with the ordinary low water flow of the river this head should give 1,250 effective horse-power." He adds, "If, however, a proper system of storage of the surplus water of the river drainage area was arranged, and all the dams and regulation of supply placed under the control of a proper officer, whose duty would be to see that the water was not wasted and a normal flow maintained, there there is no doubt that the minimum flow and power could be increased at least fifty per cent."

REPORT OF MR. KENNEDY.

In November last the services of Mr. William Kennedy, jr., hydraulic engineer of Montreal, were secured. After an exhaustive examination of the capabilities of the river flow at the intended site of the new dam, he reported as follows:

"Reulying to the questions as per your letter of the 15th inst.

1. What head the proposed dam will give?

The head will fluctuate slightly according to the river flow, but I propose the low water pond level to be maintained at elevation of 78.50 to 78.75, or, at least, one foot higher than the present dam crest level, which, with a further gain, of say, nine inches in tail water (by placing the dam further down stream) will be a total gain of at least fifteen per cent. on the present head from the dam crest to tail water—as given by Mr. Henderson for Octbeor, 1906, or from, say, present head 10 feet, to 11 1-2 feet proposed head. This fifteen per cent., over, extra head will give a net gain in results, or output of power to pumping or electrical machinery, of twenty per cent or over, at the new dam.

I expect we will do better than this; but the exact gain can only be determined by actual tests under varying water conditions.

2. What number of horse-power will it give?

The horse power will vary in proportion as the variations in river flow from low to high water, but at ordinary low river flow of 65,000 cubic feet per minute (figures obtained by Mr. Henderson, superintendent) and 11 1-2 feet head the power will be 1132 h.p., allowing 80 per cent. efficiency on water wheels—increasing as above stated, with river flow—or, probably 1,300 h.p. during a great part of the year; increasing to 2,000 h.p. easily at a good flow."

APPLICATOIN OF THE POWER.

With these assurances, and the improved conservation of the waters in the back lakes by the Government, already largely undertaken and certain of being perfected within a few years, it may be easily predicted that the new dam will develop 1,200 horse power. Of this it is proposed to reserve 500 horse power for pumping purposes. From the application of part of the remaining 700 horse power to the lighting of the city or other economic use, a very large saving to the ratepayers will be obtained. The present cost of public lighting is $8,500 per annum, private lighting is threatening to rival our taxes, and a great economy in these items can be made by the city, by its own use of the water power, which otherwise would flow idly down the river. However this is a matter in which the commissioners have no authority to act. The City Council will no doubt use the surplus in the best interests of the public at large.

The Commissioners have thus unreservedly endeavored to explain and justify their conduct to the electors, and they hope they have in some measure succeeded in the effort. Engineers are unable to determine the life of the present dam, or least refuse to give assurance of its longevity, and the Commissioners are taking what they believe to be prudent precaution against possible mishap, are providing for the requirement of increased pumping capacity, and directing the attention of the ratepayers to the condition of the present, and the benefits to be derived from a new dam. They are convinced their recommendation is justified, and in fact urgent, as well as being a sound business proposition.

DR. GRENFELL COMING HERE

He Will Lecture in Grand Opera House on the Night of April 14th

Those who have been reading the fascinating stories of life on the Labrador coast, which have appeared from time to time in the press, will be delighted to hear the missionary hero, Dr. Grenfell, tell his own story in his own modest way. He will lecture in the Grand Opera House, Peterborough, on the night of April 14th, and the local committee of the Deep Sea Mission are making the arrangements. The lecture will be illustrated and should draw an immense audience.

CANADIAN MAGAZINE

The Canadian Magazine for April, makes another record in the magazine field in Canada. It gives a frontispiece of at least six colors reproducing a fine drawing by C W Jefferys, depicting the death of Brock at Queenston Heights. There is considerable color throughout the magazine which in this respect is unusually attractive. The table of contents includes some strong names and equally strong contributions. Goldwin Smith comes first in importance, with an article entitled "Labor and Socialism." 'Power' Wizard of Settlement,'" illustrated in color, is a significant article, written by Clayton M. Jones. Other contributions are "A Canadian Literature," by Arnold Haultain; "Dig by Any Impression," by Newton MacTavish; "Lord Milner's Imperialism,'" by John S. Ewart," "Photographing Wild Birds," by Ronald L. Fortt, with a number of unusually attractive illustrations; "Can Women Write History?" by Arthur Hawkes; "After Schimpf," illustrated by Aubrey Fullerton, with short stories, by Lois E Lougley, J J. DREDGING AT HUNTER ST.

The replies in the House of Commons handed out by Hon. Wm. Pugsley and his department to the "questions" put by Mr. Bradbury, M.P., respecting dredging at the Hunter street bridge, in the Otonabee river, and published in a recent issue, must surely surprise even the knowing ones. Here is one of the questions:

"6. Were any contracts made or tender for this work? If so, were they called by public advertisement, and how many were received?

Answer: "Work done by day's labour with dredge hired from Conroy brothers."

Now, how much, gentle reader, do you think this "dredging" has been worth as a money-maker to the parties concerned? Will it be worth, as Bret Rabbit said, a dollar a minute? Does Yukon creek-washing compare with it? Why go so far from home while a dredge and a tug and a scow may be drawing three feet of water and thirty or forty or more dollars a day? Who can complain of the lack of encouragement given to industry by the Laurier Government? Not those who receive it—although others may. The material "dredged" costs, laid gently on the bank, say thirty cents a yard to the contractor—beg pardon—to the man who does the work without contract—and how much do you suppose he or they or both receive for it? So far, the answer has not been forthcoming, but likely it will be, although, as in all great public works, something will be held back by the government, even when the "extras" come up for consideration. It has been said that the work was arduous. No doubt of it. But whoever it was that said so must have felt the limits, for he can't be found. How beautiful a prospect it is to stand on the great bridge (that spans the noble river and looking southward, to spy a great instrument of industry puffing and blowing and swinging and squeaking and creaking, while it, like a monster of the great deep, plunges into the gravelly bed, and comes up with a mouthful of clay and small stones. One fancies that it smiles in fearsome glee. Last year the "answer" says that 2,167 yards were taken out, but that they are not yet settled for. This is an outrage. Is it any way to treat honest labour, while we land ten millions to a mere transcontinental railway. "Hoot, mon!"—and be hooted.

A MEAN SPIRIT

"The great bulk of opinion in Ontario will be at one with La Presse. That any ships built with the money of the Canadian taxpayer shall be under the absolute control of the Canadian Government. Technical objections may be urged against this arrangement, but the arguments for it are so overwhelming and insuperable that it would be idle to oppose them."—The Globe.

There is much more of sentiment in an offer of warships to Britain than of aught else, and in our opinion it is a mean journal that writes as the Globe does in the above paragraph concerning a sudden declaration of affection on the part of Canada to Great Britain. Pray, who does not know that to institute such a practice is unconstitutional as the constitution at present stands? But the constitution be blowed when a sudden feeling of unification and solidarity arises that surpasses all the constitutions ever made. Constitutions and set principles are a safe guide, day in and day out, but who is so crass and banal as to wish to dissect and lay bare the impropriety of a fond daughter's demonstration of affection for her old father. When Canada stands so punctiliously upon the order of her going it is not likely that she intends to go far.

EDITORIAL NOTES

La Patrie rejoices in the statement of Sir Wilfrid Laurier made in 1902 and repeated since: "I will never consent to the appropriation of money in whose expenditure we have no voice."

It is wonderful how punctilious Sir Wilfrid becomes in imperial matters, but when it is the G.T.P. and a hand-out to the grafters he does not even bother about tenders, frequently.

Dr. C. A. Eaton, of Cleveland, formerly of Bloor Street Baptist Church, Toronto, says that the city of New York is in the hands of the Hebrews. He adds: "They hold the city in the hollow of their hands, while most of them have no religious belief whatever, and they constitute a menace to the welfare of that great city."

The slight difference between the Knights of Columbus and the ecclesiastical authority here, arising out of constitutional restriction in the matter of appointment of chaplains being now completely removed. His Grace the Most Rev. Archbishop of Toronto, has designed the Rev Dr. Kidd, Chaplain of Toronto Council, of this estimable order, and a strong and vigorous organisation as was right and proper has been effected here in this city, with Grand Knight John T. Ryan at its head.—The Catholic Register.

"TO THEM THAT HATH"

A Short Sermon to Fat Folks

"To them that hath shall be given" is a sentence that applies to fat people very neatly. It is common knowledge that once a human being begins to fatten up, to what they have already is added more than they want, until finally a stage is reached where reduction must be made or decided disadvantage results.

Then comes forward the ages-old query, "Reduce—but how?" To the uninformed nothing suggests itself but the (to them) twin evils—less eating—more activity. They contemplate a more or less lengthy siege of dieting and exercise. So it may be said safely that every man or woman in the land now undergoing the fattening-up process has his or her mental eye fixed dubiously on that not far distant day when he or she will have to don the "ashes and sackcloth of reduction."

This is not an enlivening prospect and so it is with considerable satisfaction that we announce the emancipation of the fat. Nowadays one may reduce much or little, a pound a day if desired, or hold their fat in check absolutely stationary, without doing a tap of exercise, missing a single meal, doing a particle of harm or causing a solitary wrinkle. All that's required, as hundreds testify, is the taking after meals and at bedtime of one Marmola Prescription Tablet which tablets are sold by the Marmola Company, Detroit, Mich., or any good druggist, at the uniform price of 75 cents, this sum being accepted for a case of tablets so well and generously filled that even one dose produces desirable results.

THE HOOK

Men flee to the city for solitude, the village is too sociable.

Although the newspapermen are here today the Chief of Police has not issued a warning to citizens to lock their doors or carry their watches in their hip pockets.

Many a parrot is taught to swear by people teaching it what it is not to say.

Athlete at Eighty-Four.

A wonder amongst octogenarians is Dr. Furnivall, the famous English scholar, who recently celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday. "Keep steady; take exercise; don't drink and don't smoke." By following his own maxims Dr. Furnivall is able, at the age of eighty-four, to help a crew of stalwart young men pull a four-oared sculling boat from Hammersmith to St. Margaret's, Twickenham, and back every Sunday. Furthermore, he walks daily to the British Museum from his house on Primrose Hill. When he is not reading in the famous library—his first ticket was issued to him in 1850—he is engaged at home in the fascinating pursuit of words for the great dictionary.

Records of the Leicester Family.

The recent death of the Earl of Leicester has revealed the fact that his eldest son, who has succeeded his father in the family honours, has been heir for more than sixty years. When Georgina, Lady Leicester—who will be thus designated now that her daughter-in-law, known for thirty years as Lady Coke, has become the reigning countess — married the late Lord Leicester in 1875 as his second wife, she found herself the stepmother of nine children, nearly all of whom were older than herself. Her own marriage was blessed with six sons and a daughter, so that she has been for more than thirty years the presiding mistress of a large patriarchal household. [illegible] married in [illegible]

OF INTEREST

CHINA'S STRUGGLE TO BE MODERN.

China is at present in the throes of a conflict which will either result in her Europeanisation, social, political, and military, or else sink her once more in Oriental lethargy and stagnation. The court the Chinese of the old schools, almost all the mandarins and functionaries, and all the Manchus, are for reaction. Against them stand up the Kak-Ming-Thong (anti-dynastic party), which consists of the reformers the students, three-fourths of the learned class, all the schools and colleges, and two-thirds of the commonalty. Joseph Manthieu, whose statements in the Tour du Monde, Paris, we are reproducing, thinks that in general China, notwithstanding the reactionaries and the Boxers, is eager to adopt the ideas of Europe. This is apparent in the new fashion of Chinese dress, we are told, in China's rampant feminism, and the desire to raise an army a navy in accordance with European standards. The Chinese of both sexes are abandoning their ancestral styles, and we read;

"Men and women give up without regret their ancient traditions in order to conform with European usages. Knowing the great reverence of their fathers for the pigtail, the men gladly sacrifice this appendage when it becomes a question of dressing like Europeans. The passion for imitation, the longing for a European costume, quite takes possession of them. They become infatuated to such a point that even those whose office or position compels them to wear the legendary queue and the national habit, assume, at least, the European hat, the shoes and trousers. The appetite for travel, the desire to see things, to get beyond their native soil, quite dominate the young Celestials. Colleges, universities, military schools and institutions modeled on European originals, are founded and persistently maintained in every province."

The great cry of the Reformers is "Liberty," as uttered for the first time by the Cantonese reformer Hong-Yao-Way. They are never tired of the term. "On every occasion, under any pretext, the word falls from their lips under the spur of enthusiasm." They use it also for the purpose of commercial advertising. European shoes are "liberty shoes." So with "liberty hats"; "liberty furniture." It is thus the observer sees "the breeze of emancipation blowing briskly through the Middle Kingdom, presaging an approaching overthrow of all things old."

A decided evidence of this appears in the rise of Chinese feminism. Formerly imprisoned in separate apartments, "the women, and even the young girls show themselves in the public streets. To the amazement and horror of the old-fashioned Celestials, to the enthusiasm of the younger generation, the fair sex are seen everywhere at liberty." To quote further;

"They found boarding schools, they hold meetings, they draw up petitions, and raise such a tumult against the Government that the Viceroy has been compelled by their noisy importunities to institute normal schools for women in every province."

In Chicago as well as in Tokyo there are found many of these "graceful; almond-eyed students taking courses in medicine, science, or law." Chinese ladies are attached to the National Red Cross Society, and are saleswomen in the bazars held for a charitable object at Canton.

The opposite side of this rosy picture appears when we are told that the making of a vast army after the Western model and a navy that can rank with the great navies of the world means the grinding down of the people under heavier taxation. This is the strong argument against foreign influence and foreign alliances put forth by the Boxers. Mr. Manthieu says of this problem;

"if the revolution which is going on in China were confined to the peaceful changes which we have just touched upon, there would be no cause for alarm. But the movement is assuming such national and military proportions as are absolutely formidable. The Boxers, who in 1900 gave so much trouble to the foreign legations in Peking, have by no means disappeared from the scene. On the contrary, they flourish and mobolise themselves in the provinces more powerful and more threatening than ever. By incantations, mesmerism, and false declarations they succeed in enrolling in their ranks many of the youths of the country."

The reformers however, think they have the Army on their side. It is of course obvious that the first institution to undergo reform and Europeanization must be the great host of fighters of the Flowery Kingdom, surrounded as it is by modern armies Asiatic as well as European. The soldiers imbibe European notions from the European drill sergeants and commanders who train them and the people are in turn imbued with the spirit of Western reform. Hence this writer observes:

"While it is of course, impossible for the Army to express openly its predilection the faithful members of the Kak-Ming stoutly maintain that the military are unalterably pledged to their cause. They declare that it is time for the partisans of the throne to give up their delusions in this matter and to recognize the fact that the present dynasty has begun its decline."

It is interesting to compare with these remarks the judiciously qualified but none the less optimistic expressions of The North China Daily News (Shanghai) in this Anglo-Chinese organ we read;—

"The record of China's progress during 1908 marks, unfortunately, but an infinitesimal step toward the completion of the full tas kof reform. Her whole system of finance and taxation is at fault; there is no organized development of her mineral resources; her methods of agriculture are antiquated and no improvement has taken place in the production of silk, tea, and other important exports. But the year that sees a man come to the front capable of impressing his will upon the nation in the cause of progress and reform will find her, in view of the preparation already achieved, approaching her goal with rapid strides."—Translation made for the Literary Digest.

The Waterworks By-Law

The following is a copy of the By-law except the sections relating to the Polling Divisons; for taking the votes on the 30th day of March, 1909, of the Electors qualified to vote on By-laws for creating debts, the summing up of votes, etc. Published by the Water Commissioners.

By-Law No.——

A BY-LAW to provide for borrowing the sum of $120,000 to pay the cost of construction of a concrete dam and other works for the improvement of the Waterworks system of the City of Peterborough.

Passed the ...... day of ......, 1909.

WHEREAS, the Peterborough Water Commissioners have represented to the Council of the City of Peterborough that it is necessary, in order to ensure a permanent, increased and satisfactory supply of water to the City for public and private use and for fire protection, that the present waterworks dam should be replaced by a new concrete dam and that a new pump plant, together with the other works and appliances required to control and develop the water power at the said dam and to supply water to the waterworks system of the said City should be constructed and installed, and it is estimated that the cost of same will be the sum of $120,000 and the said Water Commissioners have applied to the Council for the said sum for such purposes.

AND WHEREAS, it is desirable in the public interest to construct and install such works and appliances and to pass this By-law, to be submitted to the votes of the duly qualified electors, to authorize the borrowing of the said sum for the purposes aforesaid, which sum of $120,000 is the amount of the debt intended to be created by this By-law.

AND WHEREAS, in order to raise the said sum of $120,000 it will be necessary to issue the debentures of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough for the said amount, such debentures to be a special charge on the waterworks, and the lands used therewith and the revenue arising therefrom and also charged on the whole rateable property of the Municipality.

AND WHEREAS, the amount of the whole rateable property of the Municipality according to the last revised Assessment Roll, being the roll prepared in the year 1908, for the year 1909, is the sum of $8,426,778 and the amount of the existing debenture debt of the Municipality, exclusive of local improvement debts payable by local special rates, but including the debt of $312,000 incurred for the purchase and improvement of the waterworks, is the sum of $870,231.98 and there is no part of the principal or interest in arrear.

AND WHEREAS, it will require the sum of $5,100 to be raised annually for a period of thirty years, the currency of the debentures to be issued under and by virtue of this By-law to pay the interest of the said debt, and the sum of $2,324.56 to be raised annually during the said period for providing a sinking fund for the payment of the same at maturity thereof —such last mentioned sum being sufficient with the estimated interest on the investment thereof to discharge the said debt when the same becomes due, making in all the sum of $7,424.56 to be raised annually as aforesaid.

THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH BY THE COUNCIL THEREOF ENACTS AS FOLLOWS:—

1. This By-law shall take effect on the final passing thereof.

2. It shall be lawful for the Council of the City of Peterborough to borrow the sum of $120,000 and to issue the debentures of the said Corporation for the said sum, such debentures to be sealed with the Corporate Seal of the City of Peterborough and to be signed by the Mayor and Treasurer and countersigned by the Secretary of the Peterborough City Trust, and to be made payable within thirty years after the issue thereof, and to bear interest at the rate of four and one-quarter per centum per annum payable half-yearly on the thirtieth day of June and the thirty-first day of December in each year and to have coupons attached thereto for the payment of such interest; such debentures as to principal and interest to be payable at the office of the Secretary of the Peterborough City Trust in the City of Peterborough.

3. The said waterworks and lands shall be specially charged with the repayment of the said sum hereby authorized to be borrowed and the debentures to be issued therefor and the holders of such debentures shall have a preferential charge on the said waterworks and lands and the revenues arising therefrom, after providing for the payment of the expenses attendant upon the operation and maintenance of the said waterworks and the interest and sinking fund in respect to debentures already issued for the purchase and improvement of the waterworks system, for securing the payment of the said debentures and the interest thereon and the said debentures and interest shall also be a charge upon the whole rateable property of the municipality.

4. Subject to the provisions of subsection 2 of this section there shall be raised and levied during each year of the currency of the said debentures by a special rate upon all the rateable property of the Municipality, the sum of $5,100 for payment of the interest on the said debt, and the sum of $2,324.56 as a sinking fund for the payment of the said debt at the maturity thereof making together the sum of $7,424.56 to be raised annually as aforesaid.

(2) Provided, however, that the revenues arising from the said waterworks shall, after payment of the expenses of operating and maintaining the said waterworks and the payment of the interest and sinking fund in respect to debentures heretofore issued for the purchase and improvement of the waterworks system, be applied towards payment of the annual interest and sinking fund on the debentures to be issued hereunder and the Council of the said City shall only be required to raise in each year during the currency of the debentures to be issued hereunder a sum sufficient with the moneys arising and available from such revenue to make up the said annual sum of $7,424.56 required for payment of the interest and sinking fund of the debentures to be issued hereunder.

5. As the proposed expenditure upon the objects for which the debt to be created by this By-law is estimated to extend over more than one year and it is undesirable to have large portions of the money on hand unused and uninvested it would in the opinion of the Council be to the advantage of the Municipality to issue the debentures hereby authorized in instalments and it is, therefore, hereby provided that said debentures may be issued in instalments of such amounts (not exceeding in the aggregate the total amount for which provision is made by this By-law) and at such times, as the exigency of the case demands, but so that the whole shall be issued within five years and the first instalment within two years after the passing of this By-law and the proceeds of the said debentures when sold or a sufficient part thereof for that purpose shall be paid over as required to the Peterborough Water Commissioners, to be applied in payment of the amount expended in the construction of such new dam, pump house and pumping plant and the other works and appliances constructed and installed to control and develop the water power at the said dam and to supply water to the water works system of the city.

SCOTLAND AND RACING.

Even In Roman Days It Was Famous For Its Military Horses.

It is apt to be forgotten that Scotland has been famous for its horses from the most ancient days. When Agricola defeated the Caledonians at the Battle of the Grampians, A.D. 84, the Celtic enemy, as Tacitus relates, were exceptionally strong in cavalry and charioteers. Successive Kings of Scotland did much to improve its native breed of horses; and in this connection, it is not to be forgotten that the first Scottish King of England, James I., did more to improve the race-horses in Great Britain than was ever done before him or has ever been done by any individual since.

James I. was the real author of horse-racing, as it has since been known, in England. He it was who first established regular courses; and during his reign there came into being the code of regulations that led up to the modern laws of the turf. Nobody denies that horse-racing has done much for the breed of British horses. It was a gift from Scotland.

By way of supplement to the foregoing, you should bear in mind how great was the dearth of horses in England when James ascended the throne. His predecessor, Queen Elizabeth, could muster only about 3,000 cavalry when the Spanish Armada threatened the kingdom with destruction; and, if contemporary writers are to be believed, the quality of English horses was then very poor. Even the horses employed in the hunting-field would seem to have been for the most part little better than coarse cart-horses.

Famous Service of Gold.

The Marquis of Ormonde, who has erected a brass tablet in St. Carnice's Cathedral, Kilkenny, Ireland, to the memory of his ancestors from the Thirteenth Century who are not buried in Kilkenny, is hereditary Chief Butler of Ireland, and has an unique collection of cups, which have been granted from time to time at the Coronations at which his ancestors officiated. Both Lord and Lady Ormonde own nicknames. Lady Ormonde is known to her friends as "Lilah," while with his lordship "O" has been a life-long appellation, as he was Lord Ossory before Lord Ormonde. Kilkenny Castle is one of the oldest inhabited houses in the three kingdoms, some of the rooms remaining almost exactly the same as they were in the year 1180.

There is a famous service at the castle made of almost unalloyed gold, and, as a consequence, is so soft that it could easily be spoilt with cleaning. Further, it cannot be heated in the usual manner. The plates are warmed by being plunged into a cauldron of boiling water and fished out by means of tongs, the ends of which are carefully covered with chamois leather. This elaborate process takes place just outside the door of the dining-room.

Lady Ormonde possesses robes which have seen service at three coronations, and they are exceptional as being the only robes in existence which have been adorned with embroideries. They are worked round the edge in elaborate designs in gold and silver thread, which makes a rich effect.

OF all times of the year the early spring is the most bewildering as regards the dress problem. If the summer plans are definitely settled then the question of what to provide for the summer outfit is not nearly so puzzling as when there are many opinions as to whether seashore or inland shall be chosen; whether the trip abroad shall be taken early or late or whether the season shall be spent at some gay watering place or places; or whether there shall be a comparatively quiet time in one's country place.

Fashion demands so many different changes of dress for the woman who is devoted to society and to whom society is so devoted that invitations are showered upon her. She must look smartly gowned at all times, and to fulfil that requirement necessitates keeping constantly well ahead of the times. Just at the moment the winter wardrobe, generally speaking, needs replenishing. This has been a long season, as is always the case when Ash Wednesday falls on so late a date. Even the most complete of outfits has felt the long strain. It is not considered smart to put on spring gowns too early—only the Southern trip permits of that—and yet the winter street gowns, for instance, are quite too old friends.

This is the season when the plainer tailor made gown is planned, and no matter how many gowns are required there is always room for it. Later the more elaborate styles will take its place, but now the serge or cheviot, simply made, is in great demand, and there is much rivalry over the different models. Both plain and figured cheviots are fashionable, and there was never known such a variety of colors and patterns. Black, dark blue and dark purple, in quite a new shade, are all smart, and there are several new weaves that give a two tone effect, but so cleverly blended that at first glance it seems to be all the one color.

Braid and Buttons Still Popular.

Braid, buttons and satin folds and facings are still the favorite trimmings, but too much trimming is considered most undesirable, and the smartest gowns rely entirely upon the perfection of their cut and finish for the individuality which makes them so noticeable. They are not exaggerated in design. The waist line is placed, or indicated, in a more rational position, and while every effort is made to make the wearer appear as slight as possible there is enough material used in the skirts to prevent the hideous appearance of scantiness of material and too tight fitting a garment. All the new street skirts are wider around the hem, and while they cannot be correctly termed wide they give enough room to walk comfortably. There are among the newest models several that have pleats, but these pleats are inserted well below the hips, for there is still the preference in favor of the long, narrow and as nearly flat figure as possible.

Last autumn some few of the leading dressmakers in Paris exhibited among their smartest designs a tailor gown with coat so long that it entirely covered the gown over which it was worn. This coat was tight fitting at the back and sides and gave a narrow straight front effect. It recalled to memory the polonaise of olden days and was in its first appearance not greeted with much enthusiasm, as it was almost too severe and too striking to be becoming to any but the favored few. The same style appears this spring, but with such modifications as will be in favor of its popularity. A woman with a good figure looks well in such a costume, and consequently it behooveth every woman to become possessed of a good figure—not so difficult a task in these days, when such wonders in figure building are being achieved. Serge rather than cloth is chosen for these long coats, and they are invariably made most simply, trimmed only with braid—and not too much braid—and buttons. A white tie or jabot may soften what to many would be the too masculine severity, but the beauty and style of the garment are shown in perfect workmanship. It is a fashion that, while apparently easy to copy, requires most careful treatment. If rightly rendered it is extremely smart and becoming, but badly carried out it is too much like a loose house gown.

Wraps and coats are necessary to comfort in the cool days of early spring and in fact all summer are in use, for driving and motoring especially. A smart wrap is not easy to find, for as a rule a loose wrap lacks style and smartness. This season there are two or three designs that are bound to be generally popular, for they combine coat and cloak, and while large enough to completely cover the gown are not too heavy or cumbersome. The black and white check designs in medium size are for the moment fashionable and are effective when trimmed only with plain black satin.

The evening gown at this time of year must also receive careful consideration. To be sure, there may be several of the evening gowns of the winter that are still fresh enough to pass muster, and most emphatic is the law that rules not to keep gowns from one season to another, but to wear them out, yet where the same gown has been worn many times it always needs some careful freshening and renovating, and that means the spending of time and money, and so why not instead have a dainty new gown made, one that will be on the more simple order and better suited for the less formal entertainments of Lent and summer? Consequently just at this season are to be seen many of the daintiest and smartest of simple evening gowns that are most attractive. Crêpe de Chine, silk voile and chiffon are popular materials and black is a popular color, generally made up, unless in mourning, over white or color. There is nothing heavy in the appearance of these gowns; filmy lace and embroidery take the place of the heavier and more costly trimmings that have been identified with more elaborate dress and there is every effort made to give individuality and distinction to the simplicity. Elbow and long sleeves both are in favor for these simple gowns, but the elbow sleeve tight fitting is as a rule more becoming. There is still the high waist line, but never an exaggerated line, in these most conservative and dignified little gowns.

New Lingerie Frocks.

CHARMING indeed are many of the new lingerie frocks which are being made for wear at the Southern resorts and which will also be useful when summer comes. A most fascinating costume of this sort which has just been imported has a high Empire skirt of very thin linen embroidered with a simple allover design. Around the foot the skirt has a very deep band of elaborate embroidery which is finished in deep scallops. Beneath this there are two narrow ruffles of the material of the gown, which is more like linen batiste than linen proper. From the top of the skirt to the band of embroidery around the foot there are narrow panels of plain linen with rows of embroidery on either side.

The bodice of this gown is cut with a round neck, a little low. There is a simulated yoke formed of vertical tucks and trimmed with three bands of narrow embroidery carried around the yoke at equal intervals. Beneath this yoke the bodice is quite full.

A feature which makes it appear possible that the summer gowns will not all be so plain and tight about the figure as those of the present mode is the bretelles of horizontally tucked material, with a ruffle at the side and trimmed with two bands of embroidery. These are quite like the suspenders of bygone fame in their effect.

The sleeves of this gown are fascinating. They are not very tight fitting, although they are without fulness. They are of a little more than elbow length, ending with three frills around the lower edge. They are trimmed with bands of embroidery tucking and tiny frills set on horizontally.

Another equally charming white linen gown is in a princess effect, but so much trimmed that the plainness usually connected with the princess idea is entirely lacking.

The front panel is made of fine tucked linen with horizontal bands of Valenciennes lace strapping the entire panel from neck to hem. There is a small square chemisette and high collar of the Valenciennes. Broad bands of heavy embroidery are brought from the shoulders down each side of the front panel. At the bottom of the skirt these bands are connected by a crosspiece of the embroidery.

The entire back of the gown is handsomely embroidered. From just below the armhole the back and side are panelled by delicate embroidered vines which extend to the cross trimming of the skirt. Heavy embroidery constitutes this cross trimming, which is carried from one front panel to the other around the back of the skirt just above the knees. The garment fastens under the side panel and is perfectly tight fitting down to this cross trimming. Beneath this there is a fuller skirt elaborately embroidered and extending into a fair sized train. The sleeves of this costume are long and close fitting. The upper part is made of fine tucked linen trimmed with braids of lace. Beneath this upper sleeve, which extends below the elbow, there is a tight undersleeve of Valenciennes, fastening at the side with a frill, and which reaches well over the hand.

Blouses for Tailored Skirts.

WITH the new tailor skirts which are made in one piece to come above the normal waist line or else have high fitted belts fancy blouses will be much worn, and these will match or harmonize with the rest of the costume, to give it the appearance of a whole dress. It is so much more satisfactory to wear something soft under one's tailor coat that the separate waist is practically indispensable.

A favorite design where tucked or dotted net is to form the foundation of the waist has an insertion about an inch in width laid on in three rows from shoulder to girdle top with an extra piece going down the centre. The top of the waist is cut out in a square with an edging of insertion, and a yoke of finely tucked, plain chiffon is used. Tight little Directoire bows trim the front of the collar and bottom of the yoke. One could have at least two different styles of waists to go with a tailor suit, as this part of a costume is always the first to show wear and soil. Besides, an extra blouse helps to reconcile one to a suit which has to do long service.

Embroidered buttons edge the top of one tailor skirt which is made with a high waisted effect, and there is another row of the same buttons crossing the bust where the band joins a set of braces. Between the two rows of buttons the cloth is left slightly full and the lace underblouse can be seen at the sides as well as above. The design suggests an apron, yet when the combination is put together it makes an attractive gown. A part of the lace blouse worn with this cloth skirt and straps was covered solidly with a soutache pattern, while the sleeves were of the plain net laid in tucks.

HOW GOTCH TRIMMED THE FRENCHMAN RAOUL DE ROUEN

Kansas City, Mo., March 25.—The pride of France was vanquished by the King Pin of all wrestlers and Raoul De Rouen must return to the land of his nativity without the world's championship honors. It was a great match, as each one of the twelve thousand fans of the mat in Convention Hall to-night will readily agree. Valiantly and heroically did the monster Frenchman struggle, with admirable stoicism did he assimilate punishment, but it was no use. His gameness was without avail. Frank Gotch was Raoul De Rouen's master hand Raoul answered the call of his superior for the first fall after thirty-four minutes and as many seconds. A reversed Nelson hold did the work. The Iowa farmer made short work of the second fall, and Rouen's shoulder kissed the mat after thirteen minutes of grappling. The toe hold, that famous Gotch method of torture, was the cause.

Frank Gotch, the flower of the wrestling fraternity, was master of his giant opponent at every stage of the match. Not once was the "hawkeye" in danger. Only one time, five minutes in the first fall, was the French importation on top. Yet it must not be thought that Gotch had an easy time. He didn't. Raoul De Rouen brought forth the best that was in the American. Time after time during the first fall Rouen found himself in a tight place, in desperate straights, and it seemed that he must succumb. But he managed to break the clamps Gotch held. The Frenchman's valiant resistance in the face of superior skill, cunning, cleverness, even strength, earned him the admiration of the great crowd, by far the greatest that has ever witnessed a wrestling match in Kansas City.

Gotch opened the engagement by rudely mussing Rouen's hair. A flash of anger gleamed in the Frenchman's eye. A minute of sparring and Gotch sent Raoul over the ropes with a leg hold. Back to the centre they were called and again the sparring for openings and the face ruffling. After ten minutes' work on the canvas the men were on their feet. But there was no denying Gotch. Two minutes and the Frenchman was again down with the lithe Iowa farmer clutching a French foot. After thirty minutes of awful struggling, awful for the Frenchman, Gotch slammed Raoul into the roped arena and applied a reversed Nelson. The Frenchman slowly sank to submission. Referee Porteous slapped the Iowan on the back.

An intermission of fifteen minutes followed the first fall. When the wrestlers faced for the second and final struggle, each was apparently fresh and each attempted to take the offensive. At arms length they stood and cuffed. The Frenchman slapped Gotch a resounding blow on the face. The powerful man from Humboldt, Iowa, grinned and smote Raoul's ear with his open hand. Raoul pushed Gotch in the face and Frank gave his husky foreman a sample of polite and scientific elbowing. It was rude wrestling and showed Gotch's evident ability to cope with De Rouen at his own game. It was fun for Gotch, but there was no joy in Rouen's face.

Suddenly, while the two men were head to head, Gotch dived quickly to the floor, and, clutching one of De Rouen's legs, lifted him high in the air and dropped him heavily to the floor. With a pantherish leap he was astride of the Frenchman and in a moment De Rouen was in the throes of the famous toe hold, which eventually won the second fall and the match for Gotch in thirteen minutes time.

THE RING

MoFARLAND IN LIMELIGHT.

Packey McFarland, the Chicago lightweight, who made Leach Cross look cheap in their bout at the Fairmount A.C. on Tuesday night, is as much entitled to a match with Battling Nelson for the lightweight championship as anybody.

McFarland is one of the most scientific little men that ever got into the ring. He is a boxer of the Jem Driscoll school, but is not a particularly hard hitter. Still, there seems to be no doubt that in a limited bout, say of 25 rounds, he would be able to stay with Nelson, if only because of his extremely clever defensive tactics.

Moving pictures of the Burns-Johnson fight are to be shown in Peterborough on Saturday, April 17th. They will appear at the Grand Opera House matinee and night and should prove a strong attraction.

HOCKEY

The Lakefield News says;—The Peterborough City Hockey League banquet, which was to have taken place on Monday evening, has been postponed until some time in April. The local team had just left the village to go down to Peterborough when word was received that the banquet was declared off. A number of members of the team had been put to considerable inconvenience in order to attend and feel pretty sore over the affair, no word having been sent us until the last minute.

ARE TWO CASES OF SMALLPOX

School Closed at Mount Pleasant —No Services in the Churches

The Millbrook Mirror says;—

Smallpox is reported in our suburb of Mount Pleasant. A couple of cases one young girl in each family, has placed two houses under quarantine. The school is closed and the pupils vaccinated. No services were held in the churches last Sabbath. The strictest precautions are being observed and as the cases appear to be of a mild type we hope that the extermination of the epidemic will soon be effected.

STILT WALKING.

In Some Parts of France It Is an Absolute Necessity.

In some parts of the world, particularly in the low districts of France, stilt walking is a necessity. In Gascony there are great level plains covered with stunted bushes of dry heath. These waste lands have a soil that is so permeable, so soft and yielding, that the slightest fall of rain makes them practically impassable by ordinary methods of pedestrianism. But these wastes must be traversed at all seasons by the poor people of Gascony, and necessity has accordingly made the Gascons a stilt walking people, and men, women and children may be seen at all seasons of the year stuck upon high stilts, trudging through the waste lands, carrying baskets, bundles and the like. The stilts used are about five feet long and often longer.

The shepherds of Landes all go on stilts. The shepherd is provided with a stout staff that answers for many purposes. At the proper place in the staff is a flap, which makes a comfortable seat when turned down. On this the shepherd quietly sits and watches his flock, and while he sits up there he knits or spins with a distaff thrust in his girdle.

The Landes stilt walker can do marvelous things with these five foot leg extensions. He can run with a speed that will tax a horse, pick up a pebble or pluck a flower as the cowboy reaches to the earth from his pony, and he can drop to the ground level and regain the perpendicular as quickly as a boy can turn a handspring.

HOW TO MAKE THE BEST REMEDY

Fine Recipe for Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble Gives Prompt Relief

The following prescription for the cure of rheumatism and kidney and bladder troubles has not doubt been filled millions of times, viz., Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. These simple, harmless ingredients can be obtained at any good prescription pharmacy at little cost, and are mixed by shaking well in a bottle.

The dose for adults is a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime, drinking a full tumberful of water after each dose. It is stated that this prescription is a positive remedy for kidney trouble and lame back, weak bladder and urinary difficulties, especially of the elderly people, and one of the best things to be used in rheumatic afflictions relieving the aches and pains and reducing swellings.

A well-known authority states that this mixture acts directly upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys; cleanses those spongelike organs and gives them power to sift and strain the poisonous waste matter and uric acid from the blood which is the cause of rheumatism.

If your back or side aches and you suspect kidney trouble it would be wise to try this for a few days.

A Case of Urgent Need.

It was in the hotel of a mining town that the New England guest, registering in the office, heard a succession of loud yells. "What in the world is that—a murder going on upstairs?" he demanded.

"No," said the clerk as he slammed the book and lounged toward the stairs. "It's the spring bed up in No. 5. That tenderfoot up there don't get the hang of it, and every few days he gets one of the spiral springs screwed into him like a shirt stud. I guess I'll have to go up if there ain't anything more I can do for you for a few minutes."

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

BOY HERO REWARDED.

Lad Who Saved Pony's Life Is Given a Medal.

"Our Dumb Friends League" held a field day at Claridge's Hotel, London, a few days ago, and the room in which the meeting took place was so crowded that there was scarcely space for the photographers to work in. Three cameras were trained on the table at which Julia, Marchioness of Tweeddale, presided, and her ladyship prolonged the gesture with which she handed a medal to Henry Murten, favorably known as the pit-boy hero, while flashlight photographs were taken of the scene.

Murten, a youth of 17, is employed as a pony boy in the Woolley colliery, Barnsley. Some months ago he was taking his pony down an incline with some empty trucks, when he was warned that the roof was cracking. With great presence of mind, he unharnessed the pony, and dragged the animal out of danger.

Then the roof fell in, eight tons or more of it, completely filling the empty wagons, while fragments of it ripped the pony's harness off, and cut Murten about the hands. Incidentally, Murten saved the life of another boy who was following, and who, but for the warning, must have been crushed to death.

But the great achievement honored was that he saved the pony's life. For that he was awarded a silver medal by the league, as well as the Fitzwilliam medal, presented by the Countess Fitzwilliam, who is president of the Yorkshire Society for the Encouragement of Humane Treatment and Kindness to Pit Ponies.

To give versimilitude to the ceremony, Murten appeared in his pit clothes, and with his face "made up" with coal dust, specially brought to London from the colliery where he works. He carried a lighted Davy lamp, and smiled appreciatively when the secretary announced that two members of the league had contributed a sovereign apiece, as a mark of their admiration for him, and that Arthur Collins had invited him to see the Drury Lane pantomime.

When Grayson Ran Away.

Mr. Victor Grayson, British M.P., who has been chaffed a good deal about the motor-car "kidnapping" joke, which kept him away from a Labor party conference, conspired, when at school, to run away from home with a schoolmate, Billy Lee by name. Young Victor looted some sandwiches from home, while Lee stole a revolver belonging to his father, and which the lads carried alternately, stuck in their braces. They were determined to see the world, and as they sat on a bank in a country lane to devour the sandwiches they imagined themselves being able to say, "Oh, yes, we have been to this and that place and have had some really thrilling experiences." But when night drew on and hunger began to assert itself, the temperament of the boys underwent a great change. They thought of the old melody, "Home, sweet home," and mutually agreed it was far better for them to remain under parental control a little longer. It was nearly midnight when the boys reached home. Their reception was one to be remembered. Some time afterwards, Victor decided to go to sea, and successfully prevailed on an old sailor to make him a stowaway on an outward-bound vessel to Australia. When three days out, three other stowaways were discovered, and Victor decided to appear before the captain with them. The latter told them it was only respect for the fish that restrained him from having all four thrown overboard. For $50, a passing steamer consented to return the stowaways to England. When they were landed they kept together for a time, but eventually one of them was locked up for begging, while another joined the navy.

A Shipbuilding Magnate.

Lord Pirrie, on whom His Majesty has conferred the Order of St. Patrick, is one of the heads of the great Belfast shipbuilding firm of Harland and Wolff, which he entered forty-seven years ago as an apprentice, and such was his ability that twelve years later he was taken into partnership. He possesses an amazing knowledge not only of shipbuilding, but of how to get orders for ships. There is a story told of him to the effect that on the afternoon of one of his periodical visits to Liverpool a large shipowner had a more serious face than usual when he met his colleagues on the Exchange. "Well, the fact is," he said, "Pirrie has been over and has persuaded me to order a ship, and I am puzzled to know what to do with it."

Two Famous Hymn Writers.

Mr. Alfred Midlane, the jubilee of whose famous hymn, "There a Friend for Little Children," was recently celebrated, learned the trade of an ironmonger in his youth, and it was after a day of hard work that he sat down and endeavored to put upon paper the ideas for the hymn by which he will always be known. By a curious coincidence, Mr. Midlane lives in a house in Newport, Isle of Wight, which is quite close to that occupied for so long by Mrs. Lake, another venerable hymn-writer. She wrote the well-known hymn, "I Think When I Read That Sweet Story of Old."

Peer With French and English Titles.

The Duke of Richmond, who is shortly going abroad, is a "triple" Duke in the United Kingdom, besides holding the French title of Duc d'Aubigny. The late duke succeeded his father as Duke of Richmond and Lennox, and in 1876 the title of Duke of Gordon was revived in his favor. The Duke of Abercorn is the only peer who holds peerages in each of the three kingdoms, as well as a French dukedom, that of Chatelherault.

"Comforters" and Smoking.

Miss Penrose Philp, of the State Children's Association, advanced a novel theory as to juvenile smoking when speaking at the Women's Institute recently. She said it was the common practice of putting "comforters" in the mouths of infants which had much to do with boys later on taking to cigarettes.

JUST A FEW TRINKETS

JEWELS WORN BY THE PRINCES OF INDIA.

Most Costly Article of Ornament the World Has Ever Known Is a Diamond Cape Worn by Bahadur of Baroda and Valued at $5,000,000—Rajah of Jaipur Has a Piece of Jewelry Worth $3,000,000.

In a palace older than western civilization, on a jewel encrusted throne, a relic of a vanished art, sits the maharajah of Gwalior. Over $2,000,000 worth of diamonds and precious stones glitter on the magnificent robes which mark his regal state. The wealth of a Rockefeller or a Carnegie pales into insignificance before the vast riches of this prince, whose clothes alone represent a king's ransom.

The barbaric magnificence of the most richly-dressed man in the world is almost inconceivable in a land where a paltry diamond tiara or a single necklace is regarded as wonderful. Around the neck of the prince are six rows of pearls, the last row pendent and of enormous size. Even in India cannot be found a collection of these stones to equal this necklace. Seven ropes of large pearls swing from the shoulder to the hip for the support of his sword in his gold enameled and diamond encrusted scabbord. The gorgeous weapon is estimated at being worth $250,000, and it is possible that that value falls far below the real worth of the gems with which it is adorned.

But the necklace and sword belt form but a small part of the mass of jewels which glitter from every part of the prince's costume. The only parts of his dress which are not ornamented are his headgear and his boots. In this respect he forms a contrast to the majority of his brother Indian rulers, who usually wear gorgeous jeweled turbans. The maharajah of Gwalior, however, affects a curious kind of hat which looks like an oriental slouch and is bare of jewels with the exception of a great ruby, valued at $70,000. His highness probably in a modest moment considered that ruby sufficient, and perhaps he is not alone in his opinion.

But all the wealth of the Maharajah Sindhia cannot compare with Maharajah Sir Sayaji Rao Gaekwar Sena Khas Khel Bahadur of Baroda, G. C., S.I., commonly known as the Gaekwar. This person is even more magnificent than his name. His jewels have been valued at $4,000,000, while his yearly income exceeds $15,000,000.

This superb monarch has one article of dress which is the most costly piece of jewelry that the world has ever known or is ever likely to know. It is celebrated under the name of the diamond cape and its value has been placed at $5,000,000, although it is impossible to properly estimate the value of the stones which comprise it. The only reason why his brother maharajah is able to claim the title of the richest dressed man in the world is because the lord of Baroda is a modest person, a graduate of Eton and Oxford, and keeps his cape for the edification of his visitors.

The diamond cape really is composed in the main of woven pearls, but it is edged with an arabesque design of diamonds, rubies, sapphires, and emeralds, and such is the size and glory of the diamonds that they far outshine the more numerous other stones. This marvelous creation was originally designed as a covering for Mohammed's tomb, but in the east things do not always reach their original destination and the cape by some means or other came into the possession of a former Gaekwar. Not unlike other famous jewels, it has been baptized in blood, and three ruthless wars have been fought for its possession.

However, the Gaekwar has a few trifles which he consents to don at Durbars and other state occasions. Among these is a turban which is worth a mere $100,000 and a pair of gloves which you might be able to buy for $60,000. He also strews a few knickknacks over his person in the shape of emerald studs and ruby buttons with a diamond star or two, so that altogether he would go at a bargain sale for about a million, without counting the value of his princely self.

The Maharajah of Patiala is a young person who would look with scorn at the pretensions of any mere American trust magnate to be termed a rich man. When he gets into gala attire he carries around with him a few jewels which are worth about a million and a half dollars. His scarlet velvet cloak of state is embroidered with pearls to the value of one million dollars and the ropes of diamonds and pearls which he strings about his royal neck are, maybe, worth as much more. As a matter of fact, no estimate has ever been made of the wealth in jewels which this young princeling possesses, but the one perfect sapphire which blazes in his turban has been declared by such connoisseurs as have seen it to be worth at least $100,000. It is one of the few perfect large gems of its kind in existence and has marvelous powers attributed to it.

More remarkable for their fabulous value than for their number are the jewels of the Rajah of Jaipur, who was present at the coronation of King Edward, and spent the trifling sum of $1,000,000 on his expedition. To use a slang expression, London was "knocked cold" by his almost unbelievable magnificence. Even the crown jewels of England paled before the splendor of this semi-barbaric monarch.

But vast as is the wealth of the Indian princes there is one monarch before whom they are individually but as candles to the sun. His imperial majesty, Mohammed, Shah of Persia, has in his treasury gems which would almost make it seem possible to construct the palace of Aladdin. When he ascended the throne he had an inventory made of his jewels, and the minimum value placed was the incredible sum of $100,000,000.

Cards and Their History.

Cards are square shaped pieces of pasteboard printed with various devices and employed as a business medium by money changers. They are usually made up in packs of fifty-two, one for each week of the year. A good many people play cards for pleasure, in which case their opponents are said to be buying experience. In most card games the rule is that the cards may be cut, but not otherwise marked. This rule is not strictly observed in games in which only three cards are used. Indeed, the marking of cards has attained a high degree of perfection since the introduction of numerous card index systems. Fashions change in card games as in everything else. Old maid, for instance, is nowadays seldom played in the best clubs. Playing cards should not be confused with those sold on cricket grounds, which are rather larger, or with visiting cards, which are smaller.—Fry's Magazine.

NAM AND ITAL

What Caused the Great Migration Which Gave the Land of America to the Red Indians.

IT was not so easy to get along in the days when men had nothing to depend on but clubs and stone hatchets and arrows tipped with stone. Those were the days before houses were invented and people lived in huts made of bark or the branches of trees, or sometimes perhaps in caves when they could find them. Nobody had thought of planting vegetables or sowing grain so that there might always be something to eat, and when they could not kill some animal with their bows and arrows or catch fish in their nets made of bark they grew very hungry indeed.

Nam lived in that time long before white men dreamed that there was such a place as America, and much less thought of starting out across the ocean to find it. He was about fifteen years old when his father and mother died and left him alone at the foot of the mountain that we call Storm King, beside the Hudson. Nam had never been very strong and he was too young to hunt much even if he had been stronger. He was often hungry, for it was natural that the others should think of themselves before they invited him to share their food with them. Nam became very thoughtful, sitting alone at night in his lodge of fir branches.

He was wondering one evening, as usual, what he should do when the snow came and food would be harder to get than ever, when Ital, another boy of about his own age, came in and sat down beside him.

"What are you thinking of?" Ital asked.

"I was thinking how good it would be if we did not have to feel hungry so often," Nam replied.

Ital stretched himself down upon the ground in front of the fire.

"That reminds me of a story that old Wotal was telling the other day," he said. "He says that out there where the sun goes down people are never hungry. The reason is that they have a plant that grows out of the ground in the spring and that gives them all the food they want and more besides."

"It must be a wonderful plant," said Nam. "What people are they who own it?"

"They are Snake People like us," Ital replied. "Wotal says they are our cousins."

It was the custom in those days for men to choose some creature for each tribe. The animal chosen by the tribe to which Nam and Ital belonged was the snake, and both he and Ital had a figure of a snake pricked into their skin on their breasts.

"Let us go to the place where the sun sets and see our cousins," Nam proposed.

"I wish I knew whether Wotal was telling the truth," Ital said.

"Even if he is not," said Nam, "we will be no worse off than we are here, for it is getting harder and harder to find game and the Great Beasts are becoming so bold that they will soon eat us up."

There were many large and fierce animals in those days which were called the Great Beasts; they were larger and stronger than any of our beasts or tigers and they were afraid of nothing except fire.

Ital, like Nam, had lost his father and mother. He was as large and strong almost as a man, so that he could hunt for himself; but he was getting tired of a place where the game was so scarce, and after some further talk he agreed to go with Nam in search of the cousins who possessed the wonderful plant.

"Perhaps they will give us some of it," he said, "and then we shall not have to go tramping all day without getting so much sometimes as a rabbit."

Ital rolled over and went to sleep, but Nam remained awake thinking and listening to the howling and roaring of the Great Beasts high upon the side of the mountain, until the moon had passed over their heads.

They had very few preparations to make and nothing to take with them excepting their bows and arrows and a hatchet of smooth stone made fast with thongs to a wooden handle, which Nam's father had left to him. Ital had killed a beaver the day before and they divided the meat between them. It would last for a day or two and then they would have to depend as usual upon what they could kill.

"Wotal told us that our cousins live where the sun goes down," Ital said, "so we must follow the sun and he will guide us."

"How can our cousins live there without being burned up when the sun comes down upon them out of the sky?" Nam asked.

"We shall see when we get there," replied Ital.

So they travelled on and on through the great forest that covered all the country at that time. Every morning they turned their backs upon the sun when he rose and every afternoon they followed him until he went down beyond the edge of the world amid flaming clouds. Nam was much perplexed to find that they did not seem to be getting any nearer to his resting place. Now and then they crossed a river at some shallow ford and sometimes they had to go around a lake which lay in their path, but mostly their road lay through the forest. They managed to shoot game enough to keep them supplied with food and they were careful to avoid meeting any strange people. Whenever they caught sight of the smoke of their fires or came upon the tracks of men in the forest they turned aside, for men in those day were often at war with one another and the boys feared that they might be captured by some enemy.

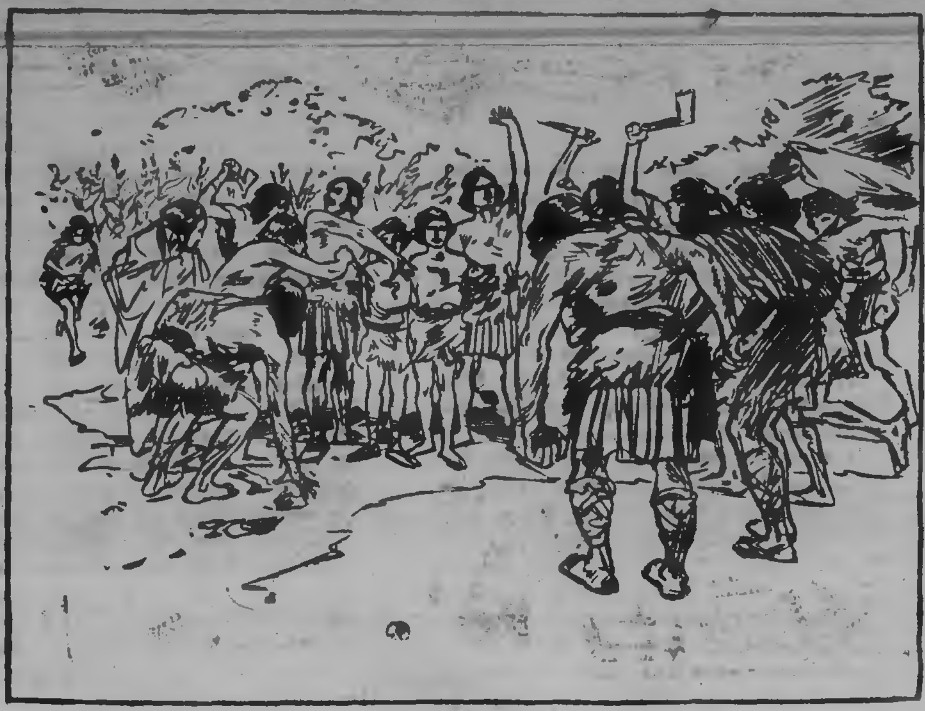
It was fortunate for them that they did not have to fight with any of the Great Beasts. They kept a sharp watch for them and whenever they saw one they hid themselves until it had passed on. They knew how to walk through the thickest woods without noise and their eyes were as sharp as those of the Beasts themselves.

Thus they journeyed for many weeks, always toward the setting sun. They could no longer see mountains in any direction, for they had left them far behind. Instead of the forest, they began to find open places covered with soft grass, upon which hundreds of buffalo were grazing.

"This is a pleasant country," Ital said one day. "Let us stop here where there is plenty of food to be had without trouble. We are no nearer to the setting place of the sun than we were when we started, and I believe that old Wotal did not tell the truth when he said what he did say about our cousins."

"I have no objection," replied Nam, who was tired with their long journey.

So they built a lodge under the trees at the border of a meadow beside a river which reminded them of the river that they had left behind and prepared to settle down there. But they had not been there long until one night, when they were sound asleep, some men tore down their lodge and made them captives, binding their arms behind their backs with thongs. Before daylight their captors started with them along the river keeping their arms fast bound, although they did them no further harm at that time.



Kill them! Kill them!

Nam and Ital noticed several things about the strange men. First, their heads were flat behind and rose in a kind of rounded point on top, like old Wotal's head. Then the language that they spoke among themselves was almost like the language that Nam and Ital spoke, but not quite, so that they could understand a word now and then, but not enough to make them understand what the men were really saying. Besides the skins that everybody wore, the strangers had garments that seemed to have been made by weaving threads of something in and out. This, of course, was cloth, although Nam and Ital did not know it, as they had never seen any before. Their own people used only the skins of animals for their clothing. But what surprised them most of all was the fact that the men had hatchets and knives made of some red polished substance which glittered in the sun so that it dazzled their eyes. This was copper which the strangers dug out of the copper mines around Lake Superior. These old mines are still to be seen there, and trees, thousands of years old, have grown upon the earth that was thrown out of them to get at the metal.

"Where do you suppose they are going to take us?" Ital asked as he and Nam walked along side by side.

"I don't know," Nam replied. "Wherever it is, we shall have to go."

Both the boys were frightened, of course, but they did not say anything about it, because in those days, just as in the times when the real red Indians came later, both men and boys made a point of meeting whatever might happen without showing any sign of fear.

Their journey was not a very long one. Before nightfall they began to meet people fishing or hunting. Then they reached a high bluff overlooking the river where there were more houses and people than they had ever seen before in their lives.

These houses were scattered all about them. They were low and made of poles, covered with skins or with bark. Some were larger than others and among them and around them were fields in which grew tall stalks with long rustling leaves and a plume waving from the top. Many of the people were at work in the fields busily pulling up the weeds which grew between the stalks with the waving leaves.

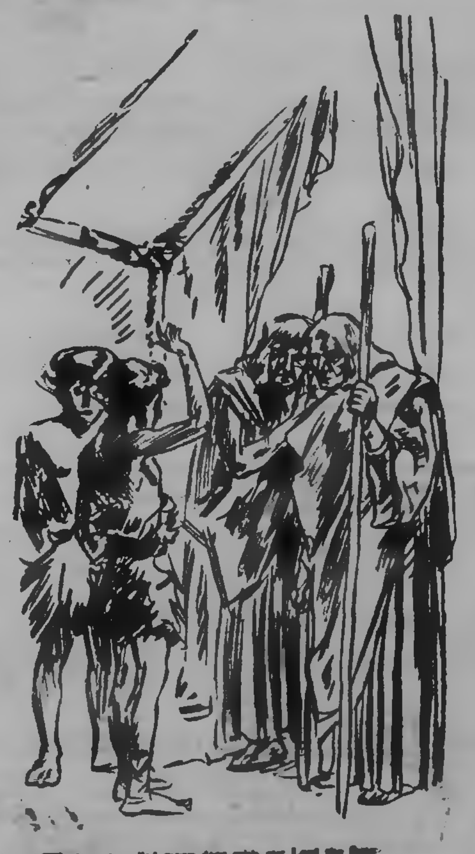
Ital and Nam were filled with wonder at the sight, for they could not imagine why so many people should be interested in the long grass, which was what they believed the waving leaves to be. But suddenly an idea came to Nam.

"I believe that these men are our cousins," he exclaimed to Ital, "and that the grass that we see is the plant that gives them their supply of food."

"I don't see how they can eat grass," Ital replied. "Only buffaloes and mastodons eat that. Even the deer won't touch it, as you very well know."

Nam had no answer to this, for he did not know that the tall stalks when they ripened gave ears of corn, which could be dried and ground between stones for food. But he kept on thinking and noticing things as they went along.

There was great excitement when the people caught sight of them. Crowds pressed around them with shouts and threatening looks and soon all began to shout words which meant "Kill them!" "Kill them!" Nam and Ital understood what the people were saying, but they looked straight ahead of them and made believe not to hear, as they did not wish to seem afraid. They wondered what it could be that made the people so angry against them, for they knew that they had done them no harm. Some of the more excited ones tried to strike the boys with their clubs, but their captors shielded them and pushed the others back. They led the prisoners through the village to the top of the bluff where were several of the largest houses. There was something else there.



We have travelled many days with our Lord the Sun.

It was a tremendous serpent, made of earth. He lay with his head toward the river and his jaws wide open, and his body wriggled back for a long distance to his tail, which was curled around and around. Between his jaws was a circle formed of a bank of earth, and inside that was a flooring of stones whitened by fire. This great serpent seemed as wonderful to the boys as it did to the first white men who discovered it in the State of Ohio, where it is still to be seen by those who seek the Serpent Mound.

They had little time for wonder, however, for their captors led them directly to one of the houses near the head of the great snake. As they approached several men with snow white hair came out of the house to meet them. The men who had captured them bowed low, and their leader told rapidly, as it seemed to the boys, where they had been found and captured. The old men listened gravely, nodding their heads and looking curiously at the boys. Then they moved aside by themselves and consulted in low tones. When they had finished they turned again and spoke, pointing to the stones in the circle which lay in the mouth of the serpent.

Nam listened as hard as he could, and he understood enough to satisfy him that he and Nam had been condemned as enemies to die upon the stones.

"Stop!" he cried, as the old men turned away. "We are not enemies but friends, and your cousins. You must not kill us!"

He spoke in his own language, of course, but his words seemed to cause much wonder among the old men. They stopped, and the oldest of them spoke to him, very slowly and distinctly. Nam found that he could understand what he said.

"Whence come you?" the old man asked.

"From the place of the rising of the sun," Nam replied, pointing back toward the east.

"What do you here?" the old man asked again.

"We seek our cousins, with whom we would live," said Nam.

"Who told you of them?" the old man inquired with suspicion.

"Wotal of the white hair," Nam replied.

They all repeated the name of Wotal and it seemed to Nam that they knew it. The old men then approached closer and looked at them more carefully than they had done before, examining especially the color of their skin. As they did so they caught sight of the figures of the snakes which had been pricked into their breasts by their parents. These figures seemed to cause the greatest astonishment among the old men. They bent close to note every detail of the figures and they talked fast, pointing and waving their hands toward the sun. It was clear that the figures had some special meaning for them that was not known to the boys who wore them. Finally the old man who had questioned Nam turned to the men who had captured the boys and spoke to them in a severe tone. The men immediately set the boys free and, bowing very low before them, went away with signs of fear and confusion.

Taking Nam by the hand, the oldest of the old men led the boys into the house, and there all bowed before them, as the soldiers had done. Then he spoke, slowly and distinctly, as before, so that Nam could understand him.

"We know by the sign of the snake," he said, "that you are of the blood of the son of one of our kings who wandered away many, many years ago and never again returned. His brothers ruled in his place, but now they have been dead for many years, and their children and grandchildren have died after them, so that we have no king, and we poor priests have been compelled as well as we could to rule the people."

He was silent and Ital asked what it was that he had been saying, for he could not understand. Nam repeated it to him, and Ital at once held himself very straight and looked proudly at the old men.

"It is our opinion that you were sent to us by our Lord, the sun," the old man went on, "for we are in sore need of help. In the years that have long passed our people were brave and skilful fighters, but men have lived and died and there has always been peace. For this reason they have forgotten the use of arms. But now there has appeared a strange race of men, very fierce and warlike. They live in the North, their skin is red and in battle their bodies and faces are stained with bright colors. These red men are gathering in armies and are making ready to fall upon us in order to kill us and take what we have that they desire. Our men thought that you were of their race, and it was for that they captured you. They are sorry, since they know the truth. But now, since our Lord the sun has brought you to us, we ask you what we shall do to be saved from death?"

Nam had been expecting this question. He had heard stories of the terrible Red Men of the North, who were more like beasts in their fierceness than like men, and he knew that the cousins who spent their time in tending the grass that grew out of the ground would be no match for them in conflict. Besides, he feared that if he had no answer ready the old men would begin to doubt whether the sun had really brought him and Ital to their rescue and might think again of killing them. So he did not delay his reply.

"We have travelled for many days with our Lord, the sun," he said, "and you are right in believing that it was he who brought us to you. It is his will that our cousins, with all that belongs to them, shall leave this land without delay and seek their dwelling place in a new country, where he will protect us."

"Where is this country?" the old man asked.

"It lies far away," Nam replied. "To reach it we must follow the course of the river."

"We go to tell the people to make ready," the old man replied. "Repose yourselves here and food shall be sent to you."

All the old men withdrew and the two boys were left alone. Ital was looking at Nam with astonishment.

"Why did you tell them that"? he asked.

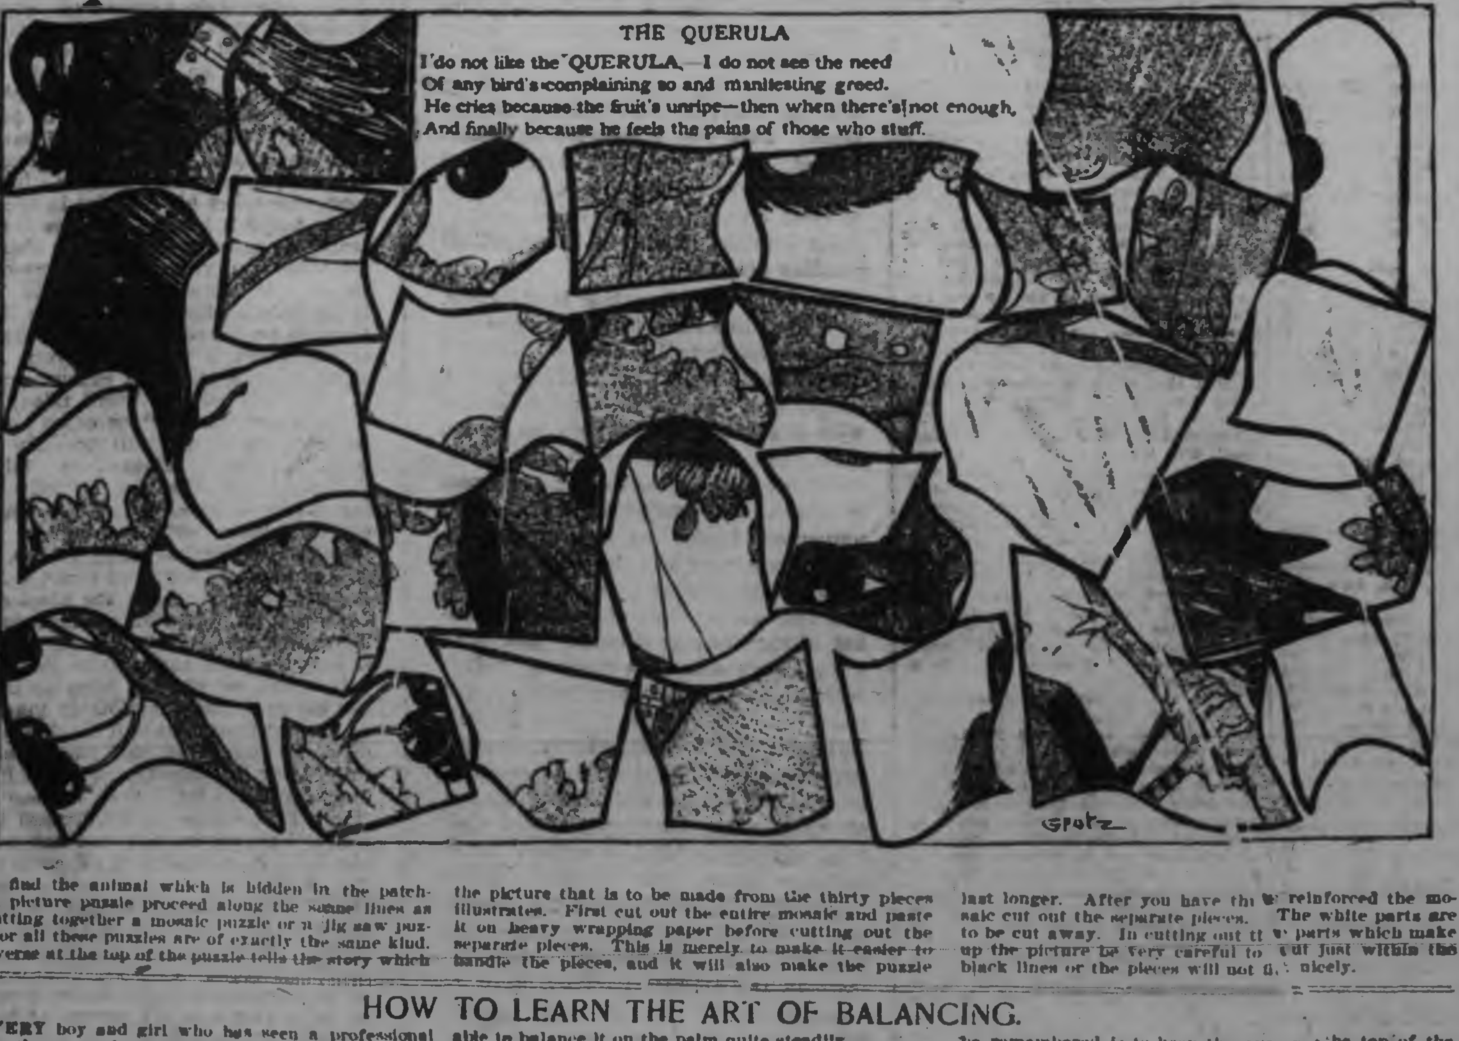
Nam smiled at him. "You are a good hunter, Ital," he said, "but you are not good at thinking. In that I am better than you. In time of battle you shall be the leader, but in matters of guidance it is best that you should follow me and ask no questions."

Ital reflected for a moment, and it was evident that he was beginning to think more of Nam than he had ever thought before. "It shall be as you say," he replied at last, "and each of us will keep the bargain as long as we live."

In obedience to Nam's orders all the people set out at the dawn of the next day, leaving not one behind, to follow the course of the river, wherever it might lead them. And as they went, multitudes of others joined them, moving southward. Thus began the great migration of the people who, before history began, built the mounds which still are seen throughout the great valley of the Mississippi River. The land which they had occupied and their fields of growing corn fell into the possession of the Red Indians, who owned it when the first white man set foot upon the shores of America.

There will be another Before History story in next week's Children's Page. Everybody should be glad to become acquainted with Nam, the Before History hero of to-day's story.

Alphabet Animals in Patchwork Picture Puzzles.



THE QUERULA

I do not like the QUERULA, I do not see the need
Of any bird's complaining so and manifesting greed.
He cries because the fruit's unripe—then when there's not enough,
And finally because he feels the pains of those who stuff.

To find the animal which is hidden in the patchwork picture puzzle proceed along the same lines as in putting together a mosaic puzzle or a jig saw puzzle, for all these puzzles are of exactly the same kind. The verse at the top of the puzzle tells the story which the picture that is to be made from the thirty pieces illustrates. First cut out the entire mosaic and paste it on heavy wrapping paper before cutting out the separate pieces. This is merely to make it easier to handle the pieces, and it will also make the puzzle last longer. After you have thus reinforced the mosaic cut out the separate pieces. The white parts are to be cut away. In cutting out the parts which make up the picture be very careful to cut just within the black lines or the pieces will not fit nicely.

HOW TO LEARN THE ART OF BALANCING.

EVERY boy and girl who has seen a professional in the many feats of balancing desires to imitate those feats. They appear to be quite easy, but how difficult they really are the experimenters discover when the attempt is made. It is a good thing to learn to balance simple objects, for it trains the eye and the muscles, but we are now considering it for the fun that may be had out of it.

Get a pole six to ten feet in length, hold it with the left hand and place it upright on the palm of the right hand. When you feel that the pole is steady, let go with the left hand, keeping your eye fixed on the top of the pole. If it leans slightly to the right, quickly but gently move the hand in that direction until the pole is steadied; if it leans to the left move the hand in that direction. With a little practice you will be able to balance it on the palm quite steadily.

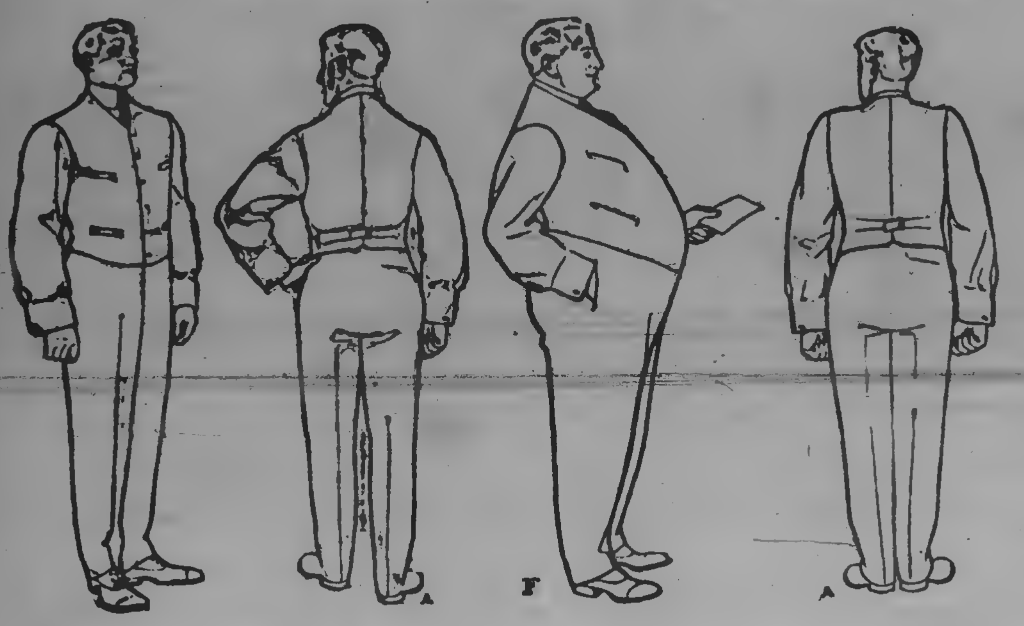
When you have succeeded to your satisfaction with the long pole try a shorter one. This will be more difficult to balance, because when the long pole leans an inch or so it is still almost upright, but a shorter pole, when leaning an inch or so is much more likely to fall. So when you gradually reduce the size of the object until you can balance a lead pencil you will have accomplished the first lesson.

Now, using the long pole again, try balancing it on the fingers, first on one and then on another. Then try it with the left hand until you have mastered each finger, the palm and in some cases the back of the hand.

You are now ready to try balancing on the chin; later on the nose and the forehead. The principle to be remembered is to keep the eye on the top of the object always, and at the first sign of its leaning in any direction to move the base of support in that direction. In other words, the centre of gravity, about which you have all learned at school, must be kept directly under the top of the balanced object.

If several boys practise this balancing together they will find much amusement in it, as they can have contests and games with it—starting out at the same moment, for instance, balancing the poles, the one that keeps his balance longest scoring a point. Balance first on the right palm then on the left; then on the first finger of the right hand, then on the first finger of the left, on the chin, the nose and the forehead and so on, a point being scored for each feat.

Semi-ready Physique Types and real Custom Tailoring



The Plus Mark
+

¶ Semi-ready Tailoring offers you all the advantages of the made-to-measure Clothes plus (+) the fact that you can know just how it will suit you when it is made up. You can't know this in the web of cloth.

Trade Mark and price in the pocket of every Coat

¶ Plus again +. Up to the moment that it is exactly right the Semi-ready tailor can add to and subtract from the garment, and make corrections until he and his customer are both satisfied. He can build up the sunk-in spots, straighten a stoop, accentuate chest, diminish corpulency—for our physique type system is founded on the proportions of anatomy, and he has the secret of the true art in the craftsmanship.

Personal feeling

¶ Semi-ready Suits can be finished in two hours—and the man who has to wear them feels that his suit has been designed and made for him.

¶ When the Suit is sent home it is shaped right, and the right shape stays, for it is wrought into the garment by men tailors who have grown expert.

It's a real guarantee

¶ That is why Semi-ready Garments are not only satisfactory at the outset, but up to the last days the garments are in use. 'Tis why we can put a real guarantee in the pocket of every Suit we make.

¶ And the cost. If the way of to-day saves you $5 to $15, wouldn't you just as soon join the throng who know now.

THE JOYS OF HOUSECLEANING

Do you believe in signs?

If you do, what is it a sign of when you hear noises of a muffled "bang, bang, bang" and on turning round see a cloud of dust enveloping a large piece of carpet which is hanging helplessly on a clothes line.

Should you not know, here is the dreadful answer:

It is a sign that the house cleaning season is just about upon us.

Soon your wife will be tearing up the carpets and your good disposition.

She is going to have a general shake-up of the domicile and set the germs at large.

In her hospitable spirit she does not mind them getting into their cosy corners for the winter but when the bright rays of the spring sun force themselves through the windows casting iridescent lights upon the picture frames and the knick-knacks, and in their course expose to view a thick dust which is ever with us, though we can not see it until the sun shines in, then it is time for the germs and the microbes to go elsewhere.

The first thing the lady does is to send the children to a neighbor's and then transplant the carpets. Each tack is taken up with tender care and by herculean effort the offending carpet is moved to the clothesline.

The wage earner comes home to an apologetic lunch and a tired woman and he can use up the rest of his noon hour in healthful exercise doing scavenger work on the carpet.

There is always a superannuated broom with some service left in the handle that can figure in these feats of endurance.

Also there is usually some washing on the clothesline next door.

But that does not matter. Your folks washing is always out when the neighbors are beating carpets.

Isn't it funny how things seem to level up.

After your noonday effort you leave your carpet to wait until you return after six, when you can renew the beating while your well-earned food is being prepared.

You know in your heart that you could have got one of the unemployed to do the job for half a dollar but your wife is afraid he would be too rough and might knock leaves off the roses in the pattern. Besides, "the exercise is so good for you after being penned up all day."

It is one of these things which it is hard to beat.

There is no sympathy for the carpet. It has been downtrodden for a year and is now being beaten because it was trodden upon. Oh, how like some lives.

But that is not all. When the carpet comes up everything else comes down. The whole house, from the baby's cot to papa's whiskers, has got to be pasteurized. The lady who rules the roost has got her hair tucked away in a discarded teapot cover and the only way you can get out of it all for a week or so is to get sent to jail.

THE $15,000 POWER BY-LAW

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—We wish on behalf of the Special Power Committee of the City Council, to explain to the electors the position in regard to the by-law to authorise the borrowing of $15,000, which is to be voted upon on March 29th. This sum is intended for the purpose of paying for the foundations forebays, wheelpits, tail race and power house for developing electrical power at the eastern end of the proposed new waterworks dam, leaving the matter of providing money for purchasing the machinery for the power house to a future time, but making provision to have everything ready for the installation of the machinery when it is purchased.

The water commissioners having come to the conclusion that it is necessary to build a new concrete dam at the waterworks property asked the Council to submit a by-law to the electors for that purpose, which the Council has done. At the same time the Commissioners informed the Council that when the new dam is completed there will be 1,200 horse-power available there and that of this 500 horse-power will be enough to supply the needs of the waterworks department. This would leave 700 horse-power that would be available for other purposes and the Council is of opinion that it would not be good business to have this quantity of power running to waste, and that steps should be taken towards developing it so that it could be utilized in the interests of the city.

One way in which this power could be used would be to utilise it to supply the street lighting. At present the city pays nearly $9,000 a year for street lighting. This contract will not expire for nearly five years yet, so that the city cannot count upon doing its own lighting sooner than that. But it will not do to wait until the contract expires before taking action towards being ready to do that work when the time comes. It will take two or three years to complete the work of building the new dam, pumping station, power house, etc., so that when that work is completed there will be from two to two and a half years left in which to instal the electrical machinery. That would, no doubt, leave time enough to erect the power house and do the work that it is intended to do under the authority of the by-law which is now submitted to the electors. But when the unwatering is done and the machinery and appliances are on the ground for the purpose of constructing the dam the foundations, forebays, wheelpits, tail race, etc., for the power house can be constructed much more cheaply than if that work is left to be done some time in the future after the work on the dam is completed. The estimate of Mr. W. J. Kennedy, of Montreal, the Water Commissioners' engineer, is that this power-house, etc., work will cost $15,000, the amount stated in the by-law. The amount on that sum will be $637.50 a year, so that if the power-house should be completed two years before it is required it would cost $1,275 for interest for those two years, but it is believed that more than that will be saved on the cost of the work by having the plans made out and the work done at the same time as the dam is being constructed.

While the waterworks department reserved 500 horse-power, the street lighting will take from 200 to 300 horse power, which will leave 400 to 500 horse-power still available. If a market for this power is found, as for instance, by the location of a new factory here, another by-law could be submitted and the electrical machinery could be put in at once, and the whole cost of the two years' interest would not have to be charged against the saving of having the power house, etc., constructed at the same time as the dam.

By going on with the work the city will be ready in ample time to do its own street lighting when the contract expires, it will save money by doing it while the dam is being constructed and may gain a great deal by being in a position to furnish power to some good industry.

These are some of the considerations which have influenced the Committee of the Council to ask the ratepayers to approve of the by-law authorizing the issue of debentures for $15,000, and if they are good business reasons, as we believe they are, we hope the ratepayers will vote for the bylaw.

Yours respectfully,
H. RUSH,
Mayor.
A. A. McINTYRE,
Chairman Power Committee.

Athletics at Oxford and Some Other Things

BY STANLEY FIFE

In view of the introduction of a more or less systematic encouragement of the athletic side of life in Peterboro school, it may not be without interest to look, for a few moments, at the outdoor life of the students in an English university. For, after all, the university is but a school adapted to the needs of men a few years older than those at our schools in Canada.

In England people have long since learned what we are just beginning to learn in Canada, at least in Peterboro and a few other places, that if schoolboys and girls are going to do hard work, they must also do hard play, that good lungs are as essential as good grey matter in the long run. The result is that the athletic life of the students is given a very great deal of attention, and the proportion of a man's time spent in the open air is much larger than one would ordinarily set aside in a Canadian school. Work programmes at Oxford stop at one, and do not begin again till five, at the earliest. It is almost true to say that no one, teacher or student, works indoors during these hours. When lunch is over at one-thirty or soon after, the streets are full of people, old men with beards, spectacles and walking sticks, others in solemn cap and gown escorting aunts, cousins, or other ladies, about the city, the younger ones still arrayed in the "Norfolk and bags" of their undergraduate days, and then the motley undergraduates who are too "slack" to take "ekker," clad in the Norfolk and bags, brogue shoes, several inches of sock which may be anything from pale green to brilliant purple, woolly waistcoats, and hatless of course. These too wield the inevitable cane and the majority belch forth reefs of tobacco smoke from pipes of every description. But these are the few. They are bound for distant scenes, a ten-mile walk is quite the ordinary one for these slack people. On bicycles which race through mud and carts, carriages and pedestrians in every direction, swerving round sharp corners and through narrow alleys, amid the ringing of the bells and ripping of rattles that are so necessary in English towns, Next are the normal undergraduates. These are they who go day after day, for the whole eight weeks of term in sunshine or rain or fog, as the case may be, to row, paddle on the river, play hockey, "rugger," "soccer," lacrosse, tennis, or perhaps to run a cross country, or heats on the varsity track. They are a bare-kneed, bare-headed crowd, but a red-cheeked and healthy crowd. Others have golf clubs or rifles slung over their backs, and go miles into the country to practice their peculiar arts.

The centre of attraction is the river. In a long line stretching down one side of the river from the edge of the town are "The Barges." Each college has a barge, that is, a floating club-house with a sitting-room, a very large fire place, and a dressing room with shower baths, etc. In the former are copies of Punch for generations back, with numerous books on rowing, outside there are a very tall flagpole, a quay to which are tied as many eights, fours and tubs as the time of year and number of men rowing demand, and also a waterman who calls everyone "sir," without the slightest provocation, and poles people across the river in the college punt (for a consideration). On the opposite side of the river is a tow-path, perennially muddy and almost always crowded with Oxford people and visitors walking to Iffley, a village some distance down, and watching boats meanwhile. Starting from the barges crews of all sizes make journeys up and down the river until 4.30, or even later in the afternoon. Each boat is accompanied by one or more coaches and spare men, who race along the tow path in all sorts of costumes. The coaches of the more opulent clubs ride on hacks, others on bicycles, the more athletic ones in shorts, blazer and much "fug" or muffler, run through the mud puddles and shout through megaphones at the laborers in the boats. The fact that there are forty or more crews practising in a little less than a mile of narrow and rather crooked river ensures ample entertainment, or, it may be, a field of study, for either those on the bank, or the lazy eights-man who lolls in a tub under the pretence of teaching the rudiments of the art to a pair of ambitious freshmen. A great deal of pacing goes on among boats of different colleges, particularly among those whose places on the river are not far apart, while breathless coaches exchange times on the tow path, and spare men shout words of wisdom to those whose places they may have faint hopes of winning. Now every boat seeks the bank and all are breathless while "The Varsity" passes along an open river, a boon denied to others, and, pushing off, one hears a strange mixture of admiration and criticism combining with the shouting of coxswains, their admonitions to those in their own boats, and the resonant "Look ahe——ad" to those in others. Rowing is a wonderfully fascinating sport, and even an onlooker feels it so when he sees with what perfect rythm the men move, the wonderful control they have over their bodies, and above all, the way in which these are usually filled out and hardened.

Though this is the most popular sport in Oxford, rugger, soccer, hockey, lacrosse, etc., are deservedly popular, and the fixture lists in these are long ones indeed. About three matches in each of these games are played with other colleges every week, and very often a fourth day is given to a "squash" or practice match, in order to bring out new players. Sometimes the Saturday match is against one of the large schools, or a Cambridge college, or perhaps an outside club team. These games are played somewhat differently from the way they are usually found played in Canada. As they can be played all year there is no series of "practices" every now and then in order to regain form lost during a long rest. Again, as nearly every game is a match English matches are not distinguishable from practices by the greater excitement, or greater effort, which is so often evident at home. Though the playing in a match is often slacker than would be the case in Canada, the average playing is better, because the final score being a matter of little concern to either side, the whole game becomes one of marking one's man well, and keeping it fairly fast in order to get a reasonable amount of exercise. Tackles in rugger are most gentlemanly affairs, and if you happen to fall in anything like an uncomfortable position your opponent will probably apologize profusely. For people to be penalized by suspension from the game is very uncommon, and a very great disgrace. One naturally shrinks from a man who takes his exercise in breaking other people's heads. Perhaps the absence of crowds at matches thirsting for blood and victory is one reason for the lack of brutality on the field. There is no frantic shouting from the lines—there is no grand stand to be the seat of such, and if possibly anyone does shout it is a shout of encouragement. A "well played" or "well tried," and if there are "scouts" or other college servants about one will possibly hear very animated discussions full of "plucky little 'Ertford," "jolly well for little Corpus." Their sympathies are invariably with the weaker side. Another incident of many games, and one which certainly is of great value in keeping them clean, is the playing of dons side by side with undergraduates. Very often the worst man on the team is he who gives sage advice in the lecture room, or ghostly bitts in chapel, but his presence is invaluable inasmuch as a word from him will check any tendency to roughness, and that out of respect for his dignity, no one will use language more lurid than he may fittingly reciprocate. This informal intercourse between teacher and taught on the field, in meetings of all sorts from chapels to dinners, as well as in the classroom or the workroom, is one of the greatest boons which Oxford men enjoy. May the kinder attitude and good understanding that have sprung up in Peterboro alma mater continue to make themselves a source of inspiration to all concerned. The staff in a school should be more than a mechanically contrived store of knowledge and experience. The pupils should be more than so many impassive blank pages. In P.C.I. we can not, under the present dispensation, spend from one p.m. to five p.m. playing rugby or racing round the oval, but we can get several pairs of sides from four to five-thirty, and we can find people to play against the best of us on Saturday afternoons and teach them what people engaged in H_2SO_4 and conjugations for most of the day can do with less finely gauged parts of their bodies during what is left of it. It seems right, too, that those who have the privilege of going to school should bear some collective testimony of the soundness of the school product among those with whom they come in contact outside. It seems too that the footer field or the rink is the obvious place to secure such opportunities, now in the time at school; the fairness and courage shown by schoolboys there, should be the forerunner of coolness and fairness which they must show when they become the leaders of these same-time opponents in the shop and office. If the school team can not make itself respected among the non-school team how are the individuals who comprise it going to gain prestige among hordes who have not been at school, two years later?

This, however, is not Oxford athletics, it sounds rather like a sermon, which, of course, all right-minded readers of the Collegiate Echoes will abominate and justly skip. Those, of course, who have not had keen enough perception to do the skipping act some distance back, must be left to their fate, and, alas, the sermon. When one comes to think again of OXFORD ATHLETICS (the capitals are to catch the eye and reassure the sermon-weary), it happens that the idea of "training" occurs to one. (Perhaps this is called up by the memory of the very stale bread they give one instead of lunch). "Training" at Oxford is a rather scientific business, and much too expensive a one to be indulged in by people at P.C.I. However, it may be interesting to know what it is like, Let us take an example. There is a very famous person among those who study Logic in Oxford. He does not exist, being quite as intangible as most things one hears of in Logic lectures, but he is a very useful person. He is "Bulger of Queens." This translated into pure Ashburnhamish, only means Charley Blake, of Auburn. The noble Bulger rows seven in the Queen's Togger and is in training. Every morning at seven he, along with Tomkins who is training as left three-quarters in the rugger team, race to the lodge half clad, having previously dipped their noses and eyebrows into some very icy water, write their names, or at least make a mark in a book, which proceeding exempts them from keeping morning chapel, and then strike a slow pace for the meadow. The meadow has a walk all round it, and here the men, after doing a furious sprint, run leisurely round, and walk solemnly back to the college to a cold bath and a tremendous breakfast at eight-thirty. During the last few weeks before boat-races, the crews are entertained by their friends, and treated to a huge breakfast each morning, subsisting on dry toast, oat biscuits, etc., at lunch time and tea time, and eating a training dinner in the hall in the evening. They eat fish, meat, rice, fruit and milk. Large quantities of beer are drunk, and on special occasions port-wine. No one is allowed to smoke and this is a real punishment for the English student, and all must be in bed at ten-thirty. This, however, does not need to be enforced, for most men are quite tired enough for bed after two and one-half hours rowing in the afternoon.

Such is training in Oxford. It is a rather elaborate and expensive process, but its results are quite worth their cost. The men are usually in perfect condition for races, and the habits of early rising, and temperance in the matter of tobacco and food stick to people when training is over, with the result that there are not a few temperate and sound-bodied undergraduates, but that almost all are so.

Oxford men are an early rising class. Everyone has to be up in time to keep his chapel or roller, at eight. The majority are up in winter terms at a much earlier hour in order to keep drills of one sort or another. Large numbers of men belong to "The Bug-shooters." This organization is a sort of glorified cadet corps, where men have serious training and serious examinations. The colonial students belong to a corps of their own called the "King's Colonials," and all these, after doing their prescribed number of seven o'clock drills, join the corresponding corps from Cambridge at a two weeks' campaign in the summer vacation. Many men too, in the summer term, almost all the men get up at seven to go swimming before chapel. The result is that nearly every man can swim, and that he keeps in perfect training even among the slackening influences of summer term.

These are some features of student life in Oxford; if they prove interesting to the athletic people in the P.C.I. we shall write again of the intellectual life of the place for the benefit of the same people.

CANADA WILL ASSIST IN DEFENCE OF THE EMPIRE

Premier to Announce Naval Policy.

Dominion Will Co-operate With Great Britain---No Haste it is Said.

Ottawa, March 29.—The Cabinet sat in council nearly all day Saturday, the principal subject under discussion being that of Canada's attitude with respect to Imperial naval defence. A statement of the Government policy in the matter will be made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the Commons to-day in moving a resolution in amendment to Hon. Geo. E. Foster's resolution on the order paper, stating that the time has come when Canada should assume her proper share of the burden of providing for the defence of her exposed coasts and maritime ports.

The Premier's resolution will be along the line of a statement of policy on the Imperial defence question laid down by the Canadian Ministers when the subject was under consideration at the Colonial Conference of 1902 and 1907. The Government believes there is nothing in the present situation that calls for any immediate or hastily considered departure from the policy of past years in respect to Canada's contribution to Imperial defence. There is, as Mr. Asquith has stated, no immediate danger to Britain's naval supremacy. At the same time the Government believes that it is the duty of Canada, as the Dominion advances in population and wealth, to make a more liberal outlay for national and consequently for Imperial defence.

The general principle endorsed by the Government is that Canada's gradually expanding defence scheme should be carried out in co-operation with the Imperial authorities, and on the advice of experienced Imperial officers, with due regard always to the principle of local self-government.

That Canada is prepared to give her last dollar and send her last man to the defence of the Empire in the case of need, and is now working to the end of co-operating along the wisest and most permanent lines in a uniform scheme of Imperial defence, will be the message of loyal support that the Premier will send to Great Britain to-day, through the medium of his speech in Parliament.

HAS SOLVED THE PAPER PROBLEM

Minnesota Professor Says He Has Discovered a New Process.

Minneapolis, Minn., March 29.—A method which Dean George B. Frankforter of the college of chemistry of the University of Minnesota, said yesterday he had discovered, and by which it is claimed that the United States will produce a hundred times as much wood pulp paper as was believed possible, is causing interested discussion here.

It is claimed that the discovery means that every cord of fir timber will yield $10 on bye-products alone, and that most of the 60 per cent. of a tree now wasted will be utilised.

Dr. Frankforter says he superintended for twelve years. He describes the perfected process as placing small pieces of waste wood or sawdust on a steel incline over a furnace and forcing distillation of the waste wood by saturating it with carbon disulphide, or gasoline, thus causing the turpentine and resin to pass off as gases and leaving wood pulp free from pitch and perfectly adapted to the manufacture of paper. The common method of distillation leaves the pulp in the form of charcoal, chemically of little value.

Dr. Frankforter extracted from one cord of Norway pine, worth $7.50, turpentine worth $41 and wood pulp worth $39, a yieled of $80 from $7.50 worth of raw material.

SMALL FIRE, ON SUNDAY MORNING

At the Residence of A. J. McClellan 494 Gilmour Street

A fire which at first it was feared might be attended by serious results, took place at the residence of Mr. A. E. McClellan, 494 Gilmour street, yestarday morning. It was worked to the inside of the dwelling and was due to a defective chimney.

The fire brigade responded to the call in very short order and were able to put the fire out by means of chemicals. The damage will not be very extensive.

NOT SO WELL AS REPORTED

Correspondent of Chicago Paper at Rome Makes This Statement.

Chicago, March 29.—The Marquise de Fontenoy in The Chicago Tribune: That Pius X.'s health is far more seriously impaired than is admitted by the official bulletins issued at Rome is known to the Cabinets and diplomatic Chancelleries of every capital of Europe as well as at Washington, Rio, Buenos Ayres and Santiago. The gravity of his condition led to an extraordinary meeting of the members of the Sacred College, which took place on the evening of March 3 at the residence of Cardinal Rampolla, in the rear of St. Peter's. Sixteen cardinals were present, and, while the proceedings were strictly secret, it is learned that at the conclusion of the conference long cipher despatches were sent over the wires to absent members of the Sacred College in other parts of Italy and abroad.

While it is impossible to speak with any degree of certitude as to the contents of these messages there is every reason to believe that they refer to the imminence of a conclave and to the conviction that the days of kindly old Pius X. are numbered.

Peterborough, Ont.

The Review enquired at the Supreme Court here today to learn that a decision regarding the West Peterborough election protest had been given today. The reply was "It was dismissed with costs."

The judge dismissed the preliminary objections raised by the counsel for Mr. Stratton in the West Peterborough election petition. This means that the trial will be proceeded with at Peterborough.

G. McCLYMONT

SUDDEN CHANGE OF FRONT SEEN IN BALKAN SITUATION

Russia Without Consulting Her Diplomatic Confreres, Britain and France, Has Suddenly Recognized Validity of Austria's Seizure.

New York, March 29.—The Tribune's London cable says: The spectre with the spiked helmet is still seen at every turn in foreign and domestic politics. The discovery of a formula more or less humiliating to Servia by which wanton and unnecessary war may be averted in the Balkans is less important than the sudden intervention of Germany in Russian diplomacy with overmastering effect. The Russian Foreign Minister, instead of consulting France and England, with whom he has been acting for many months on Balkan affairs, has abruptly recognized the validity of the Austrian action annexing Bosnia and Herzegovina.

It is not yet clear whether the change of front is due to the German Emperor's influence over the Czar, or what pressure was brought to bear on St Petersburg, but the processes of Sir Edward Grey's diplomacy were suddenly interrupted, and the triple alliance was reinforced from an opposite coalition. Berlin has become the centre of power in the settlement of the eastern question, the balance of power created by the two coalitions has been overthrown, and Austria-Hungary has been left to act at her own discretion in the Balkans, while Germany regains her supremacy in continental diplomacy. The German Emperor's coup de main may bring about peace, unless Austria-Hungary is bent on crushing Servia, distracted by dynastic scandals and virtually defenceless, but the mailed fist in European diplomacy is not a pleasant apparition before English eyes.

The action of the Reichstag in voting the naval estimates, including a heavy bill for new construction, without a dissenting voice or a single half hour wasted in debate has exerted a sobering effect upon the panicmongers here. They are beginning to understand that they are playing into the hands of the German Emperor and helping to keep Von Buelow in power notwithstanding the talk about the break-up of the combination groups supporting him in the Reichstag.

The construction of Dreadnoughts will probably be hastened in consequence of the fortnight's agitation, but they come high at $9,000,000 each, with $1,250,000 for upkeep and maintenance, and not one having a chance of a longer life than fifteen or twenty years, every new one is better than the last one built.

Crisis Again Passes.

London, March 29.—Peace for the present seems now sufficiently assured in the Balkans to permit closer attention to a greater crisis, of which the Austro-Servian quarrel is but a single feature. It must be recorded that unless the situation changes unexpectedly within the next day or two Austro-Hungary and Germany will have gained a complete victory in the bold game which they began to play last October.

The developments of the last two days are most illuminating and significant. It was suddenly announced that Russia, which was supposed to be the last power to assent, had yielded in advance of England, France and Italy her unqualified recognition of Austria's annexation of the Serb provinces. To-day we know that she surrendered to force majeure in the shape of unmistakable threats by Germany.

These threats took the form of a definite military demonstration. Austria for weeks past, as is well-known, has been concentrating her military forces upon the Servian and Montenegrin frontiers. To do this she practically denuded her garrisons on the Russian frontier. To these places came German officers in mufti and in some of the frontier towns notices were posted to the effect that German soldiers were to be received and treated as if they were Austrian troops.

The German army corps on the eastern frontier were strengthened, and it was definitely arranged that in case of war Germany was to take the initiative in hostilities against Russia.

When all was ready the German ambassador at St. Petersburg urged Russia to recognize Austria's action as to Bosnia and Herzegovina immediately. One account says that the Kaiser wrote to the Czar to this effect. This is very likely true, despite German denials. At all events the desired effect was produced and Russia succumbed to the German pressure.

IS CHARGED WITH SELLING LIQUOR

Hotelkeeper at Norwood is Accused of Breaking the Local Option By-law

Magistrate Edmison will go to Norwood tomorrow to try a case of selling liquor preferred against Terence Smith by Elias Williams, License Inspector for East Peterborough. As Norwood is a local option village the outcome of this case will be awaited with interest. A large number of witnesses will be called to give evidence for the prosecution.

SUIT AGAINST THE WAR SECRETARY

London, March 29.—H. C. [illegible], former lieutenant in the Grenadier Guards, who was removed from the army more than a year ago after his refusal to resign when asked to do so, has thrown a bomb into army ranks by bring suit against War Secretary Haldane and other members of the army council, demanding $375,000 damages. Woods asserts that the council acted unconstitutionally, as an act of Parliament empowers the commander-in-chief alone to deprive an officer of his commission.

SUFFRAGETTES INTERRUPTED

Hundreds Attended Mrs. Humphrey Ward's Gathering of Antis---Speakers Were Hissed.

London, March 29.—Mrs. Humphrey Ward, the novelist, presided at a meeting of anti-suffragists on Saturday night. Lord Cromer spoke, or tried to speak, opposing the granting of the franchise to women.

The moment Lord Cromer began he was interrupted by questions from the women suffragists, hundreds of whom were present, and his lordship was not permitted to utter a single sentence without interruption. Mrs. Ward vainly tried to keep order, but whenever any speaker suggested that woman's place is her home, he or she was roundly hissed.

The list of the names of vice-presidents of the meeting discloses the fact that Mrs. Lewis Harcourt and Lord Curzon oppose woman suffrage.

MRS. MARY FARMER PAYS THE DEATH PENALTY FOR MURDER

Electrocuted in the Electric Chair at Auburn.

Went to Death Without Breaking Down---Crime Was Brutal One.

Auburn, N.Y., March 29.—The current of events last night and the final hours of the life of Mrs. Mary Farmer, who died at sunrise to-day in the electric chair, for the killing of Mrs. Sarah Brennan at Brownville, moved on relentlessly though dramatically after nightfall in Auburn prison.

Brought from the woman's prison to the receiving cell in the condemned row, Mrs. Farmer bade farewell to her husband, and was then lodged in the cell that adjoins the execution chamber to await the call to the chair.

James Farmer, the husband, also under sentence of death for the killing of the Brennan woman, and whose case is now before the Court of Appeals, was taken to another part of the prison that he might not hear the witnesses on their way to the execution.

Mary Farmer was sentenced to death for a shocking and brutal murder. The Farmers, man and wife, on April 23, 1908, enticed Mrs. Sarah Brennan, 55 years old, a neighbor, into their home in Brownsville and killed her. While Mrs. Brennan stood looking out of a window she (Mrs. Farmer) stole up behind her and struck her on the head with an axe. Then Mrs. Farmer and her husband chopped up the body so that it would fit into a small trunk.

The motive for the deed was possession of Mrs. Brennan's property.

Attempts were made to have Governor Hughes commute the death sentence to life imprisonment, but a week ago he announced that capital punishment knows no sex, and refused to interfere.

Facing death at dawn, the wretched woman showed no evidences last night of collapse though the last words between herself and husband, separated in their parting interview by heavy bars and an impenetrable screen, were affecting to the two women attendants and the children of the guard. As the law does not permit it, there was no farewell embrace last night, when the time came for separation. When the steel door of Mrs. Farmer's cell had closed, and James Farmer, weeping, had been led away, the woman fell upon her cot and wept for a few moments and then began to pray. Her attendants did not tell her of the death chair in the next room.

Father J. J. Hickey, pastor of the Holy Family Church, visited Mrs. Farmer yesterday and prayed with her. The priest early this morning administered the last sacrament and offered prayers for the dying before the short march to the execution chamber.

"Mrs. Farmer died a good Catholic," said Father Hickey this morning, "and went to her death bravely."

Special to the Review

Auburn, NY, March 29—Mary Farmer was punished for the murder of Sarah Brennan, by death in the electric chair in Auburn prison at six fifteen o'clock today. Five women and a score of men witnessed the execution. The woman left in the hands of her father confessor, the Rev J. J. Hickey, a statement completely exonerating her husband, Jas D. Farmer, also under sentence of death.

WILL HAVE TO PAY THE FINE

Young Man Who Was Found Guilty of Disorderly Conduct Was Given a Second Hearing

The rehearing of the case where a young man was fined for disorderly conduct on George street, came up before Magistrate Dumble this morning. The fine will have to be paid.

P.C. Adams stated that he noticed the accused with a companion making fun of a young lady near the Y. A.S. rooms. The accused shoved his pal up against the young lady and nearly knocked her off the street.

Both young men were allowed to give evidence, but they proved themselves guilty of the charge, but claimed they did not act as strenuous as P.C. Adams said they had. The accused did not have any more witnesses and the fine will have to be paid.

Shoots Wife and Self.

Boston, March 29.—A tragedy was enacted in the public garden near the entrance of the Boylesten street subway Saturday night, while the early evening suburban crush was at its height. Suffering from nervous trouble, with which he had been afflicted for several years, Lawrence E. Boyle, a well-known newspaper man, shot and killed his wife and then ended his own life by the same means.

Stumbles on Saw; Loses Arm.

Alvinston, March 29.—George Routley, a laborer, living about four miles from here, while helping to saw wood with a circular saw, stumbled and fell on the saw, cutting his arm off over the elbow.

YOUNG MAN OPENED KNIFE AND THREATENED TO STAB

Flourishing an opened pocket knife and threatening to stab a youth with whom he had been fighting, a young man attracted considerable attention at the post-office corner shortly after seven o'clock Saturday night. The two youths had some words about some matter and started to fight. a number of spectators gathered and a somewhat dramatic climax was given to the affair by one of the scrappers pulling out his knife, opening it, and threatening to stab his adversary. He was prevented from accomplishing his purpose by the on-lookers, who parted the two and advised them to "cut out" their disorderly conduct. The police were not called.

THE THIRD WIFE HAS BEEN SIGHTED

St. Catharines, March 29.—Another woman has appeared who claims Walter Blizzard, the young ex-city fireman, charged with bigamy, as her lawfully wedded husband. Saturday morning Blizzard was put on his trial charged with marrying Alice Krick of Smithville, last September, when he had married Mrs. Goff of this city in 1904, and has lived with her ever since. Both marriage certificates are in the crown's hands.

The crown attorney read a letter from a young woman, living in Chicago, in which she stated that she was Blizzard's wife, and that he had married her before he married Mrs. Goff. The prisoner was accordingly remanded to jail until April 15, so that the Chicago woman may be brought here as a witness.

MISTAKE MADE BY MISSIONARIES

Pekin, March 29.—Native resentment over the purchase by American Methodists of property for a mission near the tomb of Confucius is a factor in recent anti-foreign demonstrations in Shantung Province. The seller of the property has been sent to jail. Feeling is intense and the matter has been referred by the legations to the Waiwapu.

Missionaries report that anti-foreign feeling is strong in Chufou, Tongpingchou and Tsaochufu, notorious hotbeds of secret societies. There is no evidence of immediate danger. The foreign diplomatic representatives are confident that the soldiers sent by the governor of Shantung will be able to cope with the situation.

Boys Sentenced.

Brockville, March 29.—Joseph Laroque, Gilbert Russell and James Murray, the three small boys committed for trial and who later pleaded guilty to opening and stealing letters from postoffice boxes, were sentenced to Industrial Schools, each to serve not less than three nor more than five years. Laroque goes to St. Joseph's, Toronto, and Russell and Murray to the Victoria at Mimico.

Turkish Parliament Censors Press.

Constantinople, March 29.—Parliament has decided to ask Hilmi Pasha to expel the editors of the English newspaper, The Levant Herald, and the Greek journals Neologos and Prodos for attacking the Young Turk Committee. It declares that they have no right to criticise the present organization of the country. There is, however, little probability that these expulsions will be consented to by the Government.

Snowslide Kills Boy.

Montreal, March 29.—A sad fatality occurred on Saturday when Earl Efner, a young son of E. Efner, formerly of London, Ont., was killed by ice falling off a roof on St. Catharine street, while the boy was passing along the street.

SOCIALISTS WILL PREVENT WAR

Ottawa, March 29.—At a meeting of Socialists held here on Saturday, the woman's suffrage movement was discussed.

Charles Lestor, an English Socialist, claimed it was really an indication of advanced socialism, and the meeting endorsed the movement unanimously.

Talking of advance of socialism, Mr. Lestor said: "They are talking of war between Japan and the States, and between Germany and England. Let me say there will be no war between the Germans and British. There are now too many Socialists in each of the countries, and they would not allow such a thing as war."

BIGAMY CHARGE AGAINST WOMAN

St. Thomas, March 29.—Mrs. W. C. King was arrested yesterday on a charge of bigamy, preferred by her first husband, Joseph Campbell, and was committed to jail until Monday, when she will receive her preliminary hearing. Her husband is an employe of the Canada Iron Corporation, and the marriage took place March 16. Mrs. King admits that her husband is spouse No. 2 and pleads ignorance of wrong-doing on the ground that a few months ago she got a legal separatin from her husband in Ridgetown. This separation she accepted as a divorce, and she says she thought she was then free to start life over with another man.

West Favors Naval Aid.

Winnipeg, March 29—Throughout the Pacific west Boards of Trade are passing resolutions favoring a contribution by Canada of a Dreadnought or a lump sum to the Imperial navy.

A local paper has asked the mayors of western towns and prominent members of the various Boards of Trade for their opinion as to what action, if any, should be taken by Canada, to contribute to the navy, and the response has been practically unanimous in favor of aid, though opinions are divided as to the precise form.

Chief Asked to Resign.

Kingston, March 29.—At a private meeting of the fire committee, the resignation of Chief Elmer was asked for as part of the scheme of reorganizing the fire department. His resignation has not yet been received. There is opposition to this disposing of the chief and a petition is in circulation against it. Council will be divided on the matter, as it is held the chief has never had the authority he should to conduct the department satisfactorily.

Refuse Wage Reduction.

Reading, Pa., March 29.—The executive board of the Eastern Division of Amalgamated Iron, Steel and Tin Workers' Association on Saturday decided not to accept the reduction of wages as made by Iron Companies of the division. The action will affect nearly 10,000 iron workers, and will become effective with the day shifts to-day.

LTAE TICKS FROM WIRES

Six men have been killed in an Indian uprising in Oklahoma.

Aeroplanes at the aero show in London are selling at from $1,250 to $7,000.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie will probably contribute $75,000 to a public library for Hamilton.

Hamilton police raided a laundry and arrested two wagon loads of Chinamen on a charge of gambling.

President Taft is said to be in favor of free lumber, and to have no hesitancy in expressing his views on the question.

Mrs. James Bear, a London lady, will probably be recommended for a Royal Humane medal for saving Arthur Curtis, a little boy, from drowning in the Thames.

Engineer Hiram Hodgson, Fireman W. J. Perchley and Brakeman Thos. Leech were killed and two others injured in a head-on collision on the C.P.R., near Brandon.

The suffragettes on Saturday found a woman at Croyden, Eng., whose name had been placed on the voters' list by mistake. She refuses to vote in spite of their entreaties.

Treaty Not Satisfactory.

Ottawa, March 29.—The international waterways treaty is still in suspension, all because the Senate of the United States, in the exercise of its constitutional prerogative, saw fit to tinker with the convention as signed by the plenipotentiaries.

Canada could have been willing to assent to the treaty in its original form, but the rider added by the U.S. Senate raises new issues, and on Saturday Hon. A. B. Aylesworth and George C. Gibbons, K.C., left for Washington to look into the matter.

The Dominion Coal Company offer to settle with the Dominion Steel Company for $2,700,000.

THOUSANDS OF LAYMEN ARE EXPECTED AT THE CONGRESS

Which Opens in Toronto on Wednesday and at Which There Will be Many Delegates From Peterborough—Some Famous Speakers.

Toronto, March 27.—From Nova Scotia to British Columbia telegrams have been coming to the headquarters in Toronto from men anxious to secure a seat for the great Laymen's Missionary Congress, which opens in Massey Hall next Wednesday. In many ways this gathering promises to be unique. To it delegates from all parts of Canada will gather, and at it the need of the wide world will be portrayed by men who have lived the life of the people of whom they speak, and who know.

When the convention of the Student Volunteer Movement was held here some seven years ago, there was a great gathering of famous speakers. There is to be an even more noteworthy assembly at this Laymen's Congress.

Sir Andrew Fraser, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, India; J. Campbell White, General Secretary of the Laymen's Movement; Bishop Thoburn, the wetern missionary ot India; Robert E. Speer, the great student worker; Mr. Silas McBee, editor of The Churchman, New York; Rev. Chas. W. Gordon, known all over America as Ralph Connor — these are some of the men who will tell their story.

ONE MAIN PURPOSE.

The work of the Congress has been carefully planned. It has one main purpose—to consider and discuss Canada's relation to the missionary problem of the world, and if possible to take some definite action towards drawing up Canada's National Missionary Policy.

The meetings are not for the benefit of Toronto people alone. It is expected that there will be fully thirty-five hundred delegates in attendance from outside places. This means there will be little room for others than delegates.

Robert E. Speer is known as a great worker among college men. He never misses an opportunity of addressing them, and he will make no exception here. The students of the University of Toronto are to be given a chance to hear him, with J. Campbell White, another great worker among young men, for on Wednesday afternoon a meeting for students and ministers has been arranged in Convocation Hall.

The Congress proper opens Wednesday night, when the first meeting in Massey Hall will be held.

OVERFLOW MEETINGS

There is a project on foot to hold a series of overflow meetings in the Metropolitan church. Enough speakers will be present to make such services almost, if not quite as attractive as those to be held in Massey Hall. On Friday evening Sir Andrew Fraser is to speak. For over thirty-seven years he served the British Crown in India. He knows that land as few Englishmen do. He has seen it in peace and war, in famine and plenty, and has seen and approved the work of the missionary. Sir Andrew is to be the honorary guest of the Congress and will speak on "Co-Operation, the Law of Christ's Kingdom."

The meetings will last until Saturday evening.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS

New Fire-Killer.

New York, March 29.—With dozens of representatives of large corporations, Edward Croker, chief of the fire department, witnessed a demonstration on Saturday of the power of a new flame extinguisher.

The test proved that the extinguisher was of special value in fires having origin in electrical apparatus. In the natural state it is a liquid, but when projected toward a flame the heat thereof transforms the fluid into a vapor which destroyed the oxygen around the flame and thus robs the fire of its source of life.

Stole Money and Trousers.

Columbus, Ohio, March 29.—J. J. Tierney, a coal operator of Elkins, W.Va., who left Cleveland Friday night over the Big Four Railroad, found himself in the embarrassing position of not being able to leave the train at Columbus on Saturday for want of proper clothing and without money enough to purchase a meal. As he slept someone stole his trousers, $85 in money, a gold watch, chain and secret society locket, two railroad mileage books and everything else in the pockets.

Children In Search of Father.

Port Huron, Mich., March 29.—Mary and Archie Hoffman, sister and brother, aged both under 15 years, were detained by the local immigration officers and sent to their home in Brantford, Ont. The girl and boy said they were on their way to Chicago in search of their father, who had deserted them some weeks ago. They had very little money.

New Zealand Satisfied.

London, March 29.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Premier Ward wires that New Zealand is gratified at the acceptance of the offer of a battleship. New Zealand's sole desire being to assist the Empire, she feels that the Imperial Government can best determine what shape and what time a contribution will promote that end.

Countess Issues Cook Book.

London, March 29.—The Dowager Countess of Dudley, who is the mother-in-law of Mrs. John Ward, formerly Miss Jean Reid, appears as a reformer of English cooking.

She publishes a cookery book containing innumerable receipts and good advice about scientific cooking.

WOLVES

There are others besides political wolves in Canada and they are making themselves heard and felt in the settlements. When the settlements were few and far between, wolves did not find food or entertainment enough of that character and confined themselves to the deer. Now however Flans and others who have gone to live on the outskirts of civilization find them both a nuisance and a danger. The CPR. did not organize wolf-hunts solely for advertising purposes by any means although those who oppose ice-castles on the ground of ice opposed the wolf habit as a bad advertisement for Canada. Bounties like other forms of taxation are in the ascendant nowadays and the bounty on wolves is increasing accordingly although the exceeding, almost incredible, cunning of the wolf resists extinction. Here is where he is full brother to the political wolf. Sometimes both species get into it head first however, and have to capitulate ignominously.

MANITOBA SAT ON

"A Mail despatch from Ottawa says that so long as Mr. Laurier is Premier of Canada Manitoba will not be placed on a basis of equality with its sister provinces of Confederation. The Premier, at the postponed conference with the western delegates, Hon. Robert Rogers and Hon. Colin H. Campbell, absolutely refused to consider an extension of the province's boundaries on the same financial terms as Saskatchewan and Alberta, nor would he admit the right of the province to its lands, like Ontario and Quebec to the east."

The first move for Secession, and Annexation in this country will be made in the west, and it will not be far from Winnipeg."—Bobcaygeon Independent.

Under the above heading the independent makes the very reasonable statement that such outrageous and unreasonable tyranny as that shown towards Manitoba by Sir Wilfrid Laurier will meet an angry rebuff. It has been said that there is reason in all things, but that is not so. Sir Wilfrid does not give one reason of any sort, good, bad or indifferent, for waiting a week, only to insult at the end of it, those who came making a reasonable and proper request. Sir Wilfrid's insincerity is apparent. He does not, and will not, help to strengthen Manitoba. A generous or even strictly fair treatment of this earliest province of our great west would have warmed the hearts even of those who have been led in times past to suspect his motives. But now what can be said in his favor? A variety of moves of an urgent character will in all probability now be made upon the national chess-board. Various forms of equivalent will be suggested, if not exacted. The country from Vancouver to Halifax will be thrown into convulsions. The subtlety of the tactful will profit by the unwise tempestuousness of the enraged. National life will be reduced to chaos, and the turbulent ones will be "drawn out" to their own undoing by the discreet followers of a very discreet, if not conning, politician.

THE SAME EVERYWHERE

"To understand these Italian criminals one must know something about the Commorra and the Mafia. The first has its headquarters in Naples and started out originally as a political gang to supply votes to politicians. It evenually got more and more power until it secured control of the government of Naples, living on blackmail extorted from boatmen, cabmen, porters, prostitutes, gamblinghouses, public contracts, etc. The Boston Traveller.

With the exception of one or two of the lowest of these departments we have organisations in Canada dealing in the same wares.

What were the conspiracies revealed by the Cassels report and various other forms of investigation in Canada in recent years, but Mafia and Commorras. Every conspiracy to rob the public by contracts without tender and patronage lists for the benefit of the obedient and faithful is a Mafia or a Comorra. Combines are as the Toronto Star points out of the same character. So far we have not reached the extreme limits of the Sicilian bandits, of New York tenement smashers or of the Kentucky nightriders but we are doing well. We are getting there fast. This country of ours is being devoted as a sacrifice to the money-grabbers. There is not one whit of difference between these forms of corruption referred to. They involve everywhere the same contempt for decency and justice both of which are characterised as old-fashioned fads or ancient delusions of the age of chivalry. Chivalry! What's chivalry to the human crocodile! All the same, the next great fight in the industrial and social world will be against the grabbers or grafters, the modern bandit chiefs, whose chief attribute is cunning and who appreciate the good and the beautiful at its money value and not otherwise.

MAKE A CHANGE

A New Back for an Old One—How it is Done in Peterborough

The back aches at times with a dull feeling making you worry and restless, sharp pains shoot across the region of the kidneys, it is agony to bend, stoop or lift. The rubbing of liniments or applications of plasters does no good in these cases, they do not reach the cause. To get rid of these symptoms and exchange the bad back for a new and stronger one follow the example of this Peterborough citizen.

Mrs John Barclay, 583 Geroge St. Peterborough, says:

"My back was weak and tender and a dull, grinding pain had settled in the small of it. I could not stoop to lift anything and could scarcely turn in bed. Rheumatism had settled in my hands and shoulders. I was in constant suffering and could find no relief. The urine plainly told the disordered, inactive state of the kidneys as it was thick and highly colored and contained a quantity of brick dust sediment. Booth's Kidney Pills were advertised at the Market Drug Store, and I tried them. I found more relief in one box of Booth's Kidney Pills than in all else put together. My back strengthened and the pains left it. Rheumatism disappeared and has not since returned. The urine cleared. I am strong and well and feel like a new person."

How Titles Rise.

Titles have their value. "Here, boy!" said the drummer as he handed a dollar bill to the bellboy at the hotel in Atlanta. "Take a dime out of this for bringing up that ice water."

"Yes, cap'n," answered the boy as he saluted.

"And, by the way, boy," continued the drummer, "if you will go down and get me some more letter paper you may keep a quarter out of that dollar."

"Right away, majah, right away! I'll shuah bring you that ah stashnery," replied the boy as he bowed low.

"And while I think of it, boy," remarked the knight of the grip, "if you can bring out my trousers and have them pressed and back here inside of an hour you can keep a half dollar of that dollar."

"Ah suttinly can do dat ah same, colonel—'deed Ah kin!" quickly replied the youth as he turned to go toward the door.

"Wait a minute now, boy." Mr. Samples said as he walked over to his trunk, "if you can take out this suit and have it pressed and back here in time for me to go to the Bijou tonight I'll let you keep every cent of that dollar."

"General," said the boy, his eyes bulging out of their sockets, "I'll do dat shuah, general, or give you all that money back." — Philadelphia North American.

USED BLOOD FOR INK.

Lady Constance Lytton Springs Latest Suffragette Sensation.

New York, March 27.—The American has the following London cable: There was a storm of hisses and shouts of execration against the Government last night, when Lady Constance Lytton, daughter of the Earl of Lytton, with flushed cheeks and quivering voice, addressed a large company of ladies and gentlemen at a dinner of welcome to her and her twenty-five sister martyrs in the suffragist cause on their release from Holloway Prison Thursday.

Sitting beside Lady Constance was Daisy Solomon, daughter of Saul Solomon, late crown minister to Cape Colony, and other prominent women who have been playing the roles of prison martyrs.

Lady Constance told a thrilling story of how she overcame the rigid and almost barbaric prison regulations enforced against her and her sister suffragettes, and managed to make notes in writing—notes for use in her speech on liberation.

"They would not let me write," said Lady Constance. "But despite these harsh and inhuman prison rules invoked against me, they could not prevent me from using ink, for nature had provided me with a sealed bottle of scarlet writing fluid.

"Here its is," she said, displaying the letter, "It is written in my own blood!"

The audience applauded frantically and wound up by hissing the Government for five minutes or more.

On Feb. 25 Lady Constance Lytton was sentenced to one month's imprisonment for disorderly conduct, the charge growing out of the part she took in the attempt to see Premier Asquith and present to him a "votes for women" petition.

Flag Incident at Boston.

Boston, Mass., March 27.—Through the error of a workman engaged to decorate the Parker House exterior in honor of the Canadian Club, which met there last night, a stormy scene occurred on the street in front of the house yesterday. In place of the national colors there appeared alone the British flag. A crowd gathered about, the clerks in the hotel were besieged with questions, and the telephone was kept busy by people who wanted to know what it meant.

Finally Manager Pierce of the hotel ordered a porter to send an American flag to the peak of the staff, with the English flag and club pennant following.

Shoots Himself Three Times.

Quebec, March 27.—A young man attempted suicide on Pacific street, near the Hotel Dieu Hospital, yesterday morning by discharging three shots from a 32-calibre revolver, inflicting three wounds in the vicinity of the heart. The following note was found in his pocket: "I, Otto Lindstrom, shall commit suicide. I am 21 years old, birthday on the 17th of March. Shall not give you any more information regarding my past life. I am tired of life on this earth."

He arrived Thursday night from Boston, via Montreal.

Transfers of Governors.

London, March 27.—The following changes in the British colonial service have been announced:

Sir Wm. MacGregor, governor of Newfoundland, has been made governor of Queensland; Sir Ralph Chayneys Williams, governor of the Windward Islands, succeeds to the governorship of Newfoundland, and Sir James Hayes Sadler, governor and commander-in-chief of the East African protectorate, becomes governor of the Windward Islands.

Transmuted Into Carbons.

London, March 27.—Sir William Ramsey announces that he has succeeded in transmuting four different substances into carbon, namely, zirconium, thorium, hydro-fluorsilicic acid and bismuth. Experiments with silver nitrate, with the object of transforming silver in the same manner as copper is transformed into lithium, gave negative results.

Narrow Escape.

Essex, March 27.—About 1 o'clock yesterday morning fire was discovered in the residence of S. F. Wigle at the south end of the town. A son quickly aroused the family, and not a moment too soon, as the escape of the father and mother was then cut off and both were slightly burned in getting out.

Conductor Found Guilty.

Stratford, March 27.—Peter Fountain, G.T.R. freight conductor of Sarnia, pleaded guilty at the Police Court yesterday to two charges of forgery, that of the name of Trainmaster C. G. Bowker, at Stratford, and that of Supt. E. E. Gillen at Toronto. He was remanded for sentence.

King Congratulates Shackleton.

London, March 27.—King Edward has joined in the congratulations which are being showered on Lieut. Ernest H. Shackleton since the news reached England of his achievement in almost reaching the South Pole. In a telegram of congratulations the King accedes to Lieut. Shackleton's request for permission to name a new range of mountains he discovered in the far south after Queen Alexandra.

The explorer's father, who is living in London, also was inundated with telegrams and letters of congratulations.

Auto Liability Settled.

New York, March 27.—The somewhat novel legal question as to whether owners of automobiles are liable for injuries received by their guests while speeding was raised in a suit for $25,000 damages brought against Dr. Julian P. Thomas, the aeronaut, and decided in his favor. The suit was brought by Miss Francis Haas, who was riding with Dr. Thomas when his machine was wrecked against a telegraph pole two years ago. She lost a leg.

Ontario Boy Fatally Shot.

Buffalo, N.Y., March 27.—Clement Evans, 12-year-old son of C. Evans, school teacher at Baysing Stoke, Ont., was shot here last night by a playmate. The bullet pierced the left lung. They were playing hold-up in one of the best streets. Two of the boys were armed. Evans will die.

Shouldn't Punish Children.

Brockville, March 29.—In the Police Court Saturday morning Bismark Green, the Glen Elb resident, charged with ill-treating Samuel Lawrence, a 12-year-old Barnardo boy, changed his plea to guilty. The magistrate imposed a fine of $10 and costs, the latter amounting to $72.80, all of which was paid. The magistrate said that punishment of the children could not be tolerated and there was little excuse for Green doing what he had done, but he would comply with the wishes of the Barnardo officials and make the fine one-tenth of what he could under the statute impose.

Heroic Woman Saves Life.

London, March 29.—"I have three little children and I just thought how his mother would feel," said Mrs. James Bear, of 44 Walnut street, an heroic little English woman, who rescued Arthur Curtis from drowning in the swollen Thames, at the risk of her own life, by rushing into the water, while an unknown man stood on the bank and a dozen women, rooted to the bridge, set up a lusty chorus of screams.

Quiet In Bituminous Fields.

Altoona, Pa., March 29.—Twenty-eight operators in the Central Pennsylvania bituminous field, it was announced at the United Mine Workers' convention, on Saturday, have signed the wage scale for the ensuing year. This leaves, it is said, a few independent operators who will sign and the Berwind-White Co., which always pays the scale.

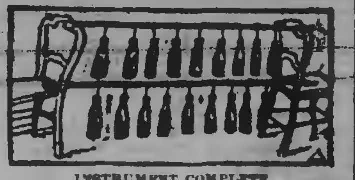
MUSICAL BOTTLES.

Odd Instrument on Which Tunes May Be Played.

An odd and not unmelodious musical instrument may be constructed of ordinary glass bottles partly filled with water. The accompanying cut shows the arrangement. It consists simply of two broom handles resting on the back of two chairs, from which the bottles are suspended by means of strings tied to the neck.

Of course it takes a good ear for music to "tune" the bottles, which is done by putting more or less water in each. It is said that all the tones and their octaves, including the sharps and flats, may be thus reproduced.



INSTRUMENT COMPLETE.

The instrument is played by means of two sticks—drumsticks are best—with which the bottles are struck. Two parts of an air may easily be played, and there may be two performers, one playing on each side.

A similar arrangement may be made with glass tumblers, as is well known, but this bottle device is more unique and striking. The notes are soft and melodious and pleasant to listen to.—Chicago News.

NAME OF THE MONTH.

A Jolly Game That Is Sure to Induce Much Laughter.

Line up, every boy and girl of you, on one side of the room, and each take the name of a month in order, from January to December.

If there are not twelve of you, then take the months' names as far as they will go, and when your leader stands up in front of you and points her finger at a child and says, "Happy New Year, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10!" the boy or girl must answer, "March, march, march!" (if that is her name) before the "ten" is said.

It is like "bird, beast or fish"—isn't it?—only different for this reason, you must not laugh. That is where the fun comes in, because you know you will laugh when you try hard not to, just as sure as you live!

Try it and see, and, remember, if you smile or forget to say the name of your month three times you must face the line and point your finger at some other month and make her laugh.

About the Clove.

Children, how many of you know where the clove comes from? It is the flower bud of an evergreen tree. When the flowers are in full bloom they are a brilliant red. The little ball at the top of the clove is formed of the curled up petals. At first the buds are a pale green; then they become red. As soon as they become this color they are ready for picking and drying. The trees from which cloves are obtained are natives of the Moluccas, or Spice Islands. The trade in cloves once formed the basis of great fortunes in more than one nation. About the close of the eighteenth century the clove tree was transplanted in other countries than the Spice Islands, and now a great part of the commerce in cloves is carried on in Zanzibar. The word clove comes from the French word clou, which means a nail. Doubtless the round, hard head caused its name, as it somewhat resembles a small nail.

THE LOCAL OPTION MOVEMENT IN THE CITY

The Matter Appearing in This Department is Furnished by the Peterborough Temperance and Moral Reform League Which Has Arranged for its Publication.

THINKING PEOPLE AND LOCAL OPTION

"All the people in Peterborough, who think seriously for five minutes a day on the question of local option," said Mr R. J. Sladen, the chairman of the temperance meeting held Sunday afternoon in the Crystal, "will vote with us for local option." We talk a great deal about prodigal sons. There are more prodigals kept away from home through drink than any other cause. In most cases the prodigality started when their first glass was served to them under the License system. Some people claim that we have no right to do away with the license system. Don't you believe it. The mistake we made was when we tried to license the evil. You can not make a wrong right, by letting people pay to do it. They say that if we do away with the open bar we will have something worse. I, for one, am willing to take my chances.—Applause.

"If we do not put a stop to the liquor business now, it is going to take some of our best boys and our girls or big chunks out of their lives. As Peterborough knows only too well many of its brightest boys and girls have gone to ruin through this cause. It is time that the thinking people of the city put an end to this evil."

HAS VOTED FOR PROHIBITION

"While I have not been closely identified with this temperance movement," said Mr Frank Mason, "my ballot has always been cast for prohibition. Few people realize how old is this curse of liquor. Noah disgraced himself through his love for liquor. All through the Old Testament, we see records of the curse that follows the use of liquor. In Egypt there is a tomb five thousand years old, showing drunken men being carried home by their slaves. Chinese history at the same time, records similar scenes.

"Two thousand years before Christ the Chinese passed a law like what has been aimed at in the anti-treating system. Then they tried public control of the traffic. This also failed. Total prohibition was next attempted. They cut off the heads of men found selling liquor. This was a success. Measures which fall short of total prohibition are sure to fail because they still permit the existence of the evil in the community. In 1000 so we are informed, hardly a drunken man was seen in the course of a year in one of the largest cities in China.

All laws that have been tried in England and other countries, that allowed drinking at all, failed to accomplish the beneficial effects aimed at. In Canada we have been fighting the liquor traffic for years. The Scott Act was good but we could not put it into effect because the Government would not help us to enforce it. The local option law is more effective. We can have this law in Peterborough if we will work for it.

The public recently has been greatly aroused by the reports of a child that was kidnapped in the United States. Parents have hugged their children at the thought that a similar fate might happen to them. Yet, each year tens of thousands of boys and girls are carried off by the liquor traffic and people take it as a matter of course. Christians must stiffen up their backs and deal with this question effectively. Let us not be fearful, instead we must be strong and courageous." Mr Mason described the beneficial effects that have followed the adoption of local option in Kansas City, a city of a hundred thousand population. He likened the liquor traffic to a wolf and called for united effort in driving it out of the country.

Rev. Mr Potter called attention to the character of the people who support the liquor traffic and compared it with the character of the people who are working for temperance. He thought it was ridiculous to spend large sums of money for eductional purposes and then to spend much larger sums for liquor. A duet was rendered by Mrs and Miss Hinchcliffe.

Students Clash.

Sackville, N.B., March 27.—Mount Allison University students got into a bad mix-up with the police here last night.

While celebrating their victory in a debate with the University of New Brunswick, they pulled the fire alarm, rang church bells and lit bonfires in the streets.

The whole police department turned out, and after some injuries had been received, the students dispersed.

Coal Prices Unchanged.

New York, March 27.—There was no reduction in the price of coal here yesterday, the meeting of the Coal Merchants' Association, which had been called to declare the usual spring reduction being postponed, as the expected notification of a reduction in the wholesale price by the operators was not received.

Allowed Wife to Starve.

Holyoke, Mass., March 27.—Martin Gatelys, a one-legged 70-year-old civil war veteran, who, with more than $3,000 scattered about his house, allowed his wife to die from starvation and neglect, according to the medical examiner, was brought into the Police Court here yesterday on a charge of manslaughter.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

JANE CABLE upon entering the cab offered no resistance when Graydon drew her head over against his shoulder. His strong right hand clasped her listless fingers, and the warmth of his heart came bounding into her veins as if by magic. He did not speak to her, but she knew that he was claiming her then for all time. She knew that nothing could stand in the way of his purpose. The sobs grew less despairing, her understanding of things less vague and uncertain. A few moments before she had felt that she was no kin to the world; now there was a new appreciation of love and its greatness in her soul.

This man had loved her, and he would take her up and shield her against the hate of the world. There had not been a moment when her own love for him wavered. She worshiped him now as she had in the beginning. The revelation of Droom, the theatric scenes in the cafe, the crushing of the small hope she had cherished, all conspired in this secure moment to waken her into a realization of what an overbalancing power love is.

Unconsciously her fingers tightened upon his, and her body drew closer. She was arraying herself against the fear that she might lose this haven of rest and joy, after all—the haven she had been willing to scourge and destroy in the bitterness of her heart. A great wave of pity for herself came sweeping over her. It grew out of the dread that he might, after all, deny her the place that no one else in the world could give.

Graydon's cold face was suddenly illumined. The incomprehensible sweetness of pain rushed through his blood. He had given up his hope as blighted after the harsh hour with Droom. He could not believe his new found success. Doubt, unbelief, enveloped him as he raised her head, a kiss crying for its kind. His arm crept behind her shoulders. She did not offer a repulse. Her wet cheek touched his in submission. It was the first time his hungry arms had held her in centuries, it seemed to him—and to her. It was the first time their lips had met, except in dreams, since that horrid night so long ago.

"Jane, Jane!" he was whispering in her ear. Her plans, her purposes, her sacrifices, were running away from her in riotous disorder. She could not hold them in check. They fled like weaklings before the older and stronger hopes and desires.

They did not know of the blockade of cabs at the corner of Forty-second street nor how long they stood there. Shouting cabmen and police officers tried to rival the white blizzard in profuseness, but they did not hear them.

"Oh, Graydon, I cannot, I must not!" she was crying, holding his hand with almost frenzied disdain for the words so plaintively loyal. "It is out of the question, dearest. You know it is. I love you—oh, how I love you! But I—I must not be your wife. I—I"—

"I've had enough of this, Jane," he said so firmly that she stiffened perceptibly in his arms. "It's all confounded rot. Excuse me, but it is. I know you think you're right, but you're not. Old Elias gave the best advice in the world. You know what it was. We've just got to make our own happiness. Nobody else will do it for us, and it's just as easy to be happy as it is to be the other way. I'm tired of pleading. I've waited as long as I intend to. We're going to be married tomorrow."

"Graydon!"

"Don't refuse! It's no use, dearest. We've lost a year or two. I don't intend to lose another day. What do I care about your father and mother? What did they care about you? You owe all the rest of your life to yourself and to me. Come, will you consent willingly or"— He paused. She was very still in his arms for a long time.

"I do so want to be happy," she said at last, reflectively. "No, no! Don't say anything yet. I am only wondering how it will be after we've been married for a few years. When I'm growing old and plain and you begin to tire of me, as most men grow weary of their wives—what then? Ah, Graydon, I—I have thought about all that too. You'll never reproach me openly—you couldn't do that, I know. But you may secretly nourish the scorn which"—

"Jane," he said, dropping the tone of confident authority and speaking very tenderly, "you forget that my father is a convict. You forget that he has done things which will forever keep me a beggar at your feet. I am asking you to forget and overlook much more than you could ever ask of me. Old Elias, wretch that he is, has pointed out our ways for us. They run together in spite of what may conspire to divide them. Jane, I love my soul, but I love you ten thousand times better than my soul."

"I did not believe I could ever be so happy again," she murmured, putting her hands to his face.

"Tomorrow, dear?"

"Yes."

Graydon, rejoicing in his final victory, hurried to his rooms later in the evening. As he was about to enter the elevator he noticed a gray suited boy in brass buttons, who stood near by, an inquiring look in his face.

"This is Mr. Bansemer," observed the laconic youth who ran the single elevator in the apartment building.

"Something for me?" demanded Graydon, turning to the boy in gray.

"Special delivery letter, sir. Sign here."

Graydon took the thick envelope from the boy's hand. With a start, he recognized his father's handwriting. Curiously he turned the letter over in his fingers as he ascended in the car, wonder growing in his brain. He did not wait to remove his overcoat on entering his rooms, but strode to the light and nervously tore open the envelope. Dread, hope, anxiety, conspired to make his fingers tremble. There were many closely written pages. How well he remembered his father's writing!

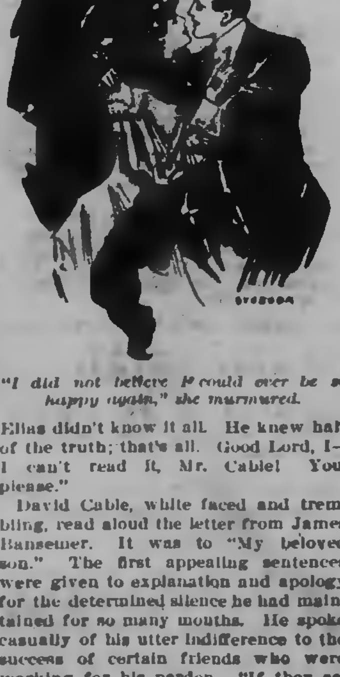
As he read his eyes grew wide with wonder and unbelief. They raced through the pages, wonder giving way to joy and exultation as he neared the end of the astounding message from the faraway prisoner.

A shout forced to his lips. He hugged the letter to his heart. Tears came into his eyes, and a sob broke in his throat.

"Thank God!" he cried, throwing himself into a chair to eagerly read and reread the contents of the letter. Suddenly he sprang to his feet and dashed across the room to the telephone.

"She will die of joy!" he half sobbed in the transports of exhilaration. Five minutes later he was on his way to her hotel, clutching the priceless letter in his bare fingers deep down in his overcoat pocket. He had shouted over the phone that the good news would not keep till morning, and she was waiting up for him with Mr. and Mrs. Cable, consumed by curiosity.

"This letter," he gasped as he entered the room—"from father! He's written, Jane, everything. I knew he would Elias didn't know it all. He knew half of the truth; that's all. Good Lord, I—I can't read it, Mr. Cable! You, please."



"I did not believe I could ever be so happy again," she murmured.

David Cable, white faced and trembling, read aloud the letter from James Bansemer. It was to "My beloved son." The first appealing sentences were given to explanation and apology for the determined silence he had maintained for so many months. He spoke casually of his utter indifference to the success of certain friends who were working for his pardon. "If they secure my release," he wrote, "I shall find happiness if you clasp my hand but once before I leave America forever." Farther on he said: "I will not accept parole. It is a poor premium on virtue, and, as you know, my stock of that commodity has been miserably low."

"I may be required to serve my full term," read David Cable. "In that case we should not see one another for years, my son. You have much to forgive, and I have much more to forget. We can best see our ways to the end if we seek them apart. The dark places won't seem so black. * * * My sole purpose in writing this letter to you, my son, is to give back to you as much happiness as I can possibly extract from this pile of misery. I am not pleading for anything; I am simply surrendering to the good impulses that are once more coming into their own after all these years of subjection. * * * I am not apologizing to the Cables. I am doing this for your sake and for the girl who has wronged no one and to whom I have acted with a baseness which amazes me as I reflect upon it inside these narrow walls.

"You will recall that I would have permitted you to marry her—I mean, in the beginning. Perhaps it was spite which interposed later on. At least be charitable enough to call it that. Clegg has been here to see me. He says you are bound to make Jane Cable your wife. I knew you would. For a long time I have held out, unreasonably, I admit, against having her as my daughter. I could not endure the thought of giving you up altogether. Don't you comprehend my thought? I cannot bring myself to look again into her eyes after what she saw in this accursed prison. * * * She was born in wedlock. * * * The story is not a long one. Elias Droom knows the names of her father and mother, but I am confident that he does not know all of the circumstances. For once I was too shrewd for him. The story of my dealings in connection with Jane Cable is a shameful one, and I cannot hope for pardon, either from you or from her."

Here he related as concisely as possible the incidents attending Mrs. Cable's first visit to his office and the subsequent adoption of the babe.

"I knew that there were wealth and power behind the mystery. There was a profitable scandal in the background. Unknown to Mrs. Cable, I began investigations of my own. She had made little or no effort to discover the parents of the child. She could have had no purpose in doing so, I'll admit. * * * [Here he gave in detail the progress of his investigations at the Foundlings' home, at the health office, at certain unsavory hospitals and in other channels of possibility.] * * * At last I found the doctor and then the nurse. After that it was easy to unearth the records of a child's birth and of a mother's death, all in New York city. * * * Droom can tell you the names of Jane's parents, substantiating the names I have just given to you. He did not know that they had been married nearly two years prior to the birth of the child. It was a clandestine marriage. * * * I went straight to the father of the foundling. He was then but little more than twenty-one years of age, a wild, ruthless, overbearing, heartless scoundrel, who had more money but a much smaller conscience than I. * * * Today he is a great and, I believe, respected gentleman, for he comes of good stock. * * * I had him trembling on his knees before me. He told me the truth. Egad, my son, I am rather proud of that hour with him.

"It seems that this young scion of a wealthy house had lost his insecure heart to the daughter of a real aristocrat. I say real because her father was a pure Knickerbocker of the old school. He was naturally as poor as poverty itself. With his beautiful daughter he was living in lower New York, barely subsisting, I may say, on the meager income that found its way to him through the upstairs lodgers in the old home. Here lived Jane's mother, cherishing the traditions of her blood, while her father, sick and feeble, brooded over the days when he was a king in Babylon. The handsome, wayward lover came into her life when she was nineteen. They were married secretly in the city of Boston.

"The young husband imposed silence until after he had atttained his majority. There was a vast fortune at stake. In plain words, his father had forbidden the marriage. He had selected another one to be the wife of his son. * * * Jane was born in the second year of their wedded life. It was of course important that the fact should be kept secret. I am inclosing a slip of paper containing the names of the minister, the doctor and the nurse who afterward attended her, together with the record of death. It is more convenient to handle than this bulky letter, which I trust you will destroy. You will also find the name of the hospital in which Jane was born and where her mother died ten days later. I may say in this connection that not one of the persons mentioned knew the true name of the young mother, nor were they sure of the fact that she was a wife. Her gravestone in the old cemetery bears the name of the maiden, not the wife. Her father never knew the truth. * * *

"What I did in the premises need not be told. That is a part of my past. I learned how the cowardly young father, glad to be out of the affair so easily, hired the nurse to leave the baby on the doorstep. Then I went to the banker whose son he was. I had absolute proof of the marriage. He paid me well to keep the true story from reaching the public. The son was whisked abroad, and he afterward married the girl of his father's choice. I do not believe that he has ever given a thought to the whereabouts or welfare of his child. It was her heritage of caste!

"If Jane cares to claim her rights as this man's lawful daughter, proof is ample and undeniable. I fancy, however, she will find greater joy as the daughter of David Cable. Her own father has less of a heart than yours, for, after all, my son, I love you because you are mine. Love me if you can. I have nothing else left that I care for. Remember that I am always your loving father,

"JAMES BANSEMER."

The End

The Root of the Trouble.

Crabshaw was too crippled with the rheumatism to leave the house, so his wife went to the doctor's to get something for him.

"So your husband would rather have a medicine to take internally for his rheumatism," remarked the doctor. "Why does he object to the liniment?"

"He doesn't," replied Mrs. Crabshaw, with a weary sigh. "You see, doctor, I object to it, because I have to do the rubbing."—Harper's Weekly.

All the Same.

"What is the size of your large men's handkerchiefs?" asks the shopper.

"They are just the same size as the small men's handkerchiefs, madam," explains the affable sales person. "The size of the man doesn't make any difference in his handkerchief."—Judge.

The Gentle Art.

"I'm going to have one of these artificial figures made to have my new gowns fitted over," states the first lovely damsel.

"Going to?" smiles the second. "I thought you had one made every time you got a new gown."—Chicago Post.

Big Timber Deal.

Vancouver, B.C., March 27.—W. R. Welch and B. T. Tyons of New York, who recently, through R. J. King and W. G. Belmer of Seattle, bought the limits of the Jordan River Timber Co., a New York corporation located on the southwestern shore of Vancouver Island, Strait of Juan de Fuca, have in turn just sold their holdings to a new Michigan corporation, styled the Michigan Pacific Lumber Co. of Grand Rapids, Mich. It is the intention of the new owners to erect large sawmills with a standard gauge railway for facilitating the getting out of logs also figuring in the proposition. The transaction is a very large one.

Montreal's Big Cocking Main.

Montreal, March 27.—It is expected that warrants will be issued for some prominent local men and two well-known Peterboro men, for participating in a cock fight, the biggest held here for years.

Tickets were $5 apiece, protection from arrest guaranteed, and conveyance to the battle ground provided. Fifty to sixty thousand dollars was bet. About two hundred birds were brought along, and the sport lasted for about seven hours.

Won't Carry Him to Venezuela.

Bordeaux, March 27.—"If I am a criminal, why haven't my accusers the courage to allow me to return to Venezuela and defend myself," exclaimed Cipriano Castro yesterday afternoon when an agent of the French steamship company officially informed him that he must leave the steamer Guadeloupe, on which he sailed yesterday, before that vessel reaches Venezuela.

Import Russian Moujiks.

Vancouver, B.C., March 27.—R. M. S. Monteagle, which arrived from the Orient yesterday, brought 60 Russian moujiks from Siberia, who have been imported expressly to work on the Grand Trunk Pacific construction from Prince Rupert east. They came by steerage and showed lack of all rules of good living by their eating, sleeping and general deportment.

THE DEDICATION OF ST. JAMES' CHURCH

New Methodist Place of Worship Formally Opened Yesterday—Rev. Dr. McCullough Presided at Dedication—Impressive Sermons by Rev. J. P. Wilson.

St James church was formally opened yesterday morning, and this is another evidence of the furtherance of the Christian religion in Peterborough, and the encouraging growth of Methodism in this city. The handsome and substantial edifice was crowded to capacity at both morning and evening services, when Rev. J. P. Wilson, of Lindsay, and formerly of the George street Methodist church, Peterborough, preached two eloquent and practical sermons.

At the opening ceremony Rev. H. M. Manning, the pastor; Rev. R. McCullough, of Omemee, president of the Bay of Quinte Conference, and Rev. J. P. Wilson, of Lindsay, conducted the service. The congregation was attentively looked after by the officers of the church, while the choir added its share to the beauty of the occasion.

In his sermon in the morning Mr. Wilson spoke of God's conference with Moses in reference to the erection of the first tabernacle.

MORNING SERMON.

As a preface to his remarks he expressed his pleasure at being present as the erection of St. James church had always been of more than a passing interest to him. He was delighted with the building and with the progress of Methodism in Peterborough. He congratulated St. James congregation and those who had been instrumental in bringing about the completion of this "House of God"

It was to be a house in which God could come and dwell with his people. The speaker told the story of the first church and how funds were gathered to pay for the building. Even at that early date the church treasury was established and its existence was endorsed by God. There is to-day the same necessity of a treasury, and it must be kept supplied, but all contributions must be free and from the heart to meet with recognition from God.

During the morning Mr. Manning, of Toronto, rendered a beautiful tenor solo, and during the offertory the choir sang an appropriate anthem.

CHURCH DEDICATED.

At the close of the morning sermon the Trustee Board gathered in front of the pulpit, and Mr. D. W. Dumble, on behalf of the board, presented the church to the congregation in which the work of God might be carried out.

Then, with the congregation standing Rev. Mr. McCullough read the dedicatory ceremony.

In the afternoon a public meeting was held at which addresses were delivered and special music was furnished by an orchestra and the choir.

Mr. Wilson at the evening service gave a masterly sermon.

11th chapter St. Mark. 22nd verse: "And Jesus answered and saith unto them, have faith in God."

The command of our Lord there was absolute. We must have faith in God without limitation not only in the matter of our own personal salvation but in other matters in life as well. It was not simply a matter of belief for almost every man believed in God. Faith implied something deeper than mere belief as the speaker showed by several well drawn illustrations. He compared the lack of belief in the existence of God and a belief in God—the former an absurdity and the latter a mystery.

But a man may believe in Holy Scripture from Genesis to Revelation and yet go on living the same careless way he always has.

We find that we are taught to believe in God by nature, all about us. The world to-day rests its faith in the God of nature, and there are not two Gods the God of nature and the God of grace.

Abraham, Moses and Paul had faith. They were stern men with hearts of oak. Faith doesn't rest in the marrow and the bones but in the heart.

Jesus had made faith the basis of His religion. This lifts it right out of the realm of philosophy. It was not proof but intuition that made us believe in Jesus Christ.

We all had to contend against the world. "Be not conformed to world." The preacher did not know of any portion of the Scripture upon which there should be more emphasis. The world did not mean this planet and its forces but the world we had to overcome was the one in which money, pleasures, and all those things of life were pressed in upon us, and the man was strong indeed that could resist the temptations of them.

This is a world of adversity and this adversity was overcome by faith. Faith came and the world of unfailing duty was opened up to the troubled soul.

"Do you deem that a man is a fanatic who by his faith can see a world of hope beyond?" asked the preacher. He said it was taking a very wrong view to do so. There was a land of rest God had prepared. The view of Heaven was bright to those who died in the faith. Men were made all the stronger to overcome the world because they had faith in that which was unseen.

And what was even better than a vision of the other life, was the presence of God right down here in the midst of the battle of life.

Faith was the condition whereby the divine power of God was communicated to the heart. The Creator of the world was not a greater fact than the conversion of a human soul. By faith came down from God a power that made every man a victor—a conqueror. Jesus says to us: "My grace will be sufficient for you" and it will be a message of joy for us.

Did Jesus have power to put the tempter under His feet? We could have the same power to the tempter under our feet. Have faith in God for this was the victory that overcometh the world.

VISITING NEWSPAPERMEN HAD ENJOYABLE DAY IN THE CITY

Were Pleased With the Reception Extended Them—Civic Representatives Welcomed the Guests at the Luncheon—Presentations on Return Journey

Peterborough was at home to the Canadian Press Association on Saturday. The visitors were given a cordial welcome to the city and carried away with them the most pleasant memories of the day spent in the Electric City.

The special train of three fine coaches and baggage car used for the first time generously placed at the service of the editors by the Canadian Pacific Railway, left the Union Station at 8 o'clock arriving at their destination at 2.25. Among the passengers were many ladies whose presence added an interest to the day's entertainment. The weather, which was not promising in the early part of the day, did not prevent a large number of wives and daughters from accompanying the gentlemen, who are collectively called "the press."

Upon arrival the special was run over the switch of the Canadian General Electric Co. and the visitors lost no time in visiting this extensive plant. The superintendent of the company, Mr. E. G. Patterson, and his staff conducted the sightseers. The company gave souvenirs of small scarf pins, made of tiny incandescent lights that only needed a current to make them glow.

The next industry visited was that of the Canadian Cordage Co., where the manufacture of rope in all its branches was observed. A handsome souvenir in the form of a small rope guage, was presented to each visitor. On their way up town the pressemn were shown the fire brigade, who made a fine showing.

The party was divided into three sections, and went for dinner to as many hotels. The local committee had ordered sumptuos dinners for their guests. At the Oriental Hotel, when the repast was ended, Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P., told how happy the citizens of his city were to have the editors visit them. They had the honor in the past of entertaining Governor-Generals, Lieutenant-Governors, Princes, Premiers and others of like distinction, but never before had the city ever entertained such an important company. Thanks were extended to the hosts by the retiring president of the association, Mr. David Williams, of Collingwood.

At the Hotel National a similar function was held. Mayor Rush extended greetings, and a very cordial welcome on behalf of the citizens. Mr. L. S. Channell, of Sherbrooke, Que., the new president, replied. Mr. J. H. Burnham also extended greetings, and was replied to by Mr. A. A. Bradwin, of Galt. The exchange of compliments and the play of good wit took place simultaneously at the Snowdon House. Ald. J. J. Turner, jr., occupied the seat of honor, and threw the doors of the city open to the pressmen. Mr. W. R. Givens, of Kingston, replied on behalf of the daily, and Mr. M. A. James, of Bowmanville, for the weekly section. Rev. Dr. E. A. Langfeldt, of St. Luke's Anglican church, also spoke.

After luncheon they next visited the modern establishment of the Quaker Oats Co. The various products and the method of preparation were inspected. In the office several charming young ladies served cereal and cream. The gentlemen also received cigars.

A handsome booklet containing information concerning the Quaker Oats Company was also presented to each of the visitors.

After seeing the Quaker Oats Company's plant the lift lock was visited and attracted keenest interest.

BLACKLIST MAN ALLOWED TO GO

Another Case Where the Name of the Giver of the Liquor Could Not be Ascertaind

Another case of a black last man being found under the influence of liquor was heard at the Police Court this morning. Mr. G. W. Hatton, who appeared for the defendant, asked that the Magistrate deal leniently with the accused, as he had not been drinking very much lately and would give his word that he would not be in court again.

Chief Roszel wanted to know where the defendant got the liquor, but could not get any satisfactory answers. The Magistrate allowed the accused to go, but gave him to understand that he would not get off so easily were he to appear again on the same charge.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR ASSOCIATION

All local tennis organizations and those interested in tennis are requested to attend the meeting at the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday night for the purpose of forming a Peterborough Tennis Association. The scheme to form the Association was originated by Mr. W. H. Cluxton and is most timely.

Judging from the interest being shown at this early date there will be no difficulty in forming a general organization with a large membership of clubs. The Golf Club, the Y.M.C.A., and St. John's A.Y.P.A., and the Nicholls Oval Tennis Club, will be represented, and other clubs may also join.

If enough clubs are entered there is a possibility of a junior and a senior or an intermediate and senior series being formed.

The class met as usual yesterday, and in the matter of attendance every record has been broken. One hundred and two were present and were addressed by Rev. J. G. Potter, on temperance. Mr. Potter gave a splendid lecture and the class want him to come often.

Last Tuesday the Inthons had their pictures taken at W. G. Lendrums. One hundred and two were present. The proofs were on hand yesterday and look pretty good.—Com.

St. John's Church Notes

Meetings of the men of St. John's congregation were held after the services yesterday to arrange to send delegates to the Missionary Congress be be held in Toronto April 1st to April 4th.

The St. John's church financial year ends March 31st.

Being Passion Sunday the choir rendered the following music:—"The Royal Banners" to the ancient plain song setting in the morning; and Stainer's "From the Throne of His Cross" at evensong.

Twenty-five dollars is being sent by St. John's Sunday school to the Chingwauk Mission School.

The choir is practising faithfully at Stainer's "Crucifixion" to be given in Holy Week.

The Red Cross Association has applied to the Senate for incorporation.

CANNOT BELONG TO THE MILITIA

Policeman Barred From Wearing the King's Uniform

According to militia orders no policeman may hereafter join the active militia.

They are exempt from military service, and, therefore, cannot be counted upon in the event of the necessity arising in calling out troops. It is therefore not considered advisable that they should be carried upon the rolls of the active militia. This ruling will not be retroactive.

ENTERTAINED THREE FORMER MEMBERS

Three former members, Messrs. M. J. Hutchinson, G. B. Van Blaricom and B. T. Huston were entertained to a banquet by the Peterborough Press Club on Saturday night at Jacobi's restaurant. Messrs. Hutchinson, Van Blaricom and Huston now hold responsible positions with the McLean Publishing Co., of Toronto.

GUIDES MUST HAVE LICENSES

Cost Will be Two Dollars Per Year---Cabinet Makes New Regulation

Hereafter all guides for hunting and fishing parties must provide themselves with a license at an annual cost of $2 a year. Without this they are debarred from their usual occupation, nor will the license be granted except upon the recommendation of the inspector or game warden.

This regulation passed by the Cabinet is followed by another looking to the prevention of fires starting up after hunting parties have left the woods.

The new regulation reads thus:—Each registered guide will be held responsible for the extinguishing of any fires that may have been kindled by the party employing him as guide upon leaving same, and he will be required to report any violations of the game and fishery laws that he may be cognizant of to the Game and Fisheries Superintendent within one month after such offence has been committed, giving name and address of offender and such other particulars as will lead to the conviction of the party or parties committing the offence.

"Guides neglecting or refusing to comply with these regulations will be subject to the penalties as laid down in sub-section 1 of section 62 of the Game and Fisheries Act, together with the cancellation of their license which shall not be re-issued for a period of two years from the date of application for such license."

The Market Tolls

Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Regarding the market tolls, I am and always have been of the opinion that the tolls should be collected by one employed by the council to do so. It was decided this year to advertise for tenders instead of selling as heretofore by auction. At a meeting of the property committee the tenders were opened. I think there were six of them, the highest being that of Mr. R. Bradburn. One of the members of the committee remarked that he had been informed that Mr. Ball had been offered a better position than market clerk, so I remarked to the chairman that the highest tender should be accepted and the committee made that recommendation to the council. When it was moved that Mr. Ball be retained the council voted six for and six in favor of accepting the tender, and carrying out my own conviction I gave the casting vote in favor of keeping on Mr. Ball. Other years when the tolls have been sold, the purchaser having paid a high figure for them, he was obliged to exact the last cent, and I have learned on good authority that there has been perfect harmony with the farmers all last year, which is better than a little larger revenue. I might say neither Mr. Ball nor any one else has spoken to me regarding retaining him to collect the tolls, and what I would like to see is a free market, and I think our merchants and citizens would profit there from.

Yours truly,
R. RUSH.

DENTAL LAVATORIES IN SLEEPING CARS

Some of the western railroads have been calling attention to dental lavatories which have recently been introduced in sleeping cars of their lines. As a matter of fact, the Pullman Company have decided to provide in all the present sleeping cars when they are next put through the shops dental lavatories, which will doubtless be much appreciated by their patrons. Already some of the Pullman sleeping cars operated over the Grand Trunk Railway System are provided with this new and special sanitary feature.

YOUNG ITALIAN REMANDED AGAIN

Will be Examined This Week as to His Mental Condition

The young Italian named Fucci, who was charged with stealing from the G.T.R. freight sheds and was remanded last week to allow an examination to be made as to his mental condition, came up before the Magistrate this morning.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the Italian. As there had been no examination made he was remanded again for one week, and the Magistrate intimated that he would see that the case would be attended to this week. Some evidence was heard as to his actions which showed that the young man was not of very sound mind.

Bright Specialties

Special features between the acts of "The Triumph of Truth" at the Opera House to-night.

Opium Must Go.

Washington, March 29.—After April 1 next neither opium nor any mixture or compound containing opium in any form can be legally brought into the United States or any of its outlying possessions except for strictly medicinal purposes.

Killed on Track.

Fort William, March 29.—The fearfully mangled remains of Nillo Randa, aged 30, a Finlander, were found scattered on the C.P.R. tracks, near elevator D, he having apparently been hit and dragged two hundred feet.

Fatal Trolley Collision.

Pittsburg, March 29.—Three persons were killed, two probably fatally hurt and fifteen other sustained injuries that necessitated their removal to their homes in a head-on collision between two electric cars.

Preparing to Reduce Pullman Rates.

Denver, Col., March 29. Local officers of the Pullman Car Co. say they have been notified that the company is preparing to make a general reduction in rates, which will give the long-desired differential between upper and lower berths.

The preparation of the next tariff will occupy some time and the reduced rates will probably not go into effect before June 1.

Boy Shoots His Comrade.

Joggins Mines, N.S., March 29.—A shooting accident took place here yesterday afternoon, resulting in the death of James Holmes, aged 15.

Holmes, accompanied by a boy named Logue, aged 14, had started for the woods with a small rifle on a shooting expedition. The Logue boy was carrying the rifle and was under the impression it was unloaded. He aimed at a tree and pulled the trigger just as Holmes, who was a few steps ahead of him, stepped in front. The bullet entered his head.

Earle Again In Trouble.

Middletown, N.Y., March 29.—Ferdinand Pinney Earle, artist, poet and foremost exponent of the "affinity" idea, was Saturday served with papers in an action brought by Mrs. Earle, formerly Julia Kuttner of New York City, for annulment of their marriage.

Mrs. Earle alleges that Earle is of unsound mind and was so at the time of their marriage, although she did not become convinced of this until about Jan. 12 of this year.

Shoots Boy and Self.

Pittsburg, March 29.—After firing two bullets at his wife, pointing a revolver at his mother-in-law, when she attempted to help her daughter, and trying vainly to get his little daughter out of a neighbor's house that he might kill her, Harry Smith, aged 31 years, a motorman, living at Corapolis, sent a bullet through the brain of his 6-year-old son Richard, killing the boy instantly, and then shot himself through the head. Cause, liquor and jealousy.

Coal Co.'s Ultimatum.

Montreal, March 29.—The Dominion Coal Co. sent what might be called an ultimatum to J. H. Plummer, president of the Dominion Iron & Steel Co., on Saturday evening.

Mr. Plummer claims the sum of $443,443 on account of loss sustained by the company in the way of failure to secure contracts because of the non-delivery of coal. The company insist that this claim is mainly unwarranted, and demand a specific statement.

Little Girl's Sudden Death.

London, March 29.—Death came most suddenly and unexpectedly early Saturday morning to Kathleen, the youngest daughter of Mrs. Mary and the late Fireman Harry Seccombe. Although apparently in the best of health, she awoke with a cry of alarm at 5 a.m., and fell back dead, due to a clot of blood on the brain.

The Evening Bulletin made its first appearance at Prince Rupert Saturday.

PERSONAL

Mr. E. S. Clarry spent Sunday in Millbrook.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hughes of Youngstown, O., are in the city on a visit.

Mrs. G. W. Hall, Simcoe street, left on Friday for Flint, Michigan, on account of her son's illness.

A Fine Tenor

Charlotte street choir has secured the services of Mr. Lee, a tenor of much ability, who recently arrived here from England.

Yesterday Mr. Lee sang "If with all your hearts," from Elijah, and made a decidedly favorable impression.

BIRTH

REID.—At St. Joseph's Hospital on Sunday, March 28th, to Mr. and Mrs. James A. Reid, of 207 Smith street, a daughter. Mother and child well.

Truant officers ordered a little girl selling flowers on Kingston streets back to school.

THE NAPANEE BEAVER TELLS ABOUT THE WRESTLING MATCH

The Napanee Beaver says; — The heavyweight wrestlers were next introduced. Gene Hurtubise, of Peterborough, made his appearance first, and was introduced to the audience. He is an athletic built fellow, standing six feet three inches, and weighs about 200 pounds. J. T. Hawkey, his opponent was also introduced. He also is a well developed muscular athlete but was somewhat smaller both in height and weight. His height is about five feet ten inches and his weight about one hundred and sixty-five pounds. When time was called they went to work as though they meant business. Hurtubise secured a back hold on Hawkey and lifting him off his feet rushed him over against the ropes at the front of the stage. They worked around on to the mat again where both went down and in the mix-up Hawkey managed to get the hammerlock hold on Hurtubise, but after some time Hurtubise broke the hold and got to his feet. Quicker than it takes to tell it, Hurtubise had Hawkey around the waist and rushed him off the mat into some chairs at the back of the stage. The referee separated them, and Hawkey complained that the reason Hurtubise had broken his hammer-lock hold was that he had bitten him on the thumb and held that member up for inspection. Hurtubise claimed that the wound was accidental, having been done by Hawkey putting his thumb in his mouth. Hawkey's claim was allowed and the referee's decision was the first fall to Hawkey. Hurtubise refused to continue the contest and Hawkey was given the decision.

J. T. Hawkey informed us on Tuesday morning that he was willing to wrestle Hurtubise in Peterborough, or any other place for a side bet of anything from $100 to $500.

WON THE GAME BY ONLY ONE POINT

Tigers Beat the Arabs in Saturday Nighht League Game at the Y.M.C.A.

The Tigers beat the Arabs in a league game Saturday night at the Y.M.C.A. The score was 32—22, and the play was close and fast all the way through. The jungle denizens led at half time, 12—10. With a half minute to play the score was a tie. A foul was called on the Arabs, with the result that the Tigers secured another point and won the match. A unique feature of the game was the fact that both teams scored the same number of baskets ten. The Tigers secured three points on fouls and the Arabs two. S. W. Collings was referee and gave satisfaction.

The teams were;—

Arabs.		Tigers.
	Defence
R. Dobbin		Loomis
B. Laing		M. Dobbin
	Centre
J. Laing		Sutherland
	Forwards
G. Evans		Staunton
Armstrong		Walks

Next Saturday night the Arabs will meet the Maple Leafs.

WRESTLING

The Ottawa Journal in referring to the wrestling match between Hassan Abdallah and Yankee Rogers says. The result was not entirely unexpected for as both men are under the same management the defeat of either would have embarrassed their manager.

BOWLING

SHEDULE FOR WEEK.

The following is the schedule at the P.B.C. alleys for the week;—

Monday—B.A.C. vs. Greys (postponed.) B.A.C. vs. Lockworks.

Wednesday—Pacifics vs. Bankers; Iroquois vs. Bankers.

Thursday—Hams. vs. Examiner B.; Hams vs. Iroquois.

Friday—Belmonts vs. Examiner A. Belmonts vs. Examiner B.

BASEBALL

Pitcher "Button" Briggs has signed with Utica.

Chatham will welcome the Toronto team on Monday morning.

Joe Kelley wants to get to Chatham quickly to "boil" out.

Vandy was first on the job, and claim sto be in good shape.

Frank Jude, the Indian formerly with Toledo, Cincinnati and Columbus, has signed with Lincoln, Neb.

Some fan wants to organize a Toronto Rooters' Club. The last one Toronto had lasted exactly one day.

Bill Cristall, the Toronto southpaw, who used to pitch for Cleveland and late with Toledo, has signed with Portsmouth, Va.

The Crawford-Cobb-Rossman combination of the Detroit Tigers is doing some terrific batting in the south.

Ike Owens, the Toronto catcher, has made good with the Chicago White Sox, and will be one of the regular backstops.

According to Acting President Heydler of the National League, the eight clubs in that organization use 7,200 baseballs every year. This number includes those used in the early exhibition games.

Trainer Jimmy Olcott went to Chatham to-day when two big boxes, laden with the training uniforms, and an assortment of baseball bats of all sizes, lengths, weights and woods, wer eshipped to the training camp.

There is a new story regarding a player holding out for salary. The player was asked by the manager how much money he wanted, and was told $300 a month and his cakes. The manager replied, "Report Labor Day." The season ended on that date.

Ashbury Park is not to be a training ground for the Montreal Royals, after all. Instead of going down where old Father Nep whispers, Jimmy Casey is to take his squad to New Britain, Conn., for their working out. The sad sea waves will be much sadder now.

Neal Ball of the New York Americans has that dry humor, and it is good. While at Gray, Arthur Irwin umpired and made a decision that he was a little bit slow in giving, and did not shout so as Ball could hear it. Neil shouted; "Is that a secret, Arthur?"

SPORTING TALK

The spit-ball has vanished, the Salome Twist is now on its way, but now comes the "Bill Taft Curve." It's the latest import from the Mobile camp of the Cleveland Naps, and Doc Payne is said to be responsible for it. According to its godfather, it's of the round-house variety, only a little rounder—hence, the name "Bill Taft." Irwin Gough, the Saginaw, Mich., twirler, is the lad who serves it up down there.

Sporting Editor Star:

1. Did Connie Murphy, who is slated for Edmonton, this year, play for Bronte last season?

2. Did he run under the name of Jack McNulty for the St. Mary's Athletic Club in the Ward Marathon?

Answer—Write to St. Mary's Athletic Club.

The members of the Toronto Eastern League Baseball Club left yesterday for Chatham where they will go into training in preparation for the coming season.

The weather of the last couple of days has put a damper on the enthusiasm of those who have the baseball fever, and who have been longing for a chance to try their arm. But cheer up, lots of time yet.

With the removal of Harry Burridge, Corney Burns, Connie Murphy, Dave Lawson and Jerry Edmonds from town where will we get our stars from this year? Why not try Lindsay?

Lindsay is talking of putting a team in the Midland League, if an amateur league is formed. One thing sure, if there is a Midland League, it will be an amateur league. Every team in the semi-professional league last year lost money, and it is hardly likely that the same ones prefer to dig down into their jeans this year to finance a losing proposition.—Cobourg Star.

The proposal to start a town baseball league on a new basis, has been cordially received among fans in town. It is thought adviseable that teams be limited to a certain section or clique in which they are to secure their players. For instance, if a dry goods team were entered all players on that team would have to be directly connected with the dry goods business in Lindsay.—Lindsay Warder.

LACROSSE.

Lindsay will have no lacrosse team this year. Many of the members of last year's club have left town, and besides the game does not seem to take in Lindsay. The boys entered a team last year with Peterborough, Belleville and Port Hope but it proved a failure.—Lindsay Post.

To the Sporting Editor of the Review.

Sir.—Suppose a bet was made on the O'Brien-Ketchel fight to the effect that Ketchel knocks out O'Brien, would the wager be won or lost?

BETTOR.

BANQUET FOR PETERBOROUGH INTERMEDIATES

A banquet is being arranged for the Peterborough intermediate hockey team and will be held in the near future. It is thought that it would not be fitting to fail to show some appreciation of the good showing the boys made in their bid for the district. They have the distinction of being the only team in the intermediate series to defeat the champion Lindsay Midgets.

At the banquet the question of forming an Athletic Association to govern all branches of local amateur sport will be discussed. That such a body should be formed is most desirable, and the occasion of the banquet will be a splendid one to hear the different views on the subject.

PARK ST. TEAM TO BE BANQUETTED

Will be the Guests of the Athletic Club To-morrow Night

An enjoyable time is being looked for tomorrow night at eight o'clock, when the hockey team, which represented Park street Baptist church in the Senior Church League, will be banquetted by the Athletic Club of the church. The banquet will be held in the Sunday school and promises to be a very successful affair. Mayor Rush has been invited and had kindly consented to be present as has also Rev. J. G. Potter, of St. Andrew's church, and Rev. H. J. Keith, of Knox church. Representatives of the different hockey teams who were in the league, will also attend.

FORGERY CASE NEXT FRIDAY

Young Man From Near Warsaw Came in Saturday and Gave Himself up to Authorities

A young man in the vicinity of Warsaw, who is charged with forging, came in on Saturday and gave himself up to the local county authorities. The case appears to be more of a misunderstanding than that of crime.

The case was enlarged until Friday morning, April 2nd, to be heard before Magistrate Edmison, and a number of witnesses will be asked to be present.

Mr. F. D. Kerr is acting in the interests of the defendant. County Crown Attorney Wood will conduct the case in the interests of the crown.

A POLITE BURGLAR.

His Genial Interview With One of His Paris Victims.

Nine years ago the house of M. Descaves in Paris was "burgled." The other day he received a "most urgent" message from the police informing him that the burglar had just been discovered. He went to the magistrate's office and was there introduced to his burglar. The first thing that struck him was that Palm—that being the burglar's name—had a marvelous memory. He has burgled innumerable houses since 1890, and he remembers all about the burglaries. In fact, he remembered more about the burglary at M. Descaves' house than M. Descaves remembers himself. The conversation between burglar and burgled was perfectly courteous. "Of course," said M. Descaves, "I should not think of animadverting upon your having made use of my wardrobe, for the garments which you left behind in exchange for mine certainly did require replacing." "Exactly," answered Palm. "As a matter of fact, I rather think that of the two of us I came off worse. Just consider your trousers, for instance."

M. Descaves looked hurt. Palm explained by a gesture the difference in girth between the novelist and himself. M. Descaves apologized for the width of his trousers, and the burglar gave him a bit of advice. "When you go away never shut your shutters. By doing so you give burglars the tip. On the contrary, leave them open and leave your mat in front of the door. This will delude my friends into thinking that there is still somebody in the house."

On leaving M. Descaves shook hands with his burglar, but felt delicacy about saying "Au revoir," as Palm has already sentences of a dozen years' hard labor to undergo. "No, don't say au revoir, because if we do ever meet again I am afraid that the pleasure will be for me only," said Palm, who finally showed his breeding by insisting that M. Descaves should pass out of the door before him. It is not often one meets with such polite burglars or that burglars have the luck to victimise humorists who take their misfortunes so pleasantly.—Boston Transcript.

Fresh Air Tablets.

The room was very stuffy, but no one would consent to an open window.

"Then I must squander a fresh air tablet," said the rosy lady.

And she took a brown tablet from her purse and dissolved it in a glass of water. Bubbling, it cleared the air wonderfully. It made the stale air pure and bracing. And no wonder, for it released a great quantity of oxygen.

"I brought these tablets from France," said the lady. "They are the invention of an acetylene specialist. They are a combination of chemicals that in water give off oxygen in abundance. The tablets are in winter very popular in France, where one is considered equal to a window wide open for an hour."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Declining Japanese Industry.

The forging of scimiter blades in Japan was once a flourishing industry, and the workers formed a close and powerful corporation. But the industry has declined for years, and now only two makers are left, Messrs. Soukyama and Myamoto. No young Japanese has come forward to offer himself as an apprentice, and the question was referred to the mikado with a view of perpetuating the industry.

The mikado has come to the rescue and has founded two scholarships of £100 to induce two lads to offer themselves for initiation into the art and mystery of making scimiter blades.—London Globe.

When Cold Breathe Deeply.

A simple way to get warm after exposure to cold is to take a long breath with the mouth firmly shut. Repeat this several times until you begin to feel the heat returning. It requires a very short time to do this. The long breath, according to the Family Doctor, quickens the pulse and thus causes the blood to circulate faster. The blood flows into all parts of the veins and arteries and gives out a great deal of heat. It is stated that this method of deep breathing prevents colds and a great many other ailments if begun in time.

Pure Iron at Last.

Chemically pure iron has never been obtained until very recently. It has been found almost impossible to remove the last traces of impurities, especially of sulphur. But a German chemist, Dr. H. Kreusler, has finally by a long series of ingenious processes, partly chemical and partly electrical, succeeded in isolating the pure metal, the properties of which he reports to differ greatly from those of the impure iron that we know. Iron prepared by Kreusler's process resembles platinum.—New York Herald.

The Ever Mobilized.

CONFESSIONS OF A TRAINED NURSE

(Copyright, 1908, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.)

"IN every science and every art, in every business and every trade, mistakes are made; they are a part of all men. But physicians practise their science and their art on life. With that material a mistake is irreparable. You, who are now a student, keen over your work and one of the best men of your year at the hospital, what will you do when that disaster happens? * * * This fear of doing harm, which is called the strain of practice, does not pass with the passing of youth; it is acknowledged by a famous surgeon in a letter written when he was fifty-six.

"'What happy hours they were,' he says, of a holiday just over, 'in their contrast of carelessness (carefreeness) with the care of mind with which, here, one goes from one responsibility to another, and always with the thought that, while meaning to do good, one may, from carelessness or inadvertence, do harm.'"

I quote the above extract from a recent book whose author is a physician because it is a fitting preamble to what I am about to say. The strain of practice is as great in the nursing profession as in the medical one, and mistakes are as likely to occur, though, thank God, in both professions rarely enough to make them stand out with startling vividness.

And it is because "mistakes are a part of all men" that I dare confess the one that I made during my hospital course. It nearly put an end to my career, and is carved in intaglio on my memory so deeply that its impression can never be entirely effaced. I have kept it to myself for years, and the telling of it is not easy even now. But I unfurl the fiery scroll in the hope that it may serve as a danger signal, a warning against blind self-confidence. There may be others than I that need the admonition. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." For I was very sure of myself. And then came my abasement, and in that dark hour I learned, in all humility, the lesson of tolerance for the faults of others.

Judge Not, That Ye Be Not Judged.

And you, before you condemn mine, stop and think. In the training school of life has no act of yours ever threatened another's safety, even though, mercifully, its consequences were not fatal? I know of a woman whose baby had a convulsion. She was an intelligent woman, she loved her child, but in trying to relieve it she made a mistake. She knew that a hot bath would relax the jerking muscles. And she filled the tub with scalding water, which caused the death of her first born. In your heart have you blame for her because she did not test the temperature of the water with a thermometer?

Another mother, confusing the physician's orders, gave her little daughter two pills every hour instead of one every two hours, and as the drug was a powerful one only prompt treatment saved the child's life. The papers are full of instances of involuntary suicides, caused by medicines taken by mistake, and then those tragic shooting accidents, when one huntsman, aiming at game, kills his friend! And the almost daily automobile disasters! Is your discretion so infallible that you can sit in judgment?

A Task That Tries the Nerves.

I had been in training for more than a year when I was promoted to the position of senior nurse in the men's medical ward, a post of great responsibility, requiring a clear brain as well as a steady hand, for the senior has charge of the medication for the whole ward, and as many of the drugs are put up in solutions of varying strength, each dose must be mathematically calculated, according to the number of grains contained in an ounce.

It is to the credit of my hospital that no nurse is allowed to measure out the medicines until she has been at least six months in the school and has successfully passed the difficult examination in materia medica. I was so well equipped for my new duties that I felt no misgivings about them. I prided myself on my thoroughness, even though it might bring upon me the fate predicted for me by a grouchy old man, who, objecting to the care with which I made his bed, grumbled, "Ah, you're too particular. You'll die an old maid! You'll die an old maid!"

The attending physician was a man of progressive ideas. Experiments are the pabulum of all science, and he made several in therapeutics which aroused the wonder and admiration of us all and which added zest to my labors while increasing them. The medication list in a large ward is a lengthy one at the best, and on an average of every two hours the senior has to interrupt whatever else she may be doing to put up and hand around the drugs then due; but there were weeks at a time, during my period of service, when, because of the experimenting, I had no sooner washed up one trayful of medicine glasses than it was time for me to prepare another.

The Doctors' Hazardous Test.

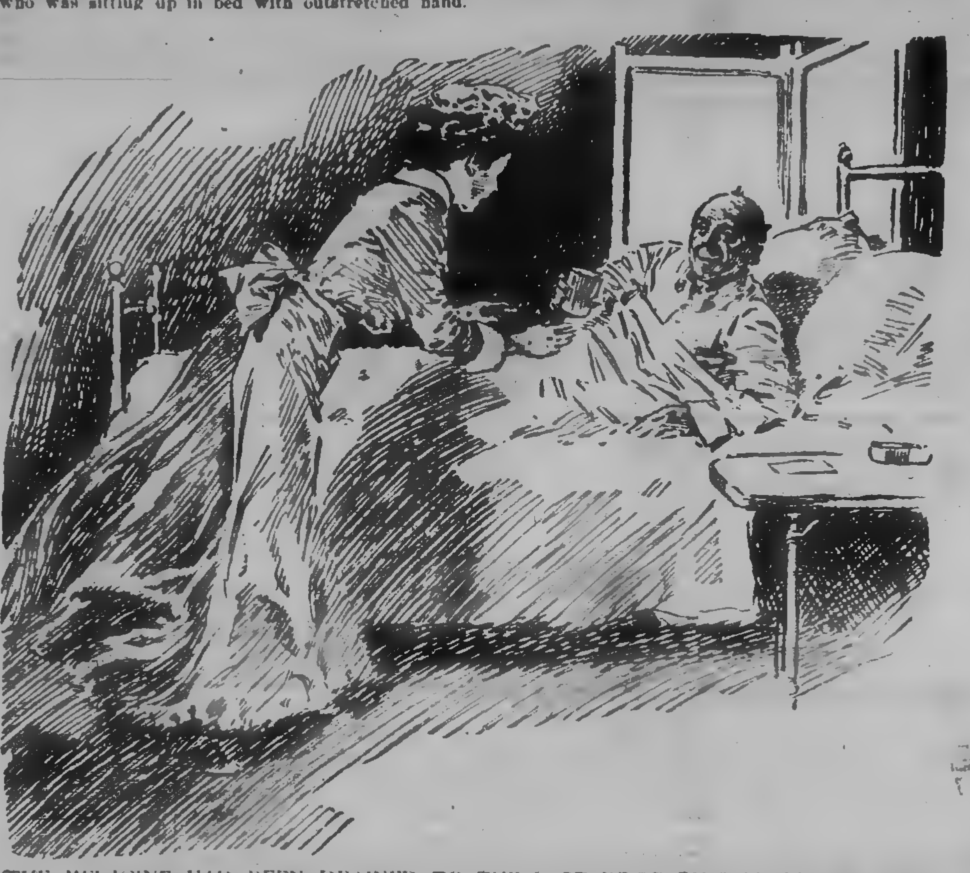
It was a nitro-glycerine test that I have cause for remembering with painful exactness. The attending physician declared his intention of pushing this drug in the treatment of two men, both suffering from Bright's disease, until the tension which marked the pulses of both, with the accompanying headaches, was entirely knocked out. Accordingly, he started them simultaneously on the average dose, one one-hundredth of a grain every two hours and gradually but steadily increased the dose. At the end of a week each was getting a grain an hour.

Every little detail is distinct in my mind after the lapse of years. It seems as though it were only yesterday that I heard the druggist get off his little joke, when, protestingly, because of its explosive quality, he yielded to my request for a ten per cent solution of the drug, because I simply had not the time to count out a hundred tablets apiece so often. He said, as he handed me an ounce bottle of the stuff, "It would take a brave man to kick those patients out of the building!"

It was unheard of for nitroglycerine to be given in such tremendous quantities. And yet day by day the dose was increased, as the tension persisted. At the end of another week it had reached two and a half grains every thirty minutes! Twice a day I had to descend to the drug room to have my bottle replenished. The druggist would not allow me more than an ounce at a time and would trust that to no other hand but mine, though it is a prob's work to run errands. But I needed no caution from him. I was quite alive to my weight of responsibility. I handled the bottle with respect and took care that my measurement of each dose should be accurate to a minim. I thought I had safeguarded against a possibility of mistake, and then—IT happened.

One day the head nurse had a matinee engagement, so my time off was from ten to twelve in the morning. I went to first dinner at noon, returning to the ward at half-past twelve, in time to relieve the head nurse for the afternoon. She was in a hurry to go and there was nothing new to tell me, she said. She whisked out of the door and I sent the junior to second dinner and then proceeded to put up the half-hourly nitro-glycerine.

Now, the two "N. G.'s," as among ourselves we jocosely called the men for whom this was prescribed, were in adjoining beds at the further end of the long ward. I went to the first, gave him the glass, which was covered with a card bearing his name, and the dose, and as I lingered to answer a question of his I offered the other glass to his neighbor in the corner, who was sitting up in bed with outstretched hand.



"THE MEDICINE HAD BEEN DRAINED TO THE LAST DROP BY THE WRONG MAN!"

It takes but a day or two for a patient, with so little else on his mind, to learn at what hour to expect his medicine, and it is only a recently admitted patient or a very ill one who is not ready and waiting for his dose.

I Make a Dreadful Mistake.

Turning to take the empty glass I found that the medicine had been drained to the last drop by the wrong man! Not by the man with Bright's, but by Burke, who had been in the ward for weeks and weeks with a complication of chronic diseases, and who knew just as well as I did that he never had medicine at this time of day, but only in the morning and at night. He had swallowed two and a half grains of nitro-glycerine, and he had not had before so much as the minimum dose!

I was too overwhelmed to speak. What was uppermost in my mind was, "He must not know! He must not be alarmed!" In supreme moments all of us who have any force at all develop into great actors. I walked back to the medicine room with my usual demeanor. I must have, for I met no look of surprise. I set down my tray, told the third nurse, in the absence of the junior, that I was going to report a symptom—an ordinary procedure on the part of the one in charge, which excites no curiosity in those under her authority—and picking up the order book as I passed the head nurse's table, on which it lay, I crossed the ward with no trace of excitement in my manner.

Once in the hall, though, and away from prying eyes, I let my anxiety give wings to my feet. I did not wait for the elevator, but ran at breakneck speed down the winding flight of stairs and to the physicians' corridor. Breathless, I arrived at the house physician's door. It was open. He was not there. Opposite was his first assistant's room. One hand clutching the order book and the other clenched so that the nails dug into its palm; I knocked, and did not wait for a second summons to "come in." The first assistant was entertaining the house surgeon. They were lolling in easy chairs, their pipes in their mouths, but as I burst in upon them, shutting the door behind me, both sprang to their feet. I know my soul was in my face. The first assistant came to where I stood, holding on to the knob, and swaying uncertainly.

"What is the matter?" he demanded, snatching the order book from me and reaching for his fountain pen. "You want an order? I can give it! I am House!"

"Yes!" I panted. "Quick! Write! I—I have—given Burke an—an overdose! A mistake! It—it was nitro glycerine—two and a half—grains!"

The Horror of Suspense.

He opened the order book and shut it. He looked at the house surgeon. The house surgeon looked at him. Both of them were clever men. I had confidence in their ability. They held a whispered consultation. The clock—(or was it my heart?)—ticked away the seconds. Why were they so slow?

"An order!" I groaned.

But he did not write!

"Don't lose your nerve!" the first assistant said to me. "Tell us, how did it happen?"

"The beds were changed while I was off duty. I was not told. I did not notice! But hurry! We are losing time! What is to be done?"

"Nothing."

His voice sounded very far away. I must have misunderstood him.

"Nothing?"

"No! I am sorry, but there is no antidote!"

The room reeled around me. But I must keep my head! They seemed to have lost theirs!

"But the stomach pump!" I suggested, wild with impatience.

"It would do no good. Nitro-glycerine is a muscle poison. It is immediately taken up by the muscular tissue. We can only treat each symptom as it arises."

Then hope left me. "Two and a half grains! Two and a half grains!" rang in despairing cadence through my tortured brain.

The house surgeon, a somewhat cynical fellow, for whose personality I had had no great liking, though I admitted his skill, said with real sympathy, which I shall never forget:—

"Don't be too cut up over it! We'll stand by you! You may pull out! Who else knows?"

"Nobody! I am in charge this afternoon!"

"Good! Then keep your own counsel!"

"That's it! Don't show the white feather!" put in the acting house. "Go back to the ward, act as if nothing had happened, and I'll be up presently and will hang around so as to do what I can. Burke has not a friend in the world, and his life is but a burden to him and likely to end at any moment from natural causes. We will see to it that you are not blamed for his death," he added, with kindly intent.

Was I a Murderer?

I looked him straight in the eyes.

"If he dies," I said, very slowly but very firmly, "I do not wish to be shielded, though I thank you for your willingness to help me. I shall tell the superintendent. I am not afraid of punishment—only of being a—a murderer!"

I went back to the ward. I glanced at the clock. I had been gone but five minutes! That was all as indicated by the clock, but it was an eternity as reckoned by the soul, which knows no time.

Burke was reading a newspaper. He did not suspect! He must not know! I passed on into the medicine room and measured out two and a half grains of nitro-glycerine. Then I took it and gave it to the man who had exchanged beds with Burke and had missed his dose.

All that afternoon the first assistant remained in my ward. He had followed close in my wake, with his large history pad under his arm, and he busied himself for hours making notes from the various charts and incorporating them into the physical history which is recorded of each patient and preserved in voluminous detail for future reference. Part of the time he sat by Burke, using his stand as a desk, and occasionally chatting with the old man, who was as pleased as Punch at the attention. Though I had tested the hypodermic syringes only that morning, I examined them again and freshly boiled the needles so that there might be no delay when a "hyp" was called for.

A Soul Tortured by Fear.

I hated to be in the ward. I dreaded going out of it, even to the medicine room. I did not want to look at Burke, and yet I was afraid not to, for fear the gray shadow might creep upon him unawares. My feet carried me hither and thither about my work, my hands performed their appointed tasks, my brain was clear again and in control. I was like an automatic piece of machinery which will run its course although the hand that wound it and set it going may never again have the power to do so. And as the hand is extraneous to the machine, so my inner self walked apart, intent upon the one unquenchable desire that Burke might live. Let none talk of suspense to me! I have experienced it to the full! I have been beaten upon by the whirlwind, shaken by the earthquake, scorched by the fire, and I have listened for the still, small voice.

The hours wore on. Burke ate his supper with relish. But I was not reassured by this, and the surgeon did not encourage me to build on hopes that might prove to be false. Some poisons are slow in their action. It was a wrench for me to go off duty leaving him with a night nurse who was in ignorance of any special need for watching him carefully. But I went without a word. The surgeon made me. He promised to look in on the ward often until midnight, when, if no symptoms had developed, the danger would be past.

My roommate found me indisposed to cheerfulness, but my plea of being tired satisfied her, and she spent the evening in another room, so that I might go to bed early. I would have given anything to sleep, but, like Macbeth, I could not, and for the same reason.

I got up in the early morning, a mild spring one, and with my text books went out on the lawn. I seated myself under a tree on a bench which commanded a view of the men's pavilion and pretended to study, but my wandering gaze rested more often on the windows of the medical ward than on the printed page. When the breakfast bell rang I went into the dining room, not because I was hungry, but because if I stayed away somebody would ask why, and I did not wish to be questioned. I gulped down a few mouthfuls and then headed for the ward, but as I was usually first on duty my haste excited no comment.

I Meet a Covered Stretcher.

The Home was connected with the hospital by a passageway on the ground floor. I hurried through it, and rang for the elevator to take me upstairs. As I waited for it, two orderlies, carrying a covered stretcher, came down the stairs and passed me on their way to the morgue. I had to bite my lips to keep back an exclamation. Only too well did I know whose it was that was dead! The elevator boy threw open the iron gate with a clang. I started. He grinned as I stepped inside.

"Did I scare yer? Yer look like you'd seen a ghost!" He laughed aloud at his pleasantry. "O-h!" he went on, comprehendingly, noticing the disappearing orderlies, "that's it, is it? Ain't you got used ter it yet?"

Arrived at the door of the Men's Medical, I tried to cross the threshold, but it was as if invisible hands pressed me back. At last I forced myself to enter. Looking neither to the right nor the left, I went in to get the report from the night nurse. She was busy, applying a poultice, so I waited for her at the head nurse's table. Against my will my eyes sought Burke's bed—it was, as I had feared, vacant.

I determined to get through my morning's work somehow, medication and all, anyway until the mad rush of getting ready for rounds at nine o'clock was over, and then, when there was lull, I would go down to the superintendent's office and make a clean breast of the affair. Further than that my mind refused to travel. What would become of me I neither knew nor cared.

Joy Thrills My Heart.

Just then there emerged from the lavatory the usual morning procession of such patients as felt equal to performing their own ablutions. As they filed past me each bade me "Good morning," and I responded as in a dream, until my glance fell on the last one in the line. He was only a grizzled, red-eyed old man, but I could have kissed the hem of his coarse gray bathrobe, for to me he was an angel of light, trailing clouds of glory behind him. I detained him, my hand on his arm, until I could find voice to speak to him.

"Why, Burke! You—you are feeling pretty well to-day? You are up early!"

"Yes, miss," he replied, beamingly. "That there new medicine you give me yesterday has fixed me up fine! I ain't had such a good night in years! I hopes I'm ter take it regular."

"Regularly? Oh! Well, I hardly think so, Burke. It might lose its effect, you know. But I am glad—very glad—that it did you good!"

Men are nice, loyal creatures. I, for one, shall never run them down, whether or no they let us women have suffrage. They are not only loyal but they understand! When I asked the first assistant that day for an explanation of the happy outcome of my mistake, he attributed it to the fact that Burke's muscular tissue had lost its absorptive quality—[illegible] it was that nitro-glycerin is a less dangerous drug than is supposed—but after that conversation neither he nor the house surgeon ever alluded to the subject of it again. They treated it like a thing of the past which had no place in the present. But I was relieved when, in a day or two, the tension disappeared from the N. G.'s pulses, and the drug was stopped—abruptly, not in diminishing doses—but was followed by no bad effects.

As for Burke! I pampered him to such an extent that he parted from me tearfully when the [illegible], a month later, found him so improved that he could not be allowed to remain in the hospital. He returned at intervals, though, for short periods of treatment, and no matter where I was on duty, he always tried to send me word of his arrival, and I never failed to obtain permission to visit him in the ward, and glad I was to be able to give him this little pleasure. Since my graduation I have lost track of him, but he is not forgotten.

BRAVE PRIEST SAVED SOLDIERS

How Jesuit Father Jutz Prevented a Company's Complete Annihilation by Indians.

Missionary Tells of Stirring Times When Battle of Wounded Knee Was Fought.

THE only white man who was able to keep the trust and friendship of the Sioux at the time of the famous Battle of Wounded Knee, in 1890, and through his courage prevented that famous Indian fight from becoming a complete annihilation of all the Sioux tribes is Father Jutz, of New York city.

Father Jutz spent twelve years of his life among the Indian missions. Born in Austria and educated in the Jesuit school, finishing in a famous Jesuit college near Liverpool, he crossed to this country with twelve brothers, and for four years worked in Wisconsin, whence he was sent alone to the Indian reservation in Wyoming.

A weather scarred, kindly faced veteran of many Western struggles, seventy years old, with blue gray eyes of the dearest hue, he is to-day one of the most interesting characters among the Jesuit priesthood—a man whom every Indian in the Northwest loves and reveres for his kindness, gentleness and bravery in their behalf.

"The uprising had been incited by an Indian medicine man in Utah," he says, "who had declared that the Indian Messiah was coming. Some of the chiefs of the bad lands even travelled hundreds of miles to hear the message of this medicine man.

"I was personally a witness of these horrible dances and stood alone within a circle of six hundred madly raging Indian chiefs, braves, squaws and children while they were going through these terrible performances.

"I know them all. Some were from the Pine Ridge mission and some from the Rosebud mission at both of which places I had worked. While the spectacles that I then witnessed were both terrifying and heart-rending in the extreme, I felt no personal fear for the Indians, for once their confidence is obtained they are to be trusted wholly.

"The Indians were approaching from the North when they were surrounded by the American soldiers.

"Who fired the first shot which resulted so terribly for the Indians is not known. It may have been an Indian; it may have been a soldier. At any rate nearly all the band, consisting of about two hundred braves, women and children, were killed.

"The battle occurred within hearing distance of the mission school and later was fought around the mission.

"A few of those who had gone back to the encampment later joined those who had escaped from the first encounter and the next day from the windows of the mission I could see that an Indian band had surrounded a company of soldiers in the valley and were shooting them down.

"Immediately I sent a courier to General Brooke and it was only through his prompt action in sending assistance that the little company was saved from complete annihilation.

"I was warned by the general to get away from so dangerous a location, but I knew there was nothing to fear. The Indians were my friends and, as it turned out, while many of the neighboring ranch buildings were burned, the mission buildings remained untouched and I cared for the wounded on both sides there.

"All the government day schools and the agency house were destroyed. The Indian braves at the time were all attired in short buckskin or linen shirts, which were supposed to be charmed and would ward off harm, having been worn in the ghost dances.

"They were like children once their confidence had been obtained, and during my stay among them I came to understand how shamefully they had been treated by the government agents. Sometimes they were obliged to live upon dead horses. For lack of food they were found to steal the cattle of the half breeds, cattle that belonged to them, the returns from which too often found its way into the pockets of the agents.

"I am sure that there will never be another uprising of these Indians. They are rapidly becoming extinct. In fifty years I doubt if there will be a fullblood alive."

Prehistoric New Yorkers.

IN connection with the Hendrik Hudson celebration next year the picturesque relics of New York's prehistoric inhabitants on the northern slopes of Manhattan Island are to be carefully restored. A complete village such as flourished on the banks of the Hudson River centuries before the coming of Hendrik Hudson will be rebuilt under the direction of the Museum of Natural History. The caves and rock shelters which these early citizens inhabited are now buried in a range of rocky hills. A considerable portion of the site of the ancient settlement will be excavated, however, and the homes again furnished and fitted with the household equipment of the period. Recent excavations in the vicinity of Inwood have disclosed several skeletons, which have led the scientists to conclude that a fair sized burying ground lies there awaiting the explorer. The road which has been cut through a portion of this region discloses several remarkable shell heaps which clearly date from a period considerably antedating the coming of Europeans. Pieces of the early pottery, arrow heads, crude hammers and bits of pipe are frequently picked up thereabouts. One of the curiosities of the place is the number of oyster shells buried under centuries of accumulated debris.

Mostly fair to-day and on Tuesday; slightly lower temperature.

A FURTHER STATEMENT TO THE ELECTORS FROM THE WATER COMMISSIONERS

To the Editor of the Review.

There has been one consideration touched on in discussing the question of a new dam by the commissioners, but not emphasized, as they did not wish to cause any alarm that could be avoided. But as a concerted effort is being made in some interested quarters and by misrepresentation, to defeat the by-law, they think it proper and only just to the electors to state the true situation in plain terms.

The water mains, as all know, have been very greatly extended in recent years for fire protection and house and other service. In consequence of this, the pumping capacity of the present dam and plant has been reached in the summer season. Before a new dam can be built, the limit of power will have been exceeded, unless refusal is given to any further extension of water supply. The central part of the city has been mostly covered for domestic and fire purposes. It will be the outer portions, generally, that will suffer by such refusal, and it will be particularly unfortunate for those making or intending to make building improvements.

Reserve of power, however, must be maintained to fully guard against danger from fire, and this, without reference even to the demand that has come from the Fire Underwriters' Association. If the by-law is turned down, the commissioners will then have to seriously scan all applications now pending or that may come to them, and will reserve and exercise their right of refusal, however regretfully, until more power is assured.

This is the true position of affairs that confronts the city, and electors must choose which course they will pursue.

The commissioners have given much thought to the condition of the present dam and to the needful provision for greater power, and they strongly advise against spending money on it, except to keep it in position until replaced by a new dam, which in all respects, in view of the momentous interests at stake, should be of the most modern type and construction, which is the character of dam designed in the by-law, and which can be built without a dollar of cost, beyond the present water rates.

RATEPAYERS WRITE ON THE $15,000 POWER BY-LAW

Mayor Rush Makes Statement

Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I have read the letter of Ald. Hicks in regard to the power bylaw, and although he does not give any new information bearing on the question I wish to refer to it briefly. He says that I did not write the letter signed by myself and Ald. McIntyre, which he of course knew was true, because he is a member of the power committee and was present when instructions were given to have the explanation drafted and also when the letter was read to the committee and chairman and I were asked to sign it on behalf of the committee. It was done to give the electors an explanation of the matter as it stands, and was an entirely proper proceeding. In the letter it is stated that it was published on behalf of the power committee and not merely as a personal statement.

I do not see how the statements in the power committee's letter can be said to be misleading. Just what work it was proposed to do with the sum asked for in the bylaw is plainly stated and the authority for every statement made is given.

Ald. Hicks' reference to the Mayor and his cabinet I do not understand. I have, since the electors honored me by electing me Mayor, never made any difference between one Alderman and another, and I do not know any case in which I have shown any lack of courtesy to or consideration for Ald. Hicks. If he thinks I have he has only to make it known to me and I will make any explanation or amends that may be called for, but I have no knowledge of any act of mine towards any member of the council that was in any way discourteous or of treating one member different from another.

I have no intention of continuing a discussion, as I do not see that any good would come from it and I do not wish to have any contention with any member of the council.

Yours truly,
H. RUSH.

P.S.—Eleven members of the council voted for submitting the bylaw, Ald. Hicks alone opposing it.

Waterworks and Power

Editor of the Review

Sir,—In view of the assertions made public in the letters of Mr S. Harvie and Mr G. W. Hatton, surely the council and the water commissioners are rushing the passing of these bylaws too fast. From their past connections with the water works both these writers are in a most advantageous position to know whereof they speak.

Take the question of the necessity of a new dam. The commissioners try to frighten the public by hinting that the dam might go out and leave the town without water or fire protection. Have either of the commissioners or their authorities ever heard of a timber dam bolted together as the present dam is and filled with boulders going out so soon after it was built or have they ever tried to remove such a dam? I think not, or they would have found it was a most difficult thing to accomplish and they would be convinced that the fear of this dam going out was a mere bug-a-boo. If any one is losing any sleep over fear of this dam going out he should walk up and examine this dam; I think he will regain his composure. He will find what appears to be a comparatively new dam with an immense bank of gravel on the upper side which if properly put on should make the dam practically tight and should be kept so for many years at an annual cost of $400 or $500 a year. To say that this dam cannot be kept tight enough to hold sufficient water to create 500 horse power— which the commissioners say is sufficient for water purposes— at comparatively small cost is absurd.

The commissioners say that during the past summer that they had not enough pumping capacity and state if a large fire should occur that they would not be able to cope with it. In the same breath they say that about two-thirds of the water is being wasted on lawns, etc. Would it not be an economical proceeding to prosecute the misuse of water and save the city the necessity of going to this vast expenditure to enlarge the plant at present. Why not put in the third pump which Mr. Hatton says all provision has been made in the present pump house. This together with the waste would surely give sufficient pumping capacity for many years. Mr Hatton says that provision was made for a a population of 45,000. Instead of abusing Mr Hatton, if Mr. Moore would give us the capacity of the three pumps installed and what would be a fair allowance to allow per head and also throw light on some of the other assertions made it would be more effectual in enlightening the ratepayers. As Mr. Hatton asserts it is the cheapest thing in the world to get an engineer or a contractor to advise the building of a new dam if he is going to get the job of building it. But give him instructions that you want the cost of putting the present plant in shape for water purposes only and I think they will find that it will be a very reasonable amount. I have no doubt but it would be a very nice thing to have a new concrete dam and new pump house but to throw away the present comparatively new plant and dam, looks to me as though the commissioners had more money than they knew what to do with.

With regard to the proposition of developing electric power under a ten foot head, looks to me to be not an economical proposition, besides if what Mr Harvie says as to the other power houses on the river being tied up for want of water to run to their full capacity where will such a power plant be when the flow of water is low. The water works will have to have their full complement which will leave the electric development tied up. I think it would certainly be true economy to turn both these bylaws down for the present at least.

Yours truly,
CITIZEN.

Supports the By-Law

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—In reference to the Power Bylaw for $15,000, which will be voted on by the ratepayers on Tuesday, the 30th inst., I would like to give my reasons why I think this by-law should be supported by the public.

In the first place, the property is owned by the Water Commissioners in trust for the people. We are informed by the Water Commissioners that at the minimum flow of the river there will be developed about 1,200 horse power, and for the greater part of the year there can be developed from 1,500 to 2,000 horse power.

There is used for waterworks purposes at the present time 200 horse power. It will take about 200 horse power to do the street lighting, so that we will have at least 800 horse power additional to be used by the Waterworks Commissioners as required, and for commercial or house lighting, if the citizens so desire.

The city is at present paying $9,000 a year for street lighting, and I think with the development of their own power the city would save at least $5,000 a year.

I think, as a business proposition that the ratepayers should spend whatever is necessary to develop and utilize their own property.

A number of the letters have appeared in the public press have been written and inspired by owners or those interested in power properties, and I hope the ratepayers will not allow anything of this kind to interfere in voting for the adoption of the $15,000 Power By-law. I trust every freeholder, if he supports the Waterworks By-law, will at the same time vote in his own interests and vote for the Power By-law.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I am,

Yours sincerely,
W. G. MORROW.
Peterborough, March 26, 1909.

As to Electric Lighting

Editor of the Review

Sir,—The Mayor has, I notice, replied to that part of Alderman Hicks' letter in which he says that we did not write the letter published by the power committee, and there is one other matter in Alderman Hicks' letter to which I wish to refer. He questions the statement that the city pays nearly $9000 for light and says that this sum includes a bonus to the Street Railway. Now, there is nothing in the contract with the Peterborough Light and Power Company referring to the Street Railway and no reference to any bonus, the contracts with the two companies being separate and distinct. Further, at the time the contract for street lighting was made, the Otonabee Power Company, tendered on enclosed arc lamps of 7.6 amp capacity and the Peterborough Light and Power Co. on open arc lamps of 9 amp capacity and the contention made by the latter company was that the open arc lamps at $50 each were cheaper that the enclosed lamps at $35, because the open lamps gave a stronger light and were preferable. Mr. G M Roger, who was Mayor at the time, and Dr Morrison, who was chairman of the committee, visited another town where the enclosed arc was in use and they supported the argument that the open lamp, while being more expensive to maintain, gave a better light and that it would take fewer of them to give the same service, and because of this the tender of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. was accepted. Since that, two years ago, the Peterborough Light and power company asked the council to permit them to instal the enclosed arc lamps, but after members of the council had enquired into the expense of operating the two kinds of lamps and seen the enclosed lamps in use, the request was refused unless the company gave a larger number or reduced the price.

The cost to the city of the light it uses is nearly $9000 and if the city is ready to do its own lighting when the present contract expires, it will have that sum to apply on the cost of developing and supplying light and power.

Yours truly,
A. A. McINTYRE

Bring Water From Chemong

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—This matter of new dam and filtering bed creates a great deal of thought to a reader or one interested, permit me to suggest that the present water mains were to be extended from the pumping house to Chemong Lake, which is about 314 feet higher than the present pumping house, and would give about 150 pounds pressure, being twice the pressure we now have. This high pressure could be regulated by a governor valve. This water could be connected by pipes to the present main—a distance of about four miles—and would have a gravity pressure of good spring water, which would not require any pumping house nor filtering beds at an annual expense for operation of machinery, labor and repairs of the beds and dams. I believe to extend the mains, as stated above, would not cost as much as the proposed scheme, and would be a permanent one, as an extra large pipe could be installed if so desired, and the surplus water could be used for power under an enormous pressure.

Great power could be obtained in this way, and in a very few years the power sold would pay for the installation of this connection with Chemong Lake.

Yours truly,
T. D. McGREGOR.

New Waterworks Dam

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—From what I can learn the situation in regard to the proposed new water works dam is as follows.

1 There is no danger of the present dam failing since the extensive repairs that were recently made, the dam is reasonably tight and will remain so for many years. The report of Mr. Keefer that the dam leaked as much as 30 per cent of the flow was made before the extensive repairs,—which are mentioned by the Commissioners — were made and this report being now published without the date as to when it was made or that it was made before the repairs to the dam were made is misleading.

2 The water commissioners say that there is pumping capacity for four or five times as much water as should be used by a city of the size of Peterborough if properly looked after.

3 If the above are correct, why do we want a new dam? Surely our debenture debt is large enough at the present time without making unnecessary expenditures. We have many things that we must have in the near future that will swell our debenture debt.

Yours truly,
ONE IN THE BUSINESS

Waterworks Dam

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Judging from the following, which is an extract from the article signed by the Water Commissioners, I am at a loss to understand what the urgent necessity is for a new dam. From this statement we learn that the Commissioners look after their duties in a very slack manner. They admit that they have allowed "wanton waste" to go on and that if this was not allowed to go on that there would be over five times the pumping capacity that is necessary at the present time. In other words they say they have allowed some people to use such large quantities of water that it brings the daily average up to 140 gallons of water per head instead of about 25 gallons as it should be, and as is the quantity used for the city of London. This seems to me to be a very serious matter, and certainly the public is entitled to a very full explanation as to this state of affairs. The extract is as follows;—

"During one period of the past year the present pumping power had been reached by the demand made by water consumers and had a large fire occurred at this time, effective service could not have been given; but it is just to state that to a considerable extent this was caused by the wanton waste on lawns, and by reason of bad plumbing. During the year 1908 the daily pumping was 10000 gallons, equal to about 140 GALLONS PER DAY per head of the population. In London England, where the plumbing must be of the best and yet the water supplied plentiful the quantity is under 25 GALLONS PER HEAD DAILY. While building a new dam there must be amendment in this particular."

This statement certainly bears out the statement made by Mr. Hatton in his letter, which you published a few nights ago, that our present waterworks plant was designed for a population of 45000. Mr. Moore would be serving the public better by explaining such facts than by abusing Mr. Hatton.

Now, if we have such a large surplus pumping capacity over what we should require, if ordinary precautions were enforced why should we be called upon to make such a large expenditure at the present time? I have looked carefully into the matter and I can see no reason for a new dam, and I intend to vote against such a useless expenditure.

Yours truly,
ONE WHO KNOWS.

The Power By-law

The by-law to issue debentures for $15000 will be voted on to-morrow. This sum is for the purpose of constructing forebays tail race, wheel pits foundations and power house for the electrical development of the power that will be available at the waterworks dam after the requirements of the waterworks department have been met. The following figures have been supplied on the case.

"There will be 700 horse-power available after the waterworks have taken what they require. This power should be utilized for the benefit of the city for street lighting and other purposes and not allowed to run to waste."

It will be much cheaper to put in the forebays wheel pits, etc., when the dam is being built than it would to do that work two or three years later after the dam has been completed.

The street lighting will take about 200 horse-power and there will still be 400 to 500 horse-power which can be sold or used in the service of the city, according to these figures

With this preliminary work done—with the forebays race, wheel pits and power house completed—the city will be ready to take the necessary steps and put in the machinery for furnishing light and power when it is required. This would put the city in such a position that it could be compelled to pay a high price for light and power as it would be able in a short time to furnish light or power from its own dam.

It is prudent to take time by the forelock; it is good business to save money by doing work when it can be done most cheaply; it will be acting wisely to be ready to do the street lighting when the contract expires, and to furnish power when it is needed, if these figures are correct

It would be wanton waste to own 700 horse-power and permit it to run over the dam and down the river, doing no one any good and a loss to the city.

From Mr. Culverwell

Special to the Review.

Cobourg, Ont., March 29.—For good reasons have not taken active interest in the two by-laws now before Peterborough ratepayers, and will not discuss the waterworks dam by-law, but must make record now that the fifteen thousand dollar waterworks power house by-law is a complete delusion and a snare. After reading Engineer Harvie's practical detailed report based upon facts, surely no sensible and unbiased ratepayer will vote for the power house by-law, which will eventually cause expenditure of some fifty thousand dollars, and will only deliver some three hundred electric horse power to consumers. Several other Peterborough private powers could undersell waterworks power. Burleigh Falls power can be delivered by the thousands at half cost per horse power of water works power house makeshift, which would only further hinder the development of Burleigh power. The waterworks power house by-law would cause the sale of Burleigh power to outside market shareholders; only want fair treatment.

GERMAN-BRITISH RIVALRY WILL END IN BANKRUPTCY

After Notable Debate in British Commons, Members on Strict Party Vote Defeat Resolution of Lack of Confidence in Government.

London, March 30.—While the House of Commons was debating the naval question yesterday, the voters of the Croydon district convincingly registered their opposition by electing as member of Parliament Sir R. T. Hermon-Hodge, Conservative, who advocated the building of eight warships. His majority was decisive, the returns being as follows:

Sir R. T. Hermon-Hodge 11,989; J. E. Crappael, Liberal, 8,041; Frank Smith, Laborite, 886.

By a strict party vote of 353 to 135, the House of Commons last night refused to express lack of confidence in the Government's naval policy.

The motion on which yesterday's notable debate hinged, was proposed by Arthur Hamilton Lee, Conservative member of the House from Hants.

It set forth "that in the opinion of this House, the declared policy of His Majesty's Government respecting the immediate provision for battleships of the newest type does not sufficiently secure the safety of the Empire."

The result of the vote on the question was expected, but the debate preceding it was one of the most momentous the House has listened to for years. The assembly of diplomats and peers testified to its international as well as domestic importance. The leaders of both sides spoke, in addition to several lesser lights.

A. J. Balfour and Mr. Lee accused the Cabinet of incompetence and demanded that eight Dreadnoughts be laid down immediately.

Premier Asquith and Sir Edward Grey, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, reproached their opponents for making a party question of the most vital matter of the country's foreign relations.

Secretary Grey's speech was the notable contribution, because of its remarkable candor. He dwelt on the diplomatic aspects of the British-German rivalry, and the hopelessness of expecting any cessation of the race for armaments, and he predicted eventual European bankruptcy if it continued.

The Socialist members of the Reichstag and the British Laborities exchanged telegrams pledging themselves to work for the reduction of armaments, just about the time that the British Foreign Secretary was frankly declaring that the British navy was designed solely for protection against Germany.

PRESENTED WITH AN UMBRELLA

Mr. Harvey McCulloch Honored by Fellow Employees at Peterborough Hardware Co.

On Saturday night Mr. Harvey McCulloch, who is leaving the Peterborough Hardware Co. to accept a position with the Peter Hamilton Co., was presented with a goldheaded umbrella and an address by his fellow-employees at the Hardware Co.

The address was as follows;

Mr Harvey McCulloch, City.

Dear Harvey,—It is with regret we have learned of your intention to sever your connection with the Peterborough Hardware Co., Ltd., and also your association with us as a fellow employee.

We, perhaps should not regret your departure knowing from your business tact and energy, we are no doubt taking a step upwards in your business calling.

On this, the eve of your departure from us, we thought perpahs, you might feel that through the sunshine and storm of business during the past four years you have been with us, your untiring efforts for the success for the company might have been in vain, but to assure you of the appreciation of the company and ourselves we ask you to accept this umbrella as a slight token of our esteem and good wishes for your future success.

Signed on behalf of the Peterborough Hardware Co. Ltd., M. Comstock, H. Morgan, C. M. Blewitt, J. T. Squires, W. Flanagan, W. Butcher, B. Gillespie, G. Quartermaine, H. Munroe, J. Tomblin.

Archbishop's Estate.

Toronto, March 30.—Administration papers have been taken out by the family of the late Archbishop Sweatman. The estate consists of household furniture and books, $2,000; 43 shares Consumers' Gas Co. stock, $4,635; eight shares Mission Book Co. stock, $800; debentures, Town of Barrie, $3,418; cash in bank, $837; total $11,420. The estate goes to the widow, three sons and two daughters.

In addition the archbishop left life insurance in favor of the widow amounting to $8,380.

Trip to Liverpool Halted.

Kenora, March 30.—John V. Rawkins, a salesman in the employ of the George Wrewry retail liquor store, was placed under arrest here, charged with having stolen goods and money to the value of $1,370. Rawkins had purchased a ticket for Liverpool. He is an Englishman, about 26 years of age, and was joined here by his wife quite recently.

CAN THIS BE REALLY TRUE?

"Public life in Australia and New Zealand has its visible limitations and perils, but it may be said with confidence about our public men as a class, and said to their honor, that they are clean-handed," says Dr. Fitchett in Life. "They do not betray public trust or steal public money. To realize how high in this respect is the general standard of public life amongst us we have only to compare it with that of the United States or even of Canada."

BOTH THE PARTIES FAVOR SUPPORTING BRITIAN'S FLEET

Premier Brings Forward Amendment to Mr. Foster's Resolution, Which He Declares is Too Indefinite--Mr. Borden Says the Same Against Sir Wilfrid's Scheme.

Ottawa, March 30.—Upon the question of Imperial defence both parties in the House of Commons are practically a unit.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Foster introduced his resolution, declaring

"That in the opinion of this House, in view of her great and varied resources, of her geographical position and national environments, and of that spirit of self help and self respect which alone befits a strong and growing people, Canada should no longer delay in assuming her proper share of the responsibility and financial burden incident to the suitable protection of her exposed coast line and great seaports."

Then Sir Wilfrid Laurier arose and practically agreed with everything the North Toronto member said, but he submitted a substantive resolution, declaring against the idea of making a money contribution to the Imperial navy; suggesting the creation of a Canadian navy "in co-operation with and in close relation to the Imperial navy," and finally assuring the British Government "of our continued loyalty and co-operation in every movement for the maintenance of the integrity and the honor of the Empire."

With some slight alterations, this was agreeable to Mr. Borden, and the leaders retired during the evening debate to endeavor to adjust their differences.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's conclusion was a recognition of the importance of Canada of maintaining the supremacy of Great Britain on the sea.

"I hope," said the Prime Minister, "that the day will never come when we will be drawn into the conflicts of Europe. But I have no hesitation in saying that the supremacy of the British Empire is absolutely essential, not only to the maintainance of the Empire, but to the civilization of the world.

"I have no hesitation in saying that the supremacy of the British Empire [illegible] seas must be maintained in the highest degree of efficiency it has occupied in the last 100 years.

"I have no hesitation in saying also that if the day should come when supremacy of Britain on the high seas is challenged it will be the duty of all the daughters of the nation to close around the old motherland and make a rampart about her to ward off any attack.

"I hope that day will never come, but should it ever come, I would deem it my duty to devote what will be left of my life and energy to stump the country and endeavor to impress upon my fellow-countrymen, especially my compatriots in the Province of Quebec, the conviction that the salvation of England is the salvation of our own country, that therein lies our civil and religious freedom and everything of value in this life.

"Those are the sentiments which animate the Government on this occasion."

Mr. Foster said the resolution was handed in to the clerk before the session opened and therefore had not arisen out of recent events. Moreover, it had not been conceived in any party spirit. He did not think we got rid of any of our responsibilities by avoiding them, and it seemed to him that the time had come to consider our duties in regard to the defence of the Empire. We should strive to bring about the potency of peace, but we ought also to take into account the history of the world and the lessons thereof. All the recent great wars were examples of the fact that restraints of Christian morals and ethics were impossible to curb the ambitions and passions of nations.

"Let me say to my right hon. friend," said Mr. Foster, in conclusion, "that if, after careful consideration, he proposes to this Parliament the means for meeting that emergency adequately, now, as I said before, whether it be by the gift of a Dreadnought or the gift of money of this country, this side of the House will stand beside him and stand for Canada in supporting this measure."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier congratulated Mr. Foster on the eloquence of his speech and his temperate and moderate manner. The only objection to his speech was the indefinite conclusions.

As to the declaration that Canada should no longer delay in assuming her share of the financial responsibility of defending the coast line and seaports, Sir Wilfrid saw in this an imputation that Canada had been remiss in her duty in providing for her own defence.

If Canada had been remiss in her duty to the Empire, Sir Wilfrid was not aware of it.

"But we are not to be stampeded by the transitory events of the moment from what has been the settled policy and the deliberate course which we have laid down, by any hasty, feverish action, however spectacular such action may be.

R. L. Borden observed that the Prime Minister's amendment was no more definite than the motion of Mr. Foster. We had reached a status of nationhood within the Empire, and it must not be forgotten that national status implied national responsibilities Canada had been spending for military purposes, but of the substantial portion of what we spend for military purposes more than half should be appropriated for naval defence of our ports.

We should have a naval force of our own. The loss of control of the seas by Great Britain would mean the dismemberment of the Empire, said Mr. Borden.

Mr. Congdon (Liberal, Yukon) was for pursuing the arts of peace. He believed that if the British navy were swept from the seas Canada would be in no danger of attack.

The debate was continued by Warburton (P.E.I.), Barnard (B.C.), Roy (Montmagny) and Curry (N. Simcoe), and Mr. Brodeur.

The resolution as amended by the leaders was accepted and carried at 11.45.

THREE YEARS FOR CONDUCTORS

Toronto, March 30.—G.T.R. Conductors Daniel Corrigan and Frank McCallum, who carried passengers on fake tickets and assisted in defrauding the company, were yesterday sentenced by Judge Winchester to three years in Kingston penitentiary. Jos. Wood and Harry Rosenhes, who conspired with the conductors and sold the bogus tickets, were each given one year, while, Jacob Wood, also charged with defrauding, was allowed out on suspended sentence.

"You were trusted employes. You were paid good wages. There was no reason why you should defraud," said the judge to the conductors. Petitions for leniency were presented, to which the names of prominent citizens of Kingston and Brockville were attached.

THIS MAY BE MURDER CASE

Windsor, March 30.—The body of John Conway of Amherstburg, which was found in the river in eighteen inches of water on March 19, was exhumed yesterday and viewed by a coroner's jury.

Dr. J. W. Brien of Essex, who conducted the postmortem, gave evidence that there was no water in the lungs, and that Conway was not drowned. He described the wound over the right eye as indicating that deceased died from the shock of a blow.

It is generally supposed that Conway, who had been drinking, got into an altercation with some companions and received fatal injuries, his body afterwards being thrown in the river.

The inquest was abjourned until Friday, and the crown will be asked to investigate.

INSANITY IN THE FAMILY

Montreal, March 30.—J. A. Archambault, the commissioner appointed to go to Ireland to enquire into John Dillon's family history, has written to Judge Sicotte that two of Dillon's cousins and one female cousin were crazy, that one of Dillon's uncles hanged himself, and that another cut his throat.

Besides this, people in Ireland who knew Dillon when he was a young man believe his mind was unhinged. Dillon shot Constable Shea, who was attempting to secure his arrest in a house in Mance street.

A Startling Discovery.

London, March 30.—The County of Buckingham has been thrown into a fever at the discovery, which was announced officially yesterday, that all marriages celebrated at the parish church of St. James, Bradwell, during the past fifty years are illegal.

This church has been the scene of thousands of weddings of couples from all parts of the country. It now appears that the church never was licensed to celebrate marriages. Steps will be taken to legalize the marriage ceremonies solemnized at the church.

STEEL CO. CONSENTS

J. H. Plummer Accedes to Nearly all of the Coal Co.'s Demands.

Montreal, March 30.—At 11 o'clock yesterday the Dominion Coal Co. received a letter from J. H. Plummer, conceding almost all they have asked for.

Mr. Plummer wants two months to get details together re the damages, but he accepts the coal company's proposal unconditionally. "We are prepared, and now on our part to offer, to close the matter on the lines proposed by you: To execute forthwith and furnish the consent of the National Trust Co., Limited, to the declaration and agreement, continuing the contract of Oct. 20, 1903, and to deliver our statement of claims, without reservation of any right to change its form or increase any item therein.

"You to pay us concurrently the sum of $2,750,000 on account of damages without waiving any of your rights to dispute any item of our claim.

"We also assume that you will consent to an application to an act of the Legislature of Nova Scotia confirming the same in the form proposed by you."

SHE EXONERATED HER HUSBAND

Auburn, N. Y., March 30.—In a confession before her execution at Auburn prison yesterday morning, Mrs. Mary Farmer said: "My husband, James D. Farmer, never had any hand in Sarah Brennan's death, nor never knew anything about it till the trunk was opened. I never told him anything that had happened.

The physician's report that the autopsy disclosed that Mrs. Farmer was normal in every respect and that the brain showed no lesions that would indicate a criminal tendency.

HAD A HORROR OF PROFANITY

Utica, N.Y., March 30.—Eli Christian, an aged man, was found dead sitting in his chair in his home some distance south of Mohawk yesterday. He lived alone.

All his life Mr. Christian has abhorred profanity and he held himself aloof from people because to hear profanity gave him so much pain, he requested long ago that when he died he should be borne to the grave by men who never used profanity, and he selected those who should act as his bearers.

They are alive and Mr. Christian will be buried as be desired.

VOTES FOR THE RAILWAY MEN

Ottawa, March 30.—E. N. Lewis secured the consent of the House yesterday to the second reading of his daylight saving bill, and he moved that a committee consisting of Col. McLean (Queen's and Sudbury), F. D. Monk, and McLean (South Huron), be appointed to deal with the bill. Sir Wilfrid added the names of E. N. Lewis and Col. Talbot.

Mr. Conmee introduced a bill to provide machinery for the voting of railway employes in any constituency in which they may be on election day. There are 15,000 railway employes, most of whom are disfranchised by reason of their absence from home.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

The sloop Kearsarge went down off the Nicaraguan coast with twenty-one passengers and sailors.

Dr. Amyot has recommended that Springbank Park, London, Ont., be closed to the public, owing to danger of pollution of the city water supply.

A hotel porter was fined a hundred dollars at Cobalt for supplying the guests with liquor, unknown to the proprietors. The guests paid the fine.

C. H. McClintock, a C.P.R. brakeman, who lost two fingers of his right hand in an accident of Revelstoke last July, was given $4,000 by a jury yesterday.

Convicted of being an "undesirable," Kate O'Dwyer, a handsome white woman, has been sent to the county chain gang, and is now serving in chains with negroes at Athens, Ga.

The Provincial Gas Co.'s regulator at Stevensville, near Welland, was blown up by an explosion of natural gas, and three men were hurt. The explosion was caused by a lighted cigar.

A report from Horta says that when the steamer Hamburg arrived it was learned that an attempt had been made aboard to assault ex-President Roosevelt, but that it was frustrated, and his would-be assailant placed in irons.

ESTIMATES GO THROUGH FIGURES FOR 1910 PASSED

Allan Studholme Raises Protest in Connection With the Immigration Items—Salary Increase is Chief Feature of Supplementaries.

Toronto, March 30.—Swift progress was made by Hon. A. J. Matheson yesterday afternoon when the main estimates for the year ending Oct. 31, 1910, and the supplementaries for the ten months ending Oct. 31, 1909, were passed and concurred in. The only protesting voice came from Allan Studholme in connection with the immigration votes. The estimates for 1910 in detail practically duplicate those for 1909, allowing for the extra two months of the newly-arranged fiscal year.

A general boost in salaries is one of the main features of the supplementary estimates. Under civil government these increases with a few other small items amount to $13,626.55. The Department of Justice calls for $6,180. The heavy items that go to make up the total of $417,917.06, are under education, agriculture, public buildings, crown lands. Technical education at Hamilton gets $3,000, and at Sault Ste. Marie $5,000. The agricultural departments in high schools get $3,600. The mining school, Kingston, get $20,000, the first of five annual grants. The agricultural items include $4,000 for field crop competitions, $3,000 for special grants to societies in the districts. The King Edward Sanitarium for consumptives is given $4,000. In public buildings, Government House requires $4,021 for renewal of the green house and other improvements. The Central prison is debited with $150,000 for purchase of land and erection of buildings. About thirty sites have been offered.

Hon. W. J. Hanna announced that the consideration was being given the removal of criminal insane from Hamilton Asylum, to some place more remote from a crowded population.

The Kenora court house, $25,000, is the most important among other building items totalling $186,573. The road from Charlton to Gowganda is allowed $50,000 out of $68,310 given for colonization roads.

Crown lands charges are for fire ranging, $35,000 anw $10,000 for forest reserves. Additional mining recorders get $3,000. A conditional grant towards the Hawkesbury bridge amounts to $15,000.

G. C. Wilson (North Wentworth) has a bill before the Legislature to amend the public health act, by which a person who is unsatisfied with the action of the local board of health, may appeal to the provincial board. The power of attending physicians in smallpox, diphtheria, scarlet fever and typhoid cases will be restricted. Mr. Wilson and Allan Studholme accompanied a deputation from Hamilton and Dundas, which interview Dr. Hodgetts in relation to the bill.

CANADIAN CLUB THIS EVENING

Prof. Adam Shortt Will Deal With "Canada's Foreign Relations"

At the luncheon of the Canadian Club tonight at the Hotel National, Prof. Adam Shortt, will give an address on "Canada's Foreign Relations." It is probable that Prof. Shortt will touch on the action of the Government at Ottawa regarding naval defence and the lecture will be of more than ordinary interest on this account. The luncheon starts at 7.30 o'clock and there should be a large attendance of the members.

THE GLOBE ON DEMOCRACY

"With our democracy there are dangers. These Mr. MacDonald characterized as, first, a materalistic view of life. We seek to excel in wealth. We measure everything in terms of size, the bigness of cities, the area of our wheat lands, the big salaries and big fortunes of our men. These things do not make a nation. The second danger is found in the selfish attitude men show towards public life. Our cultured and educated people keep out of public life, they leave municipal affairs to men with axes to grind, and as a result politics and civic affairs are oftentimes corrupt. The third danger he characterised as sectionalism. There is too often an undue desire to emphasize classes and creeds. One section of the country is pitted against another, to the injury of the nation. The fourth and last, he characterized as the distrust of things that are good. A cheap cynicism that sees no good in men and that sneers at every movement for the uplifting of humanity is a weakness." —Editor MacDonald of the Globe.

THE AMERICAN TARIFF

The new tariff bill is now before Congress. It has come to that body thoroughly "drafted" from the Ways and Means Committee. Behind the changes or shifts made in the tariff or suggested lies the great adjuster, the maximum-tariff scale. This is the new invention of the U. S. tariff revisionists created to take the place of the effective principle of the old protective tariff. It is the essence of protection in the true and proper sense and meaning of that word. These nations which do not treat the U. S. in the "most favored" way, or in other words, those nations that do not put themselves in the power of this great Colossus of the Western World will get the maximum-tariff axe for their pains. It will thus be seen that the so-called revision is merely a re-adjustment in which the U.S. has looked after its own welfare thoroughly. The Free-trade idea is, of course, impossible, except where the one enjoying it has a monopoly in regard to its own main or staple industry. If Canada was the only timber country, or wheat country, or cheese and butter country, or whatever it might be, in the world, and Canadians relied upon that alone, then free trade would be the proper trade, since protection would be unnecessary. But as it is the situation is entirely different. Trade is a science, and must be treated as such. The Americans understood this decades before we did. But at last we all learned the lesson, although to save their face Liberals talk of free trade as if that was still their standby. Those who wish to follow out a very careful analysis of the bill now before Congress can do so by referring to our "of interest" column where the symposium upon it, taken from the Literary Digest, will give them what they seek.

LE NATIONALISTE

Le Nationaliste laments that Canada is being "swept into the vortex of militarism and imperialism." It sees our canals and railways and public works generally, sacrificed for Dreadnoughts. Le "Nationaliste" seems to think that life is always to consist in national irresponsibility, in large families for the habitant and a happy life in peaceful valleys with a pleasant form of death or departure, and the assured hope of a glorious and thoroughly French-Canadian resurrection. But progress entails vast responsibilities, and while a hermit or cave-dweller gets into no moral difficulties or industrial struggles, who would be a hermit? It is the glorious struggle under proper conditions to find the great social equilibrium that marks and makes our destiny. We cannot avoid it, for it is inevitable. World-life does not revolve around a church or a graveyard, but about the struggle for existence and development. As in the foreground or in the wake of all great movements, so in the great world-movement referred to, ghouls scamps, degenerates, sharpers, humbugs, jolliers, crafty men of business, etc., hover about the battalions that are advancing. Great leaders sometimes arise, and they lead well and we advance far, but sometimes, as with Hannibal after Cannae, the allurements of the designing entice us out of the security of our true position, and we are dispersed only to fall bleeding victims to our own indiscretion. Le Nationaliste must remember, too, that as the U.S. grew in population and trade, she became forced into foreign politics. Even neighbors imply responsibilities. So with Canada. As we grow we assume new and larger responsibilities. The struggle for existence is what its name implies, and it must continue until difference of race, of creed, and of opinion have largely subsided into the peace of union and the dominion of common sense.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The curling season has been a great success, thanks chiefly to the admirable business methods of the club management, and of the various committees delegated to handle the different competitions.

Mr. John Lewis, editor of the Toronto Star, and one of the most successful and highest priced editors of America, in a recent address to provincial editors, urged them to do all in their power to do their own thinking and to urge their readers to do the same. "Canned editorials," as the echoes or reprints of city editorials are called, tend to weaken and emasculate provincial thought and action.

"Vice-President Wainwright, of the Grand Trunk Pacific, has been interviewed at Montreal regarding the proposed advance to the company by the Dominion Government of $10,000,000. 'It is merely a request,' he said, 'that the Government should act as bankers for the company to the extent of $10,000,000, for which they will accept the bonds of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway bearing 4 per cent. interest, endorsed and guaranteed by the Grand Trunk Railway. The object of this is to save the heavy discount that would have to be undertaken if these bonds were placed on the market at the present time, owing to the large number of flotations recently placed on the English market. This loan is required because the prairie section has cost considerably more than the engineers estimated."—Monetary Times.

How interesting and instructive!

"The Supreme Court this morning gave judgment in the West Peterborough election case dismissing the preliminary objections raised by the counsel for Hon. J. R. Stratton. The case will now go to trial on its merits after the close of the session of Parliament."—Ottawa Free Press (Liberal.)

With regard to that part of the above comment referring to the close of the session, strictly speaking, a session of Parliament has nothing to do with the matter, but as Parliament has prior right to the presence of a member, the Court, where necessary, waits until the finish of the session frees him from his duties. It is probable that this trial will be set for May. Meanwhile the various steps leading to the completion of the case go on without delay. Ten days are allowed for putting in defence and counter-petition, and five days after that for the petitioner's reply whereupon notice of trial is served and examination of the parties to the protest proceeds before a judge or otherwise as may be fit. The date for trial is obtained and set on application to the Election Court.

La Patrie while speaking in a calm and statesmanlike way of the present "excitement," deprecates the capital made out of it by some of our jingoes for their own glory and reputation. Some of these "jingoes" are not held in such high esteem as to warrant their assuming to speak for the nation or even for any part of it. We do not expect modesty of them and whilst Mr. Foster will always be listened to with respect, there are others who think more of themselves than is at all necessary. They take themselves au grand serieux. They fail, however, except in making a movement more or less ridiculous. La Patrie's idea that we should be loyal to Great Britain as of yore, but that we should confine our fortifications to Canada may be good politics, but it does not make for imperial solidarity. This latter, we are well aware, our compatriots decline to endorse in order to preserve their individuality of race, etc. But are we not all one flesh the world over in spite of our protests? These divisions of race and creed are the great stumbling-blocks in the world's way. They constitute the "sectionalism," which is the bane and often the destruction of all good movements. It is not race or creed that should govern, but the spirit of justice.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, March 29.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending March 27 were 2250 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 2040 hogs and 1200 calves, while the supply on the market this morning for local consumption was 1200 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 1250 hogs and 100 calves.

A feature of the market was the decided improvement in the quality of cattle offered, there being principally all well-finished steers, heifers and bulls from Ontario points, which in many cases were suitable for the coming Easter trade. The supply, altho larger than a week ago, was not excessive, and in consequence a stronger feeling prevailed in the market, and prices were a good ¼c per pound higher. There was a large attendance of buyers and the demand was good, especially for shipment to outside points; consequently trade on the whole was more active than it has been of late. Among the offerings there were some extra choice, stall-fed steers, of which Messrs. Johnston, Bonner and Langlois, wholesale dealers of this city, bought three steers, weighing 4400 pounds, at 6¾c; one bull, weighing 1250 lbs., at 5¼c per lb. This stock was raised and fed by J. Stone of Saintfield, Ont. Another lot of ten steers, weighing 14,000 pounds, was bought by a local butcher at 6¼c per pound, and Messrs. Drolet & Fils of Quebec bought one bull from L. Delorme which weighed 2200 pounds, at 5c per pound, and $10 over. In addition to this, they also bought a large number of other heavy bulls at 5c, 5¼c and 5½c, and steers at 5¾c to 6¼c per pound. Altho prices were higher and sellers firm in their views, local butchers showed more disposition to operate, and bought a few more than usual on account of the fact that they anticipate still higher prices later on in the week for Easter stock, if supplies do not increase materially. Choice steers sold at 6¼c to 6c; good at 5¾c to 5½c; fair at 5¼c to 5c; medium at 4¾c to 4½c; bulls at 4¾c to 5½c, and common stock at 3c to 4c per pound. Supplies of sheep and lambs were very small, and trade in consequence was quiet, but the undertone to the market was stronger, and prices had an upward tendency. The demand was good for what little stock was offered, and sales of yearling lambs were made at 6¾c to 6½c per pound, and sheep were higher, at 5c to 5½c per pound. A few spring lambs sold at $4 to $8 each. The offerings of calves were also small. An extra choice one, weighing 440 pounds, sold at 6¼c per pound, and the range of prices for the others was from $3 to $8 each, as to quality.

A strong feeling continues to prevail in the market for hogs, and prices are steadily tending towards a higher level, they having scored a further advance of 5c to 10c per 100 pounds since this day week, on account of the limited supplies coming forward and the keen demand for the same from packers. Sales of selected lots were made at $7.50 to $8, and straight lots at $7.75 to $7.85 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, March 29.—Cattle—Receipts, 3800 head; fairly active and 10c to 15c lower; prime steers, $6.25 to $6.75; shipping, $5.60 to $6.25; butchers, $5 to $6.25; heifers, $4.25 to $6; cows and bulls, $3.50 to $5.25; stockers and feeders, $4 to $5; stock heifers, $3.50 to $4.25; fresh cows and springers in good demand and $2 to $3 higher, $25 to $60.

Veals—Receipts, 2800 head; active, $7 to $9.60.

Hogs—Receipts, 14,500 head; active; pigs steady; others 5c to 10c higher; heavy, $7.25 to $7.40; mixed, $7.25 to $7.40; yorkers, $6.25 to $7.25; pigs, $6.00 to $6.60; roughs, $6 to $6.50; stags, $4.00 to $5.25; dairies, $6.75 to $7.25.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 21,000 head; sheep active and steady; lambs slow and 25c lower; lambs, $5 to $8.40; yearlings, $7 to $7.50; wethers, $6.25 to $6.75; ewes, $5.75 to $6.25; sheep, mixed, $3.50 to $6.25.

Fred Galusha of Walkerville, was awarded $34,000 damages against the G.T.R. at the Windsor Assizes.

WINTER WOOD.

It Makes the Best and Most Lasting Kind of Timber.

It has long been known that winter was the best time of the year for cutting down trees for their timber, but until the American bureau of forestry published the results of some experiments no one was sure why. The bureau of forestry selected four pine trees of the same age and of equal vigor, growing in the same soil, and felled them, the first at the end of December, the second at the end of January, the third at the end of February and the fourth at the end of March. They were hewn into logs of the same size and dried at the same place. Then the logs were tested.

The December log resisted a flexile strain twice as strong as that which the March log resisted. It furnished piles which were still perfect and undecayed sixteen years later, while the piles made from the March log had rotted within three or four years.

Wood that is felled in December is less porous than that cut at other times. It has been proved that oak felled in the spring allowed water to percolate through it in from two to three hours, while similar wood cut in December was seemingly impermeable.

There is a very simple method of as- three hours, while similar wood cut in winter or in spring. The former contains floury particles, which turn blue when tincture of iodine is poured upon them. The latter preserves its natural tint or merely becomes a little darker at the contact of iodine.

COPIED NAPOLEON.

South American Dictators Who Imitated the French Despot.

The dictatorship of Castro in Venezuela has been compared with that of President Francia, who terrorized Paraguay for over thirty years. Francia was a worshiper of Napoleon, whom he endeavored to imitate in every possible way. He possesses only one portrait of his idol, a German caricature, which depicted the emperor wearing an exaggerated version of the famous gray overcoat. Francia took this picture seriously and for many years paraded the streets of Asuncion clad in a gray dressing gown and a cocked hat, which he fondly believed to be the habitual garb of the French despot.

Castro's most distinguished predecessor was also a Napoleon devotee, but Bolivar had seen his idol and could thus imitate him more faithfully. He managed to acquire the emperor's brusque speech and other mannerisms, pulled people's ears when in a good humor and dictated dispatches to several secretaries at once. He founded an order closely modeled on the Legion of Honor; surrounded himself with a guard of negroes from Haiti, after the style of Napoleon's mamelukes, and endeavored to codify the laws of his country. When he returned to America after witnessing Napoleon's coronation Bolivar entered Caracas standing in a Roman chariot drawn by twelve maidens belonging to the first families of the town.—London Chronicle.

A Narrow Escape.

When Mr. Hartman returned an hour later than usual, Mrs. Hartman asked him the reason, and his good natured face was solemn as he answered her. "I haf had one narrow escape from drowning, Katchen," he said.

"How was that happen?" asked his wife as she helped him unwind the knitted scarf from his neck. "Tell to me it at once, Hans."

"It was at the ferry that I came late," said Mr. Hartman, "from the blocked cars, and the boat she was just starting. A man he called me out, 'Joomp, joomp!' and for one moment I thought to make as he said. But I reminded myself to be cautious and wait, and in one minute more, Katchen, came a great patch of water showing! Then I took holt of the post whereby I stood and said to myself, 'Hans, you were the wise man that you joomped not at first when that man advised.'"

Cracked Furniture.

Ugly marks caused by splits or cracked places in furniture are easily filled in with beeswax, and the mark is never detected. In fact, this is how furniture dealers cover such blemishes. First slightly soften the beeswax until it is like putty, then press firmly into the cracks and smooth evenly with a thin knife. Sandpaper over the surrounding wood and work the dust into the beeswax. This gives a wood finish or color, and when the furniture is varnished you will look in vain for the blemishes. It is better than putty, since putty soon dries, crumbles and falls out, while beeswax will remain forever just where it is placed.

They Needed Prayers.

A member of parliament tells a good story of an out of the way country clergyman who did not keep up to date in what was going on in the world. One Sunday he asked his sexton: "Is the prayer for parliament to be used today? Is parliament still sitting?"

The sexton's reply came promptly, "Well, sir, I don't know; but, anyhow, better pray for them, for they're a precious bad lot!"—London Standard.

Truthful.

He—Give me a kiss. She (decidedly) —I won't. He—You shouldn't say "I won't" to me; you should say, "I prefer not." She—But that wouldn't be true.

The greatest firmness is the greatest mercy.—Longfellow.

THE HOME PHYSICIAN

Some Hints to Keep People Well.

Ninety-nine per cent. of the ordinary sicknesses are caused by the bowels, the kidneys or the skin.

As you know, these organs are the great purifiers of the human system. They filter impurities from the blood and pass them from the body. If the kidneys, bowels or skin weaken or get tired out or fail to do their regular work—then the blood becomes laden with impurities and poisoned. If it be the fault of the kidneys, then the skin is overworked in its efforts to throw off the excess of urea or waste matter. The glands become inflamed and enlarged—pimples break out—and there may be a rash or eczema of the skin. If it is the fault of the skin, then the kidneys are strained by overwork and there is constant pain in the back, dizziness, neuralgia, headaches and rheumatism. If it be the fault of the bowels, the blood is poisoned, the skin and kidneys weakened, the stomach upset—and, of course, there is Constipation and Biliousness.

How easy it is, then, to be free of all these troubles!

"Fruit-a-tives" is not merely a remedy for any one of these troubles but a cure for all. "Fruit-a-tives" acts on the skin, the liver, and the kidneys. "Fruit-a-tives" keeps all these great organs well and strong, and thus insures the blood being always pure and rich. With "Fruit-a-tives" in the house to take at the first sign of not feeling well, you need not have a day's sickness. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

A NAUTICAL HAMLET.

Says the steward to the cook, says he,
"I'll tell you wot it is—
This world is but a wale o' tears,
And if it warn't for Liz
I'd just jump off into the sea
And end the ugly biz."

Says the cook, "Before yer go," says he,
"Just calkeriate a heap.
Things might be wurs where you'd go,
So think before yer leap.
I ain't by this denying that
The ocean's mighty deep."

Says the steward, "That's quite true," says he.
"When everything is said
My plans 'u'd surely be upsot
And knocked upon the head
If arter killin' of myself
I'd find I wasn't dead!"
—Century Magazine.

Mean Man.

"Katherine," gasped the young husband as he rubbed his aching teeth, "what kind of cake do you call this?"

"Why, Henry, that is 'pyramid cake,'" responded his wife proudly.

"Pyramid cake, eh? By jinks, I might have known it!"

"Ah, you notice its resemblance to a pyramid?"

"I should say I do. It is heavy enough to be made of stone."—Detroit Tribune.

SPOTTING CRIMINALS

Plans of London Shops and Banks For Foiling Thieves.

A CODE OF SECRET SIGNALS.

The Moment a Suspect Is Discovered In an Establishment the Warning Is Quickly Given to the Employees, Who Are Instantly on the Alert.

"Do you know if Brown has returned that parcel of stones yet?"

The scene may be the shop of a fashionable west end jeweler. Costly gems glint in velvet lined cases. One frock coated shopman turns casually to another with the perfectly natural question quoted above.

To those customers who may be in the establishment the remark means nothing, but to the man who is addressed it spells volumes. "Brown" is a secret code word, and it means that the elegantly clad woman to whom the speaker is displaying a tray of sparkling stones is suspected by him of being a thief and that her every action must be watched.

Quite recently in connection with a terrible outrage in the west end of London, in which an unfortunate money changer was done to death in his office by a desperate robber, the fact was disclosed that in the case of a sudden attack it had been arranged that one of the assistants should employ the "distress signal" of hurling a brass paperweight through the window of the office.

Although most people are quite unaware of the fact, practically every banker, money changer and jeweler in the fashionable quarter of the metropolis has some prearranged code by which one employee may warn his fellows that a dubious character has entered the establishment.

In one well known bank this is the system adopted: Should a cashier's suspicions be aroused by the actions or speech of a man upon the other side of the counter he will step across in a perfectly innocent way to a certain desk which stands quite apart from the others. The custodian at the doorway sees the action, knows its significance and is instantly on the alert.

In the case of another bank the cashier whose suspicions are aroused need not even move away from his desk to warn the watcher. The scheme employed is this: Along the guarding rail of the counter are a series of plates bearing the word "Prayer" or "Receiver," according to the duties of the cashier in each particular section.

These, by design, are all placed slightly askew. Should one of the officials behind the desks suspect the good faith of an individual to whom he is attending all he has to do in order to place the patrol in uniform upon the qui vive is to reach up a leisurely hand and turn one of these plates so that it is in a perfectly straight line with the rail from which it projects.

The ingenuity of this idea lies in the fact that, while the action is perfectly natural, it is so unmistakable that even when the bank is full of people it cannot fail to be observed by the man who is upon the lookout.

Quite the most elaborate system of which details are obtainable is that installed by a firm of electrical engineers for one prominent west end jeweler. The manager who is on duty sits at a glass screened desk in the rear of the shop in such a position that, while scarcely being seen himself and certainly without making any movement, he has an absolutely unimpeded view of every counter and show case.

Near him, on a small board, shielded from view, is a row of tiny red electric light bulbs. One corresponds to the position of each of the suave assistants who attends to the wants of the jewel buying public. Sunk in the floor, near the foot of each assistant, is a button, and his duty is done when, should he think a customer he is serving may not be "on the square," he places his foot on this convenient button. The little glow lamp lights up at the other end of the wire, and the manager's attention is promptly focused in the direction indicated.

Should his keen scrutiny reveal an actual theft from the articles displayed on the counter or from some unprotected tray he himself presses a button as the thief turns to leave the shop. This serves to warn a smart attendant who is on duty at the portals, and the wrongdoer finds his or her pathway barred without a word having been uttered or sign of warning given.—London Answers.

Healthiest in the World.

"Despite the fact that hospital nurses have extremely arduous work and are exposed to almost every known contagious disease, I believe that they are the healthiest class of people," said Miss Goodrich, superintendent of the Training School For Nurses at Bellevue hospital, New York city, the other day. VEST'S CAMPAIGN SPEECH.

Why a Small Boy Persisted In Hearing It Every Day.

"Senator Vest was making a buggy campaign in southeast Missouri some years ago," said a Missouri official. "His driver was a small boy, who was duly impressed with the importance of his distinguished passenger.

"At each town visited by Vest the boy hurried his team to a convenient livery barn and then raced for the courthouse, or wherever the 'speakin'' was to take place, and perched himself with painful regularity on the front seat. He invariably turned his eyes on the senator and took in every word of the speech as if his very life depended on it.

"Finally the lad's continued conspicuous presence among his auditors annoyed the senator, and he kindly but firmly reminded the boy that it was not necessary for him to attend every meeting.

"'I make the same speech each time. You have heard it often enough to know it by rote, so just put in your time in the future looking after the team,' he admonished his youthful driver.

"Despite the senator's objection, the boy was again in the front seat the next day and the following day. This enraged Vest, and he thundered:

"'Why do you persist in always occupying that front seat? Didn't I tell you I make the same speech every day? It's as old and stale to you as it is to me. Why insist on hearing it again and again?'

"'I want to see what you're going to do when you fergit it,' answered the boy. Vest capitulated."

THE ELEPHANT FLEET.

How It Is Used by the British Government In India.

Its elephant fleet is one of the strangest and most deadly departments maintained by the British government in India. It is a large fleet of coasting steamers specially built for the transport of elephants. India's population is one-fifth that of the entire globe. All these people use elephants. They use them for draft work and for tiger hunting, and in the arenas of the native states they even pit them against one another and against wild beasts. The elephant fleet transfers the animals from Dacca, the trapping and training headquarters, to the various districts whence comes the demand.

To get an elephant aboard ship is a difficult and dangerous task. The animal must wade through the surf to a stout raft, and this unknown surf, so white and tumultuous, often terrifies and maddens him. If in his fury he slaughters a mahout or two he cannot be greatly blamed. Once on the raft, his legs are tied to pegs, and the slow sail to the ship is uneventful. But now a great band must be arranged under the elephant's belly, and a crane must hoist him up some twenty or thirty feet to the deck. Here again the elephant cannot be set down as intractable if, losing his head in that unprecedented aerial journey, he murders some more mahouts. Very prosperous, albeit stained a little with mahouts' blood, the elephant fleet for many years has plied up and down the Indian coast, embarking and disembarking its heavy, unmanageable freight.

The Appreciation of Music.

If we would appreciate music aright, we must remember that its beauty depends not upon the composer alone, but upon ourselves also. Deep calls unto deep, and the harmony of sound, though appealing primarily to the outward ear, must be answered by a harmony from within ourselves. The more culture we bring to the hearing of music, the wider our sympathy, the more exquisite will be the echoes which it awakens in the soul. If we would understand the composer's message we must co-operate with him. We must reach out to him with all our faculties. If we do that, the revelation of music will ceaselessly renew its beauty, ever turning unimagined aspects to gladden us.—Redfern Mason in Atlantic.

An Ugly Looking Lizard.

Among the lizards of Australia the "thorny devil" (Moloch horridus) is unrivaled in its ugliness. From the tip of its nose to the end of its tail this lizard is covered with tubercles and spines, but in spite of its dangerous appearance it is quite harmless. It measures about seven inches in length. It has a flat body, a small head and a cylindrical tail. It frequents sandy places, feeds largely on ants and is more or less diurnal in habits. Its powerful limbs are furnished with strong claws, which it uses in digging the sand, in which it often lies wholly or partially buried.

Defined.

"What is the difference between firmness and obstinacy?" asked a young lady of her fiance.

"Firmness," was his gallant reply, "is a noble characteristic of women; obstinacy is a lamentable defect in men."

When Betty Was Lost.

By LULU JOHNSON

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

Strang, sitting in his big touring car, watched with lazy interest the tiny figure of the child toiling up the hill. He was fond of children, all sorts and varieties, but there was an elfin daintiness about this independent young wayfarer that appealed most particularly to him.

She could not be more than five, yet she carried herself with a knowing little air that belied her timid eyes and her rosy, quivering mouth, while her smart frock and fetching hat indicated comfortable circumstances.

He forgot that Danvers was half an hour late for their appointment. He even neglected to think about a certain girl whose image for the past week had filled his thoughts almost constantly.

To his dismay, as the child was opposite him she sat down upon the steps of a high stooped house and began to cry, not loudly and with a wild display of grief, but quietly, as if she sought to keep back the tears that trickled down her cheeks.

In an instant Strang was out of the car and knelt on the stoop beside her, seeking to learn the cause of her grief.

"I guess I'm losted," was the plaintive reply, "an' there isn't any policeman to find me."

"Perhaps I'm as good as a policeman," he suggested as, with a shudder, he thought of this dainty child's spending the day in some dingy police station. "How were you lost, and where do you live?"

"I was wi' muvver," was the halting explanation. "She comed in on the trolley, an' when we changed I was losted, an' then I tried to find Aunt Mollie's, an' I guess she's losted too. I can't find her either."

"Where do you live? In the country?" he asked hopefully. If they used any particular trolley it might be easy to trace her people.

"On the gween trolley," assented the child. "We live way out, most to where they stop."

"I guess we can find you then," declared Sidney cheerfully. "You jump into my car and I'll take you out along the line. We're sure to see the place then. Is your house right on the line of the cars?"

SIDNEY DECIDED THAT SHE WAS THE "AUNT MOLLIE."

"No, we has to walk a dood lot," said the child.

"But you'll remember the corner where you took the car?" urged Strang. And this time she nodded an assent.

Only one suburban line boasted green cars. These ran out to Mount Holly, a distance of eighteen miles. By following along the road, which for the greater part of the way paralleled the tracks, he probably would enable the child to get her bearings.

She was old enough to recognize a familiar neighborhood even if she was too young to be able to call the suburb by name.

He made her comfortable in the seat beside him, and presently they were whizzing through the side streets toward the open country. Sidney forgot all about the belated Danvers, but he could not quite forget about the girl who had been haunting his memory. As they rushed along her image came back afresh to him.

Somehow the child with her flowerlike face reminded him tantalizingly of that older girl whom he had seen sitting in a box at the theater a week before.

Strang had questioned several of his friends between acts, but no one seemed to know her, and he had spent his leisure time since then in trying to find some trace of her.

He was not permitted to enjoy his thoughts long, for the child soon forgot her troubles in the delight of riding, and her very evident pleasure delighted Sidney, who even dared arrest to let the speed out another notch when the child begged to go faster.

But when they had come to the end of the line and she had not recognized any familiar landmark the situation turned serious.

Perhaps even now a hysterical mother might be clamoring at the police station for her child, and a general alarm sent out at once might cause him to be apprehended. With an anxious face he turned to the child for a suggestion, and the self possessed little one promptly replied:

"We might look for Aunt Mollie. She lives close where you found me. She can tell where I live. If you stop where the cars stop you can get to her place from there."

Sidney Strang accepted the suggestion thankfully, and after treating the shivering child to hot soda he headed the car for town.

He sent it along at the best speed limit, wondering how he would explain this semiabduction should the police have been warned.

He breathed more freely when they entered the city again, and presently they were at the transfer point for suburban trolleys. From her seat in the car the child seemed able to pick up her landmarks, and presently, sighing with regret, she pointed to a house which she declared to be her aunt's. Sidney drew to the curb and alighted to lift the little traveler down.

"It was a terrible nice ride," she declared. "I wisht I lived miles an' miles an' miles away."

Sidney scarcely echoed the wish, but he patted the cheek that was offered for his caress and turned to climb into the car.

At this instant he heard an exclamation of surprise and turned to look into the glowing eyes of the rosy girl he wanted to know, the girl of the box party.

She had caught the child up in her arms, laughing and crying simultaneously. Sidney decided that she was the "Aunt Mollie" for whom they had searched and raised his hat.

"The kiddie lost her way," he explained. "I ran out to Mount Holly in the hope that she might be able to locate her home, but the effort was unavailing, and at last she remembered that she could find her way from the transfer station to your house."

"Lost!" The girl laughed nervously. "Betty," she added, "do you mean to say that you made this gentleman take you out to Mount Holly?"

The child nodded her head and looked fearlessly at the other girl.

"Betty has a passion for automobiling," she added. "Father has an inexplicable fear of it and will not have a car, so I suppose that she took this means of obtaining a ride, the scheming little puss. She shall be punished and put to bed. She doesn't live in the country. Our home is just around the corner.

"Betty went out to play with a little friend, and not until the other little girl came to ask where she was did we realize that she was not safe at the Rawlings home."

"Jimmie Rawlings?" asked Sidney quickly. "Jim and I are great friends. May I ask him to bring me to call some time? Then I might have an excuse for taking Betty for a ride without tempting her to get lost on her own doorstep. It was just around the corner that I found her."

"She deserves no more rides," was the severe declaration, but Sidney offered an emphatic negative.

"I shall feel that she deserves many rides," he declared boldly, "if you will act as her chaperon."

"Ask Mr. Rawlings to bring you over," she consented. "I am Alice Fekins, by the way, and I am sure that Betty—and I—will be very glad to go riding."

"I'll come tomorrow," promised Sidney as he climbed into the car. Then as he rolled down the street he assured himself that Betty should be forgiven and have a daily ride, for she had found for him the girl of girls.

Hamilton street railway employees and the company have mutually arranged a new timetable.

Changed Her Name.

Mrs. Pigg, a very charming and vivacious widow, called on a legal friend of hers, a widower, to consult him on a matter of interest to her.

"You know, sir," she said to him, "that when the late Mr. Pigg died he left me all his fortune, much to my satisfaction, of course, but he handicapped it with the name of Pigg, which I must say I don't like."

"Well," ventured the lawyer, "I presume a handsome woman isn't especially complimented by being left a Pigg."

"I should say not," she laughed. "Now, what I came to see you about was whether or not I must execute what you call a deed poll to get it changed."

"Um—er," he hesitated, as if wrestling with a great legal problem—"um—er—yes, but an easier way is to apply to a parson, and I'll pay all the expenses myself."

It was sudden, but a widow is never caught napping, and she appointed that evening for another consultation.

The Miserable Moors.

The lives lived by the Moors are without perhaps any exception the most precarious and miserable that can be imagined. The poor man is thrown into prison for sums he never possessed and can never pay, the rich to be squeezed of all he possesses, while those only can hope to escape who are members of families sufficiently powerful to arouse the fears of the local governor should he attempt extortion and not sufficiently powerful to stir up the avarice of the sultan.

Even the governors of the provinces suffer themselves as they make others suffer, for just as they squeeze the agriculturist and the peasant so are they in turn squeezed by the sultan and his viziers, and, should they fail by constant presents to maintain a good opinion at the court, they can expect only imprisonment and often death.—Blackwood's Magazine.

SPOTTING CRIMINALS

Plans of London Shops and Banks For Foiling Thieves.

A CODE OF SECRET SIGNALS.

The Moment a Suspect Is Discovered in an Establishment the Warning Is Quickly Given to the Employees, Who Are Instantly on the Alert.

"Do you know if Brown has returned that parcel of stones yet?"

The scene may be the shop of a fashionable west end jeweler. Costly gems glint in velvet lined cases. One frock coated shopman turns casually to another with the perfectly natural question quoted above.

To those customers who may be in the establishment the remark means nothing, but to the man who is addressed it spells volumes. "Brown" is a secret code word, and it means that the elegantly clad woman to whom the speaker is displaying a tray of sparkling stones is suspected by him of being a thief and that her every action must be watched.

Quite recently in connection with a terrible outrage in the west end of London, in which an unfortunate money changer was done to death in his office by a desperate robber, the fact was disclosed that in the case of a sudden attack it had been arranged that one of the assistants should employ the "distress signal" of hurling a brass paperweight through the window of the office.

Although most people are quite unaware of the fact, practically every banker, money changer and jeweler in the fashionable quarter of the metropolis has some prearranged code by which one employee may warn his fellows that a dubious character has entered the establishment.

In one well known bank this is the system adopted: Should a cashier's suspicions be aroused by the actions or speech of a man upon the other side of the counter he will step across in a perfectly innocent way to a certain desk which stands quite apart from the others. The custodian at the doorway sees the action, knows its significance and is instantly on the alert.

In the case of another bank the cashier whose suspicions are aroused need not even move away from his desk to warn the watcher. The scheme employed is this: Along the guarding rail of the counter are a series of plates bearing the word "Prayer" or "Receiver," according to the duties of the cashier in each particular section.

These, by design, are all placed slightly askew. Should one of the officials behind the desks suspect the good faith of an individual to whom he is attending all he has to do in order to place the patrol in uniform upon the qui vive is to reach up a leisurely hand and turn one of these plates so that it is in a perfectly straight line with the rail from which it projects.

The ingenuity of this idea lies in the fact that, while the action is perfectly natural, it is so unmistakable that even when the bank is full of people it cannot fail to be observed by the man who is upon the lookout.

Quite the most elaborate system of which details are obtainable is that installed by a firm of electrical engineers for one prominent west end jeweler. The manager who is on duty sits at a glass screened desk in the rear of the shop in such a position that, while scarcely being seen himself and certainly without making any movement, he has an absolutely unimpeded view of every counter and show case.

Near him, on a small board, shielded from view, is a row of tiny red electric light bulbs. One corresponds to the position of each of the suave assistants who attends to the wants of the jewel buying public. Sunk in the floor, near the foot of each assistant, is a button, and his duty is done when, should he think a customer he is serving may not be "on the square," he places his foot on this convenient button. The little glow lamp lights up at the other end of the wire, and the manager's attention is promptly focused in the direction indicated.

Should his keen scrutiny reveal an actual theft from the articles displayed on the counter or from some unprotected tray he himself presses a button as the thief turns to leave the shop. This serves to warn a smart attendant who is on duty at the portals, and the wrongdoer finds his or her pathway barred without a word having been uttered or sign of warning given.—London Answers.

The Oldest Universities.

The earliest date which any university puts forth is that which Cambridge makes that it was founded about 635. Its continuous history dates, however, from 1109. Paris was founded in 792 and renovated in 1200. Oxford dates back to an academy mentioned as ancient in 802; the schools were founded by King Alfred about 870, and King Henry III. granted the charter in 1248. Bologna dates from 1110. Salamanca was founded in 1239. —Argonaut.

VEST'S CAMPAIGN SPEECH.

Why a Small Boy Persisted In Hearing It Every Day.

"Senator Vest was making a buggy campaign in southeast Missouri some years ago," said a Missouri official. "His driver was a small boy, who was duly impressed with the importance of his distinguished passenger.

"At each town visited by Vest the boy hurried his team to a convenient livery barn and then raced for the courthouse, or wherever the 'speakin'' was to take place, and perched himself with painful regularity on the front seat. He invariably turned his eyes on the senator and took in every word of the speech as if his very life depended on it.

"Finally the lad's continued conspicuous presence among his auditors annoyed the senator, and he kindly but firmly reminded the boy that it was not necessary for him to attend every meeting.

"'I make the same speech each time. You have heard it often enough to know it by rote, so just put in your time in the future looking after the team,' he admonished his youthful driver.

"Despite the senator's objection, the boy was again in the front seat the next day and the following day. This enraged Vest, and he thundered:

"'Why do you persist in always occupying that front seat? Didn't I tell you I make the same speech every day? It's as old and stale to you as it is to me. Why insist on hearing it again and again?'

"'I want to see what you're going to do when you fergit it,' answered the boy. Vest capitulated."

THE ELEPHANT FLEET.

How It Is Used by the British Government In India.

Its elephant fleet is one of the strangest and most deadly departments maintained by the British government in India. It is a large fleet of coasting steamers specially built for the transport of elephants. India's population is one-fifth that of the entire globe. All these people use elephants. They use them for draft work and for tiger hunting, and in the arenas of the native states they even pit them against one another and against wild beasts. The elephant fleet transfers the animals from Dacca, the trapping and training headquarters, to the various districts whence comes the demand.

To get an elephant aboard ship is a difficult and dangerous task. The animal must wade through the surf to a stout raft, and this unknown surf, so white and tumultuous, often terrifies and maddens him. If in his fury he slaughters a mahout or two he cannot be greatly blamed. Once on the raft, his legs are tied to pegs, and the slow sail to the ship is uneventful. But now a great band must be arranged under the elephant's belly, and a crane must hoist him up some twenty or thirty feet to the deck. Here again the elephant cannot be set down as intractable if, losing his head in that unprecedented aerial journey, he murders some more mahouts. Very prosperous, albeit stained a little with mahouts' blood, the elephant fleet for many years has plied up and down the Indian coast, embarking and disembarking its heavy, unmanageable freight.

The Appreciation of Music.

If we would appreciate music aright, we must remember that its beauty depends not upon the composer alone, but upon ourselves also. Deep calls unto deep, and the harmony of sound, though appealing primarily to the outward ear, must be answered by a harmony from within ourselves. The more culture we bring to the hearing of music, the wider our sympathy, the more exquisite will be the echoes which it awakens in the soul. If we would understand the composer's message we must co-operate with him. We must reach out to him with all our faculties. If we do that, the revelation of music will ceaselessly renew its beauty, ever turning unimagined aspects to gladden us.—Redfern Mason in Atlantic.

An Ugly Looking Lizard.

Among the lizards of Australia the "thorny devil" (Moloch horridus) is unrivaled in its ugliness. From the tip of its nose to the end of its tail this lizard is covered with tubercles and spines, but in spite of its dangerous appearance it is quite harmless. It measures about seven inches in length. It has a flat body, a small head and a cylindrical tail. It frequents sandy places, feeds largely on ants and is more or less diurnal in habits. Its powerful limbs are furnished with strong claws, which it uses in digging the sand, in which it often lies wholly or partially buried.

Defined.

"What is the difference between firmness and obstinacy?" asked a young lady of her fiance.

"Firmness," was his gallant reply, "is a noble characteristic of women; obstinacy is a lamentable defect in men."

When Betty Was Lost.

By LULU JOHNSON

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

Strang, sitting in his big touring car, watched with lazy interest the tiny figure of the child toiling up the hill. He was fond of children, all sorts and varieties, but there was an elfin daintiness about this independent young wayfarer that appealed most particularly to him.

She could not be more than five, yet she carried herself with a knowing little air that belied her timid eyes and her rosy, quivering mouth, while her smart frock and fetching hat indicated comfortable circumstances.

He forgot that Danvers was half an hour late for their appointment. He even neglected to think about a certain girl whose image for the past week had filled his thoughts almost constantly.

To his dismay, as the child was opposite him she sat down upon the steps of a high stooped house and began to cry, not loudly and with a wild display of grief, but quietly, as if she sought to keep back the tears that trickled down her cheeks.

In an instant Strang was out of the car and knelt on the stoop beside her, seeking to learn the cause of her grief.

"I guess I'm losted," was the plaintive reply, "an' there isn't any policeman to find me."

"Perhaps I'm as good as a policeman," he suggested as, with a shudder, he thought of this dainty child's spending the day in some dingy police station. "How were you lost, and where do you live?"

"I was wi' muvver," was the halting explanation. "She comed in on the trolley, an' when we changed I was losted, an' then I tried to find Aunt Mollie's, an' I guess she's losted too. I can't find her either."

"Where do you live? In the country?" he asked hopefully. If they used any particular trolley it might be easy to trace her people.

"On the gween trolley," assented the child. "We live way out, most to where they stop."

"I guess we can find you then," declared Sidney cheerfully. "You jump into my car and I'll take you out along the line. We're sure to see the place then. Is your house right on the line of the cars?"

SIDNEY DECIDED THAT SHE WAS THE "AUNT MOLLIE."

"No, we has to walk a dood lot," said the child.

"But you'll remember the corner where you took the car?" urged Strang. And this time she nodded an assent.

Only one suburban line boasted green cars. These ran out to Mount Holly, a distance of eighteen miles. By following along the road, which for the greater part of the way paralleled the tracks, he probably would enable the child to get her bearings.

She was old enough to recognize a familiar neighborhood even if she was too young to be able to call the suburb by name.

He made her comfortable in the seat beside him, and presently they were whizzing through the side streets toward the open country. Sidney forgot all about the belated Danvers, but he could not quite forget about the girl who had been haunting his memory. As they rushed along her image came back afresh to him.

Somehow the child with her flowerlike face reminded him tantalizingly of that older girl whom he had seen sitting in a box at the theater a week before.

Strang had questioned several of his friends between acts, but no one seemed to know her, and he had spent his leisure time since then in trying to find some trace of her.

He was not permitted to enjoy his thoughts long, for the child soon forgot her troubles in the delight of riding, and her very evident pleasure delighted Sidney, who even dared arrest to let the speed out another notch when the child begged to go faster.

But when they had come to the end of the line and she had not recognized any familiar landmark the situation turned serious.

Perhaps even now a hysterical mother might be clamoring at the police station for her child, and a general alarm sent out at once might cause him to be apprehended. With an anxious face he turned to the child for a suggestion, and the self possessed little one promptly replied:

"We might look for Aunt Mollie. She lives close where you found me. She can tell where I live. If you stop where the cars stop you can get to her place from there."

Sidney Strang accepted the suggestion thankfully, and after treating the shivering child to hot soda he headed the car for town.

He sent it along at the best speed limit, wondering how he would explain this semiabduction should the police have been warned.

He breathed more freely when they entered the city again, and presently they were at the transfer point for suburban trolleys. From her seat in the car the child seemed able to pick up her landmarks, and presently, sighing with regret, she pointed to a house which she declared to be her aunt's. Sidney drew to the curb and alighted to lift the little traveler down.

"It was a terrible nice ride," she declared. "I wisht I lived miles an' miles an' miles away."

Sidney scarcely echoed the wish, but he patted the cheek that was offered for his caress and turned to climb into the car.

At this instant he heard an exclamation of surprise and turned to look into the glowing eyes of the rosy girl he wanted to know, the girl of the box party.

She had caught the child up in her arms, laughing and crying simultaneously. Sidney decided that she was the "Aunt Mollie" for whom they had searched and raised his hat.

"The kiddie lost her way," he explained. "I ran out to Mount Holly in the hope that she might be able to locate her home, but the effort was unavailing, and at last she remembered that she could find her way from the transfer station to your house."

"Lost!" The girl laughed nervously. "Betty," she added, "do you mean to say that you made this gentleman take you out to Mount Holly?"

The child nodded her head and looked fearlessly at the other girl.

"Betty has a passion for automobiling," she added. "Father has an inexplicable fear of it and will not have a car, so I suppose that she took this means of obtaining a ride, the scheming little puss. She shall be punished and put to bed. She doesn't live in the country. Our home is just around the corner.

"Betty went out to play with a little friend, and not until the other little girl came to ask where she was did we realize that she was not safe at the Rawlings home."

"Jimmie Rawlings?" asked Sidney quickly. "Jim and I are great friends. May I ask him to bring me to call some time? Then I might have an excuse for taking Betty for a ride without tempting her to get lost on her own doorstep. It was just around the corner that I found her."

"She deserves no more rides," was the severe declaration, but Sidney offered an emphatic negative.

"I shall feel that she deserves many rides," he declared boldly, "if you will act as her chaperon."

"Ask Mr. Rawlings to bring you over," she consented. "I am Alice Fakins, by the way, and I am sure that Betty—and I—will be very glad to go riding."

"I'll come tomorrow," promised Sidney as he climbed into the car. Then as he rolled down the street he assured himself that Betty should be forgiven and have a daily ride, for she had found for him the girl of girls.

Hamilton street railway employees and the company have mutually arranged a new timetable.

Changed Her Name.

Mrs. Pigg, a very charming and vivacious widow, called on a legal friend of hers, a widower, to consult him on a matter of interest to her.

"You know, sir," she said to him, "that when the late Mr. Pigg died he left me all his fortune, much to my satisfaction, of course, but he handicapped it with the name of Pigg, which I must say I don't like."

"Well," ventured the lawyer, "I presume a handsome woman isn't especially complimented by being left a Pigg."

"I should say not," she laughed. "Now, what I came to see you about was whether or not I must execute what you call a deed poll to get it changed."

"Um—er," he hesitated, as if wrestling with a great legal problem—"um—er—yes, but an easier way is to apply to a parson, and I'll pay all the expenses myself."

It was sudden, but a widow is never caught napping, and she appointed that evening for another consultation.

The Miserable Moors.

The lives lived by the Moors are without perhaps any exception the most precarious and miserable that can be imagined. The poor man is thrown into prison for sums he never possessed and can never pay, the rich to be squeezed of all he possesses, while those only can hope to escape who are members of families sufficiently powerful to arouse the fears of the local governor should be attempt extortion and not sufficiently powerful to stir up the avarice of the sultan.

Even the governors of the provinces suffer themselves as they make others suffer, for just as they squeeze the agriculturist and the peasant so are they in turn squeezed by the sultan and his viziers, and, should they fail by constant presents to maintain a good opinion at the court, they can expect only imprisonment and often death.—Blackwood's Magazine.

ARE BUYING UP YORK LOAN LANDS

Sales of Defunct Concern's Assets This Year Amount to $165,000

are buying

Toronto March 27.—The values of the land assets of the defunct York Loan Company are increasing by leaps and bounds this year over $165000 worth of property having been sold this year and of this amount 3700 feet of frontage on Roncesvalles avenue, and west, was sold since March 1st at an average price of $29 per foot. The total sales for 1908 were $275000.

Last month was the record month since the National Trust Company undertook to liquidate the stranded concern for those whose money was tied up in it. February sales aggregated 1600 feet frontage, but this month will nearly triple that amount. In March 1908, 450 feet of land was sold and at that time it was considered a fair month's record. Since liquidation was commenced about $700000 worth of land has been sold.

GOES TO TRIAL ON ITS MERITS

The supreme court today dismissed the appeal of J. R. Stratton, M.P., in the West Peterborough election case. Preliminary objections were taken by the respondent to the petition on the ground of substantial service and other alleged irregularities but these were dismissed by the high court judge. Mr. Stratton appealed but it has not been entertained. In consequence the case will go to trial on the merits.—Ottawa Citizen.

THE YOUNG CONSERVATIVE CLUB

A special general meeting of the members of the Young Conservative Club is called for Saturday evening next at eight o'clock for the purpose of taking measures to extend the influence and membership of the club and to receive reports of the highly satisfactory results of the recent canvass for subscriptions made recently to put the club in a good position financially and entirely free of debt. About five hundred dollars has been subscribed in this way so far and it is confidently expected that the members of the club and other Conservatives who have not subscribed will lend all the assistance in their power to increasing the membership and advancing the general interests of a club that serves both as a sanctum for party conferences and a pleasant home at a low fee for those who enjoy club life amid party associations. The weekly euchre contest for prizes takes place this (Tuesday) evening.

CURLERS CLOSE THE SEASON WITH AN ENJOYABLE TIME

Banquet and Presentation of Prizes at the Rink Last Evening—Large Turnout of the Members.

One of the most enjoyable events that have been held for some time was the banquet and presentation of prizes at the curling rink last night. A large number were present, and the goodfellowship that was shown must indeed be gratifying to those who have the interests of curling at heart. A noticeable feature of the evening was the number of young men who have participated in curling this year and had won prizes. That they have been loyally dealt with by the older players was evidenced by their remarks. The speeches of all the speakers were of an enthusiastic nature, and predicted better things in the years to come, although this year has been the most successful season in the history of the club.

In the first part of the evening a business meeting was held, at which the different reports were submitted. The minutes were read and confirmed and the secretary-treasurer's report was a very favorable one, and showed that the officers of the club had conducted the finances in a very business-like manner.

All the members then adjourned to the club rooms upstairs, where refreshments were served on a long table, which was covered with many good things. Conspicuous on the table were two silver cups won by the local club. One was the Lindsay-Peterborough cup and the other the district cup presented by the president of the Ontario Association.

Mr. R. M. Waddell occupied the chair and filled that position in his usual capable manner. He called upon Mr. Robert Hicks to present the prizes in the bonspiel primary. Mr. Hicks said this was the evening when the curlers got together for a social time and to present the prizes to the the successful winners. He believed a foundation was being laid that would result in one of the best curling clubs in existence. He was glad to be present to give the prizes, which were handsome pipes to the winners, who were Messrs. Ferguson, skip; Baptie, vice; Austin, second, and Craig, lead. Each of the winners made suitable replies, and wished the club every success in the years to come.

PRIMARY RUNNERS-UP.

Mr. J. A. Cameron presented the prizes to the runners-up, which were clothes brushes and mirrors. He congratulated the gentlemen who had won the prizes. He was glad to see the great interest the members had taken this year in curling, and hoped that in the years to come that the trophies that the club had striven so hard to win would be landed.

The prize winners were: Messrs. J. H. Connal, skip; W. H. Denham, vice; Ross Cameron, second; W. J. Johnston, lead.

Mr. J. H. Connal made a very interesting speech, in which he returned thanks for the prizes. He gave some good advice to the younger players on the fine points of the game, and urged them to practice the out turn, which made the game much easier, once the player became proficient in it.

CONSOLATION PRIZES.

Mr. T. F. Matthews presented the prizes to the winners in the consolation, which, he said, gave him great pleasure. He paid a high tribute to Mr. R. J. Winch, who was one of the oldest and best sports in the city. Messrs. Knapman, Webb and Wolsterholme were presented with handsome clocks, while Mr. Winch was given a silk hat. All the winners made neat replies, and wished the club all success.

CONSOLATION RUNNERS-UP

Dr. Greer said it gave him much pleasure to present the prizes to the runners-up in the consolation, which was a pair of gold cuff links to each member. The other speakers had voiced his sentiments and he wished the club every success.

The winners were: Messrs. W. J. Thompson, McDermid, Barber and Moore.

SAILOR BOY PRIZE.

Mr. J. A. Cameron presented these prizes to the respective winners, which was a pair of gold cuff links. Mr Cameron said if he could work up any enthusiasm in the scheduled games he would be well repaid for his efforts. The scheduled games this year had been a success, and he looked for still greater success next year. The winners were Messrs. Lang, Ferguson, Lyle and Barber.

Votes of thanks were passed by the following: Messrs. Dennison, Fraser, Tooley and Munro for cigars; and Mr. Mr. J. A. Cameron for his offers to donate a prize for next season.

Mr. R. M. Waddell presented the club with a pair of cow brooms, which were much used by the Scottish curlers.

Mr. G. H. Geroux made a few remarks in which he stated that a great deal of credit for this season's success was due to the older members. They had looked after the younger members, who would be looked upon to bring the curling trophies to Peterborough in the years to come.

The meeting was brought to an end by the singing of Auld Lang Syne and God Save the King.

MOST SUCCESSFUL TEA AND ENTERTAINMENT AT ST. JAMES

Most enjoyable and successful was the tea and entertainment given by the Ladies' Aid Society of St. James' church last evening. The affair was held in the basement of the church and a large number was present. Tea was served from 6 to 8, and the ladies deserve great credit for their work, which resulted in such a sucess. Representatives were present from the different churches of the town, which including Rev. E. A. Pearson, Rev. C. H. Coon, Rev. W. H. Henderson, Rev. Riddiford, Rev. R. J. Webb, Rev. J. G. Potter, Rev. O'Hara and Rev. McCulloch, president of Bay of Quinte Conference. After tea had been served, an interesting programme was run off. D. W. Dumble, K.C., occupied the chair, and the numbers were as follows:

Singing, Hymn No. 108.
Prayer by Rev. W. G. Henderson.
Chairman's address, D. W. Dumble.
Vocal solo, Miss F. Manning.
Addresses by Rev. Coon and Riddiford.
Solo, Mr. Pegg.
Addresses by Rev. E. A. Pearson and R. J. Webb.
Statements by treasurer and pastor.
Singing, Orpheus Quartette.
Address, Rev. O'Hara and W. G. Henderson.
Vocal solo, Mr. Downey.
Address, Rev. Mc. McCulloch.
Vocal solo, Mr. Pegg.
Doxology and benediction.

"THE TRIUMPH OF TRUTH" A PLEASING PRODUCTION

"The Triumph of Truth" pleased a good sized audience at the Grand Opera House last night. The play was presented by local amateurs under the direction of Mr. Irving Beers, who assumed the leading role of Weston, the tramp, and by his good work made the part a most interesting one. He was given good support by the remainder of the cast, all of whom assumed their roles with ability and confidence.

The story of the play is a complicated one and the plot held the attention of the audience throughout. The stage settings were of an appropriate character, and the general production of the piece was most satisfactory.

The cast of the characters was as follows;—

J. W. Weston an itinerant—Irving Beers.
J. Blackburn an impostor—Arthur Graham.
Col. Lee a Southern gentleman—Mort. Johnston.
Jack Worthington a good fellow—George Clark.
Willie Adams a tramp—Ed. Graham.
Frances Lee a disputed possession—Miss Pearl Morgan.
Mrs Lee the Colonel's wife—Miss Agnes Pentland.

An idea of the environment of the piece may be gained from the following scene synopsis;—

Act I.—Lawn of Col. Lee, in Norfolk Virginia.
Act II.—Drawing room in Col. Lee's home.
Act III.—Weston's cabin in the woods.
Act IV—Same as act II.

THE CHARACTERS.

Reference has been made to Mr. Beer's acting but credit must also be given him for his able directoin of the presentation.

Arthur Graham played the part of J. Blackburn an impostor, in a way that showed he had decided talent and did remarkably clever acting in this unattractive and difficult part. His work won him much praise from those who witnessed the performance. Mort. Johnston and Geo. Clarke as Col. Lee, and Jack Worthington respectively, took their parts well and were given considerable applause.

About the funniest stunt of the show was done by Mr. Eddie Graham who as Willie Adams gave a broad and hilarious tramp impersonation. The originality of his make-up was perfection in grotesque and ragged detail, and the way he slid through a Salome shuffle would have done credit to Mat Wills. The crowd called for more and he had to come back for a double encore.

Miss Pearl Morgan excelled herself in the emotional role of France Lee. She had a heavy portion of the play, but measured up to the requirements of the role in every way. Miss Morgan surprised the audience by the depth of her acting and undoubtedly has much ability for stage work.

The part of Mrs. Lee, the Colonel's wife, was capably portrayed by Miss Agnes Pentland. Miss Nellie Graham was piquant and clever as Sadie, the maid.

Mr. A. B. Cutting the well-know local tenor, sang "Mona," in the interval between the third and fourth acts.

At the conclusion of the play the favorite one-act sketch "The Littliest Girl," was given by Mr. Chas. Barber and Mr. Beers and little Miss Garden. This little classic of Richard Harding Davis has been played by the same talent as mentioned, and last night it was given just as excellent and winning a reading as before.

UTENSILS FROM THE FAR NORTH

The Peterborough Historical Society has lately received from the vicinity of Wolstenholm Island, which is well within the Arctic circle, a small set of stone utensils, used by the Eskimo of that region up to the time of their adopting the bone implements of their southern and more civilized friends of the same race in the neighborhood of Dans Strait and Hudson Bay. These utensils consist of a stone lamp for seal oil and flat, round dishes or bowls of the same material, and were brought from the north by Mr. George Boucher, who presents them to the Society. The Eskimo of the far north are still ignorant of the use of fire-arms.

GETTING READY FOR CONFERENCE

Arrangements Being Made at Belleville --- New System of Billetting

Belleville, March 29.—There was nearly a full attendance on Friday night of the gentlemen who have been selected by the governing Board of the Methodist churches of this city to arrange for the meeting of the Bay of Quinte Conference in Belleville in June.

There is to be a radical departure in the billeting of the Conference. For the dinners all the delegates will meet together. This it is thought, will give the delegates opportunities to meet socially each day hitherto denied them, and will likewise relieve the ladies who entertain the visitors from preparing the mid-day meals.

It was in 1836 that the first Methodist Conference was held in Belleville, the last time in June, 1899; in all nine times.

Mayor Rush's Address to Pressmen

The following was the address of His Worship Mayor Rush in welcoming the Canadian Press Association on Saturday;—

Ladies and Gentlemen—As Mayor of the city of Peterborough I wish to add to my personal welcome a most cordial welcome to the visiting members of the Canadian Press Association and their wives on behalf of the citizens in general. Because this welcome is official it is not to be held as any less hearty or less an expression of the popular pleasure afforded in welcoming as guests of the city so important an influential a body of gentlemen with such opportunity for the exercise of an unexpressably great influence.

If I were to speak of the influence and power of the press I would be expressing what would sound to you like platitudes, for that influence and power are so generally recognized that to point them out would be to state perfectly obvious facts. But because they are so well known does not lessen the importance to us of this visit with which you have honored us and our only regret is that the time at your disposal here is so short that we cannot show as much of the city as we should like to do. You have seen a couple of our industries and we hope to show you at least another but we have a number of other manufacturing industries of sufficient importance to be well worth visiting if you had the time, and we would also have been pleased to show you the water powers, which furnish the motive power for these industries. And while we are not a little proud of our industries, we would also like you to see other evidences of the progressiveness and importance of our city, such as our educational institutions, including the Normal School and Collegiate Institute and the several large and well-equipped public schools and the churches and other public buildings If the season were further advanced the city parks would, we believe, repay inspection, and we would have been pleased if you had time for a general view of the city and its homes. What you have seen and will see will give you an idea of the size and importance of Peterborough and I may tell you that we are proud of our city and of the progress it has made and is making. I do not wish to trespass on the short time you have with us but let me again tell you that we are highly gratified because you have paid us this visit, and express the hope that you will share the pleasure that we feel.

CLEARING SALE OF ELECTRIC FIXTURES

JUNIOR LEAGUE ENTERTAINED

The Senior Epworth League of George St. Methodist Church Last Evening

Last evening the Junior Epworth League of George street church entertained the Senior League and a very enjoyable time was spent by all. The chair was occupied by Mr Fred Moran.

A pleasant feature of the evening was a debate by members of the Junior League, "Resolved, that Home Missions are more important than Foreign." The affirmative was taken by Audrey Bennet and Eva Ostrom, and the negative by Howard Armstrong and Murray Carlyle. The young people showed that they had thoroughly prepared their subject, and their efforts were very much appreciated by the audience. The judges were Mr. Moore and Misses Chasty and Davis, and after due consideration the decision was given in favor of the negative.

The rest of the programme consisted of a song by Miss Kathleen Gray, and recitations by Miss Gladys Pentland and Miss Jessie Cameron all of which were well received by those present.

Hudson Bay Traffi route

The Hudson Bay route is found to have wonderful advantages over even the St. Lawrence, especially for Western Canada. Dispatches show that the icebergs in Davis Strait are fewer in number and less dangerous than in the Straits of Belle Isle. Fog is less than in the St. Lawrence river and navigation is safe from June to November. In time of war there is no comparison. The distance is over 1,2000 miles less.

WHY SUFFER?

Breathe Hyomei and Kill the Loathsome Catarrh Germs.

Just as long as you have catarrh your nose will itch, your breath will be foul, you will hawk and spit and you will do other disgusting things because you can't help yourself. The germs of catarrh have got you in their power; they are continually and persistently digging into and irritating the mucous membrane of your nose and throat. They are now making your life miserable; in time they will sap your entire system of its energy, its strength, its vigor and vitality.

Joseph Dural, of Woodstock street, Tavistock, Ont., says; "Catarrh had given me all kinds of suffering for a long time. There was a swelling of the glands under the eyes and adjacent to my nose and the discharges would drop into my throat. I used several remedies, but never got the relief that I did from Booth's Hyomei. I have been so pleased with Hyomei results that I highly recommend its use to catarrh sufferers."

Wm. Madill, the druggist, will guarantee Hyomei to cure catarrh or money back. Don't delay this pleasant antiseptic treatment. Breathe in Hyomei and kill the germs.

Wm. Madill will sell you a compete Hyomei Outfit, including inhaler, for only $1.00. It is also guaranteed to cure bronchitis, asthma, coughs, colds, hay fever and croup.

$7 SUITS at CRESSMAN'S 98

To morrow morning sharp at 8.10 (not one minute before) we will sell in the Annex 49 beautiful Wash Suits, worth 2.50 to 7.50. Note, as usual we must refuse and have refused a score of times to-day to reserve any suit for either customers or employees of the store. Come early—All suits placed in the Annex at 7.30.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES

It is not often an opportunity occurs at your door to see the latest Parisian and New York styles in Hair Goods yet such is the case, as Prof. Dorenwend of Toronto is visiting this town and invites your inspection of these goods at his private apartments reserved at the hotel.

These Hair Goods styles, when properly adjusted, protect and ornament the head, soften and beautify the expression of the face, and consequently tone up an aged appearance. Be sure and see them at the Oriental hotel, Peterborough, on Wednesday, April 7th.

A Coming Dance

The "Gentlemen of Peterborough" are sending out invitations for a dance to be held in the Conservatory of Music on Tuesday, the thirteenth of April, 1909, at eight o'clock, Fralick's orchestra. Mr. W. S. Davidson is honorary secretary.

The patronesses are:—Mrs. T. Campbell, Mrs. John Crane, Mrs. Jas. Hamilton, Mrs. R. R. Hall, Mrs. T. D. Mulholland, Mrs. J. R. Stratton.

UNCLE JOSHUA SIMPKINS

The sensational rural comedy-drama "Joshua Simpkins," will be produced at the Grand Opera House Saturday April 3rd, matinee and night. The play contains an interesting and intelligible plot, but it is not allowed to interfere with the fun, which is said to be in abundance. During the run of the play some startling scenes and situations are seen, the principal of which is said to be the saw-mill, in the third act shown in complete operation, cutting up real timber. The saw used is the genuine article; the same as usually seen in large country saw-mills. An excellent band and fine orchestra accompany this attraction. The band will parade at noon when some good music may be looked for all being dressed as farmers.

SOME THEATRICAL NOTES OF INTEREST TO LOCAL PEOPLE

Imperial Opera Company Has Disbanded, Business Going to the Bad—Lights Went Out During Performance of Daniel Ryan Stock Co. at Ottawa —Other Notes.

The Imperial Opera Company which will be remembered as playing four months in Toronto, ending the first week in January last, have closed their season by disbanding at Renfrew, Ont., and the members, many of them Torontonians, have gone to their homes.

The company's misfortunes dated from their second month's experience in Toronto. Receipts so dropped off that the end of their visit was with difficulty delayed until the close of the year. Striking through Ontario, the theatres of the Small circuit were covered in Kingston, Brantford, Guelph, Ottawa, Peterborough, Renfrew, London, and a score of other towns, and when these were exhausted with one bill, a return visit was made with another "Floradora" and "San Toy" being the feature shows. Long before the company closed through lack of business, the old favorites in the company, best known to Torontonians, had left for New York. Mr. Harry Girard and his wife, the owners of the company, were in Toronto last Saturday and left for Cleveland.

For many weeks past it is understood only reduced salaries were paid the members.

Anna Eva Fay is still before the footlights. A Montreal paper says: The announcement is made that Eva Fay will appear shortly at Bennett's theatre. She is a reputed mind-reader, who is no stranger here.

Miss Fay appears to receive thought transmissions with all the accuracy of the wireless system. Miss Fay is assisted in her work by the Bengal Mahatma, whose people have followed the theories and practice of Tusumaturgy for centuries.

The Ottawa Journal says: "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," Robert Louis Stevenson's play, was presented at the Russel Theatre by Daniel Ryan and his company last night. Mr. Ryan was again in the leading role, and gave another splendid portrayal of his ability as an actor. His support was excellent, the various members of the company handling their parts to good effect.

An unfortunate occurrence happened during the performance, which tended to put a damper on the performance. Just as Mr. Ryan was appearing in a most important part of the play the theatre lights suddenly went out, leaving the players and the audience in darkness. Mr. Ryan made the best of the unfortunate position, and the audience took the incident good naturedly.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving he patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials

"JERRY" EDMUNDS ONE OF TWO CATCHERS SIGNED BY WINNIPEG

The Winnipeg Free Press says: — From many applicants the directors of the Winnipeg Baseball Club yesterday chose Frank Lohr to guide the destinies of the Maroons in the new all-Canadian League. Lohr comes from the South Atlantic League and is highly recommended. He is an outfielder.

In 1907 Lohr batted .225 and fielded .983 He did not do so well last season hitting .209 and fielding .965. It is somewhat peculiar that he played with two different terms in the past two seasons. Starting with Charleston in 1907 he finished with Columbia and this was reversed last year.

It will be up to Lohr to get a team together, and he will be given full charge. Harold Bond, of last year's squad, has signed up, but will not report until June. Beatty is the only other Maroon of 1908 who is likely to return. The following players are now on the list:—

Jack Dunn outfielder, a semi-pro. player from Kenora, Ont., can also pitch

Walter Rocha outfielder, semi-pro., of Winnipeg City League.

Jack Bernier, pitcher, Winnipeg.

Jed Burgwold, a third base player from Chicago.

Tony Burgwold a short-stop from Chicago.

A. G. Becker, third base player from Kenora.

Martin Murphy, Hamiota, Man.

Harry Edmunds, catcher, Peterborough, Ont.

Harold H. Bond, pitcher and outfielder last year's Maroons.

A. P. Speiser, a pitcher from Minneapolis.

A. H. Forde, a southern states pitcher.

Geo. E. Wagner, a semi-pro. infielder from Chicago.

Paul Gordon, a catcher from Chicago

PREPARATIONS FOR ANNUAL CITY LEAGUE BANQUET

The City Hockey League banquet promises to be a pleasant event and a most successful function in every way. The feature of the evening will be the presentation of the Stratton cup to the Lakefield seven, the senior champions, and the presentation of the Graham-Clarke cup to the Chieftains the winners of the junior division.

A good programme is being arranged and the entertainment of the evening will be provided by leading local artists.

The banquet will be held at the Oriental Hotel a week from tonight.

A Shooting Match Being Held in That Village This Afternoon

The Peterborough Gun Club is in Keene today where a shoot is being held between the local club and the one of the above village. The return match will probably be held here on May 24th.

The Peterborough Gun Club intends to hold a reorganization meeting at an early date.

The Peterborough Gun Club will go to Keene on Thursday afternoon next to meet the Gun Club there in a friendly match at clay pigeons. All members invited.

MIDGETS TO BE BANQUETTED

Lindsay Will Honor the O. H. A Intermediate Champions

Lindsay, March 30.—The victorious Midgets, intermediate champions of Ontario, are to be the recipients of something more substantial than windy plaudits from the townspeople. A banquet is being arranged adn each player will be presented with a suit of clothes and a hand bag. A subscription list has been going around town recently and the people subscribed generously to the fund.

It is fitting that recognition should be taken of the prowess fothe Midgets in this way. Their hard won victories have brought honor and distinction to Lindsay and the town benefitted accordingly. The gifts were decided on by a committee and are sensible and will no doubt be appreciated by the team.

FRED SIMPSON WILL APPEAR AT LINDSAY

Mr. Fred Edmonds proprietor of Lindsay's popular amusement palace "Wonderland" at the foot of Kent-st., has secured the services of Fred Simpson the Ojibway thunderbolt, of Peterborough, who is one of the fastest long distance runners in the world, for a special attraction for one week, commencing to-night.

Simpson recently filled an engagement in one of Peterborough's best houses and packed the place every evening. Fred Simpson is well know to many Lindsay citizens having run and won the first race of his career in this town three years ago. He also appeared here on Labor Day last and ran against the famous Tom Longboat.—Lindsay Warder.

SPORTING TALK

The great amount of free advertising that sporting events get in the way of advance notices from newspapers came in for a short but warm discussion in the session of the daily section of the Canadian Press Association at the meeting Friday. Several speakers decided that whenever a sporting club was conducting a game or match for which an admission fee would be charged, they should pay for at least some of the notices given by the papers.

One or two speakers contended that such games were of high news value alone, and were, therefore, bound to be reported and announced anyway. The general feeling seemed to be, however, that the sporting men should show more appreciation, and instead of bagging the profits from a match advertised for nothing, they should pay something to the publishers. No definite action was taken.—Toronto Star.

Peterborough followers of the fight game will remember the local appearance of Jem Mace, who was here with Dick Collier, the middleweight champion of England. Jem is one of the greatest fighters the ring has ever known and was a popular heavyweight world's champion. He is now applying for an old age pension as the following despatch will show;—

London, March 29.—Jim Mace, the one famous English prize fighter, has filed application in the post office for the old-age pension. He will soon be 78 years of age.

Mace was at his prime in the sixties and boasts of 600 fights, with only two defeats. In one fight in America he won £10,000, and he has known what it is to have £10,000 in the bank.

Klaw and Erlanger the big theatrical men are willing to take up almost anything in the line of amusement that there's money in from grand opera down. The latest field that they have become busy in is moving pictures and they are producing the Burns-Johnson fight films now. The pictures will run at the Princess Theatre Toronto, for a week, and at the local opera house March 27th. They are the original views of the fight.

RUNNING

If there is one thing that has made the stay of Alfred Shrubb in Montreal less pleasant than it otherwise should have been, it was the manner in which Hans Holmer has permitted his manager to write to him.

He accused Shrubb of running small races in big rinks for his own pecuniary benefit, and taking on cheap skates that are never heard of, when such a phenomena as Hans Holmer was eating his heart out with impatience to get a crack at him.

Shrubb has written back, saying;— "I will meet Holmer at any time, in any place, and for any amount of money."

Tom Eck's hippodrome comes off on the 8th of April in the Arena.

The men to run will be Simpson, Holmer and Cummings. — Montreal Star.

THE CHEROKEE ROSE.

Romantic Indian Legend of This Beautiful Flower.

There is a beautiful romance connected with the Cherokee rose. A young Indian chief of the Seminole tribe was taken prisoner by his enemies, the Cherokees, and doomed to torture, but fell so seriously ill that it became necessary to wait for his restoration to health before committing him to the fire.

As he lay prostrated by disease in the cabin of the Cherokee warrior the daughter of the latter, a young, dark faced maid, was his nurse. She fell in love with the young chieftain and, wishing to save his life, urged him to escape. But he would not do so unless she would flee with him.

She consented. Before they had gone far, impelled by regret at leaving home, she asked permission of her lover to return for the purpose of bearing away some memento of it. So, retracing her footsteps, she broke a sprig from the white rose which climbed up the poles of her father's tent and, preserving it during her flight through the wilderness, planted it by the door of her new home in the land of the Seminoles. And from that day this beautiful flower has always been known throughout the southern states by the name of the Cherokee rose.

Enlarging the Limit.

"You are very foolish, Alfred. That is your third cigar, and you know the doctor limited you to one a day."

"Yes, dear, but I've consulted two other doctors, and each has allowed me one cigar a day; total, three."

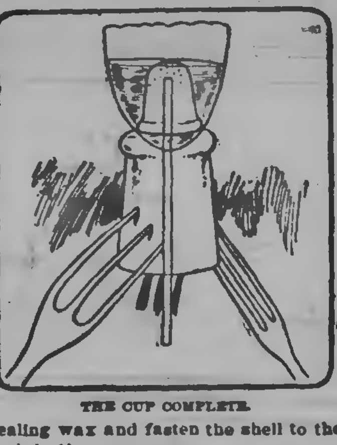
A TANTALIZING CUP.

Interesting Experiment With Eggshell, Cork and Straw.

Tantalus, according to the legend, having offended the gods, was punished by being made very thirsty, having a cup of water placed continually just out of his reach. From this story we get our word tantalize. To make a cup of tantalus—that is, a cup that can be filled part way, but never to the brim—follow directions:

Get an empty eggshell and break off the large end of it, say half an inch down. Through the small end bore a hole just the size to admit a good, firm straw. Now hollow out one end of a cork so that the shell will fit in it, and through the cork bore a hole to admit the straw.

Run the straw up through the cork and into the shell for half an inch or so. Make all the joints tight with sealing wax and fasten the shell to the cork in the same way.



THE CUP COMPLETE.

Cover the top of the straw in the shell with a thimble, which will rest on the bottom of the shell and almost, but not quite, touch the top of the straw.

Now, to make a little tripod for this apparatus stick the prongs of three forks in the cork and then place a tumbler under it. Pour some water into the shell. It will not run out through the straw at the bottom at first, but when it rises as high as the thimble it will begin to run, for it goes up under the thimble and enters the upper end of the straw, thus finding an outlet. By fastening a wire around the cork and bringing one end up to the edge of the cup a manikin may be held in the position of bending over to drink. Have the lips of the manikin just above the level of the water.

CAPTURING SNAKES.

How Serpent Hunters of the Tropics Secure Their Prey.

The capture of snakes is simple and comparatively free from danger, says the Chicago News. In the great swamps of India they are caught in the early morning, when they are stiff from cold. The natives use nets for the purpose or else press a stick against the back of the snake's back, thus holding it fast until they can put it away safely.

Another method is to surround a spot known to be full of snakes with nets during the dry season and set the underbrush on fire. The snakes rush for safety in all directions and fall in great numbers into the nets. This method is often used to catch the biggest species of snakes. Hagenbeck states that many specimens of such monsters received by him from Calcutta bear marks of burning.

The giant snakes of Borneo fall a prey to the native hunters after they have gorged themselves to such an extent on food that they can scarcely move at all. Nets are then thrown over them, and they are delivered to Hagenbeck's agents.

Some snake hunters of India rely almost entirely on their sense of smell for ferreting out their victims. These hunters set out in the cold of the morning, knowing, more or less, where the holes are in which the snakes live. By means of their keen sense of smell they can tell whether a snake is at home. They then dig it out and, as it is half frozen still, succeed easily in imprisoning it in their baskets.

The Pine Tree's Secret.

The pine tree lifted his proud head high,
While the frolicking winds went trooping by—
The boisterous winds that high and low
Had tramped that morning over the snow.
They had climbed to the top of the bleak round hills,
Had loitered to jeer at the captive rills.
"Oh, ho!" they cried to the pine tree old;
"We can guess, we can guess what your great arms hold!
They are empty nests, for away on wing
The nestlings have flown where the south winds sing."
The pine tree sighed—he had grown so wise
From the old white owl with the blinking eyes—
The pine tree sighed, but he whispered low
To the sunbeams merry that danced below
A secret we, who are friends, may know.
The winds went on with rollicking shout.
They scattered the brown little leaves about,
And they never knew, nor do to this day,
What the faithful pine kept hidden away.
But the sunbeams merry, he welcomed them all.
They climbed, with never a fear or fall,
Higher and higher, where, lo, on his breast
The brave old pine held a warm, round nest.
The sunbeams smiled as he gave them a peep.
Three small flying squirrels fast asleep!
Round and fuzzy and puffy and gray,
While mamma squirrel had flown away
On her funny flat wings from tree to tree
To bring some nuts to her babies three.
The winds heard only the pine tree's sigh,
But we know him better, you and I.

JAPANESE CADETS.

Military School Exercises Include Hand to Hand Conflicts.

In the Japanese military school, where I saw a Spartan system of education, the exercises of the cadets with pikes, rifles and broadswords were not approached by anything of the kind that I had witnessed in Europe. It was fighting of the fiercest character.

At the end of the struggle there was a hand to hand combat, which lasted until the victors stood triumphant over the bodies of the vanquished and tore off their masks.

In these exercises, which were very severe, the cadets struck one another fiercely and with wild cries, but the moment a prearranged signal was given or the fight came to an end the combatants drew themselves up in a line, and their faces assumed an expression of wooden composure.

In all the public schools prominence was given to military exercises, and the scholars took part in them with enthusiasm. Even in their walks they practiced running, flanking and sudden, unexpected attacks.

The history of Japan was everywhere made a means of strengthening the pupils' patriotism and their belief in Japan's invincibility. Particular stress was laid upon the country's successful wars, the heroes of them were extolled, and the children were taught that none of Japan's military enterprises had failed.—McClure's Magazine.

A WARSHIP'S RAM.

The Huge Steel Beak Is Capable of Inflicting Terrible Injury.

A modern ram is nothing more than a huge steel beak, or spur, which is fitted to the prow of the battleship for the purpose of destroying an enemy's ship in time of war by the force of collision. Indeed, should a vessel succeed in driving her ram against another warship the blow, if delivered at full speed, would be sufficient to crush in the ship's side and sink her immediately.

A battleship's ram weighs about forty tons and is cast all in one piece. It is of solid steel and capable of striking a tremendous blow. Shell proof a man-of-war may be made, but the skill of the naval architect is unequal to the task of designing a ship that can resist the ram.

Great care must be exercised in fixing such a heavy piece of steel. The method generally adopted is as follows: The ram is suspended from a strong derrick, the bottom end of which is attached to the extreme end of the vessel's keel plates. The gap between the ram and the uncompleted part, or hull, is walled tight compartments. The weapon is so fixed that it strikes just below the armored belt, where resistance is weakest, while it is so shaped that the ramming vessel can by reversing her engines easily disentangle herself from the ship she has struck.

The Word "Person."

General Benjamin F. Butler, it is said, once asserted that a woman was not a "person," and a London suffragette insists that the word "person" in its legal sense includes woman. The word has had an interesting history. Signifying by etymology something to make a sound through, the Latin "persona" began by meaning an actor's mask with its mouthpiece. Then it meant the character represented by the player—"dramatis personae." Then it came to mean the part or character one sustains in real life, and so the "persona ecclesiae," the man who represented the church, became known as a "person" in a special sense and was eventually spelled as "parson." On the other hand, "person" faded away to mean just anybody. And so, though a woman naturally resents being referred to as a "person" in ordinary talk, many women no less naturally desire to count as "persons" in the eye of the franchise law.

Bishop Butler's Generosity.

So many examples of episcopal cupidity have been cited of late that the average reader may be excused for believing the bishop of a century or so ago to have been an incarnation of greed. But against the Luxmores, the Watsons and the Porteouses may be set the saintly Butler, whose "Analogy" is still used as a text book for clerical examinations. Butler kept open house at Durham, where he dispensed hospitality with a lavish hand. On one occasion a man called at the palace soliciting a subscription for some charitable object. "How much money is there in the house?" asked Butler of his secretary. The secretary after investigation replied that there was £500. "Give it to him, then," replied the philosopher bishop, "for it is a shame that a bishop should have so much."—London Chronicle.

His Occupation.

A big, brawny fellow in answer to a question in a justice's court as to what he did for a living said:

"Well, sir, in the spring I ketches an' sells young mockin' birds, in the summer I mostly sells rattlesnake buttons fer rattles fer the babies, but in the winter I sometimes has to chop wood."

STUDIES OF THRILLING LIVES

THE DYNAMITE WORKER

BY WILLIAM ALLEN JOHNSTON

(Copyright, 1909, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.)

TWO heavy draught horses hitched to a lumber wagon walked slowly, drowsily, along a woody lane that led to a big limestone quarry overhanging the Hudson River.

Apparently they were in no hurry to arrive at any particular destination. Very often they stopped and rested—perhaps every rod or so. The load was a light one, just a few dry goods boxes—a lazy enough job for all concerned, it would seem; and yet the driver, a long necked, thin faced Swiss, sat tensely upright upon his seat, strangely silent and pop eyed, his neck lengthening automatically every time the wagon settled an inch. He held a taut rein tight, and the perspiration trickled steadily down from the brim of his hat.

Just in front of the quarry office the wagon creaked over a stone and settled down with a slight jar. "Whoa!" said the driver hoarsely, at the same time turning his neck rigidly and casting an agonized glance in at the office window.

"What's the matter, Fritz?" laughed a clerk.

"Dunder un' blitzen!" said the driver gently, as though afraid of his voice. "I don't prefer dis job." He turned despairingly to his horses. "Gid ap, Chim and Cherry!—slow now!—easy, yer tevils! Ach, mein Gott—whoa!"

"What's the matter with him?" I asked.

The clerk looked consequential. "Oh, he's got a thousand pounds of dynamite under him," said he, loftily. "That's all."

The general manager chuckled. "Funny about Fritz," said he. "He's brought that load up several times a year for eight years, but he never gets over looking like he was sitting on sharp tacks. Well," he added, seriously, "I'd rather have him scared than careless."

Scene of Stirring Activity.

Out in the deep, ragged quarry there's a scene of noisy, stirring activity. Steam drills are rat-a-tap-tapping, steam derricks swinging and creaking, donkey engines pulling back and forth with strings of little flat cars; men are swarming all over the jagged bottom, swinging heavy mawls against chunks of flinty rock, loading high the flat cars, straining against great crowbars stuck in fissures and under strata. Tool boys run here and there with sharpened drills; foremen bawl out orders above the din or else stand cursing monotonously from the bank.

Over at one end of the quarry stands a stone crusher building, half clouded in dust, its heavy screens rolling and rattling, its rotary crusher digesting broken rock at the rate of two tons a minute. All the men in the quarry, two hundred in all, are frantically engaged in feeding its ravenous steel maw, and day by day the quarry widens and deepens and whole trains of railway cars draw away the nut size product from under the bins.

Two hundred men are swinging hammers, picks and crowbars; but in the transformation process that converts a stratified quarry into ballast and concrete pebbles their combined power is as nothing compared with one little brown papered cylinder of soft, pinkish stuff, packed in those boxes which Fritz carried as though they were brittle glass.

That's dynamite, variously styled "the power untamable," "a coiled spring of terrific power," "the pink demon of destruction," &c. It hasn't the building up power of a little red ant, but as a destructive agent its might is incomprehensible. Measured in one instance its power was computed as equalling sixteen and one-half million horse power, and its pressure as six hundred thousand pounds to a small square inch!

Vagaries of Dynamite.

That much is known about dynamite, unbelievable as it seems. Its vagaries are not known, or at least are not so well known and observed that handling it is a safe occupation.

I suggested this to a "dynamiter," a big, tawny mustached Italian who knelt before a box, heaping one arm high with the sticks as though they were so much kindling wood.

"Ees dangerous?" said he, with a boastful air. "Si vera mooch! Oh," he gestured carelessly, "she all right, you treats her right. Sure. So I"—he stood up and looked down proudly at his brawny figure—"so I—I treats her tam fine. That ees why I am here!"

Down below us, in a clear ledge of rock, the steam drills had bored a series of holes of varying depths, and men were busily swabbing the moisture out of them with oakum. Into each hole then the "dynamiter" placed a brown stick of the "demon power," first inserting into the stick an exploding cap to which two copper wires were already attached. Each hole was then filled with soft, dry dirt, tamped gently, and the copper wires left protruding at the surface.

The drill holes were then united by connecting these wires all except one from each end hole, which were united with long insulated wires leading to an electric battery in the ledge above, perhaps one hundred feet distant. The simple act of pressing a button on this battery box completes the current, sparks the caps and explodes each drill hole at practically the same time.

Single holes, very deep and heavily charged, were connected with more battery boxes, and further away another dynamite gang was busy over big rocks shaken free by a previous explosion. On the top of each rock a part of a stick of dynamite was laid and plastered down with mud, single powder fuses being used here instead of the continuous electric wires.

Getting Ready.

Now the evening whistle blows. The "tapping" drills cease in unison, derrick booms fall for the night, the roaring crusher stops slowly, and men are slipping on coats, snatching dinner pails and hurrying over the embankment.

Only the dynamite gang remains, and the tawny mustached Italian is in all his boastful glory. "Hoi-oi-oi!" he shouts, pounding his bulging chest. "Geta-ready! Hoi-oi-oi!"

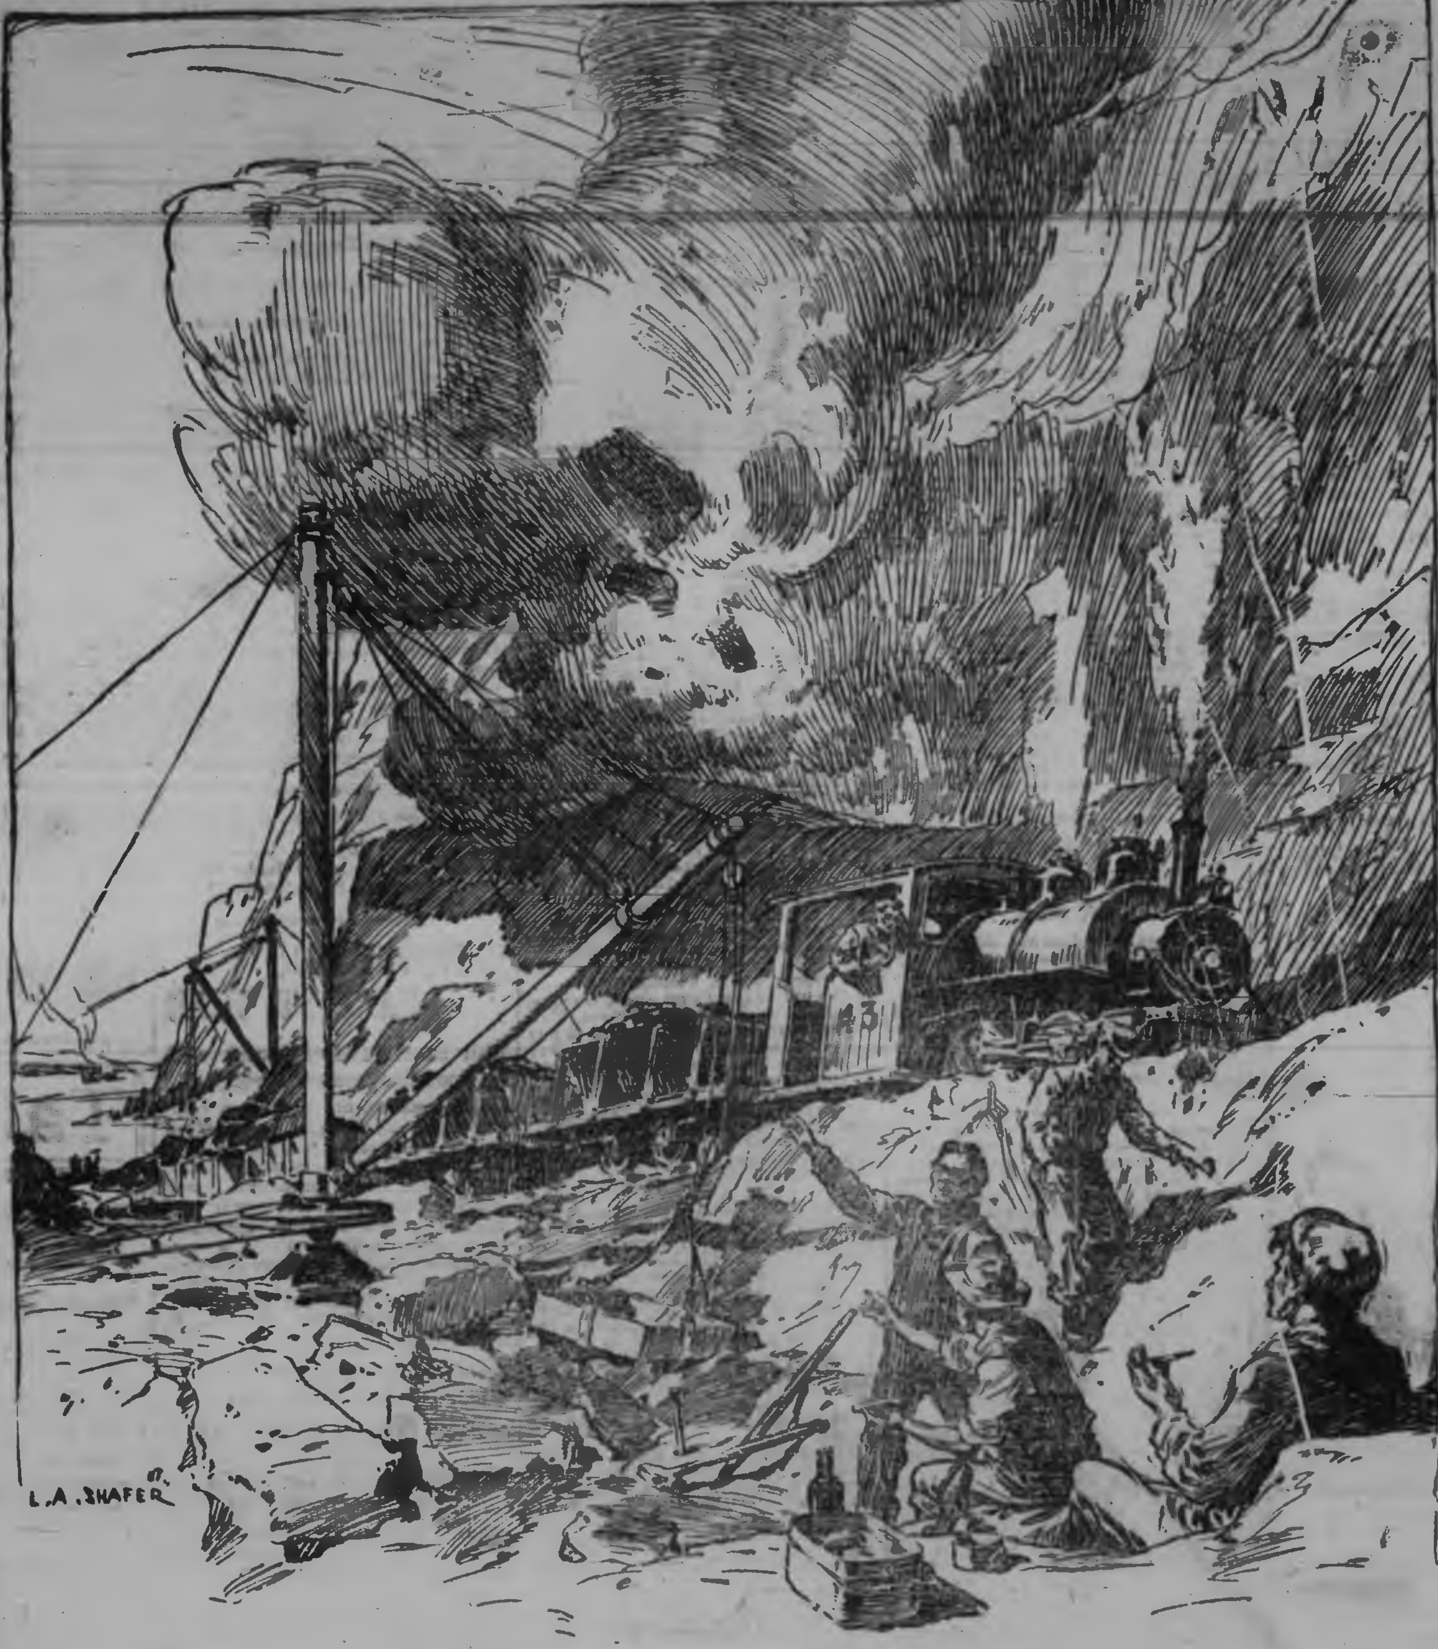
A dozen helpers scamper back, some under thick trees with shoulders crouched fearfully, some in the open with faces upturned anxiously to the sky, others to the battery boxes, at a signal from their chief.

"Ready! he yells. "One" ——

At almost the same moment he touches the button an outer ledge leaps up outward and bursts and splinters into great cracks and little spawls.

"Two—a-three—a-four!"

"Pop, bing! bang! crash." The air is filled with dust and sailing stones, and the detonations rattle and echo back and forth from mountain side to river bank, while the earth trembles beneath your feet.



AS A DESTRUCTIVE AGENT ITS MIGHT IS INCOMPREHENSIBLE.

One big rock, weighing several tons, is still careening when the air has cleared, rolling as though an invisible giant were behind it.

"Vera good," said the dynamiter pompously, "eighteen pounds dida all that!" And then I thought of Fritz and his thousand pounds.

"Well, it's funny stuff," said the general manager after the gang left. "I'll show you."

Picking up a stick of dynamite, he led the way to a ledge where the quarry floor was deepest beneath us. With his knife he cut the stick in two and hurled a half of it down upon the rocks two hundred feet below. There was no explosion. We saw the stick break into pink dust.

"You see!" said he. "You could drop a five hundred pound chunk of iron on fifty pounds of that dynamite and it wouldn't explode. It takes a sharp detonation to do it—a cap. Well, naturally, that would do it. It's fulminate of mercury and has an explosive pressure of over three hundred tons to the square inch. A red spark too will do the work. A white spark won't, they say.

"Now you see the safe side of it. There's another side.

"You saw me cut that stick in two. Well, I know of a dynamite agent—an old, experienced man—who was blown into shreds doing the same thing."

"Then why did [illegible]

"Well, the stick I cut was fresh. The makers guarantee it so. We cut 'em up here every day. But the stick Jim Martin cut had been frozen. He didn't know that.

"Fully eighty per cent of the accidents are due to frozen dynamite. You see, when the stuff freezes—and I've yet to see a kind that won't freeze—the nitroglycerine collects in streaks and lumps. When you thaw out the stick the nitro doesn't rediffuse, and if your knife cuts into a fat streak—away you go!

"We have a rule here never to cut a frozen stick. For thawing we use a double compartment tin pail with boiling water for heat, and we've yet to have an accident from that cause.

"Funny thing happened this fall, though. One of the old thawing pails was thrown down here by some fool workman. It rolled against a pile of ties and might be there to-day had we not run a sidetrack along there. One day a gang was unloading rails from a flat car. The first one struck this pail, and the next second the air was full of flying ties and splinters.

"You see, a good deal of nitro had leaked out of the dynamite while it was thawing and had gradually lodged in the crevices of the pail.

Explosive Water.

"Out West in a mining camp they tell of a miner who thawed out some sticks in a pan of water and left the pan standing in the cabin. His partner came in just in time to see the dog stealing some meat, picked up the pan of water, hurled it at the dog and was astonished to see the animal disappear with a loud explosion. There was nitro in the water.

"They were terribly careless, those miners, and every now and then the landscape was minus a cabin. Why, I've seen them place sticks of dynamite on the front of the stove, within five inches of red hot embers, while they cooked breakfast. Mebbe they would just catch fire and burn, but sometimes they exploded.

"That's another curious thing about it. See?" The manager dumped out a handful of the pink powder and applied a match to it. It burned slowly with a bluish flame. "Out West," he explained, "we made rough assays of lead rock by pulverizing a sample, mixing it with dynamite in the form of a cone and touching it off.

"So that makes it seem harmless, too. But if you did that with frozen dynamite you'd have a different story to tell—or, rather, you wouldn't be left to tell a story.

"Out there they had a habit of biting their caps on to the fuse. That's bad. One day in a tunnel I heard a sharp crack, and then, outlined in the mouth of the tunnel, stood a swaying, headless man. Here at the quarry last year an inquisitive tool boy struck one with a hammer. He's that one armed boy working a forge in the blacksmith shop. Did you notice him?"

Blown to Atoms.

The bulk of the dynamite used in this quarry is stored in a dirt cellar house back in the woods, and is under the sole guardianship of Red Joe, the Italian. For convenience sake a smaller quantity, perhaps one hundred pounds, is kept in a shanty near the ledge. One night this exploded, no one knows how or why.

Next morning the shanty was gone and the spot where it had stood was covered with pine bushes torn up by the roots in a more or less exact circumference and piled up neatly in the centre of a circle where the shanty was. Every window in the office was broken, and the glass on the side toward the explosion was blown outward. Papers from within were also swept out toward the shanty, quite a distance.

These strange phenomena were due to the fact that exploded dynamite creates a vacuum all about it, and its surrounding destructive force is created by inrushing air.

The exact extent of this circular vacuum for a given amount of dynamite was shown one time by a strange and deplorable accident involving four workmen.

One man, working over the dynamite when it exploded, disappeared altogether. The bodies of two other men, working fifty and one hundred feet away, were swept in with the debris, one terribly shattered, the other stripped of all his clothing, but still alive. The fourth man, about one hundred and fifty feet away, was seen walking off in a dazed, aimless way and climbing a fence. He was just beyond the circumference of the death circle.

The complete disappearance of a body directly in contact with exploding dynamite is not due, it is now thought, to its utter disruption, but rather to the terrific heat which is suddenly and briefly generated. It is difficult almost to imagine the degree of that heat.

Generates Terrific Heat.

A copper cent placed under an exploding stick of dynamite disappeared so completely that a chemical analysis of the surface of the steel block upon which it rested failed to give a trace of it. Evidently then it was resolved by heat into its elements, which in turn were passed off in a gaseous state.

As we talked Red Joe came along, jangling the keys of the dynamite house against his dinner pail and carolling a merry song. "Gooda night!" he called.

"Nervy man," I ventured.

"Well, yes and no," said the manager, seriously. "I'll tell you some queer things about him. Last year, when we were having strike troubles with new men, Joe slept in the dynamite house—at his own suggestion, too—almost a month. Slept right over a ton of dynamite in dangerous times—really slept, too!

"And yet you couldn't get Joe to climb to the top of that tall mast over there. He's afraid to; says so. And last winter he was the one man scared to walk across the ice of the river on his way home.

"No, he's just a dynamiter. He's very careful. He goes through his duties just as a boy recites a well memorized lesson, correctly, but not thinking deeply about it. And then he's proud of his job. Over in 'Little Italy,' across the river, he sports a velvet [illegible] on Sundays and is called—well, what's the [illegible] name for Joseph Dynamite?

"And then, of course," concluded the manager, with a wry smile, "he's got to earn a living, like the rest of us."

And the truth of this phase of [illegible] home to me as I recalled a dynamite plant [illegible] in New Jersey some years ago. Three [illegible] blown to bits, but the next morning there were [illegible] applicants in line for the same places!

CURIOUS GIFTS FOR AMERICAN GIRL IN SYRIA

'WAY over in Syria the heart of the young American girl is soon to be made glad by the possession of as curious gifts from home as ever crossed the Atlantic. It would be quite useless to try to guess, so the statement may as well be made at once that the gifts are apples and a mince pie! Though Syria is rich in fruits, these two delectables are unknown to the country, and this American girl, who has been living there for several years, is hungry for them. She said so to a married friend who was coming from Syria here on a visit, but she spoke half jestingly, without any idea that her friend would remember her words, and so there is a delightful, as well as amusing, surprise awaiting her.

The pie, which is of uncommonly large dimensions, has been most carefully packed and boxed and is securely tucked into one of the trunks of the returning voyager. In the same trunk, too, are the apples, big, luscious, rosy Baldwins, each one wrapped separately in cotton wadding and then tissue paper and distributed among soft things in the trunk, so that they are amply protected from bruises on the long journey.

A NEW STORY ABOUT LINCOLN

PERHAPS the most distinguishing quality of Lincoln's character was the simplicity of his mind. It was, however, not the simplicity of ignorance or lack of thought, but the simplicity of wisdom. He had so trained himself that he could see plainly the great principles—the simple principles—underlying not only everyday matters, but questions of statesmanship and even deeper speculations.

An excellent story illustrating this, though in the nature of things it cannot be entirely new to all readers, so clearly displays at once his acuteness of mind and his kindly human feeling that it is well worth repeating.

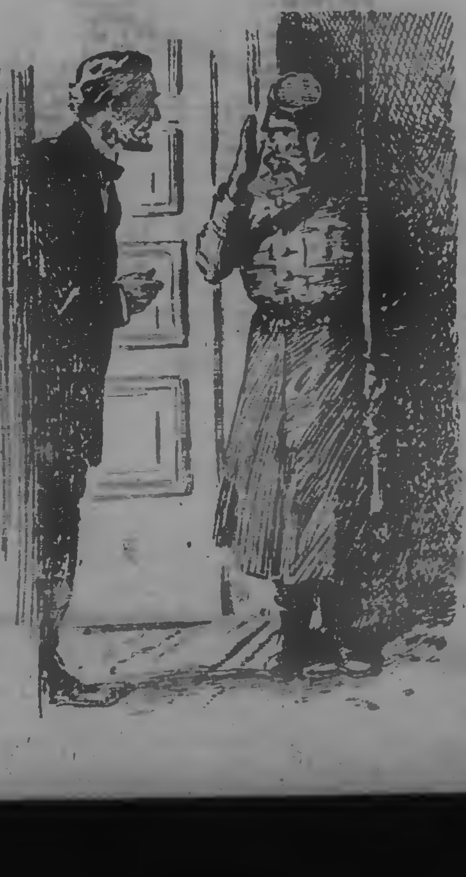
One winter night, when a sleet storm was beating directly upon the front of the White House, Lincoln, who was sitting within, saw through the glass doors a sentry who had been stationed on guard. Although the man was trying to protect himself as best he could in his old blue coat, yet the contrast between the soldier's discomfort and the warm, comfortable atmosphere within made the President uneasy. At length, unable to stand the sight, Lincoln arose, opened the door, and, speaking to the sentinel, invited him to come inside.

"Impossible, Mr. President," the soldier answered. "I was stationed here and am on guard."

"But," said Lincoln, "you can certainly guard the door just as well standing inside. Come in."

"Thank you," said the soldier, "but I cannot leave my post."

Lincoln for a moment retired, baffled, but in a few moments he repeated his kindly invitation, with the addition that he would be responsible to the soldier's superior officer. Again the soldier thanked him and refused.



But a further period of reflection brought to the President a new idea, and, going for the third time to the door, he opened it and said:—

"See here; it occurs to me that I am commander in chief of the army and navy, and I order you to come inside."

There was no resisting the order of the commander in chief, and the soldier obeyed. Whereupon Mr. Lincoln retired satisfied.

Solving the Color Problem.

AT a little supper party given to Charles Dana Gibson on the eve of his departure for Spain, where he went to study the old masters and to enter the field of color work, some one asked the artist why he wanted to try painting instead of continuing in black and white. Gibson's reply was that he wanted to become so attuned with color as to be able to arrange the paints on the palette in such a way that he could learn to put color on the canvas without ever looking at his palette. He thought that an artist doing color work should be able to feel such sympathy and harmony with his palette that he could use them without having to look for them. The man who uses ink never looks at the bottle when he dips his pen in, he explained. He does it unconsciously and keeps his eyes on the canvas, and so why should not a painter be able to do the same with color, was Gibson's query.

The death occurred to-day of Josephine E. Moyse, relict of the late Wm. Moyse. The deceased lady, who was 53 years of age had only been sick one week, having been stricken with paralysis. Four sisters, one brother and one daughter are left to mourn her loss. The sisters are Mrs. James A. Davidson, of Campbellford; Mrs. Charles NanCarrow, Campbellford; Mrs. W. H. Isaac Edmonton, formerly of town, and Mrs. Charles Smith of Barrie. The brother is Mr. Frank Chalaupka, of Brantford, and the daughter is Mrs. Jas. Hatcher of town. The late Mrs. Moyse was a Methodist in religion and attended St. James' church. The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock, from the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Jas. Hatcher, and proceed to Little Lake cemetery, for interment.

A WAR CORRESPONDENT'S NARROW ESCAPE

Mr. Frank Scudamore, the great war correspondent, who sent many of the Canadian despatches during the late Boer War, owes his health to Zam-Buk. He has passed unscathed through twenty-nine battles, but a scratch which turned to blood-poisoning nearly ended his days. Zam-Buk saved him and he writes as follows:—

"I have proved Zam-Buk such a blessing that I want others to know of its merits. The poisonous dye in some underclothing I was wearing got into a scratch I had sustained and blood-poisoning set up. Inflammation was followed by great pain and swelling and then ulcers broke out on my legs. For some time I could not walk a few steps nor even put my feet to the ground. On my left leg below the knee I had seventeen ulcers which caused holes into which I could put my thumb. On the right leg I had fourteen ulcers. Medical treatment failed to relieve, homely remedies were applied in vain. Week followed week and I gradually got worse until I was worn out with pain and lack of sleep. On the advice of a friend I obtained some Zam-Buk and left off everything else while I tried it. It seemed to give me almost instant relief from the pain and in a few days I noticed that it was healing the ulcers. This was cheering indeed, and gladly I persevered with Zam-Buk treatment. Bit by bit the poisonous matter was drawn out. The ulcers were healed and new healthy skin grew over the previously diseased places. I am now quite cured and in gratitude I mention these facts that other sufferers from skin disease may know of something which will cure them."

Zam-Buk is a sure cure for eczema, ringworm, ulcers, abscesses, piles, bad leg, suppurating wounds, cuts, burns, bruises, chapped hands, and cold cracks and all skin injuries and diseases. All druggists and stores sell at fifty cents a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto upon receipt of price.

VOTING ON THE BY-LAWS TO-DAY

Up to Noon the Vote Cast Had Been Small

To-day the new waterworks dam by-law and the $15,000 power by-law are being voted on, and the result of the ballot will be known at the city clerk's office this evening. It is said that the vote will not be large, as many of the ratepayers appear indifferent in the matter.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

MR. HATTON REPLIES.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—On my return to the city I notice a letter in your valuable paper headed "Mr. W. H. Moore replies to Mr. Hatton's statement." If he does by what followed, I can only say that I do not know the gist or purport of my own letter.

His rambling vagaries do not call for notice in discussing the merits of the large expenditure of money, and about which there is certainly a diversity of opinion. I "have suffered disappointments in the past" it is quite true, and expect many in the future. I am disappointed in Mr. Moore. "And expect compensation by defeat of by-law." In common with all ratepayers, I won't get soaked, at any rate, if it is defeated. Commissioner Moore says we all remember "he opposed the city acquiring the waterworks." Well, rather! I had been on the works for twenty-two years as pay clerk on the trenches. Secretary, treasurer, director and solicitor responsible to my co-directors and shareholders, and opposed to the expropriation of the plant by the town, in so far as to try and obtain a fair return for the work and risk and money expended. This, I may say, was not accomplished, as the estimate placed to-day on the plant and net earnings show only too plainly. I was not surprised. We have in every municipality men who "automatically" first oppose the granting of a franchise, then are niggardly in regard to terms, and finally, when the enterprise, in spite of all obstacles and opposition, is a declared success, on the public platforms and elsewhere, advocate the eating of the plum. This class of men never put a dollar in any public enterprise. Not they. But they are much in evidence when the feeding time comes.

"Condemned the incorporation of the city (professionally) with a petition of over six hundred leading ratepayers, including the three newspaper publishers. I did appear before the Private Bills Committee and commit the awful crime. As to opposing the frontage tax, I again plead guilty. Professionally again. I appeared before the Private Bills Committee. Mr. Moore should be the last one to refer to the underhand manner in which this uncalled for tax was imposed on the freeholders of this city. Mr. Commissioner Moore's main "appeal to the gods," his prize for merit, is that it did not take the commissioners long to cut in two the charge to the water users by the old company. This is not true—the rates to-day are more than when the private company owned the works.

The schedule of rates is the same, but all vacant property is charged a prohibitive tax in front of which is buried a water main in use by and paid for by water users at excessive rates. The company gave a reduction of 10 per cent. from the schedule rates, and offered the city 20 per cent. for a ten-year further extension and probably would have been only too glad to give the present 33 1-3 per cent. reduction for a further extension.

It is quite true that the ratepayers are fined 33 1-3 per cent. over the rates the commissioners are making so much money out of, if one minute late on pay day—a very serious call on some of them.

If his statement was correct it is not by reason of what the commissioners have done, but because they could not help the results. That the rates should be cut in two, I'll agree. The Water Company had comparatively few services per mile of piping. The town was very careful about ordering hydrants from the company and placed them 1,000 feet apart if possible. The company paid 6 per cent. for their money; the demand for water was necessarily limited as it was the only company on record that laid its pipes in advance of the sewage system. All this is changed. The sewage system is there, in comparison, five hydrants to one are now paid for by the city. As much and more than enough money is always in sight, and at 3 1-2 per cent. Yes, the rates should have been cut in two long ago.

Now, I do not know what all this has to do with building a new dam and power house, and in conclusion I hope that the other two commissioners can stand a little fair criticism. If they cannot, there are others. They are, after all, only three ordinary business men. Who could have done much less than they have? A well-built plant, including new dam, new power house, new pumps in A 1 shape and running order, was handed over to them—old, and trusted employees all yet in harness—why the grease is hardly off the wheels, and smiling complacently the commissioners accept the bouquets. "We did it." Well, that's all right. It is a pity that you accepted the $15,000 Power By-law. It was a dead give away, but then it was only $15,000.

Sorry to have to take up so much space to ease Mr. Moore's pain under his vest.

Yours,
G. W. HATTON.

A Woman's Sympathy

Are you discouraged? Is your doctor's bill a heavy financial load? Is your pain a heavy physical burden? I know what these mean to delicate women—I have been discouraged, too; but learned how to cure myself. I want to relieve your burdens. Why not end the pain and stop the doctor's bill? I can do this for you and will if you will assist me.

All you need do is to write for a free box of the remedy which has been placed in my hands to be given away. Perhaps this one box will cure you—it has done so for others. If so, I shall be happy and you will be cured for 2c (the cost of a postage stamp). Your letters held confidentially. Write to-day for my free treatment. MRS. F. E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

SOLD LIQUOR ON SUNDAY?

Local Hotelkeeper in Police Court—Case Adjourned Until Saturday Morning

A local hotelkeeper was in the Police Court this morning charged with selling liquor on Sunday, March 28th. He pleaded not guilty.

Mr. G. N. Gordon was present in the interests of the defendant.

The case was adjourned until Saturday morning. P. C. Newball was called and stated that shortly after 10 o'clock Sunday night while passing the defendant's hotel, he noticed the door leading into the sitting room was wide open and he noticed somebody behind the bar working one of the liquor pumps. The man carried some glasses into a back room and was followed by a number of men, who were in the sitting room. The defendant was in the sitting room but he did not go in with the rest of the men.

This was repeated several times. He went up to George street and got P. C. Meharry, but in the meantime their presence had been discovered by those inside the hotel, and a couple of men came out to watch them. Meharry and himself concealed themselves and when all was quiet again returned to the hotel. More liquor was taken from the bar into the back room. He (Newball) knocked at the door and was admitted by defendant's son. A search was made of the rooms down stairs but none of those who had previously been in the sitting room could be found. The defendant, who was sitting on a chair, used abusive language to both policemen and threatened to strike P. C. Meharry. P. C. Meharry was next called and he corroborated the statements of P. C. Newball.

There were a large number of witnesses for the defence and after hearing them all the Magistrate adjourned the case until Saturday morning.

MR. BORDEN SHOWS UP THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC LOAN

In Powerful Summary He Shows That Taxpayers Are Putting up Nine-Tenths of Cost of New Transcontinental—Mr. Maclean's Resolution.

Ottawa, March 31.—Hon. Mr. Fielding's resolution to lend the Grand Trunk Pacific ten million dollars for the completion of the prairie section was before the House yesterday and Mr. Borden submitted a statement showing, of the total cost of the road, only one-tenth was provided by the Grand Trunk, and that in the shape of a guarantee of bonds. The statement is:

People's Contribution — Government's total guarantee $66,658,000; Government loan, $10,000,000; interest for seven years on mountain section, $13,413,759; cost of eastern section, $190,000,000; total (approximately), $270,000,000.

Grand Trunk Contribution—Guarantee, $28,750,000.

Mr. Borden criticized at length the position of the Government with regard to the construction of the railway, and asked: "What is it proposed to secure for the people of Canada?" The Grand Trunk, which is to provide a guarantee of $28,000,000 out of a total of $300,000,000, is to receive for the assistance so given $25,000,000 of common stock, and the people of this country, who are providing nine-tenths of the whole expenditure and guarantees, are to receive absolutely nothing in respect of any share whatever in the future development, which shall result from this enterprise when the great western country shall have made this $25,000,000 of stock worth at least $100 a share.

"Having regard to the money the people of this country have put into this great enterprise, is it not pertinent to ask: What do you purpose to do for the people of Canada?"

In presenting his resolution Mr. Fielding said it in no way interfered with the contract with the railway, but was in the nature of a banking transaction, the Government proposing to lend the railway that amount of money at 4 per cent. interest.

The reason for this loan to the railway was the excess of cost over the estimate and the extension of the praire section 130 miles west of the point contemplated. The company's present estimate of cost was $34,059 per mile, while the estimate of Mr. Schreiber, Government engineer, was $34,943. According to the company's estimate the amount required to complete the road would be $9,688,425. That included the repayment to the parent company of the amount advanced to go on with the work. While the contract provided for only a 75 per cent. guarantee up to $13,000 a mile, and while the Government could compel the G.T.P. to go on and float the securities themselves, if the company were held to its bargain it would have to dispose of the securities at very much below par. On one or two occasion recently the Government had to pay a trifle over 4 per cent., but he thought the money could be got for four.

The prairie section would be the most profitable portion of the road and there was very little risk in advancing the money. For this loan the Government would get a mortgage, but which he did not consider a valuable security, as there were three prior mortgages, the first for the original guarantee, the second for the G.T.P. Co., while the third security was a lien on the equipment. The bonds to be given back for this loan would have time guarantee of the parent company.

He had every confidence in the ability of the company to meet its obligations and he had no hesitation in asking Parliament to agree to the loan.

Mr. Borden said he realized the importance of carrying the undertaking to a successful completion. It seemed, however, that the Grand Trunk Pacific was "conceived in haste, moulded for political purposes and carried out with the wildest extravagance and folly." It had been argued that Canada was in danger of the repeal of the bonding privileges. Six years had passed and no more had been heard of that threatened calamity. The G.T.P. was "opened up to develop the northern zone of the Dominion," yet it had been built for a considerable distance from 100 to 200 miles north of the route projected and, for hundreds of miles, within a stone's throw of two other transcontinental railways.

W. F. Maclean (South York) submitted the proposition that the country should purchase the controlling shares of the Grand Trunk Co.'s common stock. The proposal was vigorously applauded by many of the Opposition members.

Mr. Maclean moved, seconded by Joseph Russell (East Toronto), that the resolutions be amended by the addition of:

"And be it further resolved: That in order to have still more effective security for its commitments and to absolutely control and own a national transcontinental railway system, Parliament is hereby authorized to purchase the controlling shares of the Grand Trunk Co.'s common stock."

Mr. Maclean said that after listening to Mr. Borden's able statement he was forced to the conclusion that the speech led to a declaration in favor of public ownership, for he showed that the country is committed to nine-tenths of the cost of the G.T.P., the other tenth being supplied by the parent company, the Grand Trunk.

Pardee, Northrup, Martin (Regina), Maddin (Cape Breton), Turriff (Sask.), and Mr. Ames also participated in the debate, which goes over till Tuesday next.

HORRIBLE CRIME OF AGED MAN WHO KILLS WIFE AT BUFFALO

Buffalo, N.Y., March 31.—After being wedded for nearly two score years Joseph Cabner, 79 years old, early this morning, in a fit of rage, beat his aged wife, Mary, aged 77 years, so unmercifully she is not likely to live, and then slashed his own throat from ear to ear with a razor.

WILL THE PROVINCES OFFER A DREADNOUGHT?

Special to the Review

Toronto, March 31— Premier Whitney this morning refused to discuss report that the Conservative provinces of the Dominion will offer a Dreadnought to the British Navy but it is learned that the cabinet already has discussed informally a suggestion that Ontario, Manitoba, British Columbia, and New Brunswick should combine to make the offer of a Dreadnought.

It is said most positively that the concensus of opinion was in favor of the project, but that it was considered it would be only courteous to wait a few days to see whether the Dominion government would take any action in that direction.

AUSTRALIA'S PROPOSITION

Fleet of Destroyers to Help Great Britain---Premier Fisher Makes Statement.

Melbourne, March 31.—Mr. Andrew Fisher, the Federal Premier, speaking on the question of defence yesterday, said the purely voluntary system of defence had absolutely broken down. The Government felt the time had arrived to institute some form of compulsory training, commencing with boys of ten and ending at twenty. In addition to the three torpedo-boat destroyers of the river type, already ordered, it is proposed to obtain within three years' time four ocean-going destroyers and sixteen more of the river class, and, if possible, to build these vessels in Australia. This would give the motherland the help she had a right to expect from a wealthy and prosperous son.

Mr. Fisher added: "When I was asked to offer a Dreadnought I said that was not our policy. It was merely a spectacular display, and probably the Admiralty would say they did not need a ship for this year's program."

THE ANNUAL ROLL CALL

In Connection With Murray St. Baptist Church Will Take Place To-night

Tonight at Murray street Baptist church the annual roll call in connection with the church will take place and an enjoyable evening is being looked for. A large number of former members at a distance and those who will be unable to be present have written to the pastor, Rev. R. J. Webb. Tea will be served at 7 o'clock and all are asked to be on hand as early as possible so that there will be plenty of time for the roll call. A report from the Building Committee in regard to the new church will also be heard.

Messrs. Earle Weller and Gordon Cox Will Open Business in Western Canada

Messrs. Gordon Cox and Earle Weller formerly of this city but now of Toronto are going to establish a hardware business in Western Canada, probably in Pembrina, a town 65 miles west of Edmonton. Mr. Cox is in the city today and informed the Review that he and Mr Weller would leave for the west in a short time, likely on the 13th of April if their present plans are carried out.

Mr. Cox learned the hardware business with the Peterborough Hardware Company.

FOR EARLY CLOSING

Barbers Considering Advisability of Closing at 11 on Saturday Night

A movement is on foot in the city among the union barbers to have their shops closed at 11 o'clock on Saturday nights. At their last union meeting it was the unanimous opinion that the shops were kept open to an unnecessarily late hour, and it was decided to have them closed at the above hour if arrangements to that effect could be made.

A petition to have the shops closed at 11 o'clock is being circulated among the bosses of the city.

BIG NEW BRIDGE HAS BEEN OPENED

New York, March 31.—The new Queensboro' Bridge, connecting New York and Long Island City, was informally opened to pedestrians and vehicles yesterday. It cost about $15,000,000 and has been about ten years in building. There are five spans, the longest of which is 1,183 feet, that being the longest span in America. The height of the floor above the East River is 135 feet. The bridge has a capacity which exceeds any other in the world. It is a double-decker, with two 16-foot promenades and room for the elevated car tracks on the upper floor. The main roadway is 56 feet wide.

ONE BY-LAW CARRIED ONE WAS DEFEATED

Ratepayers Endorse Proposition to Build New Waterworks Dam and Increase Pumping Capacity, But Turned Down the Power By-law.

Peterborough ratepayers yesterday carried the by-law to issue debentures for $120000 to build a new waterworks dam and increased pumping capacity by a majority of 161. They rejected, however, the by-law to issue debentures for $15000 to provide for the preliminary steps in connection with the development of electric power for the city in connection with the new dam. The power by-law was defeated by 54 votes.

The vote was larger than many expected and the outcome was not a surprise. There was strong opposition to the power by-laws and those favoring the measure and working for its passing were not at all confident.

The vote on the by-laws was as follows;—

THE PREMIER THROWS OUT THE NOTIFICATION MEASURE

Members of Ontario Cabinet Are at Variance on the Subject of Proper Method of Caring for Consumptives —Sunday Car Question at Twin Cities.

Toronto, March 31.—Compulsory notification of tubercular disease was the subject of the debate yesterday in the Legislature which at least exhibited a considerable amount of independence of opinion on the part of members of the Cabinet and the Government generally.

Notification is not for the purpose of placarding residences or removing patients to hospitals, but merely to ensure that proper information as to the treatment and cure of the disease should be imparted.

Premier Whitney would have none of it and declared the ideas of 30 or 40 years ago were good enough for him. Three thousand people die every year of consumption, but if they did not die of that, argued Sir James, they would die of something else.

Joseph Downey, sponsor of the bill which was prepared by the Provincial Board of Health, Hon. W. J. Hanna, Hon. Adam Beck and others made a good fight for the bill, but Sir James was obdurate and killed it.

Dr. R. F. Preston resumed the debate adjourned on the second reading of Mr. Downey's bill. There were features connected with the bill he did not propose to support as he considered them unworkable. He agreed with Dr. Godfrey that a commission should be appointed and a report from such a body might later on be acted upon with advantage.

A. C. Pratt considered time would be wasted by a commission. The time was come for action, as the facts were sufficiently known.

A. MacKay (North Oxford) was followed by Hon. A. G. MacKay, who thought the fate of the bill was less important than whether the House was prepared to do something to stop the disease.

Premier Whitney had no doubt that when Mr. MacKay heard from the Provincial Secretary, he would find that the Government had been doing its full duty. The conclusion to which he and his colleagues had arrived was that the bill could not be accepted. He did not need to go outside the House for reasons. Not one physician had supported the bill.

They would be guilty of cruelty through the system of notification, and the bill did not provide for the most lamentable cases of all where there was no physician. The people too poor to employ physicians had the penalty imposed on them. He appealed to both sides of the House not to impose this burden on the people, but rather to ameliorate and soften the excited public mind. If a man had a tendency to expectorate he was told he must go to a sanitarium. He could not find language too strong with reference to the dire effects if such impressions got abroad.

Hon. Adam Back rose to express his appreciation of all that Mr. Downey did in the fight against the white plague.

Hon. W. J. Hanna praised Mr. Downey for his work on the subject, but some exception had been taken by the medical men at the audacity of a private member introducing such a bill. The Provincial Board of Health had been entrusted with the bills introduced last year and Mr. Downey's bill represented what the doctors on the Board of Health considered desirable. The Government had already paid $80,000 for relief, $35,000 to assist construction and the rest for maintenance.

Mr. Downey had to retire on account of the Premier's opposition, but he said a few things. If the way to treat the disease was by a policy of silence and secrecy, and if the universe was to be turned back and they were to accept the ideas of 30 or 40 years ago, then there was nothing in the bill. Any element of success in dealing with the disease would be based in future on the principle of compulsory notification and he would reintroduce and reintroduce and reintroduce it.

The Sunday car question was finally disposed of yesterday by the private bills committee as far as Port Arthur and Fort William are concerned. A clause was inserted in the bill providing that employes shall not work more than ten hours a day for six days a week, except under special circumstances. A heavy penalty is provided.

YEAR WAS GOOD ONE

Canadian General Electric Company Did Well Despite the Depression.

Toronto, March 30.—The report presented at the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Canadian General Electric Company stated that while the output was decreased owing to industrial depression during 1908, a profit was carried forward somewhat in excess of the preceding years. During the year the company's original issue of preferred stock, amounting to $300,000, was received at par, plus a premium of 5 per cent., and the maturing bonds of the Northern Manufacturing Company, amounting to $140,000 were paid off. Profits fort he year are shown as $753 088 12, of which compares with gross profits of $722,433 34 in 1907. After providing for dividends, depression, etc., showed a surplus of $1,814,763 30. The surplus a year ago was placed at $1,763,665 56. The old directors were re-elected.

QUESTION NOT YET SETTLED

Naval Aid Proposition Still Under Consideration at Ottawa---Provinces Want to Help.

Ottawa, March 31.—Information was received here last night that Manitoba and Ontario are in communication and have practically agreed to offer to contribute a Dreadnought to the Imperial navy.

Premier McBride of British Columbia has telegraphed that if anything of this nature is contemplated, his province desires to participate. The Province of New Brunswick has intimated that it is prepared to follow suit.

The question is the sole topic of gossip in the corridors and there is a general feeling that the question should be reopened.

Hon. W. S. Fielding of the Cabinet is said to be very anxious that a more tangible expression of Canada's feeling should be shown than the passing of a resolution.

The Conservative caucus to-night will discuss the question.

GATHERED FOR THE CONGRESS

Registration at Toronto Closely Approaches Four Thousand ---Some May Have to Stand.

Toronto, March 31.—The registration of commissioners for the Laymen's Missionary Congress this morning closely approached four thousand, and the limit of 1,500 seats for ministers had been passed by 200, who will be admitted, but may have to stand, as each seat is assigned by number.

The Presbyterian mission committee met yesterday, and one of the laymen, who desired his name withheld from the public, presented a check for $5,000 to the fund.

The local Methodist committee met yesterday afternoon and definitely accepted $125,000 as the sum to be raised for foreign missions this year by the Methodists of Toronto.

The general mission board of the Methodist Church also held a meeting and agreed to an expansion of the foreign mission work.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Mr. Augustine Birrell reintroduced the Irish land purchase bill in the British Commons yesterday.

The grand jury found no bill against J. A. Derbyshire, charged with bribery at Brockville.

A company is asking assistance at Port Hope to establish a daily steamship service between Picton and Toronto.

The Ontario Government has ordered an investigation into a charge made against the Fort Frances Lumber Co.

President Eliot of Harvard University has been offered the position of United States Ambassador to Great Britain.

A dozen suffragettes, most of them from the provinces, were arrested yesterday in a raid on the House of Commons at Westminster.

M. Cruppi, French Minister of Commerce, told the French Senate yesterday at it must either accept the Franco-Canadian treaty or a tariff war.

Mr. Thompson, bookkeeper in the Oliver Typewriter Co.'s office at Montreal, received a telephone message that his mother was dying. He hastened home, but found her well, and then returning to the office he found that thieves had ransacked the place.

PENALTIES FOR GRAFTING EMPLOYEES ARE DISMISSED

Decision of Minister of Marine and Fisheries as Result of Recent Investigation is Laid on Table of House—Eighteen Are Dismissed.

Ottawa, March 31.—The decision of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries upon the recent Cassels' enquiry, which has been confirmed by order-in-council, was laid upon the table of the House yesterday. The Minister deals with the officials named by Judge Cassels as follows:

Lieut.-Col. Gourdeau, Deputy Minister, retired with superannuation.

Commander Spain, dismissed.

J. F. Fraser, commissioner of lights, dismissed.

J. U. Gregory, agent at Quebec, dismissed.

F. J. Harding, agent at St. John, retired with superannuation.

George D. O'Farrell, inspector of lights, Quebec, dismissed.

C. Thomson Schmidt, inspector of Government steamers, dismissed.

John Kelly, inspector of lights, New Brunswick, reinstated.

J. L. Richard, assistant inspector of fog alarms, Quebec, reinstated.

Capt. Charles Koenig, dismissed.

A. E. Beauchemin, dismissed.

Capt. McGough, temporary suspension and reinstatement.

Paul Boldus, engineer steamer Druid; Thorault, engineer, C.G.S. Champlain; A. Roy, engineer cruiser Princess; Jos. Belanger, chief engineer lightship Anticosti; Jos. Fontaine, chief engineer C.G.S. Montcalm; Malcolm Morris, engineer cruiser Curlew; H. H. Stewart, chief engineer C.G.S. Aberdeen; J. Ferguson, chief engineer C.G.S. Minto; A. Sampson, chief engineer dredge No. 8; Eugene Belanger, chief engineer C.G.S. Christine; A. Leitch, second engineer Aberdeen; E. Filteau, machinist Quebec agency, suspension confirmed and their further employment in the Department terminated.

In regard to Lieut.-Col. Gourdeau the order sets forth that "Col. Gourdeau, now in the 63rd year of his age, and over 47 years in the Government service, applied in March, 1908, for leave of absence preparatory to superannuation; that in some cases Col. Gourdeau has shown a lack of discretion, but nothing has been adduced to show that he has profited either directly or indirectly by any action he may have taken."

As to Commander Spain, wreck commissioner, the order-in-council sets forth that a statement was made against this officer by the Auditor-General to the effect that he had been charging accounts for traveling and other expenses to which he was not entitled; Commissioner Cassels states that Commander Spain was allowed the fullest latitude of explanation, but that no satisfactory explanation of his action was forthcoming.

J. F. Fraser, commissioner of lights, made certain purchase in direct disobedience to the orders of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries and the commissioner also finds against him in regard to some other matters brought up during the investigation."

As to J. U. Gregory it is stated he has been agent at Quebec since 1870; was suspended on March 31, 1908, and that it was proved that he had exacted sums of money on accounts due by the Department to contractors and others.

The case of F. J. Harding, Departmental agent at St. John, N.B., is dealt with at some length. He had financial transactions in the way of loans with those having contracts or other dealing with the Department, but such loans were accustomed to be made to him by personal friends before they had dealings with the Department, and there was no proof of overcharges by those persons. Having been stricken by paralysis, Mr. Harding was unable to give evidence at the investigation.

In regard to Inspector O'Farrell of Quebec, it is pointed out that he must have known that sums of money given him by contractors, were given for the purpose of influencing him in the passing of accounts.

Inspector Schmidt is referred to as accepting bribes in receipt of money from persons to whom he gave certificates.

In the case of Capt. Chas. Koenig, of the Druid, who has been dismissed, it is pointed out that he received gratuities from Government contractors with whom he had dealings in his official capacity. The same is found in regard to Dredging Inspector Beauchemin.

In regard to Capt. McGough of La Canadienne, reinstated, it is observed that he received some small gratuities, but was recommended for lenient treatment by the commissioners.

In regard to the other officials dismissed, the order-in-council observes that it has been shown they received considerable gratuities from Government contractors and that "their authority was therefore greatly impaired."

AUSTRALIA WILL TAKE NO ACTION

Melbourne, March 31.—The Premiers of New South Wales and Victoria have decided to offer one Dreadnought to the Imperial Government on behalf of their respective states.

This offer is a result of negotiations between the two states, undertaken since it became apparent that the Commonwealth Government was not prepared to take any step in this direction.

Subscriptions will be made on the basis of population, New South Wales contributing $4,000,000 and Victoria $3,000,000.

PROHIBITION IN NOVA SCOTIA

Halifax, N.S., March 31.—A resolution was introduced in Nova Scotia Legislature yesterday afternoon for provincial prohibition.

It was moved by Mr. Campbell, Union Reform member for King's County, and seconded by R. H. McKay, Liberal for Pictou, who recently defeated C. E. Tanner in the bye-election.

Rev. Mr. Cooper, Liberal for Queen's County, moved adjournment. It is understood he will oppose prohibition, claiming that the present laws give better results.

LATEST NEWS AS TOLD IN DESPATCHES

Another Escape.

New Westminster, B.C., March 31. James Mullin, a convict serving time here for theft, committed in Vancouver early this year, escaped from the penitentiary Monday afternoon, but was recaptured.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 31, 1909.

THE TOPIC OF THE HOUR

Los Angeles Express.

There's a heap o' difference between bein' a good man an' bein' a good fellow.

This is a difference, however, that children very seldom take notice of. Their youth, their propensity to see things on the side on which sweetmeats lie, and where the promise of future good things is kept together with their necessarily entire absence of what is known as "character," enables the real man to hide behind the grinning mask and to deceive them. They are just as easily frightened as pleased, as all who have ever been children will remember. A pumpkin emptied of its contents and with rude features out in the rind, will rouse the infant imagination to a high pitch of terror. Men sometimes are "but children of a larger growth," and the same lack of self-control exhibits itself in uncontrollable propensities and bad habits, and whenever a chance offers, especially when the chance opens to them an opportunity of condoning some vice, they themselves are partial to. Old Country people say that Canadians exhibit too many of these weaknesses. It was at one time an American failing too, but never to such an extent as amongst the "children of the wilderness" as our neighbours dub us. However, it is becoming universally recognized that if we are to keep abreast of civilization we must do so by an effort, and it is not done by worshipping the loaves and fishes in the attitude of a little child. This is too crude. It is like the popularity a man acquires in a remote tavern by calling up all hands for drinks. As Rev. R. E. Knowles so eloquently said in St. Paul's, it is only a noble service where one serves the noble. Money, too frequently, is the trust of stock-gambling grafting and general crookedness. A man who is not making money out of his own business is usually making it out of the business of somebody else, and of the lambs sacrificed on the stock-exchange. It is possibly owing to a certain moral law of compensation that it is only amongst the poor that the noblest traits most nobly flourish. The age of chivalry may be gone, but that of graft must follow it.

A POWERFUL PEOPLE

That the American people have plenty of character and a strong will is made very plain by their rebellion at various times against vice, crime and wrong-doing. Canadians are slow in comparison but we are virile and sane and may have an equal hope for a glorious future. The following summary furnishes a new and instructive example of American popular power:

"The experience of Los Angeles in forcing an undesirable mayor out of office by the "recall" clause in her charter, is attracting the attention of her sister cities throughout the Union, the recall being, in application at least, a comparatively novel instrument of municipal government. Mayor Harper was accused by the Los Angeles Municipal League of running the city "wide open," and of being in collusion with the classes which make money out of vice. These charges were vigorously pushed by some of the Los Angeles papers, and were made the subject of an investigation by a grand jury, which failed, however, to find an indictment. Against one of his newspaper critics, The Express, Mayor Harper instituted a libel suit last October, naming the damages at $300,000. Meanwhile the citizens signed the necessary petition for the holding of a recall election, and the Mayor anticipated the result by resigning. The most amazing part of the entire affair, as the San Diego Union remarks is the manner in which this resignation came about. It seems to have been the result of a bargain between Mr. Harper and the owner of the paper he was suing. The Express itself thus frankly tells of the deal:

"At 5.25 yesterday Mr. Harper appeared at the private office of Edwin T. Earl and requested an interview. The interview was granted. Every word of the interview was taken in shorthand and is a matter of record. Mayor Harper proposed that he would withdraw his name from the ticket as a candidate for re-election, March 26, it being understood that certain information in the possession of Mr. Earl, regarding Mr Harper's official acts, not his private character, would not be published.

"No newspaper or individual possesses the information now in the hands of Mr Earl. This information let it be distinctly understood, has reference to Mr Harper's administration, and not to Mr Harper's private affairs.

"Finally, The Express will simply say, as it has said before, that having in its possession the information it has, it could not in justice to the city of Los Angeles permit Mr Harper to continue to be a candidate for re-election. Mr. Harper was the only issue before the people. Mr. Harper has withdrawn his name from the ticket. The Express has accomplished its purpose in the cause of right and decency. The recall movement has succeeded and is today a more effective weapon in the hands of the people for law and order than ever before."

Des Moines has the power of recall, as has Berkeley in California, and St. Joseph is considering its adoption. But more significant yet is the fact that this clause is incorporated in the draft of Chicago's new charter, now before the Illinois legislature. Says the Chicago News:

"As the charter convention has indicated, with the recall in operation the people will consent to longer terms for public officials. This should be distinctly beneficial to the public service and should greatly reduce the expense and turmoil of elections by rendering them less frequent. Further, the operation of the recall would tend to bring about elections on occasions when issues of interest were actually before the people. It is a fault of our existing system that elections come at intervals arbitrarily fixed instead of being ordered when it is important to know the state of popular feeling.

"The principal argument against the adoption of the recall is, of course that it may subject an official to the annoyance and expense of running for office over and over because of factious opposition to his politics It is, however, improbable that in practise any such condition would develop. According to the Chicago charter bill a new election must be ordered on petition of 25 per cent of the voters of the city or of the division of the city directly interested in the official whose fitness is called into question. Reason and experience lead to the conclusion that an unjust attack on a worthy official merely would increase his popularity with the fair-minded majority of the voters in city or ward."

The Baltimore Sun doubts the practicability of the recall for a city of two million inhabitants like Chicago, and the Milwaukee Free Press reminds us that "there are two sides to the recall as there are to many governmental schemes that appear theoretically sound." Thus:

"The undesirable side is this, that it enables the easily moved majority to try an officer at the polls under the heat of temporary excitement and agitation and that this possibility would operate to make an officer hearken less to the dictates of his conscience and convictions than to the clamor of the crowd. Now the first thoughts and snap judgments of the rank and file in a democracy, especially in America, are just as apt to be wrong as right yet while under their influence that majority would be just as willing to dethrone those who disagree with it as it is to pin its mouthpiece in office. A portion of the press—the larger one for that matter—is largely responsible for this. In their avid desire to purvey stirring news, the journals of this class to play upon popular weakness, sentiment, and passion that they create fictitious standards and desires, which informed and sober second thought does not tolerate.

"Thus, when Judge Landis imposed his enormous fine on Standard Oil the public, coached by the press, hailed him as a liberator hardly less than Lincoln. Pictures of him and his family, biographies, anecdotes and eulogies, fairly obsessed the columns of the dailies, and Landis was hailed as a welcome candidate for the Presidency.

"And now the kindly and emotional Chicago judge is regarded as little better than a man who did not make good.

"Conversely was it the case with Governor Hughes, whose veto of the two-cent rate bill brought down on his head the indignation of a large element that hail every curtailment of a railroad's income as a triumph for representative government. If the recall had obtained in New York State, frenzied reformers and self-seeking politicians might easily have instigated a new election to oust Governor Hughes on the ground of his being a tool of the railroads. Yet the Governor has lived to see his stand for commission supremacy vindicated in a dozen miscarried efforts to regulate rates by direct statute, and he stands higher today as a true representative of the people than he ever did."

"We instance these cases to show how dangerous to the best popular interests it would be if the majority could always put its will into operation under the stress of immediate emotion and opinion; how its ability to do so would diminish the courage of conscientious officials and make them little better than time servers of the mob."—Literary Digest.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The international Congress for the hoped-for abolition of the opium traffic between India and China has proved a failure.

While scientists are establishing the fact that the earth is not drying up, it might be just as well if some of the scientists would "dry up."

The Department of the Public Health at Toronto is exceedingly anxious that everybody should be vaccinated, in view of the prevalence of smallpox throughout Ontario. They have sent urgent requests to the newspapers to make it known.

A census recently taken of foreign students at the German universities discloses the fact that the number is on the increase. The foreign nations chiefly represented were: Russia, 1564; Austria-Hungary, 706; America, 333; Switzerland, 302; England, 165; France, 61; Asia (chiefly Japanese studying medicine) 172; and Bulgaria, Servia and Roumania, 346.

"Sooner or later there must be a railway to Hudson's Bay. When the latter is connected with Lake Winnipeg by river and canal—and this also will be—the town of Winnipeg, itself in the very heart of the American Continent, will be turned into a seaport every summer by the most wonderful water route in the world," says the Observer.

The proposal of the people of Lindsay to present the Midgets with handbags and new suits of clothes may be suggestive but it is not sport. Deserving as they are the Midgets lose their reputation when they exchange it for its worth in clothes and bags. It is impossible to keep a cake and eat it. This is a wise provision of nature." What would we think of the immortal Flavelle coming in from victory to exchange his ethereal armour of legitimate triumph for a couple of undershirts and a paper-lined trunk!

Of the rising tide of intellectuality and mental strength in America, Signor Ferrero, the president of a great Italian university, writes;—

"The immense force of American idealism in its educational, artistic, and scientific undertakings is manifested in the extraordinary number of universities which have been instituted in a few generations. It is true that the result so far has not quite corresponded to the energy expended. The studies pursued are multifarious, but the intellectual productions are not so far rich or of the first order. It is difficult to understand the cause of this disproportion between effort and outcome in the case of a people so intelligent. This may result from misdirected enthusiasm or the absence of traditional guidance. Perhaps American culture lacks balance and coherency such as alone can bring success. But here we find energy combined with idealism and these will undoubtedly reach the goal at last."

Of the higher type of American culture he observes:

"Among the American middle class and especially in the large cities of New England I met with people whose mental cultivation both as regards breadth and refinement was in no wise inferior to the same class in Europe."

"It is a legend. The real masters of the great Republic are not the millionaires, nor the trusts, nor the politician class, but the people; or, if you like, the majority, which is made a cult, a religion of, in America. Thus to the people all defer, perhaps with a submissiveness too absolute. All that the plutocracy can do in attaining its ends, with all its vast resources, is accomplished very cautiously and in despite of the people. And in this condition of things is seen the good side of America's simplicity of life, which forbids any one to venture upon a claim of superiority. Every class, high and low, is conscious of a genuine equality. This is the explanation of the comparative simplicity in which the great capitalists live. The people would resent and refuse to tolerate a display of magnificence which is merely individual and egotistical. Hence it comes to pass that the greatest luxury enjoyed by the very rich in America is derived from the expenditure of money for the use of the people and the advantage of all. Such expenditure includes the endowment of libraries, universities, colleges, and so on. The ruling power in America is the vote." —La Tribuna, Rome.

The love for animals is often carried to a degree where it becomes a symptom of mental disorder, is asserted by Dr. Charles L. Dana, the eminent nerve specialist, in The Medical Record (New York, March 6). To this "modern malady," as he calls it, he gives the name of "zoophilpsychosis," and the classes it as an "obsessive psychosis" or "psychasthenia"—a type of morbid mental activity that is peculiarly characteristic of modern civilization. This condition of the mind produces mental disorder without loss of control, so that it is not "insanity" in the usual significance of the word. Says Dr. Dana:

"It is produced by bad methods of education and training, acting on minds very sensitive to suggestions and impressions from without and within; minds lacking in power to handle the problems of life, and to see things in their right proportion. Modern activities are too strenuous for this kind of mental organism, which is meant for a life of simplicity, moderation and restraint. The present popular 'absorbent' method of education, which lets the mind follow its interests and take the line of least resistance, is a potent factor in the pathogenesis. For through it the power of inhibition becomes weakened or lost; and the mental life is approximated to the conditions of dreaming."

The zoophilpsychosis, he adds, is characterized by tormenting ideas and worrying fears, but it has underlying it a morbid affective state toward certain persons and animals. This anomaly of the emotions is not usually referred to as part of ordinary types of this class of disorders; but he regards it as a most important feature; and thinks it may even exist as the dominant thing in the psychosis.—Literary Digest.

Canadians Pay; Yankees Get Free.

Ottawa, March 31.—The fisheries committee yesterday morning heard evidence by Prof. Prince on conditions in Georgian Bay, the examination being conducted by J. A. Currie. He said Canadian fisheries in the bay are in the hands of the American fishing combine. Some of the fish is brought back to Canada, and thus the Canadian consumer pays duty on Canadian fish, and the American consumer gets Canadian fish free.

Daring Burglary in Stratford.

Stratford, March 31.—Within a hundred feet of the Police Court in which a coroner's inquest was in progress, an unknown burglar pulled off a daring robbery between 10.30 and 10.45 Monday night. The jewelry store of Harry Roberts was entered and goods to the value of $400 taken.

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

DOG RESCUES LITTLE MASTER

Big St. Bernard Plunged into River and Brought Child of Three Safely to Shore

Seattle, March 30.—"Major," a big St. Bernard dog, is the petted hero of Renton to-day, and admiring residents of that town think he is entitled to a medal for heroism by the Humane Society. "Major" enacted the part of life saver yesterday, when he plunged into Cedar river and rescued his little master, the three-year-old son of S. C. Pierce, a restaurant proprietor, after the child had been swept off his feet by the swift current and was being carried down the stream.

Mrs. Pierce, missing the child, arrived at the bank of the stream just in time to see the sagacious animal drag her little boy ashore. According to persons who witnessed the rescue, "Major" several times had dragged the child away from the water before the little fellow finally eluded his four-footed playmate and dashed into the stream.

MORE TROUBLE AT THE BRIDGE

More trouble is being experienced at the Hunter street bridge to-day on account of the ice, when has become blocked there on its journey down the creek. The water has risen to a considerable height and threatens to cause trouble in the vicinity of the bridge. A number of men have been engaged all day in trying to break up the ice, but they are up against a big proposition.

This is the second time this year that the same trouble has been caused by the ice being unable to get past the bridge. While no one can hardly be blamed for the state of things that have existed this year, the matter should be looked after, and probably avoid loss to property and claims for damages.

STILL CROSSING CHEMONG LAKE

Mr. D. Whetung, sr., of Chemong, was in the city to-day and informed the Review that the ice is still unbroken on Chemong Lake. Mr. Whetung drove across the lake coming to the city this morning, and states that it will be several days before the ice road is unfit for travel.

"The weather is not as warm at the Indian village as in the city," said Mr. Whetung, "and there is considerable snow on the ground. I have crossed the lake on the ice when we had to lay planks from the shore to the ice in order to get across the water around the edge, where the ice had melted."

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

CURE

Sick Headache and relieve all the troubles incident to a bilious state of the system, such as Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Distress after eating, Pain in the Side, &c. While their most remarkable success has been shown in curing

SICK

Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cured

HEAD

Ache they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick head is the bane of so many lives that here is where we make our great boast. Our pills cure it while others do not.

ACHE

Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not gripe or purge, but by their gentle action please all who use them.

WILL NOMINATE THE OFFICERS

At the meeting of the Canadian Club last night the following were appointed a committee to nominate the officers for the year: Messrs. F. D. Kerr, A. Montizambert, A. Mowat, W. R. Morris and L. M. Hayes.

The resolution appointing the committee was moved by Dr. Morrison and seconded by Mr. R. F. McWilliams, who referred to the good work the officers for 1908-09 had done.

The officers will be elected at a meeting of the club to be held on the last Monday in April.

NORWOOD

Special to the Review.

Norwood, March 30—Mrs J E Roxburgh has returned after spending a few days with friends in Toronto.

Mr. Cecil Tucker has rented the frame house on Ridge street owned by Mrs Bailey of Peterborough, and intends moving in in a few days.

Rev. G A MacLennan, BA, and Mr W H Cuthbertson of this place attended the Laymen's Presbyterial conference of the Presbytery of Peterborough held in St. Andrew's church on Tuesday of last week.

Miss Winnie Bailey returned to her home in Peterborough last week after spending a week with friends in this town.

Misses Bessie Rose and Olive Rose of Havelock were in town on Monday.

Mrs. Graham and daughter Kathleen visited friends in Norwood on Monday.

Miss Annie Rabal and Miss Katie Wallace visited friends in Hastings over Sunday.

Mr. George Buck left last week on a trip to the Northwest.

Mr. Harry Allan of Warkworth was in town one day last week.

Rev W H Adams, pastor of the Methodist church here has accepted a call to the Toronto Conference and Rev A H Tucker, BA, BD, of Oshawa, has accepted the invitation of the Quarterly Board of the Norwood Methodist church to become successor of the present pastor.

Mr. M R Callendar has moved his furniture into Mr Davidson's brick residence on Queen street and expects to be able to live there in a few days. Mr Callandar was to move to Lindsay but has decided not to go at the present.

Miss Mollie Johnston of Havelock was in town last week.

Miss Hattie MacLaughlin has returned to her duties in the public school at Bracebridge.

PRETTY WEDDING.

Miss Charlotte A. Stevenson, daughter of Mr and Mrs Wm Stevenson of Donegal, was married to Mr. Jeffery Morton of Millbrook in the Methodist parsonage on Wednesday afternoon of last week. The bride entered the parlor leaning on the arm of her brother who gave her away and was supported by Miss Beatrice Stewart of town. The groom was supported by Mr. Barclay M. Robertson, also of town, while Miss Edna Adams played the wedding march.

The bride was attired in her travelling suit of navy blue broadcloth with satin blouse to match and carried a shower bouquet of exotics and smilax, and maiden hair fern. Mr. and Mrs. Morton will reside in the township of Manvers.

EPWORTH LEAGUE

At the meeting of the Epworth League on Monday night Rev Mr Balfour of Havelock delivered an address on temperance.

An instrumental duet was given by Miss Annie Birt and Miss Grace Foster and "The Wayside Cross" a solo and quartette was also given. Mr Walter Girven sang the solo while the quartette was composed of Mr B. M Robertson, Dr Weldon, Mr Garlick and Mr. Marks.

Sugar making is in full swing again. Several farmers in this vicinity have tapped and the sap is reported to be running very fast. As yet no syrup of local manufacture has been offered for sale.

Mr. Thomas Robson, north of the village on the Dummer road has advertised for sale by public auction on April 8th his farm of fifty acres where he resides. Also his farm stock and implements. At the same time the thoroughbred fowl of the late Alf. Robson will be put under the hammer and sold to the highest bidder. Auctioneer J R McKelvie will conduct the sale, which should be well attended as the farm is a very desirable property and the stock and fowl of the high order.

The funeral took place on Friday March 26th of Sarah Spence, wife of the late George Taylor. Mrs Taylor died on March 24th after an illness of nearly five months duration. Deceased was 66 years of age and leaves to mourn her loss one son, Ira D Taylor, of Marquette, Man. and one daughter, Mrs A B Greenbank of this town, also one sister and eight brothers. Mrs Taylor was a member of the Methodist church and the Women's Missionary Society. The service was performed by the Rev W H. Adams, pastor of the Methodist church. The pall bearers were: Rev. H S Spence, John Spence, J H Taylor, Wm Spence, Samuel Spence, and Hiram Taylor.

JERICHO.

The Famous City, Its Walls and the Curse of Joshua.

The walls of Jericho, remains of which have been excavated by German archaeologists, are, of course, chiefly famous in connection with their miraculous destruction by Joshua. It is recorded in the book of Joshua, chapter vi, that, by command of the Lord, Joshua's army compassed the city, going roundabout it once a day for six days, headed by seven priests bearing seven rams' horns before the ark. On the seventh day they encompassed it seven times. Then, on Joshua's command, "the people shouted, and the priests blew with the trumpets, and it came to pass when the people heard the sound of the trumpet that the people shouted with a great shout and the wall fell down flat, so that the people went up into the city, every man straight before him, and they took the city," destroying all that was in it, except Rahab the harlot, who had hidden the messengers sent by Joshua to spy out the city and her father's household. The date of this destruction is placed at B. C. 1451. In spite of Joshua's curse on any one who should rebuild the city, it was rebuilt in the reign of Ahab in B. C. 918 by Hiel, a native of Bethel, and it is recorded in I Kings xvi, 34, how the curse of Joshua was fulfilled. The second city flourished and under Herod the Great became important. It was sacked by one Simon, slave of Herod. Archelaus, the son of Herod, founded a new town on the plain, which he had planted with palms. Jericho was finally destroyed by Vespasian in A. D. 68.—Dundee Advertiser.

DOING THE CZAR.

A Display of Quick Wit by the Comedian Martineff.

The Emperor Nicholas of Russia was once "sold" as follows:

During an interview which Martineff, the comedian and mimic, had succeeded in obtaining with Prince Volkhonsky, high steward, the emperor walked into the room unexpectedly, yet with a design, as was soon made evident.

Telling the actor that he had heard of his talents and should like to see a specimen of them, he bade him mimic the old minister. The feat was performed with so much gusto that the emperor laughed immoderately and then, to the great horror of the poor actor, desired to have himself "taken off."

"'Tis physically impossible," pleaded Martineff.

"Nonsense!" said Nicholas. "I insist on its being done."

Finding himself on the horns of a dilemma, the mimic took heart of grace and, with a promptitude and presence of mind that probably saved him, buttoned his coat over his breast, expanded his chest, threw up his head and, assuming the imperial part to the best of his power, strode across the room and back; then, standing opposite the minister, he cried in the exact tone and manner of the czar:

"Volkhonsky, pay M. Martineff 1,000 silver rubles!"

The emperor for a moment was disconcerted; but, recovering himself with a smile, he ordered the money to be paid.

Stories of John Bright.

John Bright was supposed to be a total abstainer, but once when Edward Miall was very nervous at the prospect of having to make an important speech in the house Bright said:

"Well, Miall, if I were you I'd for once go and have a pint of champagne."

Mr. Miall did as he was told, and the result may be judged from the narrator's comment that "champagne on an unaccustomed interior is not always a curative or a tonic."

Bright "rarely had any difference with his wife," but occasionally they were not at one about the children. When they came to a point of absolute disagreement he used to say:

"Now, I tell thee, if thou doesn't do what I wish I'll go straight to Mr. Gladstone and ask him to make me a knight," to which the answer invariably was:

"Oh, anything rather than that."

He Was Not Superstitious.

A captain of an ocean liner tells the following story: Coming from the old country was a very nervous old lady who complained that she was sure there was a rat in her stateroom.

"Keep it there, madam," said the captain.

"But do you like rats?" asked she.

"I've got a nest in my cabin," retorted the brusque seaman, "and I never disturb them. When they leave the ship I do."

"Why, you must be superstitious," urged the dame.

"No, ma'am," wound up the captain, "I'm not, but the rats are."

Qualified.

"I'm sure my daughter is going to make a great singer some day."

"Is that so?"

"Yes; she's always quarreling with her mother, who tells me it is absolutely impossible to manage her."

NOVEL FAVOR GIVING.

Presents Tied In Packages and Fastened to Umbrella Ribs.

Mothers in search of new stunts for giving favors at a child's party should not omit the umbrella method. This is as easily managed as a pie or grab bag and is much more picturesque.

Cover an old silk umbrella with gay pictures and festoon it with strips of bright tissue paper or colored ribbons. The handle can also be twined with colored muslin, though it should be done very tightly to keep taut under youthful vigor in handling. Small sleigh bells dangling from each rib add to the merriment.

Tie up plenty of small favors in tissue paper packages and fasten them to the ribs by strings of different length. There should be at least one package for each young guest. Several for each child will be yet more fun.

Form the children in a large circle, with one of their number in the center holding the umbrella.

Some one at the piano should play a gay march or twostep, and the children should move in a grand chain first in one direction, then in the other. When the music suddenly stops the dancers stop with it, and the child in the center raises the umbrella high above his head three times.

The present that sways longest is his. Great is the excitement of the circle watching the dangling gifts and speculating on what their friend will draw.

Before the umbrella holder unties his gift he calls out to boy or girl, as the case may be:

"Jane, come next within the ring!
The magical umbrella swing
And see what gift a shower will bring
To you while we do dance and sing."

The new child holds the umbrella while the first one unties and examines the contents of his package. Then the dance goes on as before until every child has had a turn at twirling the umbrella and feeling its fairy shower.

FOR THE TEA TABLE.

Hostess Looking For Novelty Serves Rissolettes With Tea.

The hostess who wants novelties for her afternoon tea or card party can find them in rissoles and rissolettes, that can be made at home quite as deliciously as by the caterer.

A rissole is nothing but a croquette wrapped in pastry and fried in boiling lard. Special irons come for frying these dainties, but they are not necessary.

Roll out thin squares of puff paste, and on top place the croquette mixture of chicken, stirred into a well seasoned white sauce and molded when cold into regular croquette shapes. Fold the pastry around the meat, seal the edges with white of egg, dip into egg and well seasoned breadcrumbs and fry in boiling lard.

Rissolettes are sheets of pastry rolled very thin and dotted with currant jelly, orange marmalade or any desired preserve. A large sheet of pastry is rolled thin, covered with dots of the preserve and topped by another sheet of pastry.

To prevent the jam from spreading the pastry about the jelly is wet with ice water for about half an inch in. Cut in circles, diamonds or any desired shape, pinch the edges together, brush with white of egg and cinnamon.

These rissolettes can either be fried in hot lard or, what is easier, baked in a hot oven for about fifteen minutes.

A Novelty at Cards.

Those who give card parties are always anxious to get new and clever methods of keeping individual scores. Everything that can be thought of has been done in the way of ingenious cards.

At a recent card party a novelty was introduced by giving each guest a wire bracelet. Every time a game was won a colored bead was strung on it. These made rather pretty souvenirs to take home.

As gold wire was used and vivid stones of large size were chosen, the bangles of the winners were quite gay ornaments before the evening was over.

Another hostess elaborated this idea by using tiny ten cent toys instead of beads. These were hooked on the bracelet with bits of gold wire. This idea was enthusiastically received, and it might make a good suggestion for hostesses of coming card parties.

Sitting Down Gracefully.

Note the studied attention which a woman of the world desirous of possessing real grace must pay to her every action. For instance, the manner in which women sit down on their present day gowns deserves to be an object of special study on the part of all persons of taste, and the choice of a particular kind of chair is not without importance. A low ottoman seat is advantageous for the suppleness of a youthful, slightly developed figure. A deep seated chair becomes better a more heavily built person, who should make a point of sitting upright in order to bring out the beautiful lines of the neck and chest. In a luxurious armchair a very thin woman may increase her fragility, and her slender hands on the arms of the chair will be shown off to great advantage.

Make Steak Tender.

Steak that is not porterhouse can be improved by treating it as the French chefs prepare their steaks to make them tender. Put three tablespoonfuls of olive oil and one and one-half tablespoonfuls of vinegar on a plate and lay the steak in; then set in the icebox for four hours. Turn half a dozen times at intervals; then the meat is ready to broil.

Hamilton street railway employees and the company have mutually arranged a new timetable.

Released From Pen.

Kingston, March 31.—J. F. Duncan, a former bank manager, Ayr, given four years for raising a check from $1,000 to $10,000, was let out of the penitentiary on parole yesterday, having served a little over half the term.

Hanged Himself.

Marmora, March 31.—Alex. Lanave, a lumberman, whose home is believed to be in Trenton, and who has been in the employ of the Marmora Cooperage Co., committed suicide by hanging.

Brute Gets a Year.

Brantford, March 31.—Dominick Rosi of Toronto was sentenced to one year in the Central Prison, for bringing a 17-year-old girl here for improper purposes.

Sat All Night.

Quebec, March 31.—The first streaks of dawn and even broad daylight found the Legislature in full swing after an all-night's sitting.

It was due to the refusal of the Opposition to vote a sum of $170,000 which appeared in the estimates to be voted for colonization roads that the House sat so unusually long. The objection of the members on the left side of the House was that they wanted full explanations as to how the amount would be expended, and just how much would be spent in each constituency.

The item was finally voted at 6.30 a.m.

Whitla Threatened.

Sharon, Pa., March 31.—The Whitla family left here yesterday presumably for Atlantic City. Before going away Mr. Whitla turned twenty-five threatening letters over to the United States postal authorities. These letters have been received within the last day or two. All were mailed at railroad postoffices and will be hard to trace.

One letter states unless Mr. Whitla uses every effort to free the prisoners his home will be dynamited. A second letter demands that $5,000 be deposited at some point in Ohio, which money, it is stated, will be used to defend the Boyles.

GIVES THIS VERY SIMPLE TEST

To Find Out if the Kidneys are Affected and How to Cure Them

There are more cases of kidney trouble here now than ever before, while recent reports show that more people succumb each year to some form of kidney disease than any other cause.

When there is sickness examine the urine. Rheumatism is only a symptom of kidney trouble. It is nothing more or less than excessive uric acid in the blood which the sluggish, inactive kidneys have failed to sift out, leaving it to decompose and settle about the joints and muscles causing intense suffering; frequently resulting in deformity; often reaching the heart when death ensues.

Pains across the back, frequent painful and suppressed urination and other symptoms of weak bladder are not the only signs of kidney trouble; many cases of stomach disease, headache, pain in the heart, inactive liver etc. are but symptoms; the cause of which can be traced to feeble, clogged kidneys.

A simple test of the urine is to void a small quantity in a bottle or glass and let it stand over night; next morning, if there is a reddish brick-dust sediment, or white fleecy substance present, either consult some reputable physician or take a good vegetable treatment. The following prescription is recommended highly in these cases and the sufferer can mix it at home: Compound Kargon, one ounce; Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Shake well and use in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime.

Where any of the symptoms enumerated above are present good results are sure to follow immediately the use of this simple prescription.

A Hunting Accident.

Gladstone, Man., March 31.—A young man, aged 21, son of Francis Roulat of Sandy Bay, had the bones shattered below the knee on Saturday night and lay out on the marsh two days and nights. A gun strapped to a toboggan, which was drawn by dogs, exploded and caused the accident.

Von Buelow's Denial.

Berlin, March 31.—Chancellor von Buelow, in the Reichstag yesterday denied he was on bad terms with Emperor William, saying that, on the contrary, his relations with His Majesty were most agreeable. The chancellor urged the passage of the law providing a tax on inheritance.

Think He's Dangerous.

Orangeville, March 31.—Adam Harper of East Luther Township, who has been paying attention to a sick girl whom he has never seen, by writing her scores of letters and who recently threatened to do some shooting, has been locked up as a dangerous lunatic.

How are your Eyes?

THIS is a most important question for the young or the old of either sex, and the sooner it is considered the better. If you are troubled with faulty vision, with black spots, or floating specks before the eyes, it will be to your advantage and safety to have the defection attended to without delay. We are professional opticians, and can examine your eyes correctly and prescribe for you the right kind of glasses. The wrong kind will injure you.

Y.W.C.A. GYM EXHIBITION THOROUGHLY PLEASED AUDIENCE LAST EVENING

Attractive Drills and Marches Cleverly Executed—Classes Gave Proof of Excellent Training—A Programme of Interest and Merit.

Probably no more satisfactory gymnasium closing exhibition was ever given by the Y. W. C. A. pupils of the physical department than the one held last night in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute. Every item on the lengthy programme of eighteen numbers was cleverly executed, and all were given a most cordial reception by the audience, which was a large one, fully four hundred and fifty being in attendance. The Assembly Hall is an ideal place for entertainments of the character of last night's, and the work of the classes and others contributing was seen to great advantage.

The programme was well chosen, and nicely balanced, there being plenty of variety in the various drills and exercises. A feature that was appreciated by the audience, and one which must have given great satisfaction to the capable physical instructress, Miss Coventry, was the utter lack of confusion in any of the movements, and everything was executed without a single hitch. This not only speaks much for the intelligence and interest of the pupils, but also gives evidence of the skillful and patient training of Miss Coventry. The ability and thoroughness of the directress were especially noticeable in the work of the juniors, who acquitted themselves with great credit and performed what was required of them with correctness and promptness, in spite of their tender years.

Good taste was shown in the placing of the numbers, which gave the necessary variety essential to a bright and interesting entertainment.

Miss M. R. Rennie was accompanist for the evening, and presided at the piano in a very capable manner,

THE PROGRAMME.

The programme was as follows:

Part One.

1.—Fancy March .... Senior Class
2.—Sailor Drill .... Junior Class
3.—Dumb-bell Exercises ...Boys Class
4.—Hoop Fantasia...Intermediate Class
5.—Club-Swinging .... Seniors
6.—Teddy Bear Frolic .... Juniors
7.—Wand Exercises ...Junior Class
8.—Flag Drill ....Boys' Class
9.—Dumb-Bell Exercises ....Intermediates

Part Two.

10.—Wooden-Doll Drill .... Seniors
11.—Wand Exercises ....Boys
12.—Sailor's-Horn-Pipe, Three Juniors
13.—Lantern March ... Intermediates
14.—Vocal, selected ......Mr. K. Shook
15.—The Jumping Jack ....Master Ewart O'Shea
16.—Dumb-Bell Exercises ... ...Juniors
17.—Sword-Dance .... Misses Jessie Cressman and Marguerite Sanderson.
18.—Scarf-Drill ....Seniors

The opening number on the programme, the fancy march by the senior class evoked much applause as did the succeeding numbers. The programme was divided into two parts, nine numbers in each part, and judging from the appreciative attitude of the audience it had the merit of increasing in attractiveness for all the numbers in the second part were enthusiastically greeted. In the first part the hoop fantasia by the intermediate class, the Teddy Bear Frolic by the diminutive juniors and the flag drill by the boys and girls were pleasing features. (The boys' class, it might be mentioned, has been held at the YWCA. since Christmas, and all of them are too young for admission to the YMCA.

An original and clever drill was the wooden doll drill by the seniors. It was executed somewhat after the mechanical manner of the march of the toy soldiers which has been popular with professional companies and delighted the audience to such an extent that an insistent recall was given.

Probably the clever dancing of the children was appreciated as much as anything on the programme. Three dances were given, a sailors hornpipe by Hilda Cubitt, Eame Aylmer and Ada Lane; the "Jumping jack" by Mr. Ewart O'Shea, and the sword dance by Jessie Cressman and Marguerite Sanderson. The first mentioned saw three cute little maids in the popular and tuneful Jack Tar dance. Mr. Ewart O'Shea in his cap and bells made a decided impression, as the dancing jumping jack, and Misses Cressman and Sanderson gave the sword dance with their customary daintiness and skill. The audience persisted in their demand that the dances be repeated and encores had to be responded to.

The lantern march was one of the prettiest of the evening and like most of the other numbers was warmly encored. A graceful scarf drill with tableau finale completed an entertaining and artistic programme.

Mr. Kenneth Shook's singing of "Life's Lullaby" was very greatly appreciated and his encore selection was also generously applauded.

THOSE TAKING PART

The pupils of the various classes who took part were:

Senior—Misses H Currie, M Currie, Lillian Dean, J Hawkey, Muriel Morrison, M Mainprize, Helen Mendel, D Morley, Elsie Pollock, Myrtle Reid, E Tracy, G Sanderson, M. Smith, B Taylor, D Wood.

Intermediate —Misses Marion Harstone, K Moore, Gladys Patterson, Alberta Fowler, Hazel Austin, Corrine Legrendre, Ailien Wade, Lillie Simpson, Edith Richardson, Elsie Mowat, Isabel Nesbitt, Eva Hartley, Maud Norris, Gladys Patterson, Dorothy Hill, Gladys Fife, Junior—Misses May Aylmer, Hilda Cubitt, Vera Stock, Phylis Young, Edna Allin, May Bell, Lenore Lyle, Ada Lane, Bessie Mather, Betty Mowat, Gladys Mulholland, May Read, Edith Kerr, Genevieve McCarthy.

Beautiful bouquets were presented to Miss Rennie and Miss Coventry by the Teddy Bears and by the Intermediates. The seniors and intermediates also made two other most acceptable presentations but these were made in private and not directly in connection with the exhibition but as an evidence of appreciation of the painstaking instruction during the past season.

STANDING FIELD CROP COMPETITIONS FOR 1909

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

Having in view the excellent results obtained in 1907 and 1908 in stimulating a greater interest in the production of better seed grain, agricultural societies will again be assisted in the holding of competitions in standing field crops during 1909 under the following regulations:

1 Nature of Competition. Competitions will be limited to one crop, to be selected by the society, which should be the one of most importance to the farmers of the district. Entries for competition must consist of not less than five acres, and when beans and potatoes are entered, the minimum plot must not be less than one acre.

Selection must be made from the following crops, viz., spring, fall or goose wheat, oats, barley, rye, corn, peas, alsike clover, red clover, potatoes, beans or any other staple crop produced for seed in Ontario.

2. Competitors. Competition shall be limited to members of an agricultural society and the fields entered must not be more than fifteen miles from its headquarters. Competitors shall be allowed to make entry in only one society and but one entry can be made by each competitor.

3 Society's entry. Societies desiring to enter this competition must notify the superintendent not later than the first day of May, and must not make less than ten entries nor more than twenty-five.

4. Individual entries. All individual entries must be forwarded by the secretaries of the societies to J. Lockie Wilson, superintendent of Agricultural Societies, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, before the first of June, 1909.

6. Societies may, if thought advisable, charge competitors an entry fee of not more than one dollar.

An amount of not less than $50 must be offered in prizes by each society, to be divided as follows; $15, $12, $10, $8 and $5. Of the above amount the Ontario Department of Agriculture will contribute $30. The balance is to be contributed by the society, and this $20 can be counted as expenditure for agricultural purposes in the yearly financial statement.

Judges. The Ontario Department of Agriculture will furnish expert judges free of charge.

Grain exhibit at winter fairs. Large prizes will be offered by the department for two bushel sacks of grain at both Guelph and Ottawa Winter Fairs, the competition for which will be confined to prize winners in the Standing Field Crop Competition. Full particulars will be furnished later to the prize winners.

Sheaf exhibit. In addition to the above, arrangements have been made with the directors of the Canadian National exhibition, to be held in Toronto August 28th to September 13th, to donate $240 in prizes for a sheaf exhibit of grain from the fields, the owners of which were awarded prizes in the Standing Field Crop Competitions. For this sheaf exhibit the province has been divided into three districts and prizes amounting to $80 will be awarded to competitors in each of the three divisions mentioned below for the following kinds of grain:

	Wheat	Oats	Barley	Rye.
First Prize... ...	$6	$6	$6	$6
Second Prize	5	5	5	5
Second Prize......	5	5	5	5
Third Prize	4	4	4	4
oFurth Prize......	3	3	3	3
Fifth Prize	2	2	[illegible]	2

Division 1. Includes Muskoka, Parry Sound, Haliburton, Nipissing, Manitoulin, Algoma and other districts in New Ontario.

Division 2. All counties east of York and Simcoe.

Division 3. York, Simcoe and all counties west and south-west of same.

Each sheaf entered must contain not less than 1,000 stems and must be boxed and shipped C.O.D. to the superintendent of Agricultural Products, Exhibition Park, Toronto, not later than August 20th. All entries for this exhibit must be made to J. Lockie Wilson, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, before August 2nd, 1909.

A sale of homemade bread, cake and candy etc., will be held at S. S. hall of St. Paul's Church on Friday, April 2nd, from 4 to 6 o'clock. Afternoon tea will be served.

NEW WALTZ SOON COMING

Worthy Rival of the Merry Widow—Is Called the Suffragette Waltz.

Now that the Merry Widow waltz has palled as a sensation and even the Barn Dance, over which New York went crazy last season, has become rather common. Have you heard of the latest sensation in their line? And it is on its way. Have you heard of the latest. The Suffragette Waltz is its name and it is now raging in New York and being taught in all the large dancing academies. It has just hit there from London and is now rapidly spreading in popularity the continent over, and will soon be the rage in Peterborough.

But about the latest waltz. It has a sociological significance. Of course it has come from London where suffragettes originated. But it has quickly caught on over here where a smattering of suffrage is a necessary accomplishment.

The fair dancer is no longer a clinging vine piloted by the firm arm of her stalwart partner. The up to date suffragette does her own piloting, pinioning the arms that once upheld her in a stern and parliamentary grasp. "Equal rights, and then some," is her cry, and the muscle that once kept her from slipping on teh floor is now employed for the purpose of holding up her train.

Man no longer leads; he is being led in the dance. The suffragette pipeth and he danceth. She holds, she grasps and he becomes meek in her hands. Though he appears to be in subjection it is noticeable that he is doing all the work. He has his hand behind her back to steady her, should she feel inclined to lean against it. And his other hand is employed in managing the draperies which have held the dancer in bondage so long. Nobody need say that the suffragette does not make him work, but she takes all the credit.

When the suffragette dances she is free to execute all the steps she pleases, but subjugated man has to go according to Hoyle and walk a chalk line. If he doesn't he steps on the train which he is holding, and it is his fault never hers, if the dance is upset.

The advocate of suffrage steers through the mazes of the dance and indicates when she wants to reverse pulling or shoving her partner, as the case may be. And while it looks as if only a very strong woman could manage the dance any well trained partner will if he is wise, soon learn to obey and do as he is bidden.

BANQUET HAS BEEN POSTPONED

Senior Chuch League Banquet Will Not Take Place Until Tuesday Evening April 6th

The banquet that was to have been tendered the St. Andrew's hockey team champions of the Senior Church League will not take place on Friday evening as had been intended, but will be held on Tuesday night, April 6th. Unfortunately a large number of the clergymen of town will be in Toronto on Friday, it has been thought advisable to postpone the affair until such time as would be convenient for all. The tickets have been distributed and may be secured from the officers of the league or from members of the different hockey teams. All arrangements have been completed and there is every indication that the banquet will be a big success.

PERSONAL

Rev. Mr. Riddiford went to Toronto today.

Captain Jas. J. Johnson of Bobcaygeon was in town this morning on his way to Peterborough.—Lindsay Warder.

Miss Rose Moore, of Lakefield, who has been ill for the past few days is now improving. This will be pleasing news to her many friends.

Mr. John White, who had the misfortune to break his leg yesterday, spent a fairly comfortable night and is doing as well as could be expected.

Messrs. J. J. Robertson and Van-Every desire to thank Mrs. James Curran who so kindly sent in a most sumptuous repast to their polling booth yesterday March 30th. It is a custom to be cultivated.

Lindsay Post.—Mr. A. Cameron, of Peterborough, was in town on Monday. Mr. W. J. McQuinn is in Peterborough to-day on business. Mr. G. Pascoe left this morning for Peterborough on business. Rev. Father V. McFadden, of St. Peter's cathedral, Peterborough, was the guest of Ven. Archdeacon Casey today.

THE BY-LAWS

The by-laws have been voted on and while one received a substantial majority, a reversal of opinion seems to have influenced the same voters with respect to the other. That one by-law should have been beaten while the other carried would appear to be so emphatic a negative that the council will have to accept it as final. The Water Commissioners will next submit a by-law regarding a filtration bed or some such expedient. It has been said that power owners wanted the water works dam power to be wholly devoted to water works purposes and that as a consequence they worked for that by-law. For the same reason they worked against the other. We mention this merely to express our doubts about it. The other power owners are not in any sense hostile to the city's interests. A good deal of feeling was worked up over the by-laws and as a consequence the average ratepayer knows more about our local dams and their power than ever before.

THE ROARING LION WAS NOT HEARD

Beautiful Weather for the Last Day of March—Many Birds Have Been Seen

"What a delightful morning" was the exclamation heard from many this morning. This is the last day of March. But the weather to-day is rather contradictory and we are not sorry to see it so. Numerous crows and robins were noticed this morning by many citizens and it is to be hoped that they will soon be joined by many more. This has been a very satisfactory month in every way and it has been ideal spring weather and we can stand the same for April.

WEDDING BELLS

WIDDIS—GRAHAM

Bethany, March 29. — "Ebenezer," the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Graham, of Cavan, was the scene of an exceedingly pretty wedding at five o'clock Wednesday, March 24th, when their daughter, Emma Margaret, was united in marriage to Mr. Jefferson Widdis, of Omemee. The parlor in which the ceremony was performed was beautifully decorated for the occasion.

At the appointed time, to the harmonious strain of Mendelssohn, played by Mrs. Adams, the couple entered the room, the bride leaning on her father's arm, and took their place beneath an arch of evergreens artistically decorated. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Adams, of Bethany.

The bride was prettily attired in an empress gown of white taffeta silk and carried a bouquet of white carnations. The bridal veil was of embroidered net caught up with lilies of the valley. She was assisted by Miss Eva Bryans, of Havelock, who looked pretty in a gown of white organdie. Mr. Norman Fee, of Omemee, acted as groomsman.

After the ceremony and congratulations, the guests proceeded to the dining room where a wedding repast was served, which could not fail to tempt the appetite of the most fastidious.

The bride was the recipient of numerous and costly presents, among them being a beautiful fur coat, the gift of the groom. The groom also gave a beautiful brooch to the maid of honor.

The bride will be greatly missed in the neighborhood having for a number of years taken a deep interest in church matters and being organist of Ebenezer church. She was widely known for her musical talent.

The groom has always lived in the vicinity of Omemee, where he owns a beautiful farm, where the young couple will reside.

The many friends join in wishing them every joy and happiness during their wedded life.

BANQUET TO THE PARK-ST. HOCKEY TEAM WAS A BRILLIANT SUCCESS

A Large Number Were Present and an Enjoyable Evening Was Spent by all—Hockey Players Congratulated for the Excellent Showing Made.

The banquet tendered the Park street church hockey team last night in the Sunday school room of Park street church, as was expected, turned out a big success, and an enjoyable time was spent by the large number who were present. The tables, which were well spread, were placed in a unique manner. The pastor, Mr. Riddiford, with his wife and the speakers of the evening, were placed at one end, the friends and supporters of the team were placed along both sides, while the hockey team, with their lady friends, occupied seats at a table in the centre of the room. Those who had charge of the arrangements are to be congratulated on the splendid success of the affair.

After those present had partaken of the many good things on the tables, Rev. Mr. Riddiford, who acted as chairman, welcomed those present on behalf of the Athletic Club, of which he was president. He was glad to be identified with sports, and thought the church ought to take more interest in athletics. The young men should be trained to conduct their sport in a clean and gentlemanly manner, and should participate in all athletics not for gain, but for the love of the sport.

He then introduced the first number on the programme, which was a selection by the Orpheus Quartette entitled "My Old Kentucky Home," which was well received by those present.

The toast to the King was next proposed by the chairman, and was honored by Mr. Chas. King and Rev. J. G. Potter, who made appropriate speeches.

The next selection was another selection by the Orpheus Quartette, which again was favorably received.

"Canadian Athletes" was the next toast proposed and was honored by Mr. F. G. Hassard, secretary of the Y.M.C.A. The speaker said he was pleased to be present at the gathering. Canada was doing a great work in the athletic world, and we should be proud to be called Canadians. He was glad to represent the Y.M.C.A. Nearly all those who had participated in the Olympic games last year were mostly members of the Y.M.C.A., and he was also glad that the church of to-day was taking an interest in athletics, as it could be largely instrumental in making clean sport, which was needed to-day. He urged that the young men present should show a Christian spirit in their sports and closed by congratulating the club of this their first annual banquet, and wished them all success in the future.

Mr. N. McWilliams also spoke, and said that it gave him great pleasure to be present. He had attended most of the games when Park street team had played, and they had done very well this year, and he wished them success in all their branches of sport.

Representatives from the different church teams, which were represented in the league this season, also gave short speeches of a congratulatory order.

A letter from Mayor Rush was read in which the writer expressed his regret at being unable to be present on acount of other engagements.

The last number on the programme was a vote of thanks tendered the ladies for the very capable manner in which they had prepared the good things on the table, and the good order in which all the arrangements had been carried out, after which a very enjoyable time was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

PROPER DRESS FOR MEN

Exhibit of the New Styles for the Spring and Summer

All that's new and good and fresh and fine—they are showing in the spring fashion display of Semi-ready tailoring at Cressman's. New models arrived this week and the complete stock has been delivered.

The fashion plates of the Semi-ready are far and away ahead of the stock plates usually turned out for the tailors, for they show the tones, colors and patterns of the proper fabrics for spring and summer wear. The dress chart is again published in their booklet "The Way to Dress." This shows the correct dress for all occasions, not alone the proper suit for each and every occasion, but the right hats, ties, boots, shirts, etc. These books are given away free to any enquirer.

Among the new fashions shown are some 32 different styles of suits, with many new vests and varied designs in other garments for gentlemen.

The aim of the Semi-ready is to tailor clothes that will appeal to men of cultured tastes to produce designs that will be artistic and which will always be in good form.

In England the Semi-ready maintain permanent offices and expert woollen buyers who select the patterns as they are designed and submitted by the woollen mills. With uniform quality they enforce a uniform price in all the stores—so that a gentleman may buy in Vancouver at the same price he would pay in Peterborough.

The Erie Canal is not expected to open before May 10th.

THE ROLLER RINK WILL BE OPENED AT AN EARLY DATE

Local lovers of roller skating will be pleased to hear that the roller rink will be opened about the middle of April. A gentleman in the city who has been looking after the interests of Prof. Genno since he closed the rink last fall, has received a letter from him, in which the writer states that he will likely be in Peterborough on or about the 14th of April and will immediately make preparations for the coming season.

Prof. Genno intends to spare no expense to make the rink this year more popular than ever. He is at present in New York, but will open a week's engagement in Barrie on April 5th and from there will come to Peterborough.

PROSPECTS ARE GOOD FOR A SENIOR BASEBALL LEAGUE

A Meeting Will be Held in the Y.M.C.A. Friday Evening to Discuss the Baseball Situation—The Clubs are Asked to Send Representatives.

There is every indication that a large number will be at the YMCA. on Friday night to discuss the base ball situation for this year. Representatives of the different ball clubs around town have been interviewed and all are enthusiastic about their prospects for the coming season. By all accounts in the papers as to the Midland league it looks as if Peterborough will be getting the cold shoulder and probably it is just as well. The fans are pretty nearly disgusted with the way this league has been managed lately and are ready for anything in the line of a change. Why cannot this town have a good senior city base ball league? There is everything in favor of the proposition. All that is necessary is for the teams to do some tall discussion in this matter and get going. Four or five good teams would make an excellent league and the article of ball dished up would be of such a high order, that the teams would be sure of the patronage of local lovers of the game. The league could be made just as successful as the city hockey league and the clubs would not have to go to the same expense incurred in running a hockey team.

A number of local gentlemen interested in baseball have been spoken to about this subject and are all willing to take part and do their best to make a city league a success if the base ball clubs come forward and show that they are thoroughly in earnest in endeavoring to build up a league in the town.

SIMPSON MADE A HIT AT LINDSAY

Sang "Rainbow" at a Five Cen Show and Won Much Applause

The Lindsay Warder says;—Mr. Fred Simpson, Ojibway Indian, marathon runner, vaudeville singer, church choir leader, and so forth, was in town last night.

Fred sang Rainbow at a five cent. show last night, the first verse and the chorus—and sang it very well too. He was in great shape last night and evidently Tom Eck trains the redskin in music as well as long distance running.

"Give me a smile—once in a while" he carolled and the girls laughed.

Mr. Simpson was dressed up for a fete. His linen was perfect and his dusky face fairly shone. A very respectable looking chap is the runner when togged out for the stage.

Down at Hiawatha, where Simpson lives, his sublime gift of song comes in handy on Sundays, when he is precentor at the church. He is a respected member of the community, and in many ways is far different from his fellow redskin, the Hon. Thos. Longboat.

BLEACHERITE ASKS QUESTIONS

Wanted to Know About Pro. Ball Team and Lacrosse Team

Peterborough, March 31, 09.

Sporting Editor:

Dear Sir—There has been a great deal of talk lately about a pro. ball team for Peterborough. I have no wish to discuss the merits of pro. ball for Peterborough but should like to know just how matters stand concerning the baseball situation in Peterborough. Are we to have pro. or amateur ball or both? What has happened Tom Flanagan's semi-pro. league? The ball season is at hand and as far as I can learn, nothing has been done. By the way what about a lacrosse team for this year?

Yours truly,
BLEACHERITE

The question of having a pro. ball team is not yet definitely decided. Whether Flannagan's league will materialize or not is not known. No lacrosse organization has yet been effected.

MUNROE WON THIS BATTLE

Jeffries Opponent Elected Mayor of Elk Lake

Elk Lake, March 31—Miner Jack Munroe who fought James Jeffries several years ago, won another fight yesterday, and knocked out W. J. Hanley, a prominent lawyer. No purse was hung up or diamond studded belt, but the prize was the mayoralty of Elk Lake.

The contest was a spirited one, and the mining men rallied around Munroe in view of his being one of the pioneers of the camp and holding large interests here. Hanley, who is a clever chap, was under a big handicap by being a newcomer of only six weeks.

Munroe has drawn up his programme and is out for a bridge between Smyth and Elk Lake, good streets and all improvements, but first of all Jack says there has got to be law and order, and woe betide anyone who brings down the mayor's wrath on his head.

MAKES ASTONISHING CURES

Mi-o-na Tablets Cure Dyspepsia by Promptly Removing the Cause, or Money Back.

There is just one way to cure dyspepsia and stomach disorders, trivial or serious, and that is to tone up or put energy into the stomach walls, so that they will be able to properly mix or churn the food.

Mi-o-na tablets quickly arouse the stomach from its inaction and in a short time it is able to do its work properly.

Harry Dodd, of Bridge Street, Hastings, Ont., says; "For seven years I have suffered and spent much money doctoring, but all to no avail. I could eat but very little, as the food would ferment and sour, making gas, which caused serious heart oppression. I was in constant misery, sour gas would belch from my stomach, I was languid and weak and had no ambition. I did not feel like going anywhere or seeing anyone. There was a constant dull pain in the pit of my stomach. I was unable to sleep, was nervous, restless and would awake more tired than on going to bed. I tried Mi-o-na and soon found relief, and in less than six weeks Mi-o-na had completely cured me.

Wm. Madill, the druggist, sells Mi-o-na tablets at 50 cents a large box, under a rigid guarantee to do all that is claimed for them or money back.

ONE BUSINESS REFORM.

Brought About by Frank Statements From Former Employees.

If the manager of a business institution knew all that his employees know about the details of the business many things would be different. The manager of a large mercantile house recently conceived the idea of writing a personal letter to every employee who had left the house during the last five years, inviting a frank statement of the reason for leaving. The former employees, now expecting neither censure nor favor, were very frank and explicit and, as a rule, wrote letters that could not fail to command respectful attention. One man told how hard he had worked to support his mother and how, when he asked for an increase, he was shifted back and forth between different superiors for several weeks without having his request rejected or acceded to and he grew tired and sought another position. Another told of the impositions of the department manager and of his inability to get relief from a nagging disposition which was taking the heart out of hundreds of other men in his department. Many points of obvious mismanagement were brought to light which had virtually driven away good men who had been educated to the business. The manager has been busy ever since instituting reforms based upon the information he received.

A Barber and Poet.

Jasmin, the Gascon poet, who was also a barber, was once visiting the mayor of a French town and had promised to give an informal recitation to the townspeople. The hour arrived, but his host did not appear. Several important personages assembled to accompany them to the hall, but the mayor remained invisible, bussied with his toilet. Finally, fearing the impatience of his guests, he opened the door of his chamber to apologize and showed his face covered with lather.

"Just a moment," said he. "I am finishing my shaving."

"Oh," said Jasmin, "let me help you."

He at once doffed his coat, gave a finishing touch to the razor and shaved the mayor in a twinkling with what he called his "hand of velvet." In a few minutes he was in the hall receiving tumultuous applause for his splendid recitations.

Modest Goldsmith.

Oliver Goldsmith was an underpaid man from start to finish. Two hundred and fifty dollars for "The Vicar of Wakefield" was bad enough, yet for "The Traveler" he got but $100 and $25 for his "English Grammar." For "The Deserted Village," however, his publisher sent him $500. This he at once returned, with the message: "It is too much. It is near 5 shillings a couplet, which is more than any book owner can afford or, indeed, any modern poetry is worth." So he died with $10,000 worth of debts. "Was ever poet so trusted before?" said Dr. Johnson.

PLUCK OF A MAGICIAN

Houdin's Experience Among the Marabouts of Algeria.

AN ARAB TRAP THAT FAILED.

The Great French Conjurer Stood the Test and Then by Another Trick Cowed His Infuriated Antagonists The Story of Palmer's Curse.

There are some points of resemblance between the story of the great French conjurer, Robert Houdin, and the marabouts and the story of Palmer's curse. The first named tale is, strictly speaking, incredible only when regarded from the oriental point of view.

In the fifties the administrators of the French African empire were seriously hampered by the fanatical marabouts, who by their tricks of juggling persuaded their followers of their own supernatural powers and used this belief to fan the spirit of insurrection. Houdin was sent officially on a French warship to Algeria to confound them. While his task proved easy, the trip was not without its dangers.

In Algiers he had allowed himself to be shot at with pistols loaded by the marabouts. But once in the interior, when he was absolutely without the tools of his profession, he was forced to repeat the experiment. He was frightened, but he did not allow his fears to be perceived. He persuaded his audience to postpone the test until next morning in order that he might pass the night in prayer, as he was without the talisman that he needed if the feat was to be performed immediately.

The night he devoted not to prayer, but to insuring his invulnerability, and the next day before a great horde of Arabs he submitted to the test. The French conjurer insisted that in the sight of every one the pistols should be loaded by his enemies themselves. Then he calmly took his place and gave the signal. The sound of the pistol had not died away when Houdin opened his lips, showing the bullet held firmly between his teeth.

His infuriated adversary reached for the other pistol, but the conjurer was too quick. "You could not harm me," he said, "but now see how much greater my powers are than yours. Behold the wall." He fired, and out on the whitewash at the exact spot of his aim there crept slowly a great splotch of blood. The marabouts, in terror, cowered before the prowess of the European magician.

Less fortunate in his fate than Houdin was the English orientalist E. H. Palmer. He fell a victim to fanaticism, but the story of his terrible curse will long be repeated and cause shudders to run round Bedouin campfires. Only upon the theory of metempsychosis can be explained his extraordinary powers of assimilating the languages and ideas of the east.

He was brought up in the conventional atmosphere of England, but when he turned his attention to oriental subjects he did not merely learn; he simply absorbed. Not only were Persian, Hindoostanee and Arabic perfectly familiar to him, but he knew every obscurity of the slang of the camel drivers, and during his long voyages in the east his European origin was never suspected. Just as Houdin had been officially employed by the French government, so Palmer was by the English, but in a more intimate capacity.

Before the exploit that proved fatal he had many dangerous adventures. Once he was led away by a treacherous guide and betrayed to an Arab gang who meant to rob and kill him. He guessed their intentions, and when they began to inflict upon him petty annoyances he pretended not to notice them. Finally, however, the abuse became too obvious to be longer ignored. He sprang to his feet and drew out a letter that he had received from an English lady. "This to me! Down on your knees, you dogs, and kiss the handwriting of the sultan!" Down on their knees, cowed and groveling, fell his 300 captors.

In 1882 Palmer was sent on a secret service mission among the Bedouin tribes to persuade them against joining the rebellion of Arabi Pasha. He was betrayed and shot. But just before his death he laid upon his assassins the weight of his terrible curse. Now, in the east a curse is something not to be regarded lightly, and Palmer's was one of particular awfulness.

It was his last means of defense, and, while it did not save him, it blasted the hearing and destroyed the lives of those upon whom it fell. They shrank away from one another in horror. Some of them confessed their crime and were executed; all of them within a few months came to violent deaths. Palmer's curse is still remembered with terror in the east.—Bookman.

Got More Than the Cigar.

He was dining at a restaurant in the neighborhood of Leicester square, and while he was sipping his black coffee and firing 500 glances to the minute at a girl in a fluffy pink and white dress a stranger gracefully commandeered his overcoat. He had just reached the door when the owner tapped him on the shoulder.

"Pardon me, sir," he said meekly, "but would you allow me to get another cigar from my coat pocket in case I do not meet you again?"

KING COAL.

While He Lives His Throne Is Fixed In the United States.

The part played by coal in the world's affairs can well be illustrated by assuming the available supply to be suddenly cut off. The huge railroad systems of America would stop at once. So also would the electric power and lighting in all cities and suburbs. Steamship service would cease everywhere. Transit facilities would be dead. Factories, manufactories and shops would close down. Vast industries like steel, iron, copper, etc., would cease. Armies of laborers would be thrown out of work. Mails, schools, the navy, newspapers, foreign and internal trade—all would cease to exist. The trilogy governing commercial advance, heat, light and power, except a negligible amount of water, oil, etc., would be annihilated—all this until some other form of power could be developed. The possibility of such a cataclysm is not imminent, for coal will reign for some time yet and is destined to become a power whose capabilities have as yet been comparatively felt only more faintly than would a feather on the hide of an elephant.

The world needs coal. The United States has that coal to deliver. It will be wholly natural that so potent a necessity will make for continued peace and understanding among the powers of the world.

The coal mines of Europe are sunk about 3,000 feet deep. Coal is still being quarried on the banks of the Ohio, and the mines of Europe are nearing the limit of commercial possibility. The manufacturing supremacy of the old world is passing to the new. Coal is king, and while he lives his throne is fixed forever in the United States.—Metropolitan Magazine.

EARLY CARICATURES.

Quaint Art and Humor of the Ancient Egyptians.

The fables of Aesop prove that the ancients were not without a liking for fun, and the remains of ancient art tell the same story. Examples of artistic humor are more common than is generally supposed.

A drawing on a tile in the New York museum represents a cat dressed as an Egyptian woman of fashion. She is seated languidly on a chair, sipping wine out of a small bowl and being fanned and offered dainties by an abject looking tomcat with his tail between his legs.

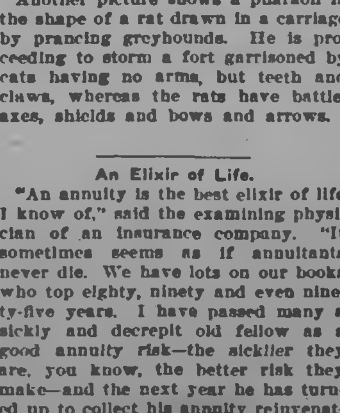
The cat figures largely in the ancient comic groups of animal life. In a papyrus in the British museum a flock of geese are being driven by a cat and a herd of goats by two wolves with crooks and wallets. One of the wolves is playing a double pipe.

There is in Turin a papyrus roll that displays a whole series of such comical scenes. In the first place, a lion, a crocodile and an ape are giving a vocal and instrumental concert. Next comes an ass dressed, armed and sceptered like a pharaoh. With majestic swagger he receives the gifts presented to him by a cat of high degree, to which a bull acts as proud conductor. A lion and a gazelle are playing at draughts, a hippopotamus is perched in a tree, and a hawk has climbed into the tree and is trying to dislodge him.

Another picture shows a pharaoh in the shape of a rat drawn in a carriage by prancing greyhounds. He is proceeding to storm a fort garrisoned by cats having no arms, but teeth and claws, whereas the rats have battleaxes, shields and bows and arrows.

An Elixir of Life.

"An annuity is the best elixir of life I know of," said the examining physician of an insurance company. "It sometimes seems as if annuitants never die. We have lots on our books who top eighty, ninety and even ninety-five years. I have passed many a sickly and decrepit old fellow as a good annuity risk—the sicklier they are, you know, the better risk they make—and the next year he has turned up to collect his annuity rejuvenated, rosy, spry as a boy. The secret? The secret is that financial worry, fear of the poorhouse, ages and kills off more people than all the deadly diseases combined. Release an old man by means of an annuity from all this worry, and he throws off his years and walks erect and happy and fearlessly young."



Hatmaking In the East Indies.

The making of bamboo hats is one of the chief industries of the natives of the East Indies, and quite often the children are more expert than their mothers in weaving the strips together and forming the designs, their fingers being younger and more supple. In transporting the long stalks of bamboo to the factory the natives tie the ends of two stalks together, spread them apart a short distance forward of the center, tie a crosspiece between and carry them on their shoulders.

Soused.

Wife—My husband came home from the club last night with such a swelled head that I haven't been able to arouse him today. Neighbor—Why don't you try pouring a pitcher of water over his head? Wife—I did that very thing, but the only thing he did was to call out for an umbrella.—Fliegende Blatter.

Allan Clarke, an M.C.R. machinist at St. Thomas, had his left foot crushed off by a box car.

Beware of Tinted Cosmetics.

One always runs more or less of a risk in using cosmetics bought at the stores, but of all, there is more danger in pink tinted cosmetics than in any other kind. There are certain cosmetics which, when used on the cheeks or lips, will not be harmful if the skin is unbroken, but if there is the slightest eruption on it, will act as a poison.

Rouges can be bought or made, which, like other cosmetics contain absolutely nothing harmful, but there are others which are harmful. Carmine, after long continued use, turns the skin dry and yellow.

There is a harmless rouge which can be made from strawberries, and which, if treated right, will keep for a long time. Beets may be used in making good rouges.

* *

Shield the Eyes.

While the eyes are the most delicate and precious of our possessions they are subjected to many abuses. It is not enough, apparently, that women wear veils, which are painfully harmful, read on bouncing and jerking street cars, and use injurious lotions to make the eyes brilliant, but they refuse to wear glasses to rest the eyes when the vision is almost a quarter gone.

A habit which is injurious to the eyes is to sleep with the face exposed to the direct influence of the light. The window shades in the bedroom, especially if they are near the bed, should be pulled down to the bottom of the window, otherwise the first sunbeams of the morning will come stealing in to make the room light.

If the window is directly beside or in front of the bed a dark colored shade should be used on it to exclude every ray of light.

* *

Diet for Thin Girl.

There are so many, many thin girls who long to be plump and round and who could be if they would follow a good diet. A simple diet which will help the good cause is, for breakfast: cereal, with plenty of rich cream, fruits which contain no acids, eggs and potatoes cooked any way except fried.

Milk should be substituted for tea or coffee. In the forenoon a glass of warm milk with a wee pinch of salt in it will be of great benefit. She may also drink a glass of milk prepared in this way in the afternoon and at night before going to bed.

Starchy vegetables, such as sweet and white potatoes, peas, corn, beans, and rice, thick cream soups, macaroni and spaghetti are all fattening and should be eaten by the thin girl. She should not eat acid fruits, but bananas, peaches, grapes, melons, baked apples, and figs and dates are to be included in her diet. Pickles, olives, vinegar, and the like she must let alone.

* *

Diet and Complexion.

Clearness of complexion and a becoming color are striven for by all women, and there are different ways in which this may be accomplished. Diet will clear the complexion wonderfully, but there are few women who know how to diet successfully.

Some women do not diet regularly, and they will leave out of their diet the things they need and put in the injurious ones, and then there are some women who diet so strenuously that they have not sufficient nourishment to keep the stomach and other organs in a healthy condition. These women, instead of clearing the complexion, will give themselves a pale, bluish tint.

No matter what the coloring may be, whether it is pale, olive, or rosy, the complexion must be clear to look well.

* *

Keep Hair in Curl.

A fluid to keep the hair in curl is made of a tablespoonful of bruised quince seed added to a pint of hot water. The water is poured over the seeds and the mixture is allowed to stand for several hours. This mucilage can be thinned with a few drops of violet essence. The hair is moistened with the liquid before it is put on the curlers.

IN THE SEWING ROOM

Make O[illegible] Linen Suit.

Have y[illegible] last summer's suit of linen, white, ta[illegible] colored, which needs remodeling? The[illegible] s of this year differ from those of last ye[illegible] y but a few points, which it is easy to [illegible] e.

The lat[illegible] ea from Paris, and one which bids fair [illegible] ke firm hold of the American fancy, is [illegible] colored cretonne for trimming. Just a t[illegible] f it is sufficient to change an old style [illegible] to one which is up to date and nobby.

If your [illegible] s a last summer's one, all you will need, [illegible] bly, is a new set of cuffs, with one of t[illegible] ew adjustable shawl collars which ca[illegible] put on and taken off at will. Or, if the[illegible] t has a turndown collar and mannish [illegible] s, cut them off and finish the front and [illegible] edges with bands of the cretonne, and [illegible] he skirt needs a new touch or freshening [illegible] finish the lower edge with a band to [illegible] the coat.

Probably [illegible] jacket of your linen suit happened to b[illegible] ort and loose, and has grown tight in th[illegible] s. If so, open up the seams and slash [illegible] coat, both front and back, to the depth [illegible] bout six inches, and finish the lower edg[illegible] the coat with an inch wide band of c[illegible] linen and run the bands up along the [illegible] s where the coat has been slashed to [illegible] them.

The ap[illegible] ce of a coat may be improved by changi[illegible] he buttons. Rip off the old buttons a[illegible] y some button molds. Cover with cret[illegible] and sew on to the coat. Buttons are [illegible] to dresses, coats, and skirts not only [illegible] e they are needed but also where they [illegible] not needed, and where they simply serv[illegible] a trimming.

Rug Cor[illegible]

Sew a piec[illegible] f rubber or, if this is not available, a piece [illegible] chair webbing, to the corners of the rug [illegible] the corners will not curl up. The rubbe[illegible] ould be sewed on the underside.

Protect S[illegible] Corners.

To preve[illegible] eets from tearing at the corners when [illegible] ging on the line on a windy day stitch [illegible] or five rows of machine stitching diago[illegible] cross each corner of the hem. This will [illegible] then them wonderfully.

Summer Belts.

The finish of a belt may do much to add or detract from the general appearance, and it is never neglected by the well dressed woman who realizes its importance.

Whether the belt should match the skirt or the waist depends upon the figure of the wearer. If the person is short waisted, the belt should match the waist, and if long waisted, should match the skirt. With a white summer waist, however, the belt may match the waist unless the woman is extremely long waisted. A fresh, crisp white belt freshens and adds to one's appearance wonderfully.

The belt never should be pulled so tightly that it is crushed, so that it looks like a string or tape about the waist.

To make a pretty linen belt, and one never can have too many of these, cut a straight strip on the length of the material, nearly twice the width you wish your belt to be when finished, and allow for a four inch lap in front.

Find the center of the strip and decorate it with a bit of hand embroidery. French knots or padded dots, for this, you know, will be the center of the back. Fold the two raw edges under and feather stitch or cat stitch it down. The edges instead may be buttonholed or turned under and stitched down with two rows of stitching.

Finish the right end with a buckle and work eyelets in the left end for the prong of the buckle to go through.

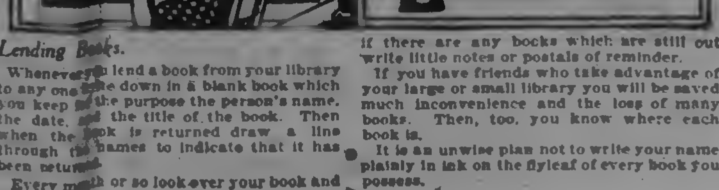
* *

Neckwear.

The newest Parisian fancy is "Frenchy" in appearance, but it is easy to make. It is made of silk, satin, velvet, or of beads, and is narrow, being not more than a half an inch in width. It is made in a brilliant color and ties around the base of the collar, tying in front in a bow or knot. The ends are fringed.

If it is made of silk or satin, a bias strip is used. The strip is an inch and a half wide and is long enough to go around the neck, tie, and with enough left for fringing.

Half an inch is turned in on each side, so as to make the tie just one-half an inch wide, and it is lightly stitched in place. The ends are raveled until there is a fringe about an inch deep, and then the tie is carefully pressed. If so desired, tassels can be sewed to the ends of the tie instead of fringing it.



IN THE LIBRARY

Lending B[illegible] ks.

Whenever [illegible] u lend a book from your library to any one [illegible] e down in a blank book which you keep [illegible] the purpose the person's name, the date, [illegible] the title of the book. Then when the [illegible] ok is returned draw a line through th[illegible] names to indicate that it has been return[illegible]

Every m[illegible] or so look over your book and if there are any books which are still out write little notes or postals of reminder.

If you have friends who take advantage of your large or small library you will be saved much inconvenience and the loss of many books. Then, too, you know where each book is.

It is an unwise plan not to write your name plainly in ink on the flyleaf of every book you possess.

HINTS for ENTERTAINMENTS

"Girl Hunt."

A hostess recently asked a crowd of young girls and men who were all intimately acquainted to come to a "girl hunt."

When the guests arrived they were told that the entire house was open to them, and that the girls would be allowed fifteen minutes in which to hide themselves. There were no rules whatever in regard to the hiding except that no two girls could hide together.

The gentlemen each drew a paper slip which bore the name of one girl. Half an hour was allowed for the hunt. If in hunting for the girl whom he was to find a man discovered the hiding place of another he was to leave her in her hiding place and not mention it to any of the other men.

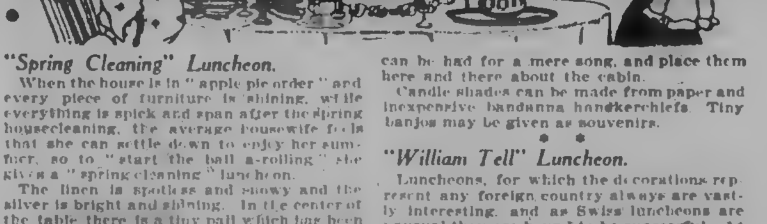
After he had found the girl for whom he was seeking he could take her back to where he had seen the other, and then both girls were obliged to go with him while he searched further.

The hostess, who had been here and there and everywhere, blew at the end of half an hour a tiny whistle. This was the signal for all to assemble in the drawing room.

To the man who had found the most girls she gave a little scarfpin, which was in the shape of a riding whip, and to the girl whom no one had found she gave a prettily bound diary, or "secret" book.

In the center of the supper table, in the midst of flowers, ferns, and mosses, was placed a pretty deer, which had been bought in the toy department of one of the stores.

The candles were placed in sticks of glass and the shades were of the deep green of the forest. Tiny little whips were given for souvenirs, and the place cards were fastened to tiny silver whistles.



In the DINING ROOM

"Spring Cleaning" Luncheon.

When the house is in "apple pie order" and every piece of furniture is shining, while everything is spick and span after the spring housecleaning, the average housewife feels that she can settle down to enjoy her summer, so to "start the ball a-rolling" she gives a "spring cleaning" luncheon.

The linen is spotless and snowy and the silver is bright and shining. In the center of the table there is a tiny pail which has been filled with white flowers. The candlesticks are glass and the shades are white, decorated with pictures of pails, scrubbing brushes, and brooms. A little ruffle of lace is sewed to the shades.

The name cards are decorated with busy housewives in various stages of cleaning.

The bonbons are served from little tubs not more than an inch and a half high.

After luncheon is over each guest is asked to give a hint for saving time and labor in housework, and tiny little booklets are given to each guest so that the suggestions may be remembered. The various hints are voted upon, and to the one giving the best and most practical hint a prize consisting of a book of recipes for delicious summer dainties and desserts is given.

* *

Artistic Supper.

A hostess who had invited a number of guests to spend the evening playing cards was at a loss as to how to serve the dainty supper which she had planned. All she knew was that she wanted something artistic.

In the center of the table she placed a plaster cast of Venus de Milo and surrounded it with pink roses and ferns. The candlesticks were tall and of classic build, while the shades were a delicate pink which cast an esthetic glow. The lower edges of the candle shades were decorated with the Roman key border, which had been painted on with gold paint.

Place cards were hand painted and the guests' names were written on them.

* *

Plantation Supper.

There are few people who are not attracted by southern customs and ideas and the hostess who gives a supper where a southern atmosphere reigns supreme is sure of success.

With but a little time and expense and the nimble fingers any one can give a charming southern air to the dining room. Use a gay colored but small sized bandanna handkerchief for a centerpiece and on it place a tiny log cabin. To make a cabin all that is required is some sticks of candy, which are interlaced for the side walls. Horehound candy is excellent for this purpose on account of its color and shape.

The roof can be made of cardboard which has been colored a dark brown color. Place moss around the cabin to represent grass and buy a number of tiny "nigger dolls," which can be had for a mere song, and place them here and there about the cabin.

Candle shades can be made from paper and inexpensive bandanna handkerchiefs. Tiny banjos may be given as souvenirs.

* *

"William Tell" Luncheon.

Luncheons, for which the decorations represent any foreign country always are vastly interesting, and as Swiss luncheons are unusual they are bound to be successful. As anything Swiss reminds many people of "William Tell," an interesting luncheon could be given after this plan:

For the center of the table, dress a little doll in the costume of the Swiss peasant boy. Set the doll firmly in a bed of flowers and fasten a rosy apple on its head. At each cover place a minute bow and arrow, on which the guest's name is written.

For refreshments, hollowed out apples filled with Swiss cheese and salad and pierced with a little wooden arrow would be pretty. Water ice piled in ragged mounds to represent the snow covered Alps would make another course. Tiny walking sticks may be given as souvenirs.

* *

Graduation Luncheon.

It is nearing the time when "sweet graduates" and "essays" are being heard of and it reminds us that our friends soon will be returning home from college and boarding schools, fresh with honors and ready to enter into summer festivities with much vim. Our thoughts at such times turn to luncheons and afternoon teas which we wish to give in their honor.

For a graduation luncheon there is no centerpiece prettier than a pretty doll dressed in gown and cap to represent an up to date college girl. Tall and statuesque candlesticks may be used, crowned with candle shades of a soft rose.

Name cards may be decorated with sketches of college girls done in black and white.

* *

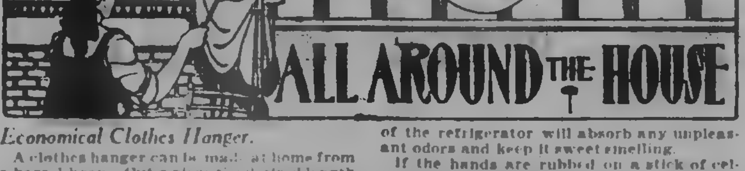
Gold Fish Decorations.

If you are at a loss as to how to decorate your table for the little luncheon or supper which you are giving, don't worry about the expense of elaborate centerpieces, but just use your pretty little gold fish in their shining glass bowl for a centerpiece.

Buy some pretty cut flowers and some ferns and make up as many pretty little bouquets as there are guests. Tie a dainty pale pink ribbon to each bouquet and then pack the bouquets closely about the bowl in which the gold fish are swimming. Place the ribbons flat along the table to each cover and tie to this end of them the name cards.

Make dainty little pink candle shades from crêpe paper and use glass candlesticks.

A few shells placed in the bowl with the goldfish will produce a pretty effect.



ALL AROUND THE HOUSE

Economical Clothes Hanger.

A clothes hanger can be made at home from a barrel hoop. Cut a piece the desired length from a barrel hoop and in the center of it insert a screw eye. Cover the hoop with a thin layer of cotton batting and then with a dainty piece of lawn, muslin, or dimity, make a loop of ribbon through the screw eye and hang the hanger to a hook by this. Two hangers can be made from one hoop.

* *

Notes for the Cook.

In making sponge cake if you desire it to be yellow use cold water, hot water makes it much whiter.

A spoonful of strong vinegar added to the kettle of hot fat will prevent doughnuts from soaking fat, it is said.

Never slam the oven door or jar any rising material while it is baking.

Always keep your celery roots and dry them. They are nice for seasoning soups and sauces.

When tomatoes and milk are to be put together, as in a cream soup, have them of the same temperature, then beat vigorously as the tomato is added a little at a time.

Let green peas simmer gently in just enough water to cook them; hard boiling spoils them. If they are a little too old to be in perfection add a saltspoonful of baking soda to each quart of peas.

If you wish ice cream to be ornamental you may use beet juice for coloring. It will give you any shade of pink desired. Spinach is used for green or a little butter color will give a deep cream. All these are perfectly harmless.

A piece of charcoal placed upon the shelves of the refrigerator will absorb any unpleasant odors and keep it sweet smelling.

If the hands are rubbed on a stick of celery after peeling onions, it is said, the smell will be removed.

The colder eggs are the quicker they will froth. White of eggs may be beaten to a stiff froth by an open window when it would be impossible in a steamy kitchen.

* *

Uses of Wood Alcohol.

A few drops of wood alcohol on a brush applied to cut glass will make it shine brilliantly. For windows and looking glasses it has no equal as a polisher and shiner.

A few drops of the alcohol dropped on a cloth applied to wicker baskets will clean them wonderfully.

It is effective when used on tarnished silver or nickelware.

Rust may be removed from bathroom fixtures by scouring with wood alcohol.

Great care should be used in handling wood alcohol near a fire, as it is inflammable.

* *

Preventive of Moths.

Salt prevents moths from getting into the carpets.

If a piece of flannel or cotton wool be well saturated with turpentine, kept moist and hung up in a room, flies are said to give the apartment a wide berth.

To clear a house of cockroaches, put powdered borax into a tin with a perforated lid, and dust the borax into cupboards, about the stove, on the floor, and everywhere the roaches are found. Use the borax steadily in this way for a time, and you will find that the roaches disappear entirely. This remedy is perfectly safe, for borax will not injure dogs, cats, or other animals.

In the Laundry

Washing Embroideries.

Make a good lather of pu[illegible]p and warm water and add a quarter of a teaspoonful of borax to each quart of water. Place the articles to be washed in an ordinary quart fruit jar and then pour the suds over them until the jar is nearly full.

Seal the jar tightly and shake it lightly for a few minutes. Set it in the sunlight and leave in this place for twenty-four hours, turning the jar around as long as the sunlight lasts so that the sun may penetrate to every part. After twenty-four hours pour off the lather and press the articles gently. Rinse carefully several times in clear water.

If they are not as white as they should be return them to the jar and fill it with clear water, screwing the cover on tightly as before and set in the sun again. Change the water daily until the material is white. Old embroideries which are as yellow as can be may be made white and beautiful by this process.

Tested Recipes

Codfish Recipes.

SALPICON CODFISH.—This is a fine summer luncheon dish. Prepare rounds of crisp buttered toast with pounded edges, cover each with a thick slice of ripe tomato, dusting the latter with a piquant seasoning of salt and pepper, cover with a thick layer of flaked boiled codfish, and pour over all a good Hollandaise sauce. Place in a pan containing a little hot butter, cover closely, and set where there is a simmering heat, until heated through.

CODFISH AND CLAM MELANGE.—Chop fine two dozen medium sized clams, which have been simmered for ten minutes in a pint of water. When the clams are cool, put them in a salad bowl or deep dish, which has been rubbed with a slice of onion. Add an equal quantity of chopped warm potatoes and cold boiled codfish. Cover with a mayonnaise or boiled salad dressing, thinned with an equal measure of cream, and serve, preferably with celery and rye bread sandwiches.

CODFISH CHOWDER.—Fry together two ounces of salt pork cut in dice, and one onion chopped; parboil one pint of potato balls five minutes and drain. Shred finely and freshen codfish to the amount of a pint. Cover the potato balls with a pint of milk, add the fish and onions, and simmer until nearly soft, then add the fish, a pint of thin cream, and finish cooking. Season with salt and pepper, pour into a heated tureen, sprinkle the top with crisp buttered crumbs, and serve immediately.

FISH KLOPPS.—Mix together two cupfuls of freshened and finely shredded codfish, one cupful of soft bread crumbs, and the unbeaten whites of four eggs. Mix well together, adding a slight seasoning of white pepper. Moisten the hands in cold water and form the mixture into balls. Have ready a panful of milk at just the boiling point, carefully put the balls into the liquid and poach for six or seven minutes without allowing the water to boil. (The klopps are likely to fall apart if the water boils.) Serve on crisp rounds of browned mashed potato, passing hot cream to pour over them. To prepare the rounds, turn a quart of well seasoned mashed potato on to a floured pastry board, dredge with flour, and roll out half an inch thick, cut with a biscuit cutter and sauté in hot butter.

CODFISH LOAF.—Soak one cupful of soft bread crumbs in one cupful of rich milk. Finely shred fish to the amount of two cupfuls, freshen in cold water until of a palatable saltiness, and add to the soaked bread with a few grains of cayenne. Mix thoroughly and fold in the whites of five eggs or three whole eggs beaten without separating. Turn into a buttered mold and bake standing in hot water until the center seems firm. Serve with hollandaise sauce.

* *

Mushrooms a la Creme.

Mushrooms now should be plentiful and in many places may be had for the gathering. Use half a pound of mushrooms, two ounces of butter, the yolks of two eggs, a gill of cream, a bunch of sweet herbs, salt, pepper, grated nutmeg, and slices of buttered toast.

Peel and stalk the mushrooms. If they are large ones cut them in three or four pieces. Melt the butter, add to it the herbs and mushrooms. Toss them about over a quick fire until the mushrooms are tender; then lift out the herbs, pour off all but a little butter. Beat up the yolks with the cream; pour it into the pan, and stir the mixture over the fire until it is hot.

Season it carefully with salt, pepper, and nutmeg. Arrange it on the slices of toast, and serve it hot.

* *

Bread and Rolls.

SOUTHERN CORN MUFFINS.—One pint fresh buttermilk, three-quarters pint cornmeal, two eggs, one level teaspoonful soda, one level teaspoonful salt, butter size of a walnut. Beat the eggs together, add the buttermilk, then cornmeal, soda and salt sifted together; lastly the butter melted. If the buttermilk is sour add another level teaspoonful of soda. Heat the greased muffin tins thoroughly, then bake for twenty minutes.

SWEET FRENCH ROLLS.—Cream one-fourth of a cupful of butter and one-fourth cupful of sugar together and gradually beat into a pint of light sponge. Add two eggs, whites and yolks beaten separately, and flour enough to make the same thickness as before. Cover and stand in a warm place until it begins to rise; then add flour to make a soft dough and knead well. Set aside again until doubled in size, then shape like Parker house rolls. When light make three parallel creases across the top of each. Brush with the beaten white of egg in cold water and a little vanilla. Sprinkle granulated sugar thickly over the top. Bake fifteen minutes. When done lay a napkin over the rolls in the pan for five minutes, which makes a tender crust.

COCOANUT DROPS.—One cupful of grated cocoanut. Beat the whites of two eggs stiff, add one-half cup of sugar, one even tablespoonful of flour, and the cocoanut. Drop by spoonfuls on slightly buttered tin sheets; brown in a slow oven.

RICE BISCUITS.—One-half pound ground rice, five ounces white sugar, four ounces butter, two eggs. Well beat the butter, stir in gradually the ground rice and sugar; well whisk the eggs and add to the other ingredients. Roll out on the pasteboard and cut into shapes with a paste cutter. Place upon greased tin and bake a quarter of an hour in a slow oven.

COFFEE ROLLS.—Scald and cool one cupful milk, add two yeast cakes, one-fourth cupful egg yolks, one-half cupful whole eggs, two-thirds cupful butter, one-half cupful sugar, one-half teaspoonful lemon extract, four and two-thirds cupfuls flour. Beat thoroughly; let rise six hours, and then keep on ice over night. Toss on a board, roll and shape, let rise until light, and bake in a moderate oven. Brush over with sugar and water after baking.

CHEESE STICKS.—Mix well one-half cup of butter into one cup of flour; add one teaspoonful each of salt and sugar; mix with enough water to make a soft dough and roll out thin. Have ready one-half cup of grated cheese; sprinkle a little on the dough with a little cayenne pepper and roll out again; do this until the cheese is all used up; then cut it into strips; lay in greased pans, and bake in a quick oven.

* *

Invalid Cooking.

CHICKEN AND MUTTON BROTH.—Add one pound of loin of mutton to three pints of water; boil gently until tender, adding a little salt; strain into a basin and when cool skim off the fat. Warm when serving without diluting.

CHICKEN BROTH.—A small chicken or half of a large fowl, thoroughly cleaned and with all the skin and fat removed, is to be chopped, bones and all, into small pieces; put them with salt into a saucepan and add a quart of boiling water, cover closely, and simmer over a slow fire for two hours. After removing, allow to stand, still covered, for an hour, then strain through a sieve.

RAW BEEF JUICE.—Take one pound of sirloin of beef, warm it in a boiler before a quick fire, cut into cubes of about one-quarter of an inch, place in a lemon squeezer or a meat press, and forcibly extract the juice; remove the fat that rises to the surface after cooking. Never actually cook the meat.

BARLEY WATER.—Put two tablespoonfuls of washed pearl barley in a saucepan with a pint of water; boil slowly down to two-thirds of a pint; strain.

BARLEY JELLY.—Use half a pint more of water than in the above, boil down to a pint, strain and set aside to cool and set into a jelly. Serve with cream.

BEEF TEA.—Have a pound slice cut from the middle round of "heavy" beef; do not chop this, but cut it into cubes, removing every piece of fat; pack closely in a quart glass jar, leaving an inch of space at the top, and fit on the top and rubber. Set the jar in a deep kettle of cold water and cover the kettle tightly.

After it comes to a boil let the water boil three or four hours. Set aside until the water is cold, and then place the jar just as it is on ice until needed.

Take two tablespoonfuls of this extracted juice and dilute with twice as much hot water, add salt to taste, and serve at once.

* *

Stewed Kidney and Tomato.

One and a half pounds of kidney, one pound of tomato, two teaspoonfuls of chopped parsley, one teaspoon of salt, half a teaspoonful of pepper, two small onions, one ounce of flour, two teaspoonfuls of drippings. When fresh tomatoes are not procurable canned ones may be used.

Remove the core and cut the kidney in slices about a quarter of an inch thick. Mix together the flour, salt, pepper, and half the parsley. Melt the dripping in a saucepan, slice the onions, and fry them a golden brown in the dripping.

Dip the pieces of kidney in the seasoned flour, then put them in the pan with the dripping, put the lid on the pan, and let the contents cook gently for ten minutes, turning the kidney occasionally. Cook the tomatoes until soft, either in the oven or on the fire; then rub them through a sieve, add to the purée the rest of the parsley and the vinegar. Drain off as much of the fat as possible from the kidney, and add the tomato purée, bring to a boil, then let it simmer gently for fifteen minutes.

Arrange a border of mashed potatoes in a hot dish and put the kidney and sauce in the center.

* *

Swiss Roast.

Take a thick round steak—from two to two and a half inches in thickness—and pound into it as much flour as it will take, using the edge of a heavy plate for that purpose. When the flour has been pounded into both sides put the meat into a skillet with some lard, and brown it on both sides.

Then cover it with water, adding onions enough to flavor and a whole ripe tomato, or an equal quantity of canned tomatoes when the fresh tomatoes are not in season. Cover tightly and cook for two hours, adding more water as necessary during this time. Just before the meat is done salt and pepper to taste.

Delicious as this dish is when served hot, it is also nice when cold.

* *

Spanish Soup.

Soak one-half pound or one pound of white beans over night; boil them the next morning till tender and add one large white cabbage which has been cut up small, a bit of bacon, a whole red pepper, and some salt; boil the whole for an hour; heat some lard or drippings in a sauce pan and fry in it a sliced onion. Put in the soup little by little and stir often with a wooden spoon. A little olive butter and garlic make this a perfect representative of the favorite soup kept for all travelers in Spanish inns.

IN THE KITCHEN

Kitchen Chairs.

The housewife who values her strength and youth will do all she can to lighten her work. It is a wise woman who will keep both a high and a low chair in her kitchen. The high chair should be used at the kitchen table, with a footstool under the feet, when preparing vegetables, when washing dishes, and when ironing such things as handkerchiefs, which need no weight put on them.

The low chair will prove restful and useful to sit on while waiting for cakes, cookies, or pies to brown in the oven.

The few moments' rest gained from time to time during the day while sitting down to do work which can be done as well sitting as standing will mean much less weariness when the day's work is done.

* *

To Clean Spoons.

Silver spoons always become discolored and brassy looking when they come in contact with cooked eggs. An easy way to clean them is to rub well with common salt, having first washed them in warm water and soap.

* *

Keep Oven from Rusting.

If the oven door of your gas range is left open for a few minutes when the oven is cooling off you will avoid the condensation of moisture that always follows, and thereby save the rusting out of the oven.

To Clean Lettuce.

When cleaning lettuce one often finds that each leaf is covered with a lot of tiny green bugs which it seems impossible to remove. It is a great time saver to wash the lettuce in cool water first to remove it of dirt, and then take water as hot as you can bear the hands in and place each leaf of lettuce in the water and shake it around in the water several times. You will find that the bugs will loosen their hold on the lettuce and will remain in the water. If the water becomes cool add some more hot water, as the hot water, is a great deal more effective than cold. After the bugs are all off the lettuce replace it in cold water for a short time to renew the crispness.

SHOULD BE NO QUESTION AS TO WHERE CANADA STANDS

In Event of the Empire Being in Danger, Says Prof. Shortt in Addressing Canadian Club--Thinks There is no Occasion for Present Panicky Feeling.

That there is no occasion for the panicky feeling which exists in Canada at the present time regarding the defence of the empire.

That there should be no question as to the stand Canada would take if the empire were in danger.

That Canada should develop a national spirit and take a clearly defined and intelligent stand regarding her relations with the nations of the world.

That Canada should have a representative at Washington, in Asia, at London and at other points in the world where the Dominion's interests are vitally affected.

These were some of the points brought out and emphasized by Prof. Adam Shortt, of the Civil Service Commission Ottawa, in his address before the Peterborough Canadian Club last night. There was a large attendance at the function which took place at the Hotel National and the address on "Canada's Foreign Relations" was one of the best ever given before the Club. The president Mr. D. O'Connell, occupied the chair and introduced the speaker of the evening. Prof. Shortt's address on the foreign relations of the Dominion was one of more than ordinary interest at the present time in view of the discussion now going on throughout the country regarding the naval defence of the empire, and the fact that the Dominion Government is dealing with the question as to what Canada shall do in this connection. Prof. Shortt took the ground that there was no cause for the present alarm that the war scare in England was largely the outcome of "yellow journalism" methods which were being employed by certain British newspapers and that Canadians should not be carried away by an excess of sentiment.

In introducing Prof. Shortt, Mr. D. O'Connell referred to the deep impression the speaker of the evening had made when he addressed the club over a year ago and extended him a hearty welcome on his second visit to Peterborough.

Prof. Shortt referred to the pleasure it gave him to appear for a second time before the Peterborough Canadian Club. Remembering the pleasant time he had spent on his first visit here it did not take any persuasion to have him accept the invitation to come back again.

Within the past few days, said Prof. Shortt, there had been considerable interest excited regarding Canada's position. He did not intend going extensively into this phase of the question, but would merely touch on it in passing.

The speaker emphasized the importance of Canada coming to a definite and intelligent position as to its relations with the other countries of the world. This was the point that he wished to dwell upon. There was absolutely no necessity for the fever about naval defence at the present time. The panic feeling was unnecessary. The statesmen of Britain were aware of the conditions that have caused the alarm that at present exists months ago, and nothing had happened during the night to cause the people to get up in the morning and start a rumpus.

Much of the alarm that had been aroused was the result of yellow journalism creeping into many of the leading British papers. Some of them which had previously been leaders of public opinion had come under the sway of yellow journalism and there was little truth in many of the statements they were making.

This was simply a question of "wolf, wolf" and the effect would not be to the advantage of the empire.

Prof. Shortt referred to the harm done by the yellow press in sections of the United States and regretted that many hitherto reputable English journals were following along the same lines. There was something wrong but it wasn't the naval defence of the empire. To avoid such a condition as had arisen, the people of the empire should be educated regarding the true condition of the nation. If one-tenth of what the papers were saying was true, regarding the danger of the empire, the suggestion that had come from Australia should be acted upon. It was that the British fleet go over to Germany and wipe out the whole German fleet in one afternoon.

Germany's Dreadnaughts would not be completed for two years at least and if Britain was in such grave danger, now was the time to strike.

Prof. Shortt contended that there was no danger of Germany making an attack upon Britain. As Britain was one of Germany's best customers it would be a suicidal policy for Germany to do anything along this line. He did not believe that any of the predictions being made along this line would come true.

Regarding Canada's foreign relations, Prof. Shortt said that the first duty of Canada was to develop a strong national spirit, and only when she had done this could she intelligently take a stand among the nations of the world. This was the view expressed by Lord Milner when he was in Canada a few months ago. Lord Milner was a far-seeing imperialist.

"No nation can stand alone. Germany least of all, perhaps, said the speaker. "Even Britain could not stand alone. The time no longer existed when a nation could make its own policy without regard to the other nations of the earth. If Canada cut adrift from the mother country the first thing she would have to do would be to link up with some other nation. Where would she look in this connection? To Britain and the United States, because she had more in common with them racially and otherwise than any other nations of the world."

Prof. Shortt outlined fully the colonization policy of England. The British were true colonizers. In the early days a nation secured colonies to exploit and not to develop them. They were merely an addition to the farm, as it were, and were kept because they were profitable. Britain had adopted a different policy. They developed the colonies and made them feel that they were a part of the empire, and should enjoy the common rights of subjects of the empire.

Prof. Shortt won applause from his auditors when he said that there should be no question as to where Canada would stand or what Canada would do if the empire were in danger. If room for doubt ever existed as to the attitude of the Dominion in this regard there was mighty little hope left.

A nation, and Canada was virtually a nation now, must learn to help herself before she could help another nation.

The speaker traced the growth of responsible government in Canada, and showed how the Dominion had practically secured all the privileges of a nation.

In closing, Mr. Shortt contended that Canada should have a representation at Washington, at London, in Asia and in other parts of the world where, in one way or another, her interests are vitally affected. These representatives could work in conjunction with the ambassadors of the empire. In this way Canada would learn the art of diplomacy and greater harmony within the empire would be the result.

VOTE OF THANKS.

A vote of thanks to Prof. Shortt was moved by Mr. R. E. Wood, and seconded by Mr. D. Hughes Charles in appropriate speeches. The vote of thanks was tendered Prof. Shortt by Mr. O'Connell and the speaker of the evening replied briefly.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

A NEGLECTED cold is generally the first cause of catarrh.

Women are especially liable to colds. These colds occur more frequently during the wet, sloppy weather of winter and spring than any other time of the year. Often they are not considered serious and are allowed to run on, or they are treated in such a way as to only palliate the symptoms, while the cold becomes more deep-seated and the patient finally awakens to the fact that she has a well-developed case of catarrh.

WOMEN SHOULD BEWARE OF CATCHING COLD.

By reason of their delicate structure, the lungs are frequently the seat of a cold, especially if there is the slightest weakness of these organs. The treatment of catarrh of the lungs is also more difficult and discouraging than catarrh of any other organ of the body.

It would be wise therefore, to guard against it by every precaution possible.

Peruna has been[illegible] the most reliable of all remed[illegible] for coughs, colds and catarrh, by re[illegible] of the fact that it goes at once to [illegible] seat of the trouble.

HAD A FINE PROGRAMME

Charlotte St. Epworth League Spent a Most Enjoyable Evening

Those who spent the evening with the Young People's Society of Charlotte street church last evening, at their social and entertainment were all unanimous in their conclusion that it was one of the most pleasant and entertaining events of the season.

The programme which was varied and rather unique in its character, was commenced with a piano solo by Miss Grace Edmonson and was much appreciated. The next was a splendid sketch, entitled, "The New Minister's At Home," in which five young people took part. It set forth very humorously the trials which a young minister and his wife have to endure in moving from place to place. It was followed by a social feature, which mixed the people up and got them better acquainted in getting the most autographs on their cards. The one getting the most won a prize. Then came a vocal duet by the Misses Lee, and a solo by Miss Lee, who is the newly-appointed soloist of Charlotte street church, both of which were heartily encored and enjoyed. A splendid piano solo by Miss Flo Reid, and a recitation by Miss M. Titterson, was followed by another very laughable sketch, entitled "Advertising for a Companion," and executed by four young ladies, all of whom took their parts excellently and with much ease. A very interesting number was the conundrum contest, in which everyone took part, and was enjoyed greatly. A sweetly rendered solo by [illegible] Miss Maisie Cunningham was followed by that ever popular tableaux "[illegible] Reveries of a Bachelor," the [illegible] and lighting effects of which [illegible] splendidly carried out under [illegible] management of Mr. Gordon [illegible]. Refreshments, always a [illegible] adjunct, were then served. [illegible] convener of the Social Com[illegible] and her staff of workers are [illegible] congratulated on the success of the evening.

A WELCOME VISITOR

A seventy-two thousand dollar a year man—Hugh Chalmers—tells "How to hire, train and supervise men" in the April number of "Busy Man's Magazine." It is a topic full of inspiration and narrated in a bright, snappy style by a salesman who at twenty-nine years of age capitalized himself at a million dollars annually and sold his services to a company employing five thousand persons as well as a force of five hundred salesmen. Another article of timely interest is one on "Canadians and Imperial Titles," by J. M. McConnell, who speaks of the change in sentiment and attitude with which decorations are now viewed in the Dominion as compared with the feeling that existed some years ago. "Canadian Pleasure Parks" is also a seasonable contribution from the pen of G. W. Cooper. Splendid cuts are presented of several beauty spots in different cities. The April issue of Busy Man's Magazine contains many other racy articles on political and commercial affairs, system and business, life stories of successful people and men and events in the public eye. It is artistically illustrated and makes an excellent travelling companion for Eastertide or a welcome visitor to the home during the present holiday period.

FORMER LOCAL MAN PROMINENT IN IRISH SOCIETY IN CHICAGO

The Mr. Sheehy mentioned in the following despatch is a brother of Mr. R. Sheehy, of Peterborough, and formerly resided here:

Chicago, March 8.—The Irish Fellowship Club met on Saturday to consider vigorous protests on the part of the members against the display in the shops of certain St. Patrick's Day emblems, which they declare to be "gross travesties upon an intelligent and high-strung people."

James J. Sheehy thus recounts a shopping experience of his wife: "She was looking for some favors to decorate a table for St. Patrick's Day. She visited a number of shops and was shown 'Teddy Bears' tied up in green ribbons, monkey-faced trinkets, and last, but not least, a lot of green pigs.

"She asked the clerks what significance they attached to these symbols. One said, 'We always associate these things with St. Patrick's Day, don't you?'

"My wife was very indignant naturally, and when she told me about it I was indignant too. I see no reason why the Irish should be represented symbolically by a pig or a baboon with a clay pipe. It is an outrage and should not be tolerated."

We have all been made to turn by these representations at St. Patrick's person, and it is time to show that that sort of thing is not good taste.

WORK ON NEW DAM CANNOT BE STARTED TILL AUGUST

As a result of the passing of the waterworks dam by-law yesterday, the Water Commissioners will at once have plans and estimates for the work prepared and tenders will be asked for as soon as possible. This will take time, however, and it is not likely that work on the new dam will be commenced much before August.

One of the commissioners stated today that the dam would be constructed in such a manner that it will be possible for the city to develop the surplus power when it is decided to do so.

ANOTHER CHAPTER OF THE ROBINSON--MILLS CASE

Today's Osgoode Hall report contains the following:

Chief Justice Sir W. R. Meredith has allowed the appeal by F. C. Mills, sporting editor of the Hamilton Times, defendant in a libel action brought by M. M. Robinson, sporting editor of the Spectator, from an order of the Master in Chambers, dated February 27th, dismissing his motion for an order for security for costs. The order appealed from is discharged, and subject to any other question which may be open to respondent in opposing the making of the order, an order for security for costs should be made. Costs here and below in the cause.

The only question argued before his Lordship was as to whether appellant was a person entitled to invoke the provisions of section 10 of the Revised Statutes respecting libel and slander, R.S.O., chapter 68, which the Master in Chambers held he is not, being of opinion that the section applies in the case of an editor only when the defendant is an "editor who is responsible for the general management of the paper and its policy in regard to matters of every kind." "To narrow the section," he says, "by limiting its operation of a defendant who is such an editor as the Master in Chambers speaks of and to the publisher and proprietor, would in my judgment take away a protection which the Legislature intended should be given, at all events, to those who were engaged in the work of publishing the newspaper in which the alleged libel appeared, whether as publishers, proprietors, editors-in-chief, editors of departments, reporters or printers."

OBITUARY

The funeral of Mrs. Kennedy, of Omemee, took place today to Lindsay, the officiating clergymen being Revs. McCullough, Mackenzie and J. G. Potter (Peterborough.) The deceased lady was related to Mr. John Greer, of 701 George street, and leaves a large number of sorrowing relatives and friends.

MR. MARTIN WELSH.

The death occurred this morning at his late residence, in Auburn, of Mr. Martin Welsh. The deceased gentleman, who was 83 years of age, was born in Ireland, but had lived the greater part of his life in this city. He had been sick for a long time, and his death was not unexpected.

Besides his wife, four daughters and three sons are left to mourn his loss. The daughters are Mrs. P. Leahy and Mrs. Maurice O'Hern, of town; Mrs. Bone, of Toronto, and Miss Welsh at home. The sons are Messrs. Michael, of Campbellford, and Martin and Joseph who are living in the United States.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, in Auburn, on Friday morning at 9 o'clock and proceed to St. Peter's Cathedral, and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery for interment.

THE "POSTIES" GET A RAISE OF FIFTY CENTS PER DAY

Major Currie Opens up Question of Canada's Treaty-Making Powers, and Mr. Brodeur Tells Him Dominion's Position in the Matter.

Ottawa, April 1.—The House spent most of the afternoon completing the supplementary votes for the year ended yesterday.

Mr. Lemieux replied that the matter was the subject of consideration.

The Postmaster-General has announced his long-promised increase of salaries to letter carriers and others of 50 cents a day.

The proposal is that in the outside division of the Postoffice Department the salaries of messengers, porters, letter-carriers, mail transfer agents or tax collectors still in grade A be at the rate of $1.75 per day; in grade B, $2; in grade C, $2.50; in grade E, $2.75.

On an item for the salary of Prof. Prince, fishery commissioner, Major Currie opened up the question of the rights of the Dominion Parliament in the matter of treaty-making. He claimed that where there is a charge on the revenue or the cession of territory any treaty negotiated by Great Britain in which Canada is concerned must be submitted to Parliament for ratification.

Mr. Brodeur admitted that in the case of the recent fisheries treaty it was not necessary to submit it to Parliament. On one occasion, however, Great Britain had given this country the absolute right to negotiate our own treaty, while on another occasion she had called in a Canadian plenipotentiary. Under the recent treaty the regulations adopted by the two commissioners were final and would not be subject to any changes by Parliament. Parliament need not enforce the regulations, but this would be a breach of national honor.

Mr. Pugsley laid on the table a copy of the instructions issued to agents of the Public Works Department, impressing the necessity of exercising the greatest care and caution in obtaining materials at the very best possible prices, and that the most careful scrutiny should be given to all accounts before certification, as well as cautioning "emphatically regarding the acceptance of any gifts or favors of any kind at the hand of contractors or merchants with whom they may have dealings on behalf of the Department," and knowledge of any such should be reported at once to the Minister or Deputy Minister for investigation.

Dr. Sproule asked: "Is the Government aware of the great variety and unsuitability of the railway mail coaches now in use on Canadian railways, and the consequent danger, inconvenience and hardships suffered by railway mail clerks," and asking if the recommendation of the royal commission for proper standard mail cars was to be carried out.

In the Senate.

Ottawa, April 1.—The Senate spent most of the afternoon trying to find out the meaning of the Lancaster level crossing bill, and the Beique amendment thereto, and finally adjourned without agreeing upon either.

FREE DISTRIBUTION OF PILLS IS NO LONGER PERMITTED

Will be Illegal After To-day, Result of the New Patent Medicine Act Which Went Into Effect April 1st.

Commencing today it will be illegal for anyone to throw samples of patent medicines into the doorways of Peterborough —something that has been very common and to which objection has been raised from time to time. The danger from this often lies in the chances of children getting hold of the samples and the possibility of their being poisoned by them. Samples of pills, for example, are often distributed, and while they may as pills, be the best in the world, they are not exactly the best bill of fair for mere children to get hold of and possibly mistake for candy.

All this will stop on the first of April for the new propriety or patent medicine act says; "No person, firm or corporation shall distribute or cause or permit to be distributed from door to door, or upon a public place or highway or through the ail, place or highway or through the mail, any sample of a proprietary or patent medicine. Provided this section shall not prevent manufacturers or wholesale dealers distributing samples to the trade."

The Review has already told its readers what the new act will mean. It will affect every drug store and patent medicine manufacturer in Canada. In future before any patent medicine can be sold in the Dominion the formula of it must be submitted to the Inland Revenue Department and approved of.

BRANTFORD REGIMENT SENDS ITS OFFICIAL ACCEPTANCE OF THE 57TH'S INVITATION

The swearing in of recruits for the 57th Regiment will take place on Monday, April 5th, the night of the first drill. The captains of the various companies are busy picking up men and the recruit force this year will be a very large one.

To date the St. Catharines regiment which has been invited here has not yet sent an acceptance of the invitation.

Lt. Col. Stevenson, of the 57th, has received a letter from Major Howard, of the 38th, Brantford, giving the official acceptance of the invitation extended to the Brantford Regiment to be here on Victoria Day, which falls on a Monday.

The letter is as follows;

"At a meeting of the officers held last Thursday it was unanimously decided to accept your invitation to visit your city over Victoria Day. We will probably leave Brantford between 8 and 10 o'clock Saturday night arriving in Peterborough early Sunday morning and entraining for home about 11 o'clock Monday night.

"We will send a deputation of our officers to make arrangements later on."

ARMOURIES WILL LIKELY BE OPENED BY APRIL 15TH

The officers and men of the 57th are eagerly anticipating the time when they will be able to use the new armories. They will be able to do so at an early date.

There is a general impression in the city that the armories will not be opened to the regiment until May 24th. This is a mistaken idea and was corrected by Lt. Col Stevenson, this morning.

"It is expected that the armories will be used by the regiment about April 15th," he informed the Review, this morning.

IT TAKES LOT OF WATER TO KEEP DOWN THE DUST HERE

"If you had a hundred watering carts you couldn't keep down the dust some days in Peterborough," remarked Mr. Matthews, chairman of the Water Commissioners, at a meeting yesterday afternoon. The amount of water used by the city was being discussed and it was pointed out that more water was used on street watering in Peterborough than in any other city of its size in Canada.

"And still the people are kicking" remarked one of the aldermen.

"You would know that well enough if you were chairman of the Board of Works," said Ald. Phelan.

WILL BE RECORD 12TH OF JULY CELEBRATION AT PORT HOPE

The Orange celebration on the 12th of July will be held in Port Hope this year and a prominent Peterborough Orangeman stated to the Review this morning that it would probably be the largest in Ontario in the history of Orangeism. It has been a long time since the walk was held in Port Hope and great preparations are being made for the event.

The past year has been a banner one for the Orange cause in Ontario and all over the province new lodges are being formed and ole ones being resuscitated.

The two organizers have been very busy and have been accomplishing excellent results. Organizer Birmingham has been working in the western field and Organizer McCartney in the east.

HON. MR. HANNA PRESENTS THE LIQUOR ACT AMENDMENTS

He Would Increase Fines For Illegal Selling and Make Third Offence Punishable by Imprisonment--Would Seize Liquor In Transit When Meant For Illicit Sale.

Toronto, April 1.—Hon. W. J. Hanna's presentation of the new amendments to the Liquor License Act was a notable feature of yesterday's proceedings in the Legislature. An increase in the license fee from $1,200 to $1,600 is a feature of the amendments.

A substantial change was proposed in the sub-section dealing with fines imposed for selling without a license, the amount being raised from $50 to $100 for the first offence to not less than $100 or more than $200.

For a second offence the penalty is four months imprisonment, and the suggestion to raise this to six months was made.

Mr. Hanna was not sure that this was desirable, as four months was as effective as four years.

Another amendment enables the Department to seize liquor in transit to places were the sale would be illegal.

Power is also taken to sell liquor so seized to dealers, and to pay all freight or express charges from the proceeds.

The Manitoba law is also adopted, permitting the seizure of liquor anywhere except in private houses.

Agents of persons or companies not domiciled in Ontario, who take orders for delivery of liquor in the province must take out a "sample and commission license," costing $300 a year. This follows the Quebec law.

Hon. A. G. MacKay expressed his gratification over the adoption of his suggestion of two years, ago, that hotels without bars in local option districts should be licensed. A nominal fee of $5 is imposed, and the license may be transferred without charge.

Mr. MacKay thought that if such a license was taken out by one house the others would follow suit, as the license would be a guarantee to the public of proper inspection and equipment and would naturally attract patronage.

The recently appointed inspector is given power to visit and inspect any tavern or house for which a license is issued, and to see that the laws as to protection, safety, comfort and convenience of guests are properly observed.

Another section requires the disclosure of names of persons selling liquor to minors, under penalty of three months imprisonment.

Breweries are prohibited from selling liquor to private persons, and must confine their sales to the trade.

Dr. Forbes Godfrey, West York, moved his resolution for the appointment of a commission to investigate methods for treating pulmonary tuberculosis, and establishment of a provincial sanitarium. He objected to the statement that the medical profession was opposed to compulsory notification, and that provincial jealousy was the cause for the bill of Mr. Downey being rejected.

Before compulsory notification was resorted to, he wanted the Legislature properly informed regarding the best methods to be adopted on treating the disease, and from that information a complete and efficient organization to be established.

Dr. Godfrey emphatically stated that neither he nor the medical profession were opposed to the principle of compulsory notification. He was glad to see that the Provincial Board of Health and Provincial Secretary were moving in certain directions, but in the absence of information and statistics no adequate policy could be adopted.

Dr. Nixon felt it was due to the medical profession to say a word.

They had been threatened with the re-introduction of Mr. Downey's bill. No medical man in the House or the province would refuse to do his part in stamping out tuberculosis.

He was not opposed to compulsory notification, but to Mr. Downey's bill, and hoped that something would be done that might bear fruit.

The Legislature devoted last night's session to a consideration in committee of Hon. Dr. Pyne's bill respecting public schools.

Major J. J. Craig (Wellington) created amusement by opposing the clause calling for the retirement of public school inspectors at the age of 65. He cited the Premier, Attorney-General and Provincial Treasurer as men under the ruling who would be called upon to go into "retirement."

Mr. Valentine Stock also opposed the clause, and the Liberal leader also supported them. Hon. Dr. Pyne capitulated and the age limit was raised to 70 years.

Before recess Sir James Whitney referred to the agitation throughout Canada regarding a contribution to Imperial defence, and said:

"I have been receiving a number of telegrams from different parts of the continent and I may say in reference to this question that I have communicated with no person on this subject, and I have received no communication.

"In my opinion, I may say, Canada has missed an opportunity which may never come again. Had Parliament immediately and spontaneously appropriated the value of a Dreadnought, or even two, such ships, with an intimation that further aid would be forthcoming in case of need, that action, coming in concert from other British dominions, would have shown to the world at large that the British communities are ready to meet any attack upon the Empire. Such a demonstration would have cleared the atmosphere, saved further expenditure and created a lasting effect among the nations of the world who are looking on." (Cheers.)

Hon. A. G. MacKay, in reply, said that if the resolution as unanimously carried at Ottawa was followed out in fact as well as in name he for one would not wish it supplemented in any way by any one of the provinces.

THE MONEY IS MISSING

Express Package Containing $25,000 Cannot be Located.

Montreal, April 1.—A report is current that the Dominion Express Co. has lost a package containing $25,000.

The money is said to have gone astray on a train between here and Toronto.

The money was on the way between Montreal and Ottawa via Toronto.

It had been placed in the safe and when the safe was opened the package is reported as having been missing. The package was in charge of Express Messenger Rutledge, who is in Ottawa now.

The loss was not discovered until the car reached Ottawa, and at the company's office in this city it was impossible to get any information or denial of the story, it being said the only persons competent to speak were not available.

PLAN NEW CHURCH

Murray St. Baptists Want Larger Place of Worship.

Last night's report of the committee in charge of arrangements for the Murray street Baptist church indicates that the Murray street congregation will have a new and more commodious place of worship. The particulars in connection with the plans for the construction of the church are withheld until after the congregational meeting on Wednesday night.

After they have been considered at this meeting they will be made public. The new church will, in all probability, be built on Murray street.

GOOD SUPPLY OF EASTER BEEF

No Scarcity of it Here and the Quantity and Quality is of the Best

According to the statements of a local cattle buyer this morning the public need not have any fear that there will be any scarcity of Easter beef. From his statements the supply might be called plentiful, and the quality of the best. At the present time the price of beef is 5c. live weight, dressed beef being 8 1-2 cents.

NOTHING SWEET ABOUT THIS

No maple syrup of this year's manufacture has appeared in town yet. The season is later this year and according to reports the supply will not be as large as in former seasons and a good price will likely be asked for the article. In Kingston this "liquid delicacy" has been sold lately at $1.00 per gallon.

CITY GETS BETTER RATE FOR HYDRANTS

Commencing To-day Charge Will be $27.50 Per Hydrant Per Year---Water Commissioners Make the Reduction.

The Water Commissioners have reduced the charge to the city for hydrants to $27.50 per hydrant per year commencing today. This will mean a saving to the city of $702.50 per year on the hydrants now in use.

A deputation from the Finance Committee waited on the Water Commissioners at their meeting yesterday afternoon and made a request for a lower rate for the hydrants. Ald. Bradburn acted as spokesman for the committee in the absence of the chairman, Ald Morrow, and presented the claims of the city. There are 213 hydrants at the present time. For 179 of them the city is paying $30 per year and for 34 of them $35 per year. A statement of the rate charged for hydrants in other towns and cities in the province was read. Some were higher; some lower, than what this city pays, the average being $36. The Finance committee thought the charge might be reduced here to $25 per hydrant.

Chairman Matthews said that the charge had been reduced in the regime of Mayor Roger.

"Your people are like Oliver Twist," said Commissioner Moore, "always coming back for something more."

Commissioner Hill remarked that the Commission would need all the money they could get to pay the interest and sinking fund on the new dam.

Commissioner Matthews said the city had dealt fairly with the Commissioners. They were receiving more from the city for water than they were a few years ago.

The deputation which consisted of Ald. Bradburn, Phelan and Gillespie, then retired. At their meeting the Commissioners took the city's request into consideration and decided to reduce the charge for hydrants to $27.50 each per year, commencing on April 1st, 1909.

THE LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY CONGRESS OPENS AT TORONTO

Canada is Called on to do Her Share in the Evangelization of the World--Addresses From Notable Workers in the Cause of Christianity.

Toronto, April 1.—Nothing could more fittingly typify the wide catholicity of purpose and real spirit of democracy pervading the four thousand men of Canada who met in Massey Hall yesterday as delegates to the first Canadian National Missionary Congress of the Laymen's Missionary Movement than the diverse types of men who figured on the platform. From Sir Andrew Fraser, the great pro-consul of the Empire who for nearly forty years has occupied high administrative office under the British Crown in India, down to the representative business man who presided with equal tact and sympathy over the executive business sessions and the opening devotional meeting in St. James' Cathedral school house, the speakers paralleled in diversity of social position and unity of moral purpose the larger body of hearers who had met to formulate a national policy for the Christianizing of the world. And a clarion call to a new crusade was sounded in the closing sentences of Mr. N. W. Rowell's thrilling address, in words which kindled the emotions of the vast audience.

"Forever associated with the origination of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, it was fitting that the opening devotional services of this congress should be held in St. James' school house," premised Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., the chairman, in opening the afternoon's proceedings at Massey Hall, which were primarily for clergymen and students.

"If I have a sword and am facing an enemy it is not my duty to deliver an essay on the sharpness of the sword, but to prod him with it," said Mr. Robert E. Speer of New York as he entered upon his theme, "The Great Commission," pointing out its import and its meaning. The great commission was not the first missionary command. Had that great commission never been spoken or handed down to us the missionary movement would have been a necessity of the Church. The great commission revealed the finality and completeness of the Christian religion. This is sometimes denied, but it is true. It is also quite true that our understanding or comprehension of the Gospel is not complete and cannot be fully known until all men come to it. To admit that our understanding and definition of Christianity is not complete is not to admit its incompleteness. The interpretation which is to come to us of the west from the east will help us to a still more complete understanding of Christianity, and of the great commission. But, remember, Christ made no arrangements for teachers who came before or after Him that they were to add to or take from Christianity; we see in it all that humanity can ever need and all that humanity can ever know.

"It always pays to obey God. His commands are essentially for our good," said Mr. J. Campbell White of New York, general secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. It was, he continued, a great surprise to the early Christians to see how the missionary command blessed the people who obeyed it, and just on that account it is the most essential apologetic for the truth of Christianity. His ten years' experience in mission work in India had shown him how the great truths of Christianity revealed the great truths of the Gospel. On the great truths of the Gospel have been framed the platform of the present congress, and it had brought together the leaders of the great church at the present meeting, obliterating for the time being all differences, and this work of uniting the churches was still going on, for in China already the great Christian churches had come to trust each other in the work of propagating the Gospel of Jesus Christ. This work of union in effort was going on and on, and the day was coming when this union of work would be strong enough, aggressive enough to cover the world.

Mr. N. W. Rowell formally declared the congress open at about 8.15 last night, after the opening devotional exercises had been conducted by Bishop Sweeny of Toronto. Mr. Rowell drew the attention of the audience to the truly representative character of the congress; for every large Christian denomination, the Roman Catholics excepted, was represented. The latter, he said, had joined with their brother Roman Catholics in the United States, who had recently held a striking conference in the interests of missionary work. So the Laymen's Movement might just be said to have touched all the great bodies in Canada. Every province in Canada had sent its representatives.

MONTREAL GIRL TELLS A STRANGE STORY OF CRIME

Montreal, April 1.—The case of Corinne D'Armour, cashier for Wilder & Co., appears to be an extraordinary one, although she sticks to her first story of being set upon at six o'clock in a busy street. Three weeks ago she was held up in the store by a man who robbed the cash till. While on her way uptown on Tuesday night she says she was forced into a cab, driven off to a lonely spot near the mountain and robbed. She is still ill from the shock.

"When I came to myself I remember that it was at a lonely spot not the mountain, as I could see hills and tombstones in the distance. I started to shout for help, when my captor threw a blanket over my head, and told me that if I did not stop he would beat me into insensibility. He said that all he wanted was the money I had on me, and that if I would give it to him no harm should be done me in any way. I had not the power to answer him, as I was again on the verge of collapsing from fear.

"Seeing that I was not doing as requested the man started to unbutton my shirtwaist to see if the money was not hidden in my breast. The money was not there, however, and after some wrangling he discovered it in one of my stockings," she says.

She has the reputation of being very well thought of, while the family is highly respectable.

Miss D'Armour says she was unconscious for an hour and a half, and doctors are sure she was not drugged or assaulted, so she must have remained in a dead faint all that time. She had $140 in her possession when she left the store, and fifty of it remain when she came to herself in Mance street.

No arrests have taken place.

TO SEEK DIVORCE FROM HUSBAND

Berlin, April 1.—Frau von Bohlen and Halbach, who was Bertha Krupp, one of the wealthiest women in the world, intends to divorce her husband, rumor has it.

The Berlin Zeitammiting says:

"Frau Bertha is dissatisfied with the treatment her husband has accorded her. She is said to be cold, haughty and intractible. But, it is said, too, that since the death of her younger child two months ago she has been subject to attacks of melancholy which have destroyed the family peace."

Friends say that both Herr and Frau von Bohlen are overworked in managing their gigantic business and fortune and that both long for rest.

THIS CRIMINAL CANNOT MARRY

New York, April 1.—A judiciary order of much interest to sociologists was issued yesterday by Judge Foster of the Court of General Sessions in the case of Albert E. Johnson, a 20-year-old youth several times arrested for theft.

The magistrate forbade the youth to marry under penalty of a long term of imprisonment, which he declared he would impose in punishment of a larceny committed three years ago, and on which he had at the time suspended sentence.

As he was about to be sentenced for this offence, for breaking his parole, a young girl, who declared she was his fiancee, interceded for him. It was at this juncture that Judge Foster issued the novel order.

"I have no intention of permitting a marriage which will breed more criminals," said he.

IMPROVING THE RUSSIAN FLEET

St. Petersburg, April 1.—The Douma passed the naval budget, including $2,242,500 for urgent improvements to the Baltic fleet, but it rejected, as it did last year, an appropriation for the construction of a new battleship on the ground that reorganisation of the Admiralty was incomplete and the shipbuilding plans were not ready to debate.

M. Zvegintseff summarised the stupendous naval progress abroad, and called attention to the prevailing tendency to concentrate in home waters uniform squadrons of big ships. He said that ninety per cent. of Europe's naval strength was now stationed in the German Ocean. He pointed out Great Britain's success with liquid fuel, which originally was a Russian idea.

"The Lord has dug up all my sins, big and little, and I have to confess to all. The stealing of that pie is one of the sins of my past. I hereby confess it and enclose ten cents to pay for it."

The Daily Review

THURSDAY, APRIL 1, 1909.

"THE BEST WE CAN DO"

"The speech of Mr. Foster was one of the most statesmanlike utterances ever delivered in the House of Commons. It rose above party politics, urged several courses by which the present emergency in Imperial naval affairs might be met and concluded with the courteous assurance to the government that whatever method it was pleased to select that would meet the present emergency as well as provide for a future permanent naval policy on the part of Canada would receive the loyal support of His Majesty's opposition.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier complimented the honorable gentleman upon the able manner in which he had outlined the situation, and at this point the whole House applauded. There was apparently a feeling that the leader of the Government would play up to the situation and that a united parliament would do something at once appropriate and wise. Then, instead of frankly accepting the free hand which Mr. Foster's address had left open for the government to take advantage of, Sir Wilfrid rather weakly remarked that the honorable member had failed to specify in set terms what the government should do. In the next breath he made it clear that it did not matter what Mr. Foster might have proposed, for the simple reason that the government did not intend to do anything in the way of assisting the Empire at the present time. On the contrary the government took its stand on the pronouncement at the Imperial conference of 1902 at which it was understood that each of the overseas dominions would provide the nucleus of a fleet to look after its own coasts and he mentioned that while New Zealand had offered a Dreadnought Canada did not propose to be stampeded into the imitation of its action by any overnight panic."—Ottawa Citizen.

RURAL MAIL DELIVERY

Why have we not got rural mail delivery in Peterborough county? It has been tried or is being introduced in other parts of Canada and Ontario and why has it not been tried in Peterborough? Responding to the energetic policy of the Conservatives in this respect Sir Wilfrid agreed to acknowledge that he and his cabinet were entirely wrong and rural mail delivery was what we should have in the more thickly populated parts. It cannot come too soon. Peterborough county would well repay the expenditure. It seems that there is no end of money for dredging at the Hunter street bridge but very little for the farmer.

CAPITAL LEAVING CANADA

El Paso, Texas, March 29— Headed by Dr B. Franklin Pearson, a mammoth Canadian syndicate has secured a concession from the Mexican government for the construction of two dams on the Conchos river, at a cost of approximately eight million dollars and will produce gold. The upper dam, for the purpose of generating electric power for lighting and manufacturing will cost two and a half millions and will produce power for Santa Rosalia, Parral and neighboring towns. The lower dam will cost between five and six million dollars and will be devoted to flood water irrigation for three hundred thousand acres of farming land in Conchos valley. Construction on this dam is to start this year and will be completed in three years

Why is it that capitalists seem to rejoice in taking Canadian capital out of Canada? British and American capital comes in while Canadian capital goes out. The theory is that our capital is not big enough and prosperous enough to enable it to get governmental concessions of the huge kind so dear to the heart of the real money holder. Hence Canadian capitalists must look to the immediate return on the investment. This return is larger in the United States than in Canada. Hence the small capitalist seek out the smaller American, Mexican or South American investment rather than the Canadian investment. This manner of proceeding is hard on Canada. Our own money collected in pieces of deposit is only of a three per cent value to us. Hence it will be seen that we are burning the candle at both ends—in paying by means of huge concessions, exorbitantly to the foreign capitalist while losing the value of our own savings. An example will show one of the chief reasons for this apparent anomaly. The woollen industry has caused the loss on exile of at least ten millions of our money. So it is with other branches of industry hampered by insufficient or unwise protection. Then again the farmer is made to pay the farm share of great undertakings and this keeps him poor. Agriculture is the preponderating branch of industry in Canada and therefore it must stand the heaviest loss. Somebody must stand it and those most heavily interested must lose most. The money-man rarely loses. He is not built that way. He throws a little cash around occasionally and the people are gratified while being deluded by the unfamiliar sparkle. But as the Los Angeles journal remarked, there is a heap of difference between a good man and a good fellow.

A PROTEST

Poor Geronimo is dead. They say he died a pagan after having joined a number of Protestant churches. Geronimo was a Catholic. We met him at the Omaha exposition. He took us aside and opening his heart he pulled out a large crucifix and, first looking up to Heaven, kissed it. It struck us at the time as a very expressive and emphatic act of faith. But poor Geronimo was for a quarter of a century a prisoner near an army post and consequently in very bad company. Long association with the white man had made him a gambler and a drunkard. As another poor Indian once said to the priest who upbraided him for joining a Protestant sect: "When I get drunk and curse I am a Protestant. When I get sorry and go to confession I am a Catholic again." Poor Geronimo had no chance to go to confession and died a pagan.—Western Watchman.

There are many pagans of the Geronimo frame of mind all over unfortunately."—The Catholic Register.

If the editors of the Register will read Catholic for Protestant and vice-versa in the above beautiful commentary upon Protestants they will see how emphatic they themselves would be in condemnation of the "intolerance" of such language and allusions if it were used towards Catholics. There are many Protestants who desire justice and a humane treatment for the brotherhood of mankind while, of course, there are many who tally with the caustic comment of our Christian friends in the above. Is it quite correct, however, to identify all Protestants with drunken cursing pagans? We hope not. Certainly few Protestants would use such language towards Catholics, who, when consistent and sincere, elicit the warm commendation of Protestants for their strong faith and devotion. Protestants sometimes go to hotheaded extremes forgetting that nothing permanent is gained by extremes or by even the momentary loss of a clear head and sound judgment. But it has remained for the Register to quote and sneer of such sneering and bitter denunciations of their "separated brethren." We cannot reconcile ourselves, however, to this allusion as the opinion of all Roman Catholics. Even the violence of religious and party rancour cannot keep apart those who "sweetly dwell in kindness and truth" of either or any religious persuasion. The spirit of a good and upright man or woman may need chastening but it needs no such reproof as above and are there no good and upright Protestants? To stamp them without reservation as a lot of drunken cursing pagans, for the allusion is purposeless and useless in the article without that assumption is, we think, going too far, and while Protestants may merit sometimes the epithet "intolerant," what, pray, is this?

To show how just our complaint is, it is only necessary to do as we suggest, viz: read the article as from a Protestant paper spilling its spleen upon Roman Catholics and if the Register would not cry out against the outrageous character of the insult we miss our guess.

The disposition to blame Britishers for being "carried away" in the present crisis is not a happy one. They have means of information which they do not disclose. The "dogs of war" have certainly been on the trail of late and to lie by with the comforting assurance that it is only a hysterical scare partakes more of assurance than of "comforting."

Should Germany suddenly spring upon Great Britain as in the case of France, and deliver a mortal blow, Canada will mobilize its militia and fire three volleys in the air. It will also send Emperor Billy a collect message informing him that he is no gentleman.—Oshawa Citizen.

That was just what happened France in '70. The "Oh! Don't bother" attitude of some of our leading statesmen is well "taken-off" in the above paragraph.

In far Cremona centuries ago
This little sighing, singing thing was wrought,
Of dreams 'tis fashioned and its tones are fraught
With sweetness only centuries bestow;
But give an artist hand the slender bow;
And hark the tumult of impassioned thought—
The Heaven we missed, the earth we vainly sought
Within our shaken pulses ebb and flow.

Innumerable voices through it rain
The music of an unremembered past,
Dim echoes of illusive joy and pain.
In requiem sob or ringing trumpet-blast,
Are merged in one incomparable strain
That holds the heart of every listener fast.

Unfortunately for the truth of this exquisite little poem, a most thoroughly and scientifically conducted series of experiments have demonstrated that the modern violin of French make is better in every way than its ancestor.

A VOICE FROM NOVA SCOTIA

States That Dodd's Kidney Pills Surely Cure Bright's Disease.

Ellie J. Mirk Suffered From This Terrible Ailment for Four Years, But Dodd's Kidney Pills Made Her a Well Woman.

Misson Harbor, Gloucester County, NS, March 31— Special —That any remedy that will cure any form of Bright's Disease will cure any form of Kidney Disease has long been admitted by the medical profession, and this place furnishes one more undoubted proof that Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure Bright's Disease. For Ellie J. Mirk, well known here, had Bright's Disease and Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

"I suffered for over four years from Kidney Disease which developed into Bright's Disease," Miss Mirk states. "I had pains in head and back and stiffness of the joints. I lost my appetite and suffered from dizziness and shortness of breath. I was weak and languid all the time.

"I was always nervous and could not keep my thoughts from wandering. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me. Today I have not one of these distressing symptoms."

Neglected Kidney Complaint develops into Bright's Disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure any and all of these. But it is easier and safer to cure the earlier symptoms by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, March 31.—(Special.)—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market the offerings this morning were 600 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 275 hogs and 1240 calves.

A firm feeling prevailed in the market for cattle on account of the fact that the supply was not in excess of the requirements and the quality of the stock in many cases was all that could be desired by butchers, in consequence the demand was fairly good, especially for the better grades and a fair trade was done. There was also some demand from exporters for a few to complete shipments with and they paid 5½c to 6¼c per lb. Choice steers sold at 5¾c to 6c; good, at 5¼c to 5½c; fair at 4½c to 5c; medium, at 4¼c to 4½c, and lower grades, at 3c to 4c per lb.

The supply of sheep and lambs was small, for which the demand was good and prices ruled very firm. Yearling lambs sold at 6½c to 6¾c, and sheep at 5c to 5½c per lb. There were a few spring lambs offered, which met with a ready sale at from $4 to $8 each, as to size. Calves were very plentiful and an active trade was done in this line, but as the quality of the stock was not above the average, prices showed no change, sales being made at from $2 to $8 each, as to size and quality. The undertone to the market for hogs was firm, on account of the limited offerings. The demand was good and sales of selected lots were made at $7.90 to $8, and straight lots at $7.75 to $7.85 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the offerings consisted of 350 cattle, 600 calves and 100 hogs. PRESS ASSOCIATION SEND OFFCIAL THANKS FOR THEIR RECEPTION IN PETERBOROUGH

It would appear that the Press Association had enjoyed themselves while in the city on Saturday. While individuals expressed themselves as well pleased with the reception accorded, the local printers have been handed a suitable acknowledgement, copy of which is printed below:

"By resolution of the Executive of the Canadian Press Association, unanimously adopted at a meeting while returning from Peterborough, I am instructed to express to you and to the members of the Peterborough Press Club, the sincere appreciation of our organization of the hospitality which you accorded us on the occasion of our visit to your city on Saturday last. The programme which you had planned for our entertainment proved a most enjoyable one and the unanimous verdict of the party was that the Press Club of Peterborough are all 'Jolly Good Fellows.'"

Very truly yours,

J. R. BONE.

Secy-Treas.

It is pleasing to know that the reception given the visitors was successful and an agreeable one, and the local pressmen were careful to see that what they could do was done thoroughly, but it must not be lost sight of that a large share of the success is due to Mayor Rush, Ald. Turner, chairman of the Reception Committee of the council, and to the members of the Board of Aldermen who so thoroughly gave up the day to see to the comfort and entertainment of the visitors. Now the very best matters of interest were the local industries which were visited, and where the visitors were taken care of by Mr. E. G. Patterson, of the C. G. E. Co.; Mr. Bruce Fowler and Mr. Torrance Jack, of the Cordage Co. and Mr. W. H. Denham and assistants at the Quaker Oats Co. While it is true that there are many industries in the city which are relatively as important as those named in their several fields, it was impossible in the short time at hand to visit them. But their being here and forming a part of our industrial equipment was brought to the attention of the visitors. Some day the party will return, and when they do more time will be taken to view the sights of the city.

REPORT OF THE CONVENTION

of $2,000, allowed nothing else to be sold in the saloons. They tore down the screens and blinds from windows and doors and closed back entrances. The result was to drive out of business probably 1-3 of independent owners. The great dives flourished and five years after the system was established the crime record in Atlanta rose higher than any city in the republic.

Several states have tried the despen-

Several states have tried the dispen- was in some respects locally an improvement over the old saloon system yet it had greater evils which more than counteracted the good.

He said he established the system in Rome with greater restrictions than ever any other city had. Liquor was only sold in wholesale lots. No private citizen was interested in its sale. No man could linger on the premises or in the neighborhood of the dispensary. We did this to cut out the social evil. At first improvement was noticeable, crime went down steadily 40 per cent. but finally it went back to the old conditions.

The use of alcohol injures every human faculty, the higher the faculty the more pronounced are the effects. Some time ago the medical fraternity believed the use of alcohol in many cases was absolutely necessary. They recognized this when they formulated the Georgia law and even outlawed alcohol as a medicine. At first they met with great opposition from the medical fraternity of the state. Today 9-10's of the respectable physicians support our stand.

Mr. Wright said that the dispensary system gave too great a profit to the Government. At the time they threw out the saloons in Rome the Government got $8,000 from them. The first year of the dispensary system there were net profits of nearly $60,000. The second year $65,000. The people of the city, largely poor men, were wasting $600,000, 96 per cent. of which went to the saloon keeper and 10 per cent. paid in taxes. He said he could only see one remedy and that was absolute and unconditional prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquor.

We are not fighting so much for the drunkard of today as for the the child—the man of tomorrow. In the license system the man who falls is a product of our saloon. The saloons in America do not belong to the people who run them. They are Government institutions.

The Government through excise tax and licenses gets 1-3 the profits of liquor business. If you support the Government you are in the business yourself.

Who is paying for this. The liquor manufacturer says he is not. The saloon keeper says he is not. Who is then? The man who buys—whose dollars instead of going to his wife and children go over the bars and on to the Government, who get 1-2 the profits. It is no wonder the civilized world regards the business as a terrible evil.

Mr. Wright said God had given Canada great resourses yet up to this time they had been capitalizing sin to make money. He said that every year 60,000 boys in America were put out of business yet the liquor men will come and say not to put them out of business.

Speaking of personal liberty, Mr. Wright said, "and man says, "You have no right to take away my liberty to drink." God help the man who has no better idea of liberty than as the right to swig liquor over the bar. What about the liberty of the 25,000 or more mothers in Toronto, to raise their children without the blighting influence of the saloon. They go to a man and say, "help me to put this saloon out so that we may raise our children. He says "Down with you and your children. I stand for my liberty to drink liquor over a bar." Another woman says, "You can resist, but my husband falls." He says, "Down with you I want personal liberty. God help the English people from such a conception of human freedom.

Mr. Wright said he could stand the ravages of the past, and the fact that many homes had been put out of business, but when he faced the children of his country and ours and thought when the present generation is dead their children may be victims of this cursed traffic, every element of his nature rose in revolt There is no greater law, human not divine, than is involved in the simple statement, "Lead us not into temptation" No man, no citizen, no government has a right to tempt people to ruin. A child can never understand how a father at family prayer can pray that he and his child be not led into temptation and then walks out and votes to establish saloons to nullify the prayer. What virtue would you rather your boy to have today, sobriety. You pray, "Thy kingdom come on earth—that means Toronto—or Peterborough—and then vote to establish saloons in the Kingdom of God. You have no right to let saloons live on your streets. Go on with this great work. It is going to sweep Canada just as it is passing over United States. The spirit of God is behind you and good old Anglo-Saxon spirit of human freedom is in the movement. The thoughts of men are broadening. The old era of commercialism is dying. We are lifting up the children and swearing eternal fealty to them for ever and for ever.

This great convention was then brought to a close by the benediction by the President, Jos. Gibson.

ARE ENLARGING THE "RAINBOW"

Burnet and Simpson's Boat Will be Twelve Feet Longer This Season

Hastings, March 31.—The steamer "Rainbow," owned by Messrs. Burnet and Simpson, of Birdsall, will present a rather different appearance when she is put in commission this season. The steamer has been lengthened some twelve feet, which gives that amount more deck room on the bow and consequently more accommodation on the most pleasant part of the steamer on summer days. A new marine engine of the latest pattern with fifty per cent. more power than the old one has been installed, and a heavier propeller to match it. With the improvements on the power the "Rainbow" should show a clean pair of heels to any craft on the river as well as give more accommodation to her patrons.

MARKET PROBLEM

Committee Has Hard Time Finding System to Keep Close "Tab" on Tolls

At the last meeting the City Council instructed the Property Committee to evolve some system in order to keep a closer tab on the market tolls. The committee finds that it has a big task on its hands, as it is as hard to get a satisfactory system as it was to find a site for the Normal School. The committee talked the matter over for an hour last night, and decided to take no action for a few days, in order to go into it more fully. It was suggested that the tolls be collected with a box like a street car conductor's fare-box, that vendors on the market should buy a ticket before they would be allowed to sell, that the market clerk be paid by commission, and that he be paid on a sliding scale based on the receipts. All of these suggestions will be taken into consideration before a recommendation is made to the council.

With the market conducted as it is at present it is a difficult matter for the clerk to get all the tolls.

THEIR ACTIONS ARE COWARDLY

A Peterborough lady complains that she is the recipient of anonymous letters in which accusations and threats are made against her. Indignation is expressed at the cowardly action of the person or persons writing these letters, and there is trouble in store for them if they do not stop this dastardly work.

INCREASE IN THE RECEIPTS

Over $4,000 More Taken in at Custom House Than in March 1908

The receipts at the local custom house for the month of March were $27,432.62, as compared with $22,896.72 fort he same month last year. The increase is $4,535.90.

City Thanked For its Welcome

His Worship Mayor Rush has received the following communication which is self-explanatory:—

Toronto March 31, 1909.

Mayor Henry Rush,
Peterborough Ont.

Dear Sir—I have been instructed by the Executive of the Canadian Press Association to express to you to Ald. Turner, and the other members of the Peterborough City Council, the sincere thanks of the members of our organization for your splendid entertainment of us in Peterborough on Saturday March 27th. We particularly appreciated the trouble you went to to meet and welcome us at Burketon Junction, your accompanying us on the tour of inspection through your industrial concerns and also your co-operation in the arrangements for our entertainment at luncheon and your words of welcome there and many personal courtesies. The visit to Peterborough was a most enjoyable one in every way, and will long be remembered by those of our body fortunate enough to partake of your hospitality on that occasion.

Yours very truly,

MISS WALLIS HAS ATTRACTIVE STUDIO

As a rule a sculptor's studio is not perhaps so generally attractive to the uninitiated as that of a painter. Naturally it is less decorated, as, when a real "work shop" it is wise to have as few impediments in the way of ornamental draperies and other unnecessary accessories as possible. But for all that, much pleasure is experienced in spending an afternoon chez Miss Katherine Wallis, the well known Canadian sculptor, who has just returned from her native land to the home she has chosen in an interesting quarter in Paris, where she is in a nest of art laborers like herself. In Canada, Miss Wallis had much success with her exhibitions, Montreal, Toronto, and Peterborough being the favored localities. In Montreal the exhibition received visits from Lord and Lady Grey, Lady Evelyn Grey, and all the well-known residents of this art loving and encouraging city. Miss Wallis who stayed with Mrs. Haultain, was most hospitably entertained, charming functions being given in her honor, whilst she received not only flattering commendation and criticism of her clever work, but practical and valuable appreciation, for several were bought by people noted for their love of Art, who were delighted to be able to add such valuable treasures to the collections they are making.

In Toronto also Miss Wallis was warmly received, her beautiful statue, "Mercury" charmed by his own inventions," being bought by the Government of Ontario, where it is an ornament to the Government museum.

Amongst other works which received special admiration were "The Pied Piper," "August's Child" and "Mon Petit Chou," which have appeared in the Paris Salon and elsewhere the last named, representing a delightful baby seated in a cabbage and chuckling roguishly to himself, having been invited to the Autumn Exhibition in Liverpool, whence by special request, it travelled on to the City Art Gallery at Leeds. Miss Wallis, has, undoubtedly a great future before her, already she has made a name for herself and has received encouragement from Rodin, whilst genuine admiration has been expressed of her talent, strength and originality by Dampt, and other Masters.

Undoubtedly Miss Wallis owes much to her marvellous talent, energy and courage, but to her Professor, Monsieur Oscar Waldmann, the noted sculptor, great credit is also due, and Miss Wallis was extremely fortunate in having the opportunity of including in her Canadian exhibitions several splendid works by Monsieur Waldmann, and of thus giving the people of the Dominion the pleasure of admiring them. Monsieur Waldmann's animal groups are full of power and originality and his clever portraits are greatly appreciated in Paris and elsewhere. Miss Wallis, when at home in her Paris studio, receives visits from many artists, and other interesting people who enjoy a chat over a cup of tea, and an inspection of her work, past and present; just now she is busy preparing for the Paris Salon, and other exhibitions—La Nouvelle-Mode.

THE EGYPTIANS' SECRET.

The Egyptians of Pharoah's time were a wonderful people. The pyramids, for instance, put our modern buildings to shame. Where such huge blocks of stone were carved—how they were moved and put in place—are mysteries to modern minds.

The Egyptians were skilled physicians, too. We know that they used fruit juices in treating many diseases. Some years ago, a physician in Ottawa discovered a method of combining the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes, by which the most remarkable results have been obtained.

Whether "Fruit-a-tives" (these combined fruit juices in tablet form) are a re-discovery of the prescriptions of the ancient Egyptians, will probably never be known.

Certainly, the ancients never had a more effective remedy than "Fruit-a-tives" for all Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bowel Troubles. "Fruit-a-tives" are sold by dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c—or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

BOYS SENT BACK TO THEIR PARENTS

There are twelve children at the Children's Aid Society's home at the present time. Two little boys who were kept at the Shelter during the illness of their mother have been sent back to their parents.

"WEBBED" HAND TO BE OPERATED ON

The little boy from Havelock at the Children's Shelter, who has a "webbed" hand will be operated on at one of the city hospitals in a few days. The second, third and little fingers of one hand are webbed together and an operation will be necessary to remove the defect.

Dr. Leue, forester of the city park department in Chicago, says butterflies can be hypnotized and tamed by breathing gently on the nose of the insect.

At Marcus Hook, Pa. 630 persons on the steamship Merion, from Liverpool, will be vaccinated because two steerage passengers have smallpox.

LENTEN SERMON AT ST. JOHN'S

Rev. R. Seaborn, M.A., of Toronto, was the speaker at St. John's church last night. He based his sermon on the text;—"The fruit of the spirit joy," which passage may be found in St. Paul's epistle to the Galatians, 22, 5.

The speaker stated that while many people think the end of religion is penitence, contrition and conviction of sin, the great result of religion is joy. Jesus Christ for the joy that was before him endured the cross. He realized that his manifold sufferings ultimately meant joy to the world. St. Paul, who suffered many trials and persecutions after taking service for Christ, must have recognized that true religion produces joy when he wrote while in prison, "Rejoice in the Lord Always." There is, said the speaker, a five-fold joy I would like every Christian to possess—the joy of forgiveness; of companionship; of service; of growth and of strength. It is the Holy Spirit that brings us forgiveness and companionship, fills us with power for and joy of service, and enables us to grow strong in Christ's love and work. Therefore, the preacher concluded, let each Christian's prayer be "Come Holy Ghost my soul inspire; bring to my poor heart the five-fold joy that should be mine and strengthen me to fight against sin and the devil, and win a great ivctory in the service of Jesus Christ."

A sale of homemade bread, cake and candy etc., will be held at S. S. hall of St. Paul's Church on Friday, April 2nd, from 4 to 6 o'clock. Afternoon tea will be served.

CLOCK WILL REMAIN IN DARKNESS

City Timepiece Over Market Hall Will Not be Lighted at Present

The city clock over the market building will not have its face lighted for the present. Ald. McIntyre has been agitating for illuminating the time piece, but the Property Committee is somewhat shy of cash, and nothing will be done for the present. Ald. McIntyre read a letter from a local electrician at the meeting of the Property Committee last night stating that he considered the clock could be properly lighted by having three hood reflectors placed on each dial. This would cost about $75. The cost per lamp per year would be about $30.

It was decided to leave the matter over for a month, as the committee may not have the money to spend on it this year. In a month, however, the chairman will have a better idea of the finances.

OBITUARY

MRS. ISABELLA THORN

Mrs. Isabella Thorne, wife of Mr. Thos. Thorne, 107 Nassau street, died on Saturday at the age of 61 years. Deceased had lived in Toronto for the past forty years. She was a member of Broadway Methodist Tabernacle. Mrs. Thorne's maiden name was Isabella Hanna. She leaves her husband and six sons—Thomas, Henry, Frederick, William, Robert and Walter. The funeral took place this afternoon from the above address to Mount Pleasant cemetery. — Toronto Telegram.

RESULTS OF THE EUCHRE CONTEST

The euchre contest at the Young Conservative Club rooms last night was largely attended, and an enjoyable time was spent by all. The contest lasted about two hours, during which the players moved around the tables at a lively rate, and when the excitement was over the following winners were announced: Mr. Harry Graham won first prize, which was a pipe; Mr. H. Rose secured the box of cigars for second prize, and Mr. Jos. Detcher won the third prize, which was a tin of tobacco. The boobie prize was won by Mr. George Powell.

SHOULD MEET WITH SUCCESS

In another column will be found the advertisement of Mr. R. G. Sturgeon, late of the firm of Hutchinson & Sturgeon, who is opening up business on his own account. He is arranging for premises, and will be ready in a few days to take orders. Plumbing, heating and ventilating will be Mr. Sturgeon's line, and he should secure a large share of the public patronage, as he has had twenty-two years experience in this work. Mr. Sturgeon was one of the instigators of the plumbing by-law and is recognized as one of the best authorities on heating in the Dominion.

REPORT OF THE CONVENTION OF THE ONTARIO BRANCH OF DOMINION ALLIANCE

Interesting Report of Miss Mabel Moore Who was a Delegate from this City to the Convention Held in Toronto—Resolution to Government.

At George street Methodist Sunday school last Sunday a report was read by Miss Mabel Moore, who recently attended the convention of the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Temperance Alliance, held in Toronto. The report, which will be very interesting to local temperance people, was as follows:

The convention of the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance met in Toronto in the Elm street Methodist church, on Wednesday and Thursday, March 3rd and 4th.

At 9.45 a.m., after registration of delegates, Mr. Jos. Gibson, president of the Alliance, called the convention to order, and all sang a verse of "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," followed by prayer by Rev. Dr. Ockley, of Barrie.

Rev. C. W. Watch, of Huntsville, appointed secretary, and F. W. Duggan assistant secretary of the convention.

The Business Committee was then appointed The secretary, Mr. Ben. H. Spence, read the resolution to be presented to the government, as follows: "That we request the government forthwith to introduce such legislation as will abolish the bar-room, the treating system, and drinking clubs, and will impose on the liquor traffic such further restrictions as will most effectively curtail its operations and remedy its evils.

"That in the judgment of this convention the present requirement for the three-fifths vote to carry the local option by-law is contrary to justice fair play, and the spirit of our institutions, and deprives municipalities of a right long enjoyed; and that this provision of the Liquor Act must be at once repealed."

Mr. Jos. Gibson, president of the Alliance, Rev. T. Beverly Smith, of West Toronto, and Mr. J. A. Austin, of Parkdale, were appointed to be the speakers representing the Alliance to the government.

The deputation from the convention was received at the Parliament Buildings at 11 o'clock by Sir Jas. P. Whitney, and Hon W. J. Hanna, and the resolutions read.

Mr. J. A. Austin spoke in complimentary terms of the way the government enforced the liquor laws; also of the desire of the convention to have the three-fifths clause repealed, as it was not found necessary for the permanence of local option, as Hon. W. J. Hanna had claimed was its object. The enforcement of the law had made it permanent.

Rev. T. Beverly Smith, Anglican clergyman, of West Toronto, spoke for the abolition of the bar-room, telling how local option had proved itself at West Toronto. In speaking of the by-law for the reduction of Toronto licenses, he said, now that it was carried, everyone wanted to cut off the bar nearest his own residence. He spoke of the temptation of club drinking under the garb of respectability to young men who would not drink in the open bar.

Mr. Gibson then spoke of the restraint upon temperance work, caused by the three-fifths requirement, and of the progress local option is making in the United States, where a majority vote was sufficient to bring it into force.

Sir James P. Whitney then replied, giving no promises, merely saying that the government would continue so to act as to diminish the evils of the liquor traffic as they had done in the past.

Hon. W. J. Hanna also made a short speech.

The convention re-opened at two o'clock with prayer by Rev. T. M. Campbell, of Toronto.

The report of the Business Committee was then read by the secretary and approved

Mr. Alex. Mills first vice-president of the Alliance, took the chair, and the president, Mr. Jos. Gibson, delivered his annual address. He spoke of the Pioneer as being a beautiful clean and up-to-date paper, which gives account of the progress in temperance work all over the Dominion. He also spoke of the good work done by the secretary, Ben. H. Spence, and the field secretary, Wm. Kettlewell. He concluded by saying it was a luxury to live in these days with the air charged with moral activity, and great opportunity for doing real service. Are we going to be worthy of these privileges?

Mr. Jas. Hales then brought word from Osgoode Hall that Chief Justice Meredith had refused to quash the license reduction by-law.

The question of local option work was then dealt with in an address by Mr. C. A. Fleming, of Owen Sound.

Mr. Fleming said the first thing to do for a local option campaign was to get a good early start and keep steady working till the end of the campaign. He said everyone could work, men, women, boys and girls, laymen and press, and you must use and also write all these elements. In Owen Sound they had come through a very strenuous campaign, and had won They had for their motto: "Work as if everything depended on work, and pray as if everything depended on prayer." He said "Get men to work who have the interest of the country at heart." A very necessary thing is to put money by to carry on the campaign. They had spent $1,500 in the Owen Sound campaign

A few words on how to do it:

Take good care of the voters' list. If the assessors are against you you will have to be doubly prepared. If you intend to give your children property do it at once, so they will have a chance to vote but when so transferring property keep a life interest so as to be certain of preserving your own vote. Give the young woman as good chance as the young men. He said several young women in Owen Sound bought property so as to obtain a vote. Do not leave transferring the property too late. The first committee is the voters' list committee and it should work all through the year and should have one for every polling division. Do not put wooden men on these committees, but good. true and steady men. As soon as the voters' list is published go over it to see if any one person has moved in and bought or rented property. Hunt up every vote to the last minute. The press is a very important factor, especially so if they are in sympathy with the movement. Take a space in the paper and pay for it till your votes are polled.

Have a platform committee to arrange good meetings and good speakers; a literature committee to distribute literature during the year. During the last 14 months see that something of temperance nature reaches every home, every day.

Transportation Committee

Do not hire any rigs or the liquor party will void your election on that ground. There will be plenty of volunteer rigs. In Owen Sound they had far more rigs than they could use. Insert a little advertisement in the paper for the farmers to come in and help you out. Mr. Fleming told of one woman who drove in seven miles with her horse and then got a man to drive it for her. Mr. Fleming was in favor of the 25 per cent petition, for those who sign it will likely stand with it when vote day comes. Try and convince the people if they vote for the bar it is as much their bar as the man who runs it.

Appoint good scrutineers and many of them and have them well drilled so as to guard the interests of temperance voters and to be of service to women voters. Men who will not be afraid to say they want a certain man sworn.

Owen Sound had three scrutineers on the outside to protect men and women. These scrutineers should stay right by the job till every poll is counted and until the official records are signed and sealed. Scrutineers on both sides have a right to see on both sides.

What we may expect from the other side:

1—Attempt to pad voters lists.

2—Attempt to scare or coerce the papers.

3—Do not let them get men for a citizens' committee.

4—They will go out on the still hunt.

5—Do not pay any attention to their paid canvassers

6—They may ask you to hold joint meetings.

7—Do not enter into any argument with them. Hold your own meetings. They will not hold a meeting till they are good and angry and it will be a good one. Do not forget your motto, "Work as if—"

Rev M. C. McLean of Ingersoll then spoke along the same lines as Mr. Fleming. He said in regard to the petition to the council—in Ingersoll—the reporters got it and published the names As a result the liquor men dealt hard with the business men who had signed it. He advised trying to get the petition filled without calling on the business men to sign it.

The report of the business committee was read by W. F. Lawrence, giving the names of the delegates appointed on the different committees All of these committees met at eight o'clock Wednesday evening.

The session opened at 9 am. on Thursday morning by singing "Hold the Fort" and prayer by Mr H. P. Moore.

The report from the Legislation committee was then read by Mr Jas Hales and was as follows:

That this convention deeply regrets the failure of the Government in replying yesterday to our deputation to give any assurance of intention to abandon the three-fifths requirement which has been fully shown to be entirely unnecessary to secure either enforcement or permanence of local option bylaws and this convention calls on the members of the Legislature friendly to our cause to take steps to secure the introduction and adoption of a bill repealing that measure, which is contrary to principles of justice and equality and unfairly advantageous to the liquor traffic."

Mr. Joseph Gibson gave a short address. Speaking of the result of the deputation to the Government, he said the Premier was entitled to all respect, but was not the President of the Temperance Alliance entitled to the same. He said he would rather be president of the temperance body, working to improve the morals of the country than to be head of the provincial government, and responsible for some of the evils now extant. In regard to Mr. Whitney's statement regarding the result of the last provincial election he said he did not believe the temperance cause was any issue in the last election as Mr. Whitney tried to make out. He said thereafter he would not give a shadow of support to any man who does not do what is right.

We then listened to a very excellent address by Rev Jos Oliver, of Sarnia, who went to England last year at request of the Temperance Alliance to tell of the work done in Canada on temperance lines. He said the Motherland had a long way to come before she could stand equal to the United States in this matter. The premier said he would prefer the Old Land as a model for legislation rather than the United States In London they consume six gallons per head annually and in New York two gallons per head. Can he see no difference?

Mr. Jos. Gibson, who was always making a laugh by his remarks said, "If he had to drink the difference he would know."

John Burns said the laboring classes spent $500,000,000 for liquor. This means $90 per family and $20 per head. The people are only taxed $15 per head, for education, naval protection, military organization, etc. Is this where we are directed to look for legislation. An inspection made of 23 public houses showed in 4 days 40,000 women entered for drink, and with these 10,000 children under 16 years. Six thousand of these women came out under the influence of liquor. They have not yet come to the matter of Sunday closing nor of preventing children under 14 from entering the bar-rooms. They have no uniform system of closing and no uniform law covering England itself. Some bars are open for a certain period on Sunday, some for another. Travellers in fact any one who says he comes four or five miles, can get liquor at any time. The licenses in England are free-hold and cannot be cut off without compensation. Mr. Asquith said a majority vote would be quite sufficient to cut off licenses voted, as a privilege. This is the condition on this continent so we are in perfect harmony with the English situation in asking to have the three-fifths clause removed. Mr. Oliver commended the Government's efforts towards law enforcement. They said for years previously, "Put us in power and we will enforce the law." They have lived up to this. Still they should not compliment themselves or overestimate its import. It was only the fulfilment of a promise. In spite of what has been done the goal is a long distance in the future. The Alliance has made an annual pilgrimage to the Government. Is this going to last? Are we going for an annual lecture? asked Mr. Oliver. If we would get to work and organize more thoroughly the thought and energy of the country, it would serve us better. In Manitoba they got tired and acted. Then the party came to the temperance people and said they were only fooling and gave them more than they asked for. The same policy might be pursued in Ontario with advantage.

The Business Committee then read their 2nd report, which was adopted.

The convention then resumed its discussion on the report of the Legislation Committee.

We had two short addresses first by Dr. Carman, 2nd by Rev. Dr. Shearer secretary of the Moral Reform Department of the Presbyterian Church.

Mr T. S. Spence said the Premier was not warranted in drawing the inference that the three-fifths requirement was endorsed by the electorate from the result of the recent contest. Mr. Hanna had definitely stated that if we could show that the three-fifths majority was not necessary for permanence of local option it would be the duty of the Legislature to reconsider the clause. Mr. Carter of Guelph, pleaded for more earnestness on the part of temperance people and asked that they be willing to hold to their principles even at the loss of political prestige.

The report of the Constitution Committee was read by Mr. F. S. Spence and adopted.

The second report of the Legislative Committee by Mr. Jas. Hales.

A deputation from the Canadian Suffrage Association was then given 20 minutes. Addresses were given by Dr. Margaret Gordon Dr. Stowe-Gullen President of the Canadian Suffrage Association, and Mrs. Craig, of New York City, chairman of the Anti-Saloon League. They asked that they might have the help of the convention. They were going up as a deputation to the Government to speak for their rights. They felt sure that if women were given the privilege to vote as men that local option would carry.

The convention then adjourned.

The session re-opened at 2 o'clock by singing "Rescue the Perishing." Prayer by Mr. Carter of Guelph.

Rev Geo. Washington presented the report of the Law Enforcement Committee, which was adopted clause by clause.

Rev S. J. Dobson presented the report of the Campaign which was adopted as read.

The report of the Resolution Committee was read by Rev. S. L. W. Horton of Tottenham. Three of the resolutions were:—That we recommend temperance people whenever and wherever it is convenient to patronize such hotels and houses of entertainment as are not licensed to keep or sell intoxicating liquors and we would further recommend that churches and temperance organizations everywhere would give this important matter due consideration and that the secretary of the Alliance furnish through the Pioneer previous to the next convention a list of temperance hotels in the city of Toronto conveniently situated, at which delegates to the convention may find entertainment.

That we ask the Government to reduce the hours of sale so that liquor may not be sold before eight o'clock in the morning and after 7 o'clock in the evening of every day of lawful sale, and that it be reported how this request was received as soon as possible. The following resolution was brought forward by J. K. McLennan seconded by Mr. Charles Cann;—

"That this convention hereby requests the Government to amend the Liquor Act as follows;—That wherever no license exists and in municipalities where local option is in force no person shall keep or give liquor to anyone excepting in his or her own private dwelling, to members of his or her own family not including guests or employees."

The Finance Committee's report Treasurer's and Nominating Committee's reports were read and adopted. Then subscriptions were taken

The Hon. Seaborn Wright of Rome, Georgia, who is one of the leaders of temperance work in the South was then introduced.

He said Mr. Whitney was right in a measure when he said they did not desire to look across the border for legislation for we have many bad things in the U.S. and one of them is the licensing of saloons. But they are getting rid of this evil. Within five months great provinces had abolished saloons Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi North Carolina and Tennessee. You may start at the Atlantic and go two-thirds of the way across the continent and not put your foot in a state where there is one open saloon. Crime had decreased 70 per cent. since prohibition came in. These provinces used to spend annuall $300,000,000 for liquor. They paid the Federal Government $30,000,000 in revenue tax Both these are cut out. The people are better fed and clothed and they have built homes for themselves that they never would have had before.

After announcement fo the evening meeting the session closed by benediction by Rev. S. Bond. The evening session opened by singing three verses of "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" and prayer.

Mr. Ben. H. Spence then explained a number of charts that were at the front. Address by Hon. Seaborn Wright.

Mr. Wright said they had tried every solution of this great problem, the curse of liquor and had advocated every system. At one time they advocated high license. Some paid as high as $5,000 and this to the municipality alone above federal, state or county fees. The idea was to drive out the dives and make it respectable. He said it was a failure wherever it was tried. When you try to correct an evil and leave the cause untouched you are bound to have failure.

In Atlanta they established a license

SPORTING NEWS

FRED SIMPSON AND APPLEBY WILL RUN ON GOOD FRIDAY

Toronto, March 31.—It is do or die with a vengeance for Fred Simpson, the Ojibway Thunderbolt, on Good Friday. The Indian Marathoner gets a chance to retrieve the laurels he lost to "A. Shrubb, world's champion," a couple of weeks ago by trimming Fred Appleby, Shrubb's conqueror, in the first outdoor race of the Canadian season.

Appleby beat Shrubbb and Shrubb defeated Simpson.

Where do you figure the Indian?

Nowhere on that bald proposition, but stand your tracks and back up a bit. Appleby defeated Shrubb at 15 miles. Shrubb cleaned Simpson up at 12 miles, and Simpson beat Appleby in the Olympic Marathon.

Simpson and Appleby meet at 20 miles.

Simpson is a Marathoner—a 20 and 26-mile man. Appleby is a 15-mile man.

SIMPSON'S RACE.

As far as race conditions, Simpson seems to have Appleby on the hip. The race is right at the redman's best distance—the Hamilton Herald distance, where he ran second twice in near record time.

He can have no excuses this time if he loses.

"I'm not whining much about the Shrubb-Simpson race result," said Tom Eck, the Indian's hadnler, "but Simpson was suffering from a severe cold, and I wanted a week's postponement. If I had got that there would have been a real race, but Simpson would have been second just the same. Now I have my man at his own distance. If Appleby beats him I'll have no excuses unless he throws a splint or the club house falls on him during the race. I recognize that the Englishman is the best man in the world at 15 miles, but I think at 20 he will be there, and there strong.

THE NEGOTIATIONS.

Appleby was decided upon.

Shrubb, as his opponent, they could not get, for Shrubb is tied up to Tom Longboat for a 15-mile race right after the big Marathon Saturday, and until Alfie gets that he'll have Indian nightmares and has not time for anyone else.

Hans Holmer tumbled into the money market, and the Bluenose was offered the job.

HOLMER REFUSES.

"I'm not the man," said Holmer, "I'm not in shape yet. I'll run 10 miles in a 20-mile relay," and Hans proceeded to estimate himself worth Rosedale grounds and the ball club as an attraction.

Then came John D. Marsh, the Manitoba veteran, who defeated Shrubb at Winnipeg a year ago. John D. has been around Michigan cleaning up "ganders" and John D.'s "a No. 1 hard" muscles just ached for a chance at Longboat, Appleby, Shrubb, et al.

Fact is, John D. was so anxious for a crack at the top notchers that he would have contracted to run from Detroit to Toronto the week of the race, and then meet anybody, anywhere at any distance.

John D.'s chances against Appleby did not look too good, so Simpson was chosen as the best man.

Tom Eck jumped at such a chance, for his Ojibway to retrieve himself, so he signed up in a hurry.

BASEBALL

The Black Tourist Colored Baseball Club, professionals, will play through Ontario in May, having booked games at Wallaceburg, Thamesville, St. Thomas, Hamilton and other cities.

Sergt. Arthur Bernie, of the R. C. H.A., the star centre of the 14th Regiment team, will pitch for the Y.I.C.B. A. team in the City Baseball League during the coming season. Last year the versatile Frenchman pitched for and captained the R.C.H.A. team, and his slab work made a hit with the fans, although his support was on the blink. With the fast Irish infield Bernier should be one of the most effective pitchers of the league. — Kingston Standard.

A gentleman in town, who does not want his name divulged, has received word from Peterborough, asking what the prospects are for a local team entering the Midland League, in case that organisation was re-formed this year again.

The writer stated that a Peterborough team would enter if the League was placed on a strictly amateur basis and with a residence rule. The name of the Peterborough team is to be kept dark as yet. A lot is dependent on Lindsay whether the league is kept alive or not.

Lindsay wants a Midland League team this year and wants to see that organization flourish. You bet we can put a good amateur team in and things may pan out nicely yet.

Just wait and see!—Lindsay Warder.

Local followers of the football game are reminded of the meeting to be held to-night in the Y.M.C.A. to discuss the prospects for a team this year. A good attendance is asked for as there is lots of good players in the city, and a good team could be secured to represent Peterborough in the league.

RUNNING

On Thursday night at 8 p.m. there will be a meeting at 27 Lafayette Av. to form a cross country harrier club which will include some of Peterborough's best athletes in the running game. It is the intention of the club to hold paper chases on Saturdays and two runs weekly, to encourage running and athletes. Everybody welcome.

WINNERS AT THE BELMONT CLUB

There was some good sport furnished at the Belmont Club's pool tournament last night by the close and exciting games played by the cue artists who held the boards. The winners last night were Messrs. H. Huffman, E. Toney, B. Miller and W. S. Rose

WRESTLING

SLAP HIM ON THE BACK FRITZ

Mohl and Rogers are still putting on their hippodrome stunts. The clipping from the Hamilton Spectator given below will show this;

Great interest is being taken in the big wrestling match to be held here on Friday night at the Grand opera house, when Yankee Rogers, one of the best heavyweights in America will stack up against Fritz Mohl the German champion. Mohl's ability is well known in Hamilton and Yankee Rogers has a reputation almost equal to that of Gotch. In fact, at the present time Rogers is thought a great deal more of than many of the big fellows who are eager for the world's title, and his ability makes him no mean opponent for any o fthe big champs. His bout last week with Hassan Abdallah which was declared off owing to injuries to Rogers, after the pair had wrestled for the better part of an hour, with honors even, proves conclusively that Yankee is a grappler of no mean ability. Abdallah has been matched to wrestle Yussiff Mahmout, who is to hook up with Gotch in the near future in a championship contest. The two Turks will meet in Buffalo tomorrow evening, and as evidence of Abdallah's ability, Mahmout refuses to consider a handicap bout with him at all with the result that the bout tomorrow night will be a straight two out of three falls. The winner of the Mohl-Rogers bout will be given a match with Abdullah and both are very eager to secure this plum.

GOTCH PREPARING.

Chicago. April 1.—Frank Gotch, champion wrestler, will be back in the city to-night to start active training for his match here with Yussiff Mahmout. He has promised the Empire Athletic Club, which is offering a purse of $10,000 for the meeting, that he will begin his final preparations at the Illinois Athletic Club not later than to-morrow afternoon.

Gotch will have Emil Klank as his steady training helper, and will pick up what other men he needs after he gets to Chicago. He trained at the Illinois Athletic Club for his match a year ago with Hackenschmidt, and feels not only at home there, but regards the big structure as extremely lucky.

The champion must take off at least fifteen pounds before he will be absolutely right for the Turk. He weighed 215 pounds when he wrestled De Rouen, the French giant, in Kansas City on Thursday night, and in order to have all of his oldtime speed he must get down close to the 200-pound notch.

The Turk will continue to do his training at the Chicago Athletic Association, only a block away from Gotch's quarters. As yet the men have never met face to face, but the Turk has seen Gotch wrestle.

THINKS TURK HAS CHANCE

Dr. Gadbois, the Montreal wrestling expert, thinks Yussiff Mahmout stands a good chance to beat Gotch on April 14. "The Turk is tremendously strong in the legs," says the doctor, "an dif he gets a good scissors hold it will go hard with the champion. The Turk on the other hand, faces the danger of Gotch's famous toe hold."

ATHLETICS

A big athletic event will be pulled off at Lindsay street rink some time next week, before roller skating comes on. The programme will consist of a marathon race, relay races, vaulting, etc. The best athletes in Lindsay and the surrounding district will be present and a big time is expected. Further announcements will be made alter.

Six young men of the town intend walking to Peterborough on Good Friday in an effort to cover the distance —about 26 miles—in six hours. Last year Arthur Moore walked to the Electric City in eight hours. The walkers will leave the corner of Kent and Lindsay streets at seven o'clock in the morning—Lindsay Post.

LACROSSE

All those who are interested in lacrosse and who would like to see a first-class team put in the field this season, will kindly meet at the Crown Inn Hotel this evening at 8 o'clock. As the C.L.A. convention is only one week away, matters regarding the entering of a team will come up for discussion. A large attendance is requested.

NINE POSTMEN NOW ON DUTY

Peterborough now has nine postmen an additional one being put on a few days ago on account of the twice a day delivery in Ashburnham

LULU GLASER COMING HERE

"Mlle Mischief" at the Grand Opera House Next Wednesday Night

A treat is in store for Peterborough theatre-goers. On Wednesday night of next week, Lulu Glaser in "Mlle. Mischief" will appear at the Grand Opera House and the audience should be the largest of the season. Mr J. J. Turner, sr. was in Toronto yesterday and completed arrangements for the appearance of the famous operatic star in this city.

"Mlle. Mischief" tells the adventures, amusing and embarrassing, of a young woman, who, to win a wager disguises herself in military uniform and spends twenty-four hours in a recruiting barracks. The entire original New York cast, which supported Miss Glaser during her long engagement of twenty weeks in that city and who will be seen in the production of "Mlle Mischief" here includes Alexander Clarke, William Rosell, W P Carleton, Roy Atwell, Robert Roderick, Jome Intropodi, Ada Henry, Gertrude Darrell, Ethel Intropodi, together with a handsome chorus.

APRIL FOOL

All Fool's Day is with us again. This time-honored day is widely observed more especially in Germany and England and it is a time for all sorts of pranks and practical jokes some of them of the most extravagant nature.

In Canada and the United States where the day is known as "April Fool" practical witticisms are in order on April 1st and the children especially enjoy many hearty laughs over the jokes at the expense of their playmates and not unfrequently at the expense of their elders who are mostly in an indulgent mood on the first day of the month of showers.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The public anticipates a treat in the stereopticon lecture to be given to-morrow evening at Y.W.C.A. by Prof. A. H. Young of Trinity University. His subject is the painting of Michael Angelo in the Sistine Chapel and the lecture will be illustrated by unusually fine slides. The story of the artist's life is most fascinating. Unable to obtain financial aid being unknown, the young sculptor with tireless energy, chiselled from the quarry with his own hands the materials for his work. The lecturer will give a short account of the artist's life and will show many beautiful pictures including the wonderful picture of "The Last Judgment—the Trust." Prof. Young should be received by a large number in the Y.W.C.A. gymnasium hall.

In the White Salmon Valley, Wash. W A. Davidson dug up a parsnip which measured five feet, ten inches from the crown to the end of the tap-root.

A DEADLY CONTEST.

Tragic Climax of a Bicycle Race in Australia.

One of the most singular events in the annals of athletics occurred a few years ago at Sydney, Australia. The occasion was a great electric light bicycle race, and the attendance was not less than 10,000 people. There were fifty entries, two of whom, James Somerville and Percy Cliff, were not only professional rivals, but deadly enemies. Both were considered expert riders.

From the start of the race Somerville led, with Cliff a close second. Somerville kept the lead throughout and came into the last lap with Cliff only a few feet behind him. When about twenty-five yards from the finish Somerville put on a terrific burst of speed and drew away from his rival. Suddenly at this point his grip on the handle bar relaxed, and he fell forward. The machine, however, under the tremendous impulse it had received, raced ahead like an arrow, the rider hanging limply over the handle bar.

Four yards from the tape the machine slowed down a little. At this point the front wheel of Cliff's machine struck the hind wheel of Somerville's, sending both wheel and rider across the tape. Somerville won the race, but he was dead several seconds before he crossed the tape.

ANCIENT DOCTORS.

Some of the Things They Knew Twelve Hundred Years Ago.

The Russian Academy of Medicine after examining a Tibetan "Handbook of Medicine," first published 1,200 years ago, acknowledges that it contains many truths discovered or rediscovered by modern physicians. Here are some extracts from the ancient volume:

"Number of bones in the human body, 300; number of nerves, 99; number of pores, 11,000,000.

"The heart is the king of the organs and the staff of life. The lungs embrace it as a mother does her child. Sicknesses are due to man's malice, ignorance and inability to curb the passions, for these things interfere with the proper nourishment of the human organs. All unkind thoughts react upon the heart and liver."

The methods for ascertaining the state of a person's health were very similar to those methods employed today—looking at the tongue, feeling the pulse, etc. Vegetable medicines are advocated; also baths, compresses, massage, bloodletting, etc. Fines were imposed upon physicians who did not keep their instruments clean.

The Sight of the Pigeon.

A friend of mine ridicules the idea that in the carrier pigeon it can be sight which guides it on its homeward trail. But my friend should really study the mechanism of the eye of the bird before he skepticizes. I am sure that from heights at which it is itself invisible the falcon can note its prey, and its eye is simply a self adjusting telescope. The careful dissection of the eye of the bird of prey is an absolute revelation as to creative ingenuity.—Dr. Dabbs in Fry's London Magazine.

Dean Swift's Retort.

A young advocate said to Dean Swift, "Supposing, doctor, that the parsons and the devil should litigate a cause, which party would you think would gain it?" "The devil, no doubt," was the dean's reply, "as he would have all the lawyers on his side."

The Aristocrats.

"Are there degrees of rank in the servants' hall?"

"To be sure. Maids who have charge of dogs won't associate with maids who look after children."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Honesty is the best policy, although it may have the deferred dividend clause attachment.—Judge.

LABRADOR MOSQUITOES.

Terrible Pest to Travelers and Natives In the Northland.

No account of travel in Labrador can be complete without some mention of the terrible pest of mosquitoes. These were always present in immense swarms from the beginning of our trip to the end, and sometimes they made life almost unbearable.

Nothing could be heard but their buzzing. Whenever we attempted to eat they were down our throats and in our eyes and faces, and in spite of our head nets and fly dope we were always badly bitten. The natives seemed to mind them almost as much as we did, their remedy being rancid seal oil. I am satisfied that were one so unfortunate as to be caught out at night without protection he would be either crazy or dead by morning.

Our tents were provided with a fine mesh bobbinet inner tent, but some would always find their way inside or come up from the ground. At times our light so attracted them we went outside to see if it were not raining, for the constant tapping of the mosquitoes against the canvas sounded so exactly like rain that it was impossible to tell the difference.

On many nights I had to give up the observation of stars for latitude and longitude because a candle could not be kept lit long enough to adjust the artificial horizon. We unfortunately had no chimney, and the mosquitoes swarmed so thickly that without this protection the flame was quickly smothered. There were but few nights cool enough to afford us any relief. We found that it required a temperature within a few degrees of actual freezing to subdue them.—Forest and Stream.

STARCHED CLOTHES.

The Fashion Was Started In England by Queen Elizabeth.

The practice of starching linen is at least 400 years old. It is said to have originated under Queen Elizabeth. Its inventor was a Dutchwoman, the wife of a Mr. Guilheem, who was driver at the royal court. Mrs. Guilheem understood so well how to improve a small deficiency in the bust of her royal mistress by means of stiffened collars, frills and laces that Elizabeth overwhelmed her with favors and privileges and finally elevated her to the rank of chief inspectress of the court linen.

The fashion introduced by the queen was of course soon followed by all the women of rank. The fad for this new "art" finally degenerated into a veritable mania for starching, ironing, plaiting, etc. Later special "professors" of the art of starching established themselves in London, among whom a Flemish woman of the name of Dinghen van der Plasse seems to have occupied the highest rank. Those privileged to be initiated by her in the art had to pay no less than £5 for a lesson.

Later they began to add blue color to the starch. Queen Elizabeth, who was very anxious about her questionable beauty, found that the addition of blue gave a green hue to her complexion. She therefore prohibited her subjects wearing any other than pure white starched linen, claiming that blue washed linen was injurious to health. But fashion proved superior even to "good Queen Bess." They continued merrily to use blue starch, though one woman after the other had to go to prison for transgressing the "blue law."—Boston Post.

USING Zam-Buk on a cut or scratch is insuring yourself against the danger of blood-poisoning, festering, or inflammation. As soon as you sustain an injury—a scratch from barbed wire, a cut, a burn, a bruise put on a little Zam-Buk, and then don't worry! Zam-Buk kills the disease germs, which, entering wounds, set up festering, etc. Not only so, but Zam-Buk stimulates the cells to rapid action, and in this way builds up healthy skin very quickly; also, it eases pain and smarting. You have ease, insurance against blood-poisoning, and rapid healing—only Zam-Buk combines the three! Try it!

Mr. Alf. Hy. Orth, of Shipley (Ont.), says:—"While at work recently I had the misfortune to run a rusty wire nail under my thumb nail, to the depth of about one and a half inches. The pain was terrible, and what I feared was that the nail, being so dirty and rusty, would set up festering and blood-poisoning. I knew, from previous experience, how good Zam-Buk was, so I cleaned the wound, melted a little of the balm, and ran it into the wound. The result was wonderful. It soothed the pain, and the thumb actually did not swell. Zam-Buk kept away all inflammation. I was able to go on with my work all the time, and in a few days the thumb was as good as ever."

Zam-Buk cures cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, piles, festering sores, ulcers, scalds, blood-poisoning, eczema, varicose ulcers, prairie itch, ringworm, scalp-sores, bad leg, diseased ankles, and all other skin diseases and injuries. Rubbed well into the parts affected, it cures neuralgia, rheumatism, and sciatica. All Druggists and Stores sell at 50c. box, three for $1.25, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

PROPOSITION TO SELL PROPERTY TO RESIDENTS

Is Being Considered by Property Committee—Meeting Held Last Night—Other Matters Dealt With.

At a meeting of the Property Committee last night several important matters were dealt with. Those present were: Ald. Bradburn, chairman; Mayor Rush, and Ald. Hicks and McIntyre.

One important matter taken up was the sale of several strips of land adjoining the street which are of little use to the city, but which are valuable to residents. This will be sold if the committee can get their recommendation through the council.

TO SELL LAND.

Chairman Ald. Bradburn reported that Architect Blackwell would furnish the committee with the specifications for the new isolation hospital. While these are being prepared the committee will visit the Hilliard farm and select a site for the building.

Ald. Bradburn said the city owned a part of a lot on Aylmer street, 40x80 feet, which was purchased for the opening of Aylmer street south. The property was bought from McManon. A real estate dealer offered to purchase it and asked the committee to place a price on it.

The committee thought it would be well to sell it if a reasonable price could be secured. The committee will therefore recommend the council to authorize the committee to sell.

The committee also received offers for a strip of land adjourning Mr. G. H. Savany's property at 235 Wescott street. The offer was for $100.

Mr. W. S. Robinson offered $100 for the strip adjoining his property.

It was decided that both strips be sold at the price offered.

The committee also asked the council for authority to sell the three-cornered lot on Murray street, near Stewart, which has been used for piling the old wooden walks on.

REPAIRS TO ROOF.

A communication was received from Engineer Hay, stating that the roof on the building presented to the city by the Nicholls estate, opposite the city buildings, was leaking now, and he recommended that it be repaired at once.

The committee will ask the council for authority to have the roof repaired.

REFUSE GROUND.

Ald. Bradburn brought up the matter of the refuse ground for the next year. The present agreement expires the 30th of April, and something must be done. The city pays $400 a year now.

The chairman stated that he saw the lot Mr. Stevens offered. There are about four and a half acres in it, and he asks $800, and states he could get a man to work the ground and look after the trenches if the city did not charge any rent for it. If this could be made satisfactory it would pay for itself in two years.

The committee will look into the matter at once and see what can be done.

REHEARSAL OF LOVE AND HONOR

A rehearsal of "Love and Honor" will be held this evening at the rooms of the Alexandra Dramatic Club this evening. This will make the fourth practice of the company for the play which promises to be given an excellent presentation.

Love and the Mails.

By FRANKLIN TREMPER.

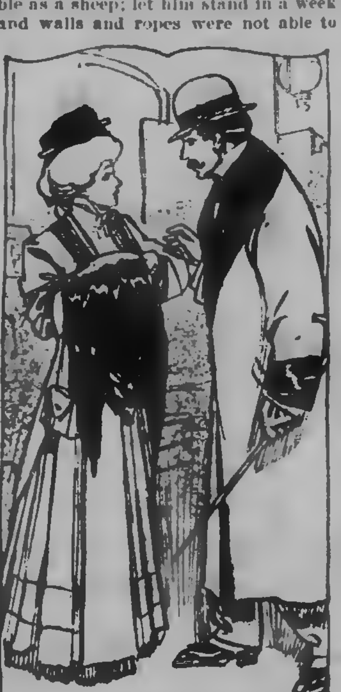
Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

Everybody said she would either give out or give up before the end of the year. It was hard work for an ablebodied man, and Madge was only a slim young girl, so frail that, according to Miss Winter, she looked as if a breath could blow her away. Her father had no business to let her do it.

Madge thought she knew her father and herself better than her neighbors did or possibly could. She listened when they advised, but she said nothing. Duty and necessity had laid out a certain way for her, and she must travel in it.

Her father had never been strong in health or successful in business, but that was no fault of his. After her mother's long illness and death he had found himself possessed of only $100, an old wagon and Pinto.

Pinto was a mustang, clean limbed, wiry and tough as a knot. Drive him fifteen miles a day and he was tractable as a sheep; let him stand in a week and walls and ropes were not able to restrain him. He was not worth $100 to sell, but he was worth ten times that to Madge, who loved him.



"NO USE," HE SAID, SHAKING HIS HEAD. "IT'S A GONER."

She and her father talked over their affairs seriously. Westmore did not offer a variety of paying employments.

"There's the rural free delivery routes," Madge said at last when she had thought of everything else. "Pinto would be a dandy for making time. Dad, why don't you try a route?"

"Why, I will!" cried her father, brightening. "I'll put in my bid this very day."

The bid was accepted. The pay was good, and Pinto could do his share in earning it. All that summer Mr. Hill rode faithfully. His pale face grew brown, and he began to cough less and eat more.

Late that fall something happened. It was at the time of the settled rains, which ought to have been snow, and the roads were hub deep in mud wherever wheels went. Madge's father came home one night wet and shivering. Next morning he was sick, and a doctor had to be called.

"A bad cold," he said. "You mustn't stir out of the house again until I tell you to."

"Don't worry about the route, dad," Madge said when the old doctor had gone. "I'll go in your place. You know I'm perfectly capable."

She would listen to no protest. She made up a good fire and put fuel within her father's reach. And she would try to return on time so that he need not worry about her.

This was the beginning of Madge's winter work. Her father did not improve. Each day she and Pinto went bravely to their task. The work was the only work at her hand to do and she must do it.

One day three miles out of Westmore, on the return of the old wagon, which had been valiantly laboring through the mud at Pinto's unwearied heels, it sagged and sank suddenly at one corner. Madge gave a little cry as she saw the rear axle was broken. What should she do? There was no house near, and it was bitter cold.

As she pondered she heard the sound of a team approaching behind her. Presently there came in sight a buggy drawn by a pair of lively bay horses, which a young man in a light fur overcoat drove.

"Hello! What's the matter there?" he called. Then as he saw Madge's worried girl's face under the man's cap he lifted his hat. "I beg your pardon," he said.

In an instant he was out of the buggy and beside Madge, bending to examine the broken axle. "No use," he said, shaking his head. "It's a goner. Are you the carrier?"

As Madge nodded in a discouraged way he added brightly: "Now, I'll tell you what we'll do. We'll just tack your rig on behind mine and unload your traps. That will make your wagon lighter, and it may travel to town all right. I'll drive you there and help you the best I can with the rest of your delivering."

Madge could scarcely thank him for gratitude. She had never seen the man before, but she thought she recognized the team as one that occasionally careered at full speed through the Westmore streets. She helped him transfer her traps and get Pinto in place. Then she climbed into his buggy and let him tuck her up under his fur robe.

"Pretty cold?" he said, peeping into her face. "Well, I'm going to get you home as quick as I can. By the way, I haven't introduced myself yet. My name is Don Cary."

"And mine is Madge Hill," said Madge. She was beginning to feel warm and reassured.

In spite of the delay it was only a few moments past 6 when Don drew his bays to a halt at Madge's own door.

"We've made excellent time," he said. "Now, Miss Madge, if you are willing, I'll just take your wagon round to Tom Wick's shop and leave it to be repaired. I don't think Tom has gone home yet."

"Oh, you're so good! You've taken so much trouble," Madge breathed, "I can't thank you enough."

Her father sighed with relief as she entered the house. He had a good fire, the table set and was frying meat and potatoes for supper. "You dear, brave little girl," he said remorsefully. "If I was only half a man"—

"Now, dad, you shan't say that!" Madge cried. Then she laughed softly. "I've had such an adventure." And she told him what had happened, adding, "Who is Don Cary, dad?"

"Why, he must be one of the Carys up Northfield way," her father said and could tell her nothing more.

Next day, when Madge went to get her wagon, she found it not only repaired, but paid for. After that she often found something for herself in the large box at the junction of the Westmore and Northfield roads—a box of candy, a new book or a pretty basket of figs or dates. There was no sign to tell whence they came, but Madge knew, and the knowledge made her heart wondrous light.

On Sunday morning in church Madge felt the influence of a strong gaze upon her and, turning, looked straight into Don Cary's eyes. After church he walked home with her.

She tried to thank him for all his kindness, but he pretended not to understand. After that he came several times to the church and each time accompanied her home. Miss Winter noticed him.

"Madge has got a beau sure enough," she thought, and she went straightway to interrogate Madge.

"I saw that young Cary walking home with you from church yesterday," she said. "He's the biggest catch up Northfield way. His father's worth $40,000, they say, and Don's his only child."

She was at home sitting rather sadly silent one Sunday afternoon when the doorbell rang. Madge went to answer the ring and saw Don Cary smiling and powdered white with snowflakes.

"Will you let me come in, snow and all?" he asked.

Madge was only too glad. She had forgotten everything at the sight of him.

"Well, your year will soon be up," Miss Winter said a month later, dropping in to chat with Madge, who was busily sewing. "You've held out wonderfully, and I never thought you could. Going to take it another year?"

"No," Madge answered gently.

"Well, I thought as much," Miss Winter said, squinting sharply at Madge's sewing.

"Madge Hill's going to be married soon, as her year is up as carrier," she announced that same afternoon to a group of her cronies. "She's going to marry Don Cary, and she's making her wedding clothes. It's a fine thing for Madge. But one thing beats me. How in the world did she ever get acquainted with him?"

But not one of the group could answer her that.

A fossil fish twenty-five feet in length was unearthed on a coal claim 6 miles from Lauder, Wyoming.

Very Helpful.

A provincial clergyman during his sermon caught sight of a member of his congregation wearing a very worried look. Suddenly the man's face brightened, and during the remainder of the service his appearance betokened a perfect freedom from care.

"I am pleased to think, William," remarked the clergyman after the service, "that my words helped you somewhat this morning. I noticed during my discourse that your face lit up and the sunshine of smiles chased the clouds of worry away. Now, what portion of my sermon appealed so strongly to you, eh?"

"To tell the truth, sir," replied William, "I wasn't payin' so much attention to your preachin' as I ought to hev done. I was balancin' up the week's cash in my mind and found myself two and three pence short. I worried and worried about that money, but couldn't fit it in nohow.

"Then I happened to catch a word or two of what you said about the preparations that man made for his prodigal son, and it came into my mind like a flash of lightnin' that I'd spent two and three pence for a new horsewhip to give my boy Jim a thunderin' good hidin'. It's wonderful, as you say, sir, what a help a chance word may be. Good mornin', sir."—London Tit-Bits.

Making Them Match.

"Do you think he would do well as a speaker?"

"He might be quite a success if he confined himself to mixed audiences."

"Why only that kind?"

"Because he is a mixed reasoner."

Favors Tariff Bureau.

Washington, April 1.—President Taft yesterday declared himself in favor of a tariff bureau to be created at this session of Congress. He believes that such a bureau would be of great assistance to him in the application of the maximum and minimum principle of the Payne bill in the negotiations of foreign trade agreements, as well as in furnishing detailed information to Congress and to the White House on various tariff questions as they arise.

Students Strike.

New York, April 1.—Recitations were generally cut yesterday by the students of Manhattan College, a Roman Catholic institution, the boarding students of which Tuesday declared a strike because of grievances complained of, over matters of discipline.

The removal of Brother Peter as president is demanded by the students, because he disciplined students who stayed out late.

Awarded $1,250 For Breach.

Brockville, April 1.—Miss Grace Herbison of Junetown was awarded $1,250 damages for breach of promise against Charles M. Quinn of Lansdowne. She sued for $5,000. The solicitor for Quinn took exception to certain features of Justice MacMahon's charge, which was strongly in favor of the plaintiff.

The court room was crowded to standing room, hundreds being attracted from the country.

"Whip" Taylor's Birthday.

Ottawa, April 1. Yesterday being the birthday of George Taylor, chief Conservative whip, that gentleman decorated the desks of the Commoners, Grit and Tory alike, with two rosy apples.

Subsequently Major Currie passed the hat and a handsome souvenir was presented to the whip.

Chinaman Weds Girl.

Portage la Prairie, April 1.—Chan Sing, a Chinese restaurant proprietor, and Nellie Elliott of Melfort, Sask., were married yesterday. The couple met in an hotel where they were working in England several years ago, and soon became lovers. Rev. Mr. Nicholson of the Baptist Church officiated.

Dropped Dead In Hotel.

St. Catharines, April 1.—George Thompson, a jeweler of Hamilton, dropped dead in the St. Catharines House at about 6 p.m.

The identity of Thompson, who was about 60 years of age, wasn't discovered for several hours. He slept at the police station on Tuesday night.

Can't Get a Speaker.

St. John's, Nfld., April 1.—Newfoundland has a Parliament of standpatters. Sir Edward Morris, as Sir Robert Bond before him, has failed to persuade a member of the Opposition to accept the Speakership, and consequently the House has prorogued till Tuesday.

Eleven Go to Jail.

London, April 1. Eleven suffragettes arrested on Tuesday elected to go to Holloway jail for periods of from one to three months rather than to find sureties for their good behavior.

"Spanish Swindle" Still Works.

Boston, April 1.—The notorious Spanish swindle, in which an imprisoned banker, a beautiful young girl immured in a convent, and a valise full of valuable securities, were the principal baits which appealed so strongly to Anders Andrewson, a Harrison avenue metal worker, that he invested in the proposition $3,000, the savings of a lifetime—and lost the money. Andrewson went to Madrid.

African Mission Jubilee.

Newark, N.J., April 1.—Bishop J. C. Hartzell announced yesterday at the opening of the Newark conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church that he had the active support of ex-President Theodore Roosevelt in raising $300,000 in the United States for the celebration next fall in Africa of the diamond jubilee of the church's mission work on that continnet.

Barber Commits Suicide.

Victoria, B.C., April 1.—After telling the bartender of the Dominion Hotel that he had come to say "Good-bye," as he was going to the cemetery, David Connors, a barber, ran to Beacon Hill Park yesterday morning and drowned himself in the lake there. His body was recovered by the police.

Employer Turned Detective.

Brantford, April 1.—Wesley Smale was arrested here yesterday morning charged with thefts of cash from the store of W. E. Russell, his employer.

The proprietor secreted himself behind a number of boxes, and found Smale early yesterday morning, causing his arrest.

Tariff Vote April 10.

Washington, April 1.—A compromise is to be agreed to by the various factions on the Republican side of the House regarding the consideration of the Payne tariff bill, and it is confidently expected that the measure will be voted upon April 10.

ZION METHODISTS WILL CONSTRUCT NEW CHURCH

The present Methodist church at Zion, Otonabee, has stood the test of time long enough in the opinion of the congregation and an attractive and comfortable new edifice with accommodation for two hundred will be constructed.

The plans for the building have been prepared and the applications for tenders published. It is expected that the work of construction will be started in May and be completed by October. The structure will be of cement block.

Rev. W. D. Harrison, of Keene, is the pastor in charge of the Zion Methodist church.

SMART SPRING COAT STYLES

— AT —

THE GOLDEN LION

It seems as though each shipment brings us newer and prettier ones.

Of course you will need a COVERT or Broadcloth extra Coat for Spring, and these will be just what you are looking for.

Come in and try one on and nine times out of ten it won't require any alterations—you can walk out of the store with it on—so flexible are the styles this season.

Hard critics of value say that our

LARGEST ROLL CALL IN THE HISTORY OF MURRAY STREET

The largest congregational gathering in the history of the roll call of the Murray street Baptist church assembled last evening at the annual roll call meeting. Under Rev J. R. Webb's guidance the church has made gratifying progress and the congregation now numbers over four hundred. The large majority of the members was in attendance at last night's meeting to respond when their names were called.

They all sat down to a delightfully prepared tea which was served by the Ladies Aid Society of the church.

As an evidence of the growing strength of the membership it was decided not to enlarge the present church but to build a new one. Reference to this will be found in another item in the Review.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

Ald. Hick's Views

Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—The result of the vote on the by-laws on Tuesday last, indicates clearly the citizens of Peterborough are satisfied the commissioners have gone thoroughly into the matter of a new dam and accordingly voted the amount asked for the purpose.

The result of the vote on the City Council's by-law for $15,000 for a power house is a decided indication the citizens are in favor of a municipal power plant. But the Council had not sufficient information on the matter.

There is no question, but that the city must and will do its own lighting at the expiration of the present contract, 5 1-2 years hence, and the defeat of the hasty proposition submitted on Tuesday last will result in a properly matured power bylaw being submitted to the ratepayers at a reasonably early date.

The Water Commissioners are, I understand, making provision at the new dam for a future power house, and it is very reasonable to suppose that the two power houses combined would lessen the cost of construction and maintenance very materially.

The citizens have asked by their vote for further particulars and information; in the meantime the power cannot get away, it is the property of the city.

Yours truly,
R. HICKS.

The Defeated By-law

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir—On reading the aftermath remarks on Power By-law by some of our councillors and also some press remarks (not Review) they sound very much like "how it happened consolations" of a political contest.

In the first place the electors who turned down the by-law were not an unintelligent uninformed, confused, misguided company, as some comments would infer. They were the same people that carried the Waterworks By-law and quite alive to the best interests of Peterborough and their upper chambers are just as well furnished as those who voted the other way.

Secondly. It was not power development that was voted down but a hasty superficial, inadequate commencement of it. If the power committee "sit up" and take notice of this, they will be in a position to serve the community intelligently.

Ald. Gillespie evidently interprets the mandate when he says he is prepared to go on with any adequate power scheme. This is exactly what we want. This vote means "get busy" and check up your professional paper estimates by the concrete facts of practical experience and give us an estimate and plan to vote on as near actual fact as science and experience can furnish.

Third. It was not the power companies that defeated the by-law nor the telegrams with "wares to sell." It was the plain straightforward statements of a citizen interested solely in the best interests of the town. A man who had exceptional opportunities to know the facts and twenty-five years' experience in practical work on this line. Mr. D. A Harvey has rendered the town a special service for which we shall be thankful.

I have often conversed with him on this subjects and these were his views long before any $15000 by-law was thought of. His 'inspiration' did not come directly or indirectly, from power company sources except as their disappointing experiences are a warning to us.

The Quebec bridge is a warning of the danger of relying solely on technical engineering. Practical men knew and stated that that structure would collapse and now an expert Board of Government Engineers confirm their observations and statements regarding the weak points of the structure.

I spent four years in an establishment of world-wide reputation and in all cases after their staff of engineers had submitted their plan a staff of practical men were called in to check criticize and modify. After this it was again returned to the engineers for correction and modification. That firm has never had to recall any of its products.

In this power question we must have the invaluable assistance of practical experience. This power question may consist of a series of units including the waterworks power (if any) but the Council would do well to appoint a commission of two or three including an able technical engineer and competent practical engineer to report on the whole question.

The city is now at the mercy of the light and power companies and rates may go anywhere in the near future if there is a considerable further demand for light or power and the Council has a problem on hand that requires immediate attention.

Yours truly,
A. B. CUNNINGHAM.

CANADIAN BINDER TWINE INDUSTRY

Special Report by the Dominion Inspector Indicates Gratifying Conditions.

The following is taken from the Trade and Commerce weekly report, dated March 15:

In response to a request from the Department of Trade and Commerce, Mr. J. L. Haycock, Dominion Inspector of Binder Twine, has submitted a report upon the binder twine industry in Canada. It is gratifying to learn that the Canadian product holds highest rank, that the exports of twine are gaining and the imports declining, and finally, that the Canadian manufacturers adhere rigidly to standard. Mr. Haycock's report states:

"Canadian binder twine has established for itself a reputation in the world's markets. In fact, Canadian binder twine in the market claims rank similar to 'Scotch tweed' in the cloth market, and it may be of interest to know that at present Canadian mills are exporting twine to many foreign countries, including Russia, Romania, Argentina, Australia and England, Scotland and the United States of America.

"During the past season it is equally gratifying to learn that no binder twine was discovered below the standard of the act.

"It is highly gratifying to note that Canadian manufacturers of binder twine are producing as good twine as can be obtained anywhere in the world, and far superior to that made in almost any other country. In fact the manufacturer of binder twine which in most countries is only an art, has been reduced to a science in Canada."

No doubt the inspector had our own mill, the Canadian Cordage and Manufacturing Co., more especially in his mind when drawing up his report to the government, as we have been informed he visits their mill several times a month, and has, on several occasions, given expression to the fact that he is highly pleased with the splendid efforts they are making in turning out a product of the high grade of quality they are now putting on the market. It is highly gratifying to us to hear one of our large local industries spoken of in such a satisfactory way, more especially when it comes from the Inspector of Industries.

EASTER CARDS NOVELTIES AND POSTCARDS

Raehael Tuck & Son's Lines Displayed in Local Stores--Many Beautiful and Clever Designs

Have you noticed the beautiful selection of Easter cards, post cards and novelties that are being shown in the local stationery stores, the work of that world-known firm, Raphael Tuck and Sons. There are many unique designs in the different lines and their Easter cards are especially beautiful. One of the newest post card lines is "The Glistening Dew." These are a decided novelty, and their chaste and brilliant appearance appeals to the most refined taste, while their moderate price places them within the reach of all.

The novelties display much ingenuity and cleverness in construction, and they are equally pleasing to both young and old. There are the "Easter Hare," "Spring has Come," and "Mr. and Miss Chick," who are arranged in movable silk hat, and bonnet, the latter trimmed with crepe paper. Then there are "The Dickling Dude," "Chicken Motor Car," and "Mr. Rabbit and Miss Bunny."

These beautiful cards are on sale at the different stationery stores, and are being displayed in their windows. Make your selections before the nicest are sold out.

New Machinery to be Placed in Central Mill—Dividend of Eight Per Cent Declared

The directors of the Central Milling Company met yesterday at their office and declared the usual dividend 8 per cent for the past year. It was decided to increase the capacity of the mill from 200 to 400 barrels a day.

The annual meeting will take place on Tuesday, April 13th, at 2 p.m. over Matthews' store, corner of George and Brock streets.

To increase the capacity it will not be necessary to enlarge the mill but a large amount of new machinery will be installed.

SOME CANAL NOTES FROM HASTINGS

The Hastings Star says:—The monster dredge which the contractors have been working on for the past couple of weeks is commencing to shape up and on Monday the sides which had been built lying flat were raised into position so that an idea can be gained of what the dredge scow will look like when completed.

A piratical looking craft has been noticed sailing down the river every afternoon about 6 o'clock lately and from the rakish look of the hull and the careless way she carried sail it was thought she might be a river pirate of some sort, but investigation brought out the fact that it was the canal staff returning from their day's work up the river, with Commander Gilders in the stern driving her for all she was worth.

THINKS THAT GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS NEED PROBING

Mr. Doherty Has Amendments at Ottawa.

Marine Inquiry Results Did Not Satisfy Him---Action Not Adequate.

Ottawa, April 2.–Judge Doherty (Montreal) yesterday moved an amendment calling for an enquiry into all the spending departments of the Government.

He recalled that the commission which investigated the Marine Department had expressed regret that it did not have the time to look more fully into other Departments. The recent order-in-council dealing with certain officials of the Marine Department was remarkable for what it ignored and what it declined to deal with.

If ever a Government was put clearly in default it was by the Courtney report, yet the Marine Department, he said, only had the courage to go ahead to "prevent the deterioration of whatever character it has left." He would have thought that Sir Frederick Borden would feel ashamed to hold back, "when the marine are going to the front." Was there a desire to learn the truth when the Cassels' commission was appointed? The scope of this enquiry was limited and the recent action of the Government was no broader.

He had no doubt of the personal integrity of the Minister of Marine, but if a system of corruption could grow for years without his knowledge, did the Government say that such a thing could not go on in the other Departments, where there would be the same human nature subjected to the same temptations? The same contractors who had been guilty of bribery and corruption had been dealing with officials of other Departments. The Government was still buying from individuals found to have been guilty of bribery.

Everyone named by the commission was liable under the criminal code, yet no action had been taken.

Judge Doherty concluded by moving:

"That in order to lift the cloud of suspicion that rests upon the administration of the various Departments, to satisfy the demands of the country for honest and business-like methods, and to purge the public service of inefficiency, reckless waste and corrupt practices, it is advisable and necessary in the public interest that a thorough and untrammelled investigation be made by a competent business commission into the workings of the great spending departments of Government."

The Minister of Marine, replying, said that from within a few months of his appointment he had been trying to carry out reforms. He had inaugurated new accounting system and thrown open the doors to the Courtney Commission.

Mr. Maddin commented on some of the scandals revealed in the Marine investigation. It had been shown for example that 38 officials of the Department drew $9,342 in three years from Mr. Drolet, who sold supplies to the Government. Scores of instances such as this could be given, said Mr. Maddin. And while these offences were fully covered by the code, the Minister of Justice had only this year introduced a bill to prevent the giving of illicit commissions, the inference being that there had been no law to reach the offenders accused by the Cassels' commission.

Mr. Kyte (N. S.) held that due punishment had been meted out to the accused officials. No Minister had been accused, and the only strictures of the Courtney commission on the Militia Department had to do with the large increase in the expenditures; no wrong-doing was implied. In the Curran bridge affair of 1894 the Conservatives had voted down a motion of Sir Richard Cartwright, censuring the Minister for wrong-doing revealed.

Mr. Crowther (West Elgin) quoted from the evidence to prove the knowledge of the Deputy Minister of wrong-doing in the Department, yet his punishment was superannuation at $3,000 a year.

The evidence disclosed that it was the duty of the Auditor-General to get satisfactory explanations of expenditures or report to the Treasury Board. Mr. Fraser had said for three or four years he did not get satisfactory explanations. Did he report to the Treasury Board or not? He was not allowed to tell that.

"When we have had so much grand larceny at the head, who would be surprised to see petty larceny at the bottom," said Mr. Crowther.

After Sharpe (North Ontario) and Meighen (Portage la Prairie) had supported the resolution, the debate adjourned at midnight to resume to-day.

TWO RESCUED FROM DEATH BY FIREMEN

Montreal, April 2.—Rescues were effected by firemen shortly before midnight at a fire which broke out at the sash and door factory of Chagnon & Co. on Burnett street. The firemen found that the watchman had been sleeping in an office on the third floor. He tried to get downstairs and lost his way, and eventually had to be rescued down a fire escape by two firemen.

Later when the fire was nearly out the firemen who were working in the building heard groans in the basement, and found the furnace man of the building unconscious. He was evidently under the influence of liquor and was taken to a police station to be held as a witness for the fire commissioners.

Foreigners Here Are "Good Pay"

"Foreigners are the best pay in town," remarked a local legal gentleman to the Review yesterday. "They pay their accounts without wrangling over them and are always prompt in this respect. The Chinese, Greeks and Italians are always good pay and that is a good deal to their credit."

The foreigners in Peterborough furnish considerable law business.

APPEAL LATER

Appeal Against Judgment in Recent Case Not Heard To-day.

The appeal in connection with the case of a Peterborough hotel man, charged with selling too great a quantity of liquor to a man at one side did not come up before Judge Weller today.

Today was set for the hearing of the appeal but it has been postponed by His Honor until a later date.

The judgment against the hotel man was given in the police court a short time ago.

"The Barrier"

To-day the Review commences the publication of a fascinating new serial "The Barrier," from the pen of Rex Beach. The Review assures its readers that this is one of the best stories ever published in Peterborough. Be sure and read the opening chapters.

"The Barrier" is a tale of Alaska, a black land where men and women fight each other and the relentless elements for the precious gold that lurks beneath the icy soil. It is a story of wild ambition, of uncontrolled passion, of men who know no other law than that of their own making; a story of a girl whose beauty and purity plunge her into deepest peril; a story of big events, big men, big thoughts and big hopes. Read of Necia, the fascinating heroine, who loves and is loved, of Gale, the man of mystery of Stark, the killer of men; the Russian, the prince scoundrel; of "No Creek" Lee, who comes to his own at last; of simple souled, big hearted Poleon Doret; of Lieut. Burrell, the gallant Kentuckian who carries law and justice into the Yukon wilds and forces desperate men to recognize him as their master.

THEODORE LUDGATE HAS GREAT PLAN FOR DEADMAN'S ISLAND

Drydocks, Elevators and Warehouses For Famous Deadman's Island--- Former Peterborough Man Has Gigantic Scheme For Development at Vancouver.

A Vancouver despatch says: The greatest development scheme that Vancouver has ever had is planned by Mr. Theodore Ludgate, lessee of Deadman's Island. It will add 70,000 feet to Vancouver's waterfront, and will make the western end of Vancouver harbor one of the busiest commercial and industrial sites on the Pacific coast. But before Mr. Ludgate proceeds with his great plan, in deference to a certain section of the people of Vancouver, he will offer to sell the lease of the island to the city. This lease is absolute and gives Mr. Ludgate control of the island for twenty-five years. At the end of that time he can renew the lease for the same period and always at the termination of the quarter century it can be renewed. If the renewal rental is not satisfactory, arbitration will decide on fair terms. Mr. J. W. Heart, who is acting for Mr. Ludgate and is one of his associates in the scheme, has written a letter to the World in which he shows conclusively that the lease is indefeasible.

In the event of the city not buying the island, and it is not expected that Vancouver will favor the expenditure of money for such a purpose when the details of the vast scheme are made public. Great development is planned for the little island that is now nothing but the abode of squatters.

The flat shore of the island will be filled in to what is now dry land at low water mark. On the park side there will be one long wharf which it is the intention of the promoters to give to the city and allow the city to control. This will be 700 feet in length. If the city wishes a bridge will be built from this wharf to the park, so that pleasure steamers can land their passengers right at the limits of Vancouver's fairest play ground.

ELECTRIC RAILWAY LINE.

An electric railway line will connect this wharf with Coal Harbor bridge, being part of a line that is projected from the present terminus of the C. P. R. This line will run from the Pacific Coast Mills along piling until it reaches the Georgia street end of the bridge. Here it will parallel the bridge and continue outside the park limits but following the shore of the park until it reaches the island. It will in no way interfere with the Rowing Club float or the buildings of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club, but will rather be a boon to both by providing a rapid means of getting to these club premises.

On the shore of the island facing Vancouver a long wharf where vessels of moderate draught can unload will be built. Here it is planned to have bonded and other warehouses. The channel of 800 feet which is now demanded by the harbor regulations along the C.P.R. frontage will be continued in Coal Harbor and the shoals that are now a menace even to yachts will be cleared away.

2 theodred ludgate

It is on the side of this island facing the inlet that the most important works are planned. There are to be three wharves jutting out into the inlet that will accommodate ocean steamers of practically any draught. At one end of these wharves there will be a graving dock capable of taking vessels of two hundred feet in length. On the wharf alongside there will be repair shops where all the smaller vessels that now have to go to the island or to Puget Sound, can be repaired. The need for such a plant has long been felt in Vancouver and marine men generally will hail with delight the fact that the contract for this portion of the plan has been let subject to the sale of the island to the city not going through.

Next to the gravel dock it is planned to build a large wharf and warehouse with one of the largest elevators at the end. Arrangements have already been made with a prairie firm of shippers for the lease of this elevator and this portion of the scheme will be carried out first. Here the great grain carriers that will soon be a common sight in Vancouver harbor will load their golden freight for the trip to the waiting markets of the Orient and Europe. From the end of the CPR. line the grain cars will be worked by electricity round the spur line to the elevator and the waiting ships. What this means to Vancouver's future can hardly be guaged when it is remembered that with the exception of but a few hundred feet the whole of the waterfront on Burrard Inlet west of the Hastings mills is owned by the CPR. and elevators built on that shore would have to be erected on land only leased from the railway company and possibly the lease would have a saving clause that shipments were to be made for preference in CPR bottoms.

On the other wharves there will be commodious warehouses and a smaller elevator. Several firms engaged in shipping have made application for dock rooms on these already so valuable is the site.

Mr J W Heart is now engaged in forming a private scheme and there is not the slightest doubt that when the work is completed Vancouver as a port will have a commodious wharfage and industrial site, near to the centre of the city that will be a valuable addition to the commercial side of the Terminal City. In a very few years the property should be worth millions of dollars. Then those who have watched Vancouver grow, will not wonder why Mr. Theodore Ludgate was not very particular about building a saw mill on Deadman's Island.

Children No Obstacle.

Albany, N.Y., April 2.—Landlords may no longer refuse to rent apartments because the tenants applying have children without being subjected to a fine for committing a misdemeanor, if a bill introduced yesterday by Assemblyman Goldberg becomes a law. The bill also prohibits a provision in a lease that such lease shall terminate on the birth of a child, in such house or apartment. The measure applies only to first-class cities.

Family Overcome by Gas.

London, April 2.–At 6 o'clock last evening when neighbors broke into the house of James McLean on Chesley avenue it was to find McLean, his wife and three children, in an unconscious state from gas. For eighteen hours they had been that way. All will probably recover except a ten-year-old girl, who is in a serious condition.

Can't "Assist Emigration."

Ottawa, April 2.—The Senate private bills committee yesterday morning reported the bill to incorporate the Salvation Army in Canada, with the clause to "assist emigration to Canada" altered to read that the Army might assist persons "in Canada" who were desirous of owning their own lands and homes.

Brakeman May Die.

St. Catharines, April 2.—Geo. Aldridge, a G.T.R. brakeman, is probably dying at the hospital here.

The other trainmen on the freight on which Aldridge was employed, which was coming this way from Toronto, found Aldridge lying bruised and unconscious among the coal in the tender with the skull fractured. It is thought he was struck by a bridge.

Big Oil Deal.

Chatham, April 2.—The biggest oil deal which has yet been put through in the Tilbury oil field has been completed, and an English company recently formed will take over the property of the Roth, Argue and Sterns and other properties in the Tilbury East Canada Oilfields Co., and Sir James Shaw, one of the directors, is now on his way to Canada.

The new company is capitalized at $1,000,000 and the deal means an expenditure of $250,000. Two hundred thousand will be spent at once in operating the leases thus secured.

French Treaty Adopted.

Paris, April 2.–The Senate yesterday by a vote of 317 to 6, adopted the French-Canadian commercial treaty. Senators Delahaye, LeBreton and others made a last effort to further postpone action on the treaty, pending the revision of the French tariff. They directed their attacks especially against the clauses relating to cattle and agricultural machinery, asserting that the machinery clause would open a side door to the United States.

Miners Will Strike.

Lethbridge, Alta., April 2.—The Lethbridge local of the United Mine Workers of America met at noon yesterday and took action on a telegram from District President Frank Sherman ordering them to discontinue work pending a new agreement.

Explosion on Steamer.

Marseilles, April 2.—The French tank bark Jules Henry, Capt. Escoffier, in the oil trade between Philadelphia and Cette, blew up yesterday morning and was practically totally wrecked. Twelve members of her crew were killed.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

LAYMEN'S CONGRESS DEALS WITH PLACE OF CHURCH

Four Thousand Assemble at Second Night's Session of Big Convention in Toronto—Tribute Paid to Heroism of Jesuit Fathers.

Toronto, April 2.—"The place of the Church in the making of a nation," was the inspiring topic at the second great night meeting in Massey Hall of the Canadian National Missionary Congress.

A magnificent audience of fully four thousand ministers and lay-commissioners turned a sea of faces toward the platform.

The outstanding inter-denominational character of the congress was emphasized by the prominence given to moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, Rev. Dr. Du Val, as leader of the devotional exercises, in succession to Bishop Sweeny of the Anglican Church, and Rev. Dr. Carman of the Methodist General Conference.

A striking incident of the evening was the outburst of spontaneous applause for the eloquent tribute to the heroism of the Jesuit Fathers paid to those early Canadian missionaries by Canon Tucker; while cheers greeted a later testimony by the same speaker to the great Presbyterian Home Missionary, the late Rev. D. Robertson.

Rev. Dr. Gordon of Winnipeg spoke of the foreign population of the west, and Rev. Dr. Sutherland of the duty of Canadians to the Asiatic population. Rev. J. A. Macdonald aroused enthusiasm in his call for a higher ideal in the everyday life.

At the afternoon meeting Bishop Thoburn, Robert Speer and Dr. Zwemer were the speakers, their addresses referring to the missionary progress in Asia.

A meeting for ladies in Convocation Hall, addressed by Sir Andrew Fraser, attracted such a crowd, that an overflow meeting had to be held in the Physics Building. Another meeting for women will be held in Convocation Hall to-night.

A public meeting in connection with the congress was held last night in the metropolitan Church. S. J. Moore presided. Addresses were given on "The place of the church in the making of the nation," by Prof. W. F. Osborne, Winnipeg; Hon. B. F. Wilber, Halifax, and Rev. W. T. Etack land, Winnipeg. The church was about two-thirds filled. Another meeting will be held this evening.

At the Massey Hall meeting, the chairman, N. W. Rowell, K.C., announced that Hon. S. H. Blake was unable to be present, and his place would be taken by Rev. Canon L. Norman Tucker, representing the missionary society of the Church of England in Canada. Hon. Mr. Blake sent a short message: "Let us do our duty to our red brethren, and at this time enlarge our operations in his behalf."

BILL RESPECTING SUCCESSION DUES HAS BEEN INTRODUCED

Toronto, April 2.—Yesterday afternoon the house went into committee to pass a resolution to introduce by the Provincial Treasurer a bill respecting succession duties. The act will be amended to impose a tax of 4 per cent. on bequests to individuals, and 5 per cent. on bequests over $1,200,000. This surtax will be in addition to 5 per cent. required under ordinary circumstances.

Hon. A. G. MacKay wanted the act so amended that estates up to $50,000 going to brothers and sisters would be free of duty. He claimed that they are as close as grandfathers, grandmothers, father or mother.

The Premier stated this was under consideration.

D. J. McDougal advocated a sliding scale of duties, under which disputes on estates within the assessment zone would be obviated. If the estate was valued at $49,999, it would escape taxation, but if $50,000 it would pay duty on the whole amount. He suggested that $50,000 be exampted, and all over that be assessed on a sliding scale.

The Provincial Treasurer intimated that this would cause a large falling off in revenue, but observed that subsequently Mr. McDougal's suggestion would be considered by the Government.

Hon. Dr. Pyne moved the second reading of an act respecting continuation schools, which he said was largely a consolidation of sections from the public school act empowering county councils to organize continuation schools.

Hon. A. G. MacKay's bill to amend the surrogate courts act was read a second time. It will give jurisdiction to judges to deal with executors' accounts up to $500.

There is a lot of hardwaremen in the Legislature and they all joined to swat W. D. McPherson's bill to regulate the sale of firearms and ammunition. T. W. McGarry classified the bill as lady-like legislation. G. C. Wilson thought it copied from the Dominion bill which was not going to be passed. Lord Strathcona's gift would be useless if the bill became law, as boys would not be allowed under it to shoot. Mr. Gamey could not imagine that Mr. McPherson had any serious idea of putting the bill on the statute book. G. H. Farguson was against it and Hon. Frank Cochrane asked its withdrawal.

Mr. McPherson also withdrew his bill respecting mortgages.

I. B. Lucas' bill to give benchers of the Law Society of twenty years' standing a life membership, ex-officio, brought out considerable difference of opinion. The number of elective benchers would not be diminished, but the total would be increased. T. W. McGarry and A. G. MacKay agreed in condemnation of it.

W. K. McNaught (North Toronto) moved his pure milk resolution in the Legislature last evening, asking the Government to appoint a commission to investigate and report on the conditions under which milk is produced, and to recommend such methods as might be advisable towards securing a wholesome sanitary supply.

BULLETINS OF THE MARATHON DERBY

The fastest runners in five countries will strive for a $10,000 purse at the Polo Grounds, New York tomorrow. In view of the great interest taken in Peterborough in the race the Review has arranged for a bulletin service and invites its readers to take advantage of it. The first bulletin will be received about three o'clock and the result of the great struggle will be known about five o'clock.

WORK IS RESUMED

Operations Again Commenced on New Wolfe St. Wharf.

By the time navigation is in full swing a long felt want will be completed and Peterborough will have an up to date wharf. Last fall work was started at the Wolfe street wharf but the cold weather put a stop to operations as the work is nearly all of a cement nature. But the main wall was finished and yesterday work was commenced again and operations will be rushed. When finished there will be a wall 2 feet wide and about 76 feet above the river extending from the CPR bridge down the full length of the old wharf. At the south end a number of steps will be put in to allow canoeists and those from other small craft to land and this will be a big convenience. The rest of the wharf will be nicely graded and when the work has been completed Peterborough will have a thoroughly modern and up-to-date wharf.

The work is in charge of Mr. Jack Hayes, which is a guarantee that the work will be done in an efficient manner.

DRUNKEN QUARREL

Results in Death of a Man at Kenora — Jugular Vein Severed.

Special to the Review

Winnipeg, Man. April 2—A Kenora, Ont, despatch says that as the result of a drunken quarrel John Bell was was killed there at one o'clock this morning by being struck over the head with a heavy stable lantern in the hands of a companion, Alex Miller. A piece of the lantern glass severed Bell's jugular vein.

The affair took place at the shanty of Ed Buckley. Buckley notified the authorities and as a result the Chief of Police of Dryden has gone to the scene.

TWENTY THOUSAND IN NEW BILLS

That Was the Contents of Package Lost by Expressmen.

Ottawa, April 2.—The parcel of bills reported lost or stolen while in transit from Montreal to Toronto is in reality a series of new bills which were sent via Dominion Express Co. by the British American Bank Note Co. of Ottawa to the head office of the Traders Bank of Toronto.

They were sent March 26 and have not yet arrived. The probability is that they were stolen.

The parcel consisted of the first batch of a new issue of bills by the Traders' Bank. They were in sheets as printed and were not signed. The denomination was five dollars and there was $20,000 worth.

They will not be easily negotiated as they are entirely different from the present bill, having a shipping scene vignette on the face and on the back a picture of the Traders' Bank of Toronto. None of this peculiar style have yet been issued by the bank.

The local agent of the express company professes no knowledge of the parcel. The bank does not stand to lost anything, as the goods were never delivered.

Medal For Edison.

Stockholm, April 2.—The Royal Academy has presented Thomas A. Edison with the Adelskiold Gold Medal for his inventions in connection with the phonograph and the incandescent light.

Buffalo Plumbers Strike.

Buffalo, April 2.—Two hundred and fifty plumbers struck here yesterday. They demand an increase in wages from $3.50 to $4 a day and the adoption of a number of shop rules.

SUMMARIZES LEGISLATION OF THE PRESENT SESSION

New Measures Announced by Sir James.

Plans Regarding Transportation Lines---Terms of Grant to C.N.R.

Toronto, April 2.—Before the Legislature adjourned last night, Sir James Whitney introduced several bills, which embodied the Government railway legislation this session.

The bill to aid the Canadian Northern Ontario for a line approximately 500 miles in length from Sellwood to Port Arthur, of which an announcement had previously been made, contains the provisions under which the grant of 4,000 acres per mile will be made.

The land will be granted to the company, if the company accepts the conditions, in alternate blocks in the clay belt to be designated by the Minister of Lands and Mines. The work of construction must be commenced within one year from the date of the passing of the act, and is to be completed by the 31st December, 1913, unless an extension is granted by the Government.

The Premier explained that it might be necessary to vary the terms of this section, in order that there may be no possible misconstruction of the meaning of the act. The bill as finally passed must protect the interests of the province, but it is just as important that the interests of the railway company are considered.

The lands are to be granted in fee simple to the railway company. The mines are claimed for every section of ten miles constructed, minerals are reserved to the crown, as well as all pine timber. With reference to jack pine, an exception is made where it is found on lands unsuited for agricultural purposes.

In order to provide railway connection all the year round for the inhabitants of Manitoulin Island, an extension is granted to the Manitoulin & North Shore Railway. Thirteen miles of road are already completed. The extension is granted to the 31st December, 1911. The company must spend $15,000 per month for six months of 1909, and $25,000 per month during the whole of 1910. The thirty miles of road necessary to complete this portion of the line must be completed before the 31st December, 1910. The grant which has been renewed provides for a cash subsidy of $5,000 per mile, which can be claimed for any section of ten miles constructed.

An extension is also given to the Algoma Central and Hudson Bay Railway, which runs from Sault Ste. Marie to Michipicoten Harbor on Lake Superior. Seventy miles of this line have already been constructed, in addition to the Michipicoten branch to Helen Mine, and 100 miles are graded and ready for the steel.

To earn the extension the Lake Superior Corporation must spend $1,500,000 on improvements and betterments to the plants of the subsidiary companies at Sault Ste. Marie. The companies have already in prospect the installation of extensive improvements at the steel plant, which will make it one of the most complete on the continent. This expenditure must be made before Dec. 31, 1910. Construction on the railway is to commence before May 1, 1910, and $25,000 per month is to be expended until the line is completed to Michipicoten and a junction formed with the C.P.R.

About 1,500,000 acres of land contiguous to the railway are to be immediately thrown open to prospectors, excepting iron, coal, iron pryrites and nickel, which are reserved to the Lake Superior Corporation.

The original grant to this company gave 7,400 acres per mile to be alotted in alternate sections.

The Central Ontario Railway has constructed 25 out of 40 miles north from Picton. To complete the 15 miles the subsidy of $3,000 per mile is renewed.

A short line of railway from Bruce Mines, the charter for which is expired, is to be restored. Twenty miles are projected. A grant of 1,000 acres per mile is given for the construction of six miles only.

The Ontario & Western Railway is projected from Wauk Station in Thunder Bay District, a point on the Grand Trunk Pacific. After seven miles of road are constructed the line strikes a lake, on which begins 40 miles of unobstructed navigation. One thousand acres per mile are to be given for the seven miles of line.

In the same locality, but westerly, a railway is projected from the Town of Keewatin to Kenora, a distance of 20 miles, for which 1,000 acres per mile are to be given.

W. A. PRESTON DEMANDED AN INQUIRY

Winnipeg, April 2.—W. A. Preston, M.P.P., of Fort Francis, whose company is alleged to have been mixed up in a deal to defraud the Ontario Government out of a couple of thousand dollars in timber dues, was in the city yesterday and gives a denial to the story which was sent out from his town, Mr. Preston said:

"The story is untruthful and maliciously misleading. Mr. Johnston, the discharged bookkeeper, did not, as stated in the article, prefer the charges referred to. He demanded $500 from the company, claiming that he had falsified returns, and thereby saved the company a large amount of money. On receipt of this document I placed the matter in the hands of Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands, Forest and Mines for Ontario, and demanded a full investigation."

SEX-HATRED

From the accounts of differences between man and womankind the world over, it looks as if there were springing up a certain sex-hatred between them that may lead to "disastrous" results. The strife for political status is bound to lead to trouble. That women do not get their "rights" is of course, due to their husbands' "selfish stupidity" and from this firm and unalterable conviction arises an intensity of energy and hatred that only women can furnish.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE

Sir Wilfrid Laurier seems to have the idea that an empire can be an empire and not an empire at the same time. Provincial autonomy surely provides example enough of what may be done in the way of establishing an empire without forfeiting local independence. In cases where difficulties of interpretation of the Act of Empire should arise, these difficulties might be susceptible of interpretation by a body similar to the Privy Council, which is external to the Dominion of Canada even at present. The B. N. A. works well. Why should a similar Act of Empire not work well for all comprised within it? But Sir Wilfrid means more than autonomy. He seems to mean co-operation when it suits us and not—as in the federation known as the U. S.—when the "Empire is in danger." It is time we advanced a step from the weak, uncertain and halting gait of the infant "mauling and puking in the nurse's arms," to the livelier rate of progress of a young but full-grown man, who has gone into partnership in John Bull & Co. at the same old stand where the sign has been waving for a considerable period of time, and will likely continue to do so.

MIXED MARRIAGES

"He will be legally bound to a woman who will be conscientiously bound to leave him because she knows she is not married to him."—Catholic Register.

This statement from the Register will clear up many misapprehensions. The idea was becoming prevalent through mistaken reading of pronouncements that the Roman Catholic Church disregarded "the legal marriage" altogether, considering it no marriage and since no marriage, therefore not even a contract. The above clipping however, shows that while the church regards the mixed or Protestant marriage as a legal marriage or marriage contract of which the issue has a legal and therefore "legitimate" status, it frowns upon such "marriages" and regards them as rebellion against the Catholic sacrament. Much of the uproar in the vicinity of Sudbury and North Bay arose from this very misreading of the Church's attitude. It is evident that such words as "illegitimacy," and "adultery" have no place in the affair at all and the husband and wife is under no ban of impropriety or immorality such as that attaching to a state of concubinage. It must be remembered throughout the argument upon this question that Protestants regard marriage as a "contract." The Catholic Church does not deny that a Protestant marriage is a contract But since the Catholic Church considers marriage a sacrament, it is no "mere contract" and therefore should not be indulged in by Catholics. This would appear to be the meaning of the situation. That the ban of excommunication should be put upon one who pretended to be a Catholic and yet violated the Church's rules, is of course, natural but that a stigma should attach to a contract as a contract, and to the parties to that contract and to the issue of it, was regarded as unreasonable. No power on earth can properly compel a body to regard a contract as a sacrament. That would be unreasonable. But a statement that a contract is no contract remains with the courts to adjudicate upon and not with any church.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Why has not a rural mail delivery been begun in Peterborough county? It was promised and should come.

By way of contrast to the flaring methods of to-day the account given of the battle of Waterloo in the London Times four days after is only about one-third of a column.

When we do not wish to incur the odium of being too imperialistic we decline to be stampeded as little nations like Britain are. Sir Wilfrid looks to the next election.

It is estimated that the tariff asked for to protect the tin industry would increase the cost of the cans used for the output of Ontario farms by a quarter of a million dollars a year. The cost of protection cannot always be figured out with any such approach to accuracy.—The Globe.

Is it? And by whom?

Two men met the other day and began arguing. "Do you mean to say," cried one, "that a Tory is necessarily a truer man than a Grit?"

"No, sir," replied the other. "What I mean to say is that if the decent men of both parties don't unite to upset the crooks this country will be robbed and ruined. That's what."

"Every word of that is true," said the other sadly, as he turned away.

What will they say in—Germany? Canada will supply some Dreadnoughts with the accent on the nought.

The man in the street is asking How many Dreadnoughts will Canada supply? And that amended amendment is the answer.

In the face of any dread emergency Canada solemnly pledges itself to furnish lemon-ad to the empire.—(For further particulars see Sir Wilfrid's speech.)—Ottawa Citizen.

Falls 60 Feet; Unhurt.

New York, April 2.—How Milton Heits, aged four, fell 60 feet from the roof of a six-storey tenement, picked out a soft landing-place in a vacant lot dotted with big rocks, and escaped with a scratched finger, is something 135th street residents are trying to figure out. It occurred on Wednesday. He had overreached in grabbing for a toy train. When his mother ran to pick up the mangled remains he was sitting up, with a battered engine and two cars.

"Hello, ma," he said, "my car is all broke."

She Married In Haste.

San Francisco, Cal., April 2.—Mrs. Helen Beryl Graydon, wife of T. H. Graydon of Cincinnati, once full back on the Harvard football team, was granted a divorce here on the ground of non-support. The wedding in Massachusetts in 1903 followed a romantic elopement, the young woman climbing over a wall to escape from a girls' school in New York.

Two Children Burned.

Emo, Ont., April 2.—A fatal fire occurred seven miles north of here early yesterday by the destruction of the home of Robert Stirret, sr., a farmer, in which his two children, Colin, aged 7, and Ruby, aged 5, were burned to death. Mr. Stirret was severely burned and other members of the family slightly burned.

Jury Disagree.

Brampton, April 2.—The jury in the case of J. P. Ruston, a farmer, on trial for arson to collect insurance, disagreed after remaining out until 3 o'clock yesterday morning.

Cuban Town Burned.

Santiago, Cuba, April 2.—The little town of La Maya, twenty miles north of this city, was practically destroyed by fire yesterday.

Will Accept Library.

Hamilton, April 2.—The public library board decided to accept Andrew Carnegie's offer of $75,000 for new library, if the City Council consents. A sub-committee was appointed to advertise the present building for sale and to select a new site. Southam, Limited, has offered $25,000 for the building with the intention of using it as an office for The Spectator. It will be put up for public bid.

Manslaughter Charged.

Stratford, April 2.—A charge of manslaughter was laid by the crown yesterday against Aloysius Guerin in connection with the death of the late Alexander Sutherland, who was found dead in the morning of Feb. 26 at the back door of Guerin's house.

He will come up for a preliminary hearing to-day.

Mrs Lester Wallack, widow of the actor manager died in her home in New York City of infirmities incident to her age, 84 years.

OF INTEREST

In the chorus of newspaper comment to greet the new Tariff Bill as it came last week from the Ways and Means Committee approval was the dominant note. Independent and Democratic papers express themselves as "agreeably surprised" at the evident purpose of the Republican measure to revise the tariff downward, while Republican editors triumphantly commended the matter to the attention of those critics who have always treated as a paradox the idea of entrusting a revision of the tariff "to its friends." So cordial, on the whole, is the bill's reception that we can pass by the friendly comments of the Republican press and select tributes from the columns of the tariff reform and antiprotection organs. Thus the New York Times, Independent, hails the mere introduction of such a bill as "a notable event," and The Evening Post, (Ind), asserts that "it embodies a greater degree of tariff reform than we would have had any chance of getting had Bryan been elected President." Yet in spite of its peaceful entrance upon the scene "it is already apparent" asserts a Washington correspondent "that the Payne Tariff Bill will kick up one of the liveliest fights witnessed in the House for many years." When it emerges, presumably somewhat battered, from the ordeal, it will have to run the gauntlet of the Senate before it achieves sanctuary on the President's table. Says the Boston Transcript, Ind. Rep. "Unless Mr Taft has enough power to prevent it, the bill, judging from all precedents will be rewritten in the Upper House and done so in line with the great special interests that have there been for many years very effectively represented." The fact that the publication of the tentative schedules of the new bill was followed by an immediate advance in the stock market is explained by the theory that speculators believe all the bad news, from their point of view, is out, and that any changes will be in favor of the protected industries.

Speaker Cannon recently reminded the country of the peculiar difficulties and unusual temptations which beset the pathway of tariff legislation. These difficulties arise from the fact that "a tariff bill is general in that it affects the whole great subject of revenue; but at the same time is private and special in its nature as it enters every district and affects the product of every farm and factory." The complexity of the problems before the tariff-framers is illustrated by the protests against certain reductions which are reaching Washington from various Democratic and supposedly antiprotectionist quarters. As the New York Evening Sun (Ind.) remarks, when North Carolinians are squealing about the reduction on lumber, Texans about free hides, Alabamans about free iron ore and Missourians about the lowered duty on zinc the avowed standpatter has a chance to point out that it makes all the difference in the world whose ox is gored.

Among the salient features of the new bill as it came from the Ways and Means Committee, are: The reduction of duties in the iron and steel schedules averaging in many items from 25 to 50 per cent.; the placing of iron ore, hides, wood-pulp, bituminous coal, and works of art more than twenty years old on the free list; a 40-per-cent. reduction on shoes; the halving of the lumber and timber duties; the cut of 1-20 of 1 cent a pound on refined sugar; qualified free trade with the Philippines; maximum and minimum schedule to provide for automatic reciprocity in our tariff relations with other countries; the provision for a Federal inheritance tax; a duty placed on tea and cocoa and the tax increased on such articles as perfumes soaps gloves, feathers, furs, hosiery, and the higher grades of paper.

Some observers express surprise that while the tax on cigarettes is increased the beer and spirits schedules remain unchanged. Others are astonished that petroleum did not find itself on the free list. Representative Sereno E. Payne chairman of the Ways and Means Committee has issued an analysis of the measure in which he says in part:

"One problem that confronted the committee was the question of revenue. The business of all commercial nations has been depressed for nearly two years and this has affected our commerce and greatly reduced our revenues, so that we have a large deficit by the revenues under the present law are improving from month to month as business conditions are becoming better.

"The last normal year of imports was the fiscal year ending June 3, 1906; 1907 was an unusually prosperous year, and the revenues from customs exceeded those of 1906 by $32,000,000. The committee has therefore taken the year 1906 as the basis to form its estimate of the revenue-producing qualities of the new bill. Should the next fiscal year prove prosperous and the normal conditions of 1906 return, on account of the large increase in population the revenues for 1910 would show a considerable increase over the estimates of the committee.

"With a return to anything like normal conditions during the next fiscal year, it is safe to predict that the deficit would be entirely wiped out; but in case it is not, the bill provides for the issue of Panama Canal bonds to reimburse the Treasury for the $40,000,000 paid out in the original purchase of the canal. This would more than make up any probable deficiency. There is also reenacted the provision for the issue of certificates to run one year to replenish the Treasury raising the amount from $100,000,000 to $250,000,000, an amount sufficient to provide at any time against two or three years of depressed business conditions."

"The bill does, beyond all possible doubt, make a breach in the almost impassable tariff wall" says the New York Times (Ind.), "and the breach is proposed by the party that built the wall." This fact shows the influence of advancing public opinion comments the Journal of Commerce (Com.) Whatever the outcome of the present struggle, says the Pittsburg Post (Dem). "the evils of the protective system are being forced out into the open, and this whole system of graft greed, extortion and machine politics is shaking." The same paper goes on to remind good antiprotectionists that the Greeks, even when bearing gifts, are to be feared, and it admonishes the public to "watch the Aldrich crowd in the Senate" where "the fine work of hornswoggling the people is to be looked for." Even more pessimistic is the Brooklyn Citizen (Dem.) which sees in the bill "the semblance without the substance of tariff reform." Wage-reduction and increased cost of living are among the results it foresees. On the other hand, no less zealous a tariff-reform organ than the Philadelphia Record (Dem.) is willing to admit that the Payne measure seems to be on the whole "a rational bill to come from a committee of Republicans." It adds sympathetically:

"Between the demand for reductions the opposition of the standpatters and the clamor of the Treasury for more revenue the committee had no easy task, and it seems at first view to have been fairly liberal in its reductions, though in many instances these should have been greater, both for the sake of the Treasury and for the relief of consumers."

Looking at the bill from the consumers' point of view, but evidently through other lenses than those used by the Brooklyn Citizen, the New York Evening Post Ind. rejoices that "cheapness has ceased to be anathema to these latter-day protectionist tariff makers." It goes on to say:

"They hold out the hope, and have done their work on the theory, that the cost of many of the necessaries of life may be reduced by reducing taxes. Shoes and clothing, glass, and steel wood and paper, it is proposed to make cheaper. At last, the forgotten consumer is given a thought. After long years of argument, it has been beaten into the heads of high tariff fanatics that low duties mean both more revenue and more trade. And the old idea of universal, all-round protection, every single product getting its just recompense of reward in a perfectly equitable tariff, is now admitted to have broken down."

The World finds the proposed bill disappointing from the consumers' standpoint, and fears that the Payne Tariff will still be a "mother of trusts." To quote:

"Shoes may be cheaper, and gloves dearer. Lumber and building stone and fence posts may cost less, but fruit more. No substantial relief will be found in a reduction of half a cent a pound on fresh meat, or two cents on a carving knife, or a trifle on threads, carpets, and window glass, or four one hundredths of a cent on sugar. Tea is taxed, but not coffee. The reductions on shirts, collars and cuffs, and on woollen goods, are more substantial but the rates are still high. As the tremendous tax upon the people involved in the protective tariff has been indirect and not easily calculable by the individual consumer, so will be the benefit resulting to him from the proposed reductions. Yet benefit there will be—unless the bill is jobbed in the Senate or in its final shaping in conference or the maximum rate provision is juggled into a means of sly exaction. The rates can not be so materially reduced upon steel products, lumber, stone, and other great staple commodities without helping the consumer, though he may not know just where and how."

Special interest attaches to the maximum minimum provision of the new measure a feature which has been described as "reciprocity with a club." The maximum and minimum schedules are separated by a margin of twenty per cent., the higher tax to be levied only against those nations which refuse to trade with us on the most favored nation basis." The country has accepted this principle," says the San Francisco Chronicle, Rep. Nevertheless some papers are protesting that this provision may more than counterbalance the seeming reductions of the new schedules, since "until commerce adjusts itself to the new law, approximately four-fifths of imports of country will be subjected to the maximum tariff." The new bill abrogates all existing tariff treaties The Springfield Republican, Ind., doubts whether the average rate of tariff taxation has not been advanced instead of being reduced by this bill." On the other hand, the New York Tribune, Rep., says in defence of this clause;

"The great advantage of the maximum-minimum plan is that it is automatic in operation. It does away with the delay and annoyances of negotiating a special arrangement with each country with which we exchange tariff concessions. The return to the reciprocity system and the adoption of the maximum-minimum method are distinct advances in tariff legislation."

The clause putting a tariff of eight and nine cents on tea is tentative, according to Washington dispatches, the leaders having their ears to the ground for the first rumble of popular disapproval. A correspondent of the Tribune quotes Representative Boutell Rep., Ill., as follows;

"We have put tea on the dutiable list, with a tax of eight cents a pound. This should bring in $8,000,000 a year. I do not think that this will fall upon the consumer. The average price of tea imported is 16 cents a pound at the port of entry, and every housekeeper knows that the difference between that and the price she pays leaves an enormous profit for some one. The duty should come out of that profit."

The chief opposition to the new bill, however, seems to be directed against the clause providing for a graduated Federal inheritance tax—a feature which is expected to add $20,000,000 to the revenue. The bill puts a graded tax of from 1 to 3 per cent. on direct inheritance, from parents to children, over $10,000, and levies 5 per cent. on all collateral inheritance over $500. Since inheritance are already taxed for State revenue in 36 or 37 States there is some outcry at the prospect of double taxation. Says the New York Evening Mail, Rep.:

"The inheritance tax, by usage as well as of right, is a State tax, and should be availed of by the nation only as a last resort, as in time of a great war. For the nation thus to tax fortunes is to put upon the States the alternative either of repealing a good revenue-producing law or subjecting their citizens to double taxation."

The New York Globe, Rep., on the other hand, points out that "in Mexico both the State and the national governments impose inheritance taxes, and so far as we are informed this has not given rise to any serious conflict or criticism."

President Taft has urged speed in the passage of the Tariff Bill, that the business of the country may not be kept in suspense, and Senator Aldrich predicts that if it is not needlessly delayed in the House it may be law by June 1st. [illegible]

ORDERS FOR 57TH REGIMENT

Headquarters,
Peterborough,
April 1st, 1909

Orders by Lt.-Col A. Stevenson,
Commanding 57th Regiment,
Peterborough Rangers.

No 1—The regiment will parade in drill order at the drill hall at 8pm. on Monday, April 5th, 1909 and until further notice on each subsequent Monday at the same place and hour.

No 2—The following extracts from General Order No 15 of February 1st 1909 are promulgated for the information of the regiment;

DISTRIBUTION OF TIME

The full period of twelve days will be taken up in the practice of the subjects laid down in the Syllabus here given on such days or evenings, as may be found most convenient to units. In the distribution of time credit will be given according to the following scale;

a For an evening drill of two hours counting from the time of falling in until after time of dismissal—1-2 day.

b For a forenoon, or afternoon, drill or parade, for divine service, musketry, inspection, &c. of less than five hours duration—1-2 day.

c For a practical tactical exercise or drill of five hours duration—1 day.

SYLLABUS

1. Rifle exercises. 2. Company drill company attack, advance and rear guards, outposts; 3 Battalion drill, battalion attack; 4. Musketry; 5. One obligatory practical tactical exercise or drill in the open air, of at least five hours duration.

INSPECTION

Units will be practically tested at the annual inspection in 1, 2, 3 and when practicable 5, of the above syllabus. For musketry, definite evidence, will be required that each n.c.o. and man has fired the prescribed number of rounds with service ammunition or, field ranges not being available, with miniature ammunition

ROLL BOOKS

Company roll books must show a clear record that the number of drills for which pay is claimed have been duly performed.

RECRUIT DRILLS

Recruits' drills of which there should be at least ten, should be voluntary no credit being claimed therefore.

No 3—The following extracts from Militia Order No 51, March 4th, 1909 are also promulgated;

The following schedule will show what portions of their drill it is considered essential that city corps should be proficient in at the different stages of their training, and in which they will be inspected, viz.

1st 6 Drills

Rifle exercise. Company drill

2nd 6 Drills

Company attack. Advance and rear guards.

3rd 6 Drills

Battalion drill. Battalion attack

4th 6 Drills

Outposts. Manoeuvres.

Musketry to be prosecuted during the whole period as most convenient

VIEWS OF ROMAN WRITER UPON RELIGIOUS CONDITIONS IN ITALY

Rome, March 7, 1909.

The elections have been the chief source of excitement for the past week. The first instalment of them took place on Sunday last and from the complexion of the Roman representation in the new chamber, little of good may be expected from its deliberations for the next four years. Rome, the centre of Christianity, has chosen five men, all of whom may be considered as enemies of Christianity, to represent them at Montecitorio. Two of these are Republicans, one a Socialist, one a Radical and the last a Ministerialist and member of the Giolitti Cabinet, who forty years ago was a devoted adherent of the Pontifical rule. The Socialist, Bissolatti, has won over Col. Santini, the most outspoken and honest of Roman representatives for many years. And because of his distinctly Catholic stand in the Italian Parliament, it seems that even government officials and royal servants preferred to vote for the Socialist, who recently cried out in parliament, "Down with the King," rather than for him, so greatly has the insane hatred of Christian influence taken possession of these people. The so-called Catholics, not being accustomed to the use of the franchise, did not think the appeals of their political organization sufficiently serious to warrant their risking a wetting in order to vote, that the interests of religion and society might be safeguarded, and thus they allow the subversives to be elected in ever increasing numbers, and all the while they wonder how people can be so wicked and why things are going so badly, and the world will still be astonished at the strange spectacle of Catholic peoples permitting their tender Mother the Church to be subjected to ever new indignities and multiplied humiliations. Whatever the rest of Italy has done, and the result is but a sad mixture at best, Rome can look with naught but shame and mortification on her representatives and their acts, whether in Parliament or in the Capitol. And it is her own fault.—Catholic Register.

Fraternity Pins.

Fraternity pins are seldom lost, and when they do disappear they often turn up again, sometimes years afterward, in the most out of the way places. As they always bear the owner's name and chapter engraved on the back it is not a difficult matter to return them. One "old grad" who lost his pin shortly after he left college and bought another now has two, the original emblem having been returned in a singular manner. A "brother" had observed the familiar token reposing upon the bandanna of an old colored mammy in a little town in Virginia. Upon questioning her he learned that she had come by it "taking in washing." After much persuasion she was prevailed upon to surrender the trophy.

Easily Satisfied.

Home Course In Modern Agriculture

V.—Leguminous Crops and Rotations

By C. V. GREGORY,
Agricultural Division, Iowa State College

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association

In order to continue to raise crops from year to year we must propagate the plants in some way. There are two principal ways of doing this—by seeds and by divisions of the plant itself. The most important of these is by seeds, as it is in this way that most of the ordinary farm crops are multiplied.

In order to understand this process we must first learn how the seeds are formed. The tassel of the corn is the male flower and the silk the female. Some plants, such as certain varieties of strawberries, have only female flowers and must be planted in alternate rows with varieties which have both kinds of blossoms. In other plants the male and female flowers are combined in one. This is the case with the apple and many other fruits. In the apple the stamens, or male parts, grow in a ring around the pistil, or female part, which is in the center of the flower. The top of a stamen, which is expanded, is called the anther. This contains a yellow dust, the pollen.

The upper portion of the pistil is called the stigma. From it a tube called the style leads downward to the ovary. This ovary contains one or more egg shaped cells called ovules. Each of these ovules is capable of developing into a seed if fertilized with a pollen grain. When a grain of pollen alights on a ripe stigma it is held by a sticky substance secreted there. It soon germinates and sends a long, threadlike projection down through the style to the ovary. This slender projection enters the ovary, and the resultant union of the male and female elements causes a seed to develop. One pollen grain is required for each ovule, and each ovule develops into a separate seed. There are many thousand pollen grains produced by each stamen, and as there are several stamens for each pistil you will see that a great excess of pollen is produced. This is one of nature's methods of making reproduction more certain.

In flowers like the apple the pollen may sometimes fall directly on the stigma in the same flower. More often, however, the stamen and pistils ripen at different times. The object of this is to prevent self fertilization, which, if long continued, will weaken the vitality of the coming generations. Cross pollination—that is, the fertilization of the ovule of one flower by the pollen from another plant—unites the strength of both parents and produces larger, hardier seed.

This has been proved by many experiments. If the tassels are pulled from a row of corn before they have time to shed their pollen, the silks must necessarily be fertilized by pollen from other stalks. The cross pollination will cause the detasseled rows to produce heavier and larger ears. If this process is continued from year to year the yielding power of that particular strain will be considerably increased.

In such plants as corn the wind carries the pollen for rods in every direction. The air in the cornfield is so filled with the yellow dust that there is seldom any danger that the silks will fail to catch more than plenty to fertilize each of the many ovules that are to form the future kernels.

Some plants, however, are not so fortunate in this respect. The pollen of fruit trees is carried to some extent by the wind, but not nearly so much so as that of corn. In such plants as clover the stamens are at the bottom of a slender tube, from which they cannot escape unaided. Plants of this nature are dependent on insects to transfer pollen from one flower to another. In order to attract these insects the flowers secrete a sweet nectar, which collects in the bottom of the tubes of which the flowers are composed.

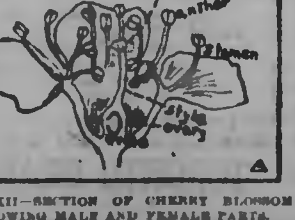

FIG. XII—SECTION OF CHERRY BLOSSOM SHOWING MALE AND FEMALE PARTS.

Ants, flies, butterflies and bees are very fond of this nectar and in collecting it carry the pollen of one flower to the stigma of another. Bees are most important in doing this work because they gather so much more of the nectar than do the other insects. They often carry home some of the pollen, too, which can be seen sticking in yellow balls to their hind legs, but enough is always brushed off to fertilize the flowers which they visit. The blossoms of red clover are so large that the short tongues of ordinary honeybees cannot reach to the bottom. It is upon the larger bumblebees that this crop depends for its ability to produce seed.

Indeed, it is so entirely dependent upon them that the crop of clover seed is in direct proportion to the number of bumblebees in the neighborhood. It is anything but pleasant to run into a big nest of bumblebees with a mower or rake, but before you build a fire over them stop to think whether you want a crop of clover seed or not.

Some beekeepers are developing strains of honeybees with exceptionally long tongues. Some of these are able to obtain honey from second crop red clover, which has smaller blossoms than the first crop. When these strains of bees become a little better developed and more widely distributed the usefulness of the bumblebee will be over.

In the case of small grain cross fertilization is impossible, since the flower is inside of a closed hull. Two varieties of wheat may be planted in adjoining fields or even in the same field without the slightest danger of mixing. Varieties of corn, on the other hand, often mix when as much as forty rods apart.

The selection of seed corn will be taken up in the next article. The best method of selecting small grain is by means of the fanning mill. By running through three or four times as much seed as is needed all the small grains may be sieved out and the light ones blown over, leaving only the heaviest, strongest ones for planting.

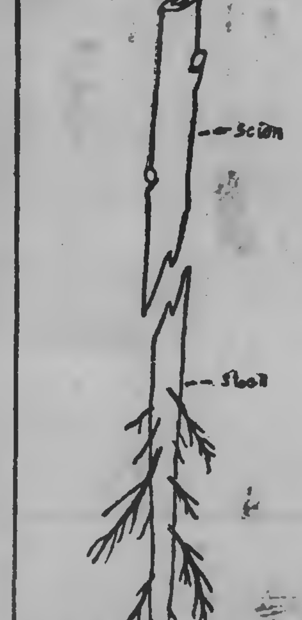

FIG. XIII—THE STOCK AND SCION READY TO BE UNITED.

Grain that is intended for seed should be stored carefully in order that it may go through the winter uninjured. The chief enemies of stored seed are moisture, insects and rats and mice. The seed should be dry when stored and kept where moisture cannot gain access to it. Dry seed will stand almost any amount of freezing without injury.

There are a number of insects that damage seed grain by burrowing into the germ. If the seed room is tight, they may be killed by fumigating with carbon disulphide used at the rate of a pound to each thousand cubic feet of space. Place this in an open dish on top of the seed, close the room as tightly as possible, and in a few hours the insects will be exterminated. Care should be taken not to go near the room with a light, as the gas is explosive. This same treatment is also fatal to rats and mice, unless they have some way of escaping from the room. If possible the seed room should be so well built that these pests cannot get into it.

The second method of plant propagation is by division—that is, by planting parts of the plant itself. Potatoes are propagated in this way almost entirely. If small willow and poplar branches are stuck into the ground, they will grow into trees. Apple and other fruit trees are propagated either by grafting or budding. Apple trees may be raised from seed, but the fruit of seedling trees is usually worthless. By taking a part of the tree and growing another from it, it will, of course, bear the same kind of fruit.

Grafting consists of joining pieces of small branches or scions of the tree which is to be propagated to pieces of roots or stocks. The roots of yearling seedlings are used for stocks. The scions, which should be about the size of a lead pencil, should be cut in the fall and packed in sand. The grafting can be done at any time during the winter. All that is necessary is to cut the lower end of the scion and the upper end of the stock at an angle, as shown in Fig. 13. These are then carefully fitted together and tied with a little common string. The essential point is to be sure to have the cambium layer of the scion join that of the stock. This cambium layer is the thin, light brown portion between the bark and the wood. It is the point where growth takes place.

The completed graft, which should be eight to ten inches long, is again packed in sand. In the spring the grafts are planted in a row in the garden and left until they are two or three years old, when they may be transplanted to their permanent place in the orchard.

Three young men were drowned at Richmond, Va., when their pleasure launch was washed over a dam.

"A swelled head may grow from two causes, but in either case it's a nuisance on your shoulders."

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, April 1.—The railways reported the receipts of live stock at the City Market for Wednesday and Thursday as being 122 carloads, consisting of 2070 cattle, 1836 hogs, 410 sheep and 174 calves.

Exporters—Export steers, $5.30 to $5.60; bulls, $4 to $5. The bulk of the export steers sold around $5.40 to $5.50.

Butchers—George Rowntree bought for the Harris Abattoir Co., 600 cattle during the two days, therefore we give his quotations of the cattle bought to kill which were as follows: Easter, fancy cattle, $5.60 to $6.25; exporters, $5.30 to $5.60; butchers, $4.50 to $5.30; cows, $3.60 to $4.60. Included in the 600 cattle were two loads of the best heavy finished cattle that have been on the market this year. They weighed 1390 lbs. each. Twenty-two of them were fed by Irwin Hallman, seven by Charles Hammond, and twelve by A. Snyder, all Waterloo farmers. The cattle were a credit to these men, and an example for other farmers to follow.

Stockers and Feeders.

Harry Murby reports trade light. Mr. Murby bought 200 cattle at following quotations: Steers, 900 to 1100 lbs. each, at $4 to $4.75; steers, 800 to 900 lbs. each, at $3.75 to $4; stockers, 500 to 700 lbs. each, at $3 to $3.25.

Milkers and Springers.

Trade in milkers and springers was not nearly as good as it has been. Prices ranged from $30 to $56 each, the bulk selling around $40 to $45.

Veal Calves.

The general quality of veal calves was not good, only about one calf in 25 was worthy the name of veal. Prices ranged from $3 to $7 per cwt. with few at latter price.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts light. Export ewes, $4.50 to $5 per cwt.; rams, $3.50 to $4.25; yearling lambs grain-fed, $7.25 to $7.75; common, $6 to $6 per cwt. Spring lambs sold at $5 to $8 for the bulk.

Hogs.

Prices steady. Selects, fed and watered at the market, $7.15, and $6.90 f.o.b. cars at country points.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, April 1.—Cattle—Receipts 100 head; slow and steady; prime steers, $6.25 to $6.75.

Veals—Receipts 150 head; active and 25c higher; $7 to $10.50.

Gas Export Must Cease.

Welland, Ont., April 2.—The Provincial Gas Co. received official notice from Ottawa this week that its permit to export natural gas, expiring March 31, would not be renewed, and Wednesday night at midnight the supply going to Buffalo was shut off. One-third of the Buffalo supply came from Canada.

Greek Cabinet Resigns.

Athens, April 2.—The Greek Cabinet, of which G. N. Theotokis was Premier, has resigned in protest against the action of the King, who received a deputation of citizens, contrary to the Government's wish. The deputation sought the dismissal of the director of customs.

Swallowed a Diamond.

Ottawa, April 2.—Bernard McGarry, a Toronto man, who recently entered Rosenthal's jewelry store here and got away with a $150 diamond, was yesterday morning sentenced to nine months in Central Prison. The stone was not recovered, and it is thought he swallowed it.

President Taft and Speaker Cannon have decided on a quick spot on the tariff bill.

COLOR WORDS.

Red Seems to Be the Favorite With Most of the Great Writers.

Upon tabulating the words used by Shakespeare referring to colors it is revealed that out of every hundred color words thirty may be classed as red. Next follow twenty-two white, twenty black, seventeen yellow, seven green and only four blue. Thus Shakespeare's favorite color word was red, and investigation will show that this is the characteristic color of nearly all great writers. For instance, it is the color word most often employed by Tennyson.

In all great works of human interest red predominates, as it is the color of the very strongest of our passions and impulses—the color of hot blood. There is no color so warm, so full of joy and life, so overflowing with vitality.

Red is the color of glowing iron—of heat and passion. In nature red hastens the growth of trees, while at the same time it quickens all rotting and decay. Plans grown under red glass will grow four times as quickly as under white light, and grow to four times their usual height.

Red in excess has an evil effect. For example, an excess of red light makes one irritable and nervous. In excess red produces homicidal mania—the desire to kill. The effect of red upon various animals is well known, it having the power of enraging the bull, the tiger and the turkey.—London Scraps.

Paid Her Back.

Mae—So you are engaged to George! I refused him three times. Ethel—That must have been what he meant when he told me that he had had several narrow escapes.

The Flame.

Clara—That man who just passed was an old flame of mine. Kate—Indeed! What happened between you? Clara—Oh, he flared up one day and went out.

Conmee Wins Again.

Ottawa, April 2.—In the railway committee yesterday morning another protest from the Province of Ontario was registered and disregarded. The bill is to incorporate the Superior & Western Ontario Railway Co., and James Conmee backed it.

THIS FREAK CALF HAS A VERY PUZZLING ANATOMY

Double Head, Camel Back and Six Legs—Purchased by Mr. W. J. Gillott of Millbrook From Franklin Farmer —Will be Shown at Fall Fairs.

About the greatest on record monstrosity in the way of a freak calf is a double-headed six-legged, well-developed animal owned by Mr. W. J. Gelloitt, of Millbrook. The calf, which like most animals so abnormally developed, did not live and Mr. Gelloit brought it to the city today, to have it mounted by Mr. Edwin Elcome, the local taxedermist.

It was seen by a Review representative at the White House today and the curiosity to be appreciated needs to be seen as it is difficult to give an adequate description of it. It has a double head. That is, it has all the members of two heads in one large head. On the front of the head is an ear with two passages of hearing and there is an ear on each side. The calf has two legs in front and four behind. There are two noses and four eyes, two separate hearts and livers and to add to freakishness of all the calf has a camel or hump back and is well covered with hair as long as that as would be on a calf several months old.

Mr. Gelloit purchased the calf from Mr. John McCroery, Franklin P.O., and its owner intends to exhibit it on the fair midways this fall.

COAL DISCOVERED IN EMILY IT BURNED WELL IN TEST

Lindsay, April 1.—Coal has been found on the farm of Mr. George J. Winn, lot 4, con. 8, Emily, and considerable excitement reigns in the vicinity as a result of the find.

Tuesday Mr. Winn noticed a stratum of dark rock protruding from the earth on a path along the side of and running through his farm. The formation strongly resembled coal and an investigation immediately followed.

The stratum was found to extend some distance and there seemed to be an unlimited supply. A quantity of it was loosened and taken to the house and placed in the fire, where it burned brightly for some time, leaving cinders similar to those produced by coal.

Mr. Winn was in Lindsay to-day, and stated that there seemed to be an endless supply of coal in the ridge, and that it appeared to be a trifle softer than the anthracite. He felt confident that it was a coal mine and intended making further investigations.

The ridge in which the coal was found runs through the township of Emily to Mount Pleasant.

A gentleman who visited this district last summer, and who was interested in the Pennsylvania coal mines, gave it as his opinion that the ridge of hills were coal bearing.

It would certainly be a great thing for Lindsay if Mr. Winn's discovery turns out to be the real thing. A number of local citizens intend driving out to view the ridge to-morrow and will procure samples of the coal.

The public will await with interest the outcome of further investigations and if coal is found in sufficient quantities to encourage immediate operations the discovery will prove a veritable bananza.

STAFF BAND WILL BE HERE TO-MORROW MORNING

The Territorial Staff Band of the Salvation Army, Toronto, will arrive in Peterborough to-morrow and will be at the barracks at the meetings on Saturday night and Sunday, giving a special musical service Sunday afternoon. The band has twenty-five musicians and is the leading musical organization of the territory, and all its members are staff officers at headquarters.

The band will arrive on the C.P.R. from Toronto to-morrow at 11.26 and will play from the station to the Y.M.C.A. where the musicians will be dined by the local Army bandsmen. At three o'clock the band will give an open air concert probably on the corner of Hunter and George streets and also at the open air meeting in the evening.

BICYCLE IS STILL POPULAR; MANY BEING SOLD IN CITY

The bicycle season is here again. Some people are of the opinion that this useful machine is out of date and is slowing dying in popularity. The figures from the factories where the bicycle is manufactured contradicts this statement. The improvements that have been made during the last few years have done a lot to keep the bicycle largely before the public eye. Probably a large number of people do not use it so much for pleasure as in former years, but with those to whom the bicycle is a convenient means of travelling to and from work, and traversing long distances the wheel is still popular. The only noticeable feature of the improvements this year is the Hercules brake which is more durable than any article of the same pattern yet put on the market. The prices for this season remain the same as has lately prevailed and the dealers in this city are looking for a big business.

PAPER ON RAISING POULTRY BY ARTIFICIAL METHODS

An interesting paper on the raising of poultry by artificial means, was read by Mr. Wilbert Bennett at the meeting of the Peterborough Poultry Association last night. There was a good attendance and Mr. Bennett was given an appreciative hearing. His paper was a well prepared one and contained many valuable facts and suggestions. A feature of the meeting was the presence of all varieties of bantams and also rose comb minorcas and black Hamburgs.

There was a good attendance of members.

PAST GRANDS NIGHT IN THE PETERBOROUGH LODGE

Last night was what is known as Past Grands' Night in Peterborough Lodge, No. 111, Independent Order of Oddfellows and many things combined to make the occasion remembered by the large gathering of members present as one of the best nights in the lodge's history. During the evening veterans' jewels were presented to the following brothers;—R. McWhinnie, S. Clegg, R. J. Kidd, F. Perry, J. D. Tully, Harry Long, Harry Evans, J. D. Craig, W. R. Turner.

P.G. Bro. D. H. Moore made the presentation on behalf of the lodge. Veterans' jewels were also forwarded to W. Bacon, J. T. Emmerson and Wm. Foord who are now non-resident members of the lodge.

The big feature of the night was the conferring of the initiatory degree by a team of all Past Grands composed as follows;—

J.P.G.—Bro. A. McFarlane.
N.G.—Bro. R. F. Morrow.
V.G.—Bro. T. Duncan.

D. Con.—Bro. Wm. Hill.
Chaplain—Bro. A. E. Saunders.
Pianist—Bro. J. D. Tully.

The work was almost faultlessly and won the praise and admiration of the large number of visiting brothers present.

The evening closed with a banquet after which a toast list was presented and honored. Songs and recitations interspersed the toast list. Dr. R. F. Morrow presided and made a good toast master.

The toast list was as follows;—

Chairman—Bro. Dr. R. F. Morrow.
God Save the King
The Grand Master and Lodge of Oddfellows of Ontario—Bro. A. A. Fowler D.D.G.M.
Charter Members—P.G. William Hincholiffe.
Visiting Brethren—Bros. Keys and Collier.
Absent Members—Bro. W. J. Green.

A recitation was also given by Bro. David Moore and a quartette, composed of Bros. Hill Hall, Prest and Thornton gave a fine selection. A recitation was also given by Bro McLaren.

THE CASE ENLARGED

Warsaw Man Charged With Forgery Remanded for One Week.

At the County Police Court this afternoon before Magistrate Edmison John Payne was charged with forgery. Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the accused, and County Attorney Wood was present in the interests of the Crown. The accused, through his counsel, elected to be tried summarily, and pleaded not guilty.

A large number of witnesses were present to give evidence for both sides of the case but they were not called as the case was not proceeded with.

The complainant who is a farmer by the name of Dunsford lives near Warsaw, and charges the defendant Payne with having signed his (Dunsford's) name to an order for some wire.

The Magistrate remanded the case until Friday afternoon, April 9th, at 2.30 p.m. and the accused was allowed his freedom on promising to appear on the above mentioned date.

At the annual meeting of the Women's Mission Circle of the Murray Street Baptist church which will be held on Tuesday evening, April 6th, at eight o'clock, Dr. Gertrude Hulet, who has spent seven years in India among the Telugu will give an address.

Dr. Hulet's address will be one of great interest and a large attendance is expected as the meeting will be an open one.

CAR OF PORK TOOK FIRE AT THE C.P.R. STATION TO-DAY

An unusual fire occurred at the C. P.R. station this morning when a car of pork on the siding by the freight sheds took fire owing to spontaneous combustion.

The damage amounted to $40 on the car and $100 to its contents.

The comparatively small loss is due to the splendid work of the fire brigade which made a very quick run and soon had the flames extinguished by the use of chemicals.

There was $3,000 worth of pork in the car which was from the Davies Co., Toronto. The Peterborough consignment had been removed from the car before the fire.

REBEKAHS LEFT FOR TORONTO

Golden Link Lodge, Rebekahs, left on a special car on the C.P.R. this morning for Toronto where they will put on the degree work in one of the lodges there. The Golden Link degree team is considered one of the best in the province.

Afternoon Tea

The Ladies' Aid Society of Knox church, held an enjoyable afternoon tea yesterday at the home of Mrs. Pollock, Perry street. There was a large attendance and everyone had a very pleasant time. The committee in charge are to be congratulated upon the splendid arrangements made.

PETERBOROUGH WILL HAVE TWO TEAMS IN THE C.L.A.

An Intermediate and Junior Twelve—Meeting Held Last Night—C.L.A. Representative Will be Appointed Tuesday.

The lacrosse enthusiasts held a well attende dand successful meeting at the Crown Hotel last night. About fifteen were in attendance and the prospects for two fast teams this year in the junior and intermediate C.L.A. are excellent. An enthusiastic discussion of the outlook for the season was held and it was agreed that the organization should be proceeded with as soon as possible. The players have received permission to use Riverside Park.

Another meeting will be held at the Crown on Tuesday night when the club's representative to the C.L.A. will be appointed.

There is plenty of material to choose from as a list of the following players from which the teams may be chosen will show;—

Galley McCoy Len McCoy, Len Dobson Jim McNern, Con. Halpin, Steve Holland Ray Best, W. Judd, W. Parnell Charles Barber, H. Rae, W. Donovan H. Donovan, Buck Doris Ern. Saunders, Jim McNichol, Dad Tucker Murt. Whaley, Kelly, M. Dusty Ben Dusty, Shockey Mein, W. Maher R Glover, Harry Gilman, Joe Gilman Fred. Derocher, W. Galley, J. McCabe Ed. Dillon, F. Dobbin, Fred McGrath Jim Clarke, H. Burns, Flannagan Connal Marrin, George Lynch Pete Glover, Vic Hamilton, Robertson, H. Staunton and Brandt.

MIKE CARLIN, WANTED AT LINDSAY, IS AT COBALT

Assailant of Constable Shortt Did Not go to the Northwest as Was Stated—Is Reported to be in Elk City.

The Lindsay Post says;

Michael Carlin has the mining fever, or to be precise, "Cobaltitis."

The now famous Michael is aspiring to be a silver king, and has bobbed up serenely in Cobalt, with the mining fever breaking out all over him.

A few days ago the Post stated that Carlin had boarded a side door Pullman, loaded with settler's effects, at Peterborough and had secreted himself among the articles in the car in an effort to reach "the wild and wooly west."

The Post on several occasions stated that Constable Shortt's assailant was in Peterborough county and it made that statement because it had positive proof that the ex-jail bird was really there.

However, it appears that Michael did not reach the land of the prairie in his latest box car escapade. The Post has been informed by one who knew Carlin in the olden days that he said good-bye to his "sleeper" at North Bay and was seen viewing the scenery in that northern town. The locality did not seem to suit his aesthetic tastes, however, for he shook the dust, or at least the mud of the town off his cordovans and hied away to Cobalt.

A former Lindsay resident was seated the other day enjoying a frugal repast in one of the mining town hotels, when a figure entered the dining hall with an abnormal strut, and took a chair at the table. The Lindsay man sized him up, and nearly went through the floor when he discovered that the stranger was an old Lindsayite in the person of Michael Carlin. Mihcael had a voracious appetite and chiselled desolation into everything in the eating line. He did not notice the surprised expression on the face of the former Lindsay resident, and kept on "sawing wood," so to speak. At the conclusion of the meal Mike began to talk business and in answer to a question, stated he was bound for Elk Lake.

Nothing was thought of the incident until that evening when the Lindsay man in looking over the Weekly Post, learned that there was a reward of $50.00 offered for the arrest of the notorious Michael.

Carlin is in Elk city at present having reached there over the wagon route in company with a gang of men who were bringing in supplies

BASEBALL ENTHUSIASTS ASK TO ATTEND MEETING TO-NIGHT

At the Y M.C.A. at 8 O'clock—Representatives From Clubs Will be Present—Baseball Situation as it Exists in Peterborough Will be Discussed.

Baseball enthusiasts are reminded of the baseball meeting to be held in the Y.M.C.A. at eight o'clock to discuss the baseball situation and the advisability of forming a senior city league. The fine weather has started the fever and their is evidence everywhere that much enthusiasm exists in the prospects for this season. Representatives of the T.A.S.A.C., Strathconas, West Ends, South End A.C. and Y. M. C. A. have intimated that they will be present, as have also a number of local sports who are interested in the summer sport. Every club who will be interested in baseball this summer is asked to be represented so that a thorough understanding may be reached as to what will be done this season. There will be a capbale chairman at the meeting and a lively discussion will likely result.

"Knockers" are especially invited and will be allowed to give their views on the situation as this is the only time to do it.

THE HAVELOCK MIDLAND LEAGUE TEAM ORGANIZES

Special to the Review.

Havelock April 1.—Football supporters turned out in large numbers last night at the organization meeting in the Council Chamber and if the enthusiasm exhibited is any guarantee of success Havelock has a good future before it in football this year.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year;—

Hon. President—E. J. Murphy.
Hon. Vice-President—H. W. Roche.
President—Andrew Ormiston.
1st Vice-President—Jas. Knox.
2nd Vice-President—S. S. Joyce.
3rd Vice-President—F. Haig.
Secretary—Wm. Brymns.
Treasurer—W. Hitchins.
Manager—K. McKay.
Captain—H. T. Andrews.

Other matters of general interest were settled and it was decided to send a representative to the meeting of the Midland League in Peterborough on April 3rd.

Y.M.C.A. FOOTBALL TEAM ORGANIZED LAST NIGHT

A large and enthusiastic gathering was held at the YMCA last night when the YMCA football team was organized and will be entered in the Midland Football League. Besides the election of officers Messrs. Collings and Caniff were appointed to represent this club at the league meeting in the YMCA on Saturday afternoon.

The colors of the club will be blue sweaters with white trimmings and a white triangle with a "Y" in the centre on the breast.

The officers elected were;

Pres—W S Collings.
Vice-Pres—D B MacRae
Sec-Treas—Stanley Caniff.
Manager—J E Sullivan.
Executive Committee —J Archibald and R Evans.

The meeting adjourned until Wednesday evening when a full attendance is requested.

PETERBOROUGH SPORTSMEN INTERESTED IN BIG RACE

Great interest is being taken in Peterborough in the Marathon Derby, which is to be run at New York tomorrow. Betting has been fairly brisk, and with the local fans Tom Longboat, "the daddy of them all," is the favorite. Yesterday a well-known sportsman wagered $200 against $125 that Longboat would win. A local man who has been watching the work of the great runners daily also picks the Indian. Here is the way he figures they will finish:

Longboat	First
Dorando	Second
St. Yves	Third
Shrubb	Fourth
Hayes	Fifth
Maloney	Sixth

Another local man picks Longboat to win with Shrubb second and Dorando third. St. Yves, the Frenchman, is credited with doing the Marathon distance in 2.31.33, and if that is right he should be pretty nearly a safe bet for first place.

JUNIOR DEPT. OF THE Y.M.C.A.

COMMITTEE RECOMMENDS PAYMENT OF CLAIM IN FULL

The Legal Committee will recommend to the City Council that Mr. Johnston Greer be paid $90, the full amount of his claim against the city for an accident he met with a few weeks ago. This was decided on at a meeting last night.

Those present were Ald Turner, chairman; Aldermen Duffus and Metheral, Mayor Rush and City Solicitor Hall.

Mr. Wm. Higgins appeared before the committee on behalf of Mr. Johnston Greer, who has a claim against the city for an accident he met with some time ago. Mr. Higgins explained how the walk on Water street north was dangerous. There is no walk at the place where there should be and the water runs down from the gravel pit. The place is a dangerous one and he thought the city was liable. He also complained about the wire that was laid on the walk to keep the boards down. The wire is broken in many places and the ends stick up and catches ladies' dresses and frequently people fall over them.

Mr Johnston Greer addressed the committee. He said the walk is in bad repair and water and ice accumulate and makes it slippery. That night he slipped and fell. The walk has been taken up for a distance of sixteen feet nine inches. He said when he slipped he fell backwards and struck his wrist on a plank that was out of place.

Mr. Higgins and the aldermen argued the matter for some time. It appears that the planks have been out of the particular place for four or five years and no teams have been crossing there during that time.

Mr. Allison was also present and he corroborated everything that the other two men had said. He maintained that had the plank been there the ice would not have accumulated and the accident would not have occurred. He and Mr. Higgins both stated that the north end of the town is very badly neglected. They receive no attention whatever from the city.

Mr. Greer asked for $90. He was off duty for a month and his doctor bill was $25. He was only asking for the bare amount that he was out of pocket.

When the interested parties retired the committee came to the conclusion that the claim should be paid and Ald Duffus and Ald. Metheral moved the motion and it carried.

MR METHERAL'S CLAIM.

Another claim for damages was from Mr. W. G. Metheral, caused by the blocking up of Aylmer street last year for a month and a half. Both the city engineer and the city solicitor were of the opinion that Mr. Metheral was not entitled to any damages as the entrance to his shop was 150 feet north of the barricade, and was not interfered with in any way.

The chairman stated that in the face of the two reports he could not see that the committee could recommend anything else. There may have been a little inconvenience but not sufficient to cause any damage.

After a long discussion Mayor Rush moved that no action be taken. This was seconded by Ald. Duffus and carried.

WORK OF Y. M. C. A. AMONG MILITIA MEN OF CANADA

For nearly forty years the Young Men's Christian Association has carried on its work and exerted its influence among the militia men of Canada. This work was started at Niagara-on-the Lake at the annual training camp of the volunteers of Ontario.

From a small beginning this work has grown to tremendous proportions and almost every country now regards the Young Men's Christian Association as a necessity where troops are assembled.

In time of peace this work might seem pleasant and easy but in time of war there might seem no place for the Association amongst soldiers engaged in fighting.

During the Spanish-American war and the South African War representatives of the Association were found with the soldiers and during the Russo-Japanese war the Association was represented in the firing line by its secretaries. So much was the work of the Association among the Japanese soldiers appreciated that the Emperor and Empress of Japan at the close of the war gave to the Association $5000 in gold for the extension of its work.

Mr C. V. Hibbard was one of the secretaries who were with the Japanese army during the war and next Sunday he is to address a meeting of men in the YMCA. gymnasium at 4.15 pm. His subject will be "With the Japanese Army in Manchuria." He also speaks in St Paul's church Sunday evening.

WILL PUT ON DEGREE WORK AT MILLBROOK

On the night of Good Friday, Peterborough Lodge, IOOF, having accepted an invitation from Millbrook Lodge, will run a special train to that village and put on the work of the three degrees for the lodge there.

ODDFELLOWS AND DIVINE SERVICE

Peterborough and Otonabee Lodges IOOF., will attend divine service on Sunday, April 25th, to celebrate their 90th anniversary. This is an annual affair and it is expected that there will be a large turnout present. The service this year will likely be held at St. Andrew's church.

In connection with the football club organized by the YMCA. it may be stated that one does not have to be a member of the YMCA. to belong to the club. The same applies to the YMCA. baseball team.

SPORTING NEWS

DE ROUEN PUT UP GAME BOUT AGAINST THE LION TAMER

E. W. Cochrane, in the Kansas City Journal, sums up the match between Gotch and De Rouen last Thursday, as follows:

Before approximately 15,000 people, the largest crowd that ever attended a wrestling match in the West, Frank Gotch, of Humboldt, Ia., champion of the world, won two straight falls from Raoul de Rouen, champion of France, in Convention Hall last night. The first fall was on a reverse Nelson hold, obtained in 34 minutes and 34 seconds. The second was a perfect toe hold, the famous Gotch wrestling creation, in thirteen minutes flat.

As in many of his previous matches of even world-wide interest, Gotch had his opponent outclassed. He was far more clever than the French giant and knows the game better. Despite this fact it was a great battle to the wrestling crowd, and only won after a bitter fight, despite the shortness of the two falls. Unlike George Hackenschmidt, the Russian lion, who quit like a cur on the mat in Chicago over a year ago and the bout was awarded to Gotch, Raoul de Rouen is as game a wrestler as ever stepped on a mat. Gotch has the big advantage over him mentioned, but he is no better fighter than the man from France. Gotch won the falls by scientific wrestling and there was little roughing, but he had to use all his cleverness to gain the falls in the time that he did.

The most spectacular part of the performance was the time when Raoul de Rouen, suffering severe pain because of the toe hold which Gotch had on him and looked good for a fall, used his brute strength to break the hold. His ankle was in bad condition after this hold was broken and the Frenchman suffered pain throughout the match as a result. He showed his gameness in breaking this hold, in enduring the pain he was forced to endure for several minutes in order to break it. He got in such a position, after using all his brute strength, that he could turn his body over on the mat and Gotch lost his grip.

On a few occasions both the Frenchman and the idol of American wrestling fans resorted to roughness, but it was not such roughness as has characterized the matches held here before. The Frenchman soon found that Gotch was the better rougher and this sort of work stopped in short order. Gotch picked the Frenchman up several times and dropped him to the mat, showing that, despite his lack of a few pounds in classing with the Frenchman in weight, the weight of the Kennedy protege was none too much for him to juggle about the ring just as he has juggled the other champions of Europe and defeated them.

From the tap of the gong, which opened the first round, both men watched every available opportunity to grab a hold. At no time were they failing to study each other out and trying to find the weak points in each other's style, which would give them an opportunity to win. Every lead was blocked, every hold was fought against and the Frenchman broke many holds which looked good for victory. Gotch was surprised many times in the ability of his opponent to break hammerlocks and half-nelson holds which would have put many wrestlers of seemingly as much class to the mat and defeat.

Frank Gotch was on the offensive most of the time and forced his opponent to take the defensive. At but one time in the entire bout did De Rouen have Gotch on the mat and an opportunity to win a fall. Gotch soon got out of the grasp of the French title holder and at no other time did De Rouen seem to have Gotch in a difficult position. While the Frenchman was on the defensive side of the argument, he put up a game fight on that end of it. Hold after hold was broken, and when Gotch put the shoulders of the big athlete to the mat it was on holds that could not be broken by any wrestler in the business.

When Gotch won his fall 15,000 people stood up in the big hall and cheered his victory as the victory of an athlete was never cheered before in this city. He was their idol, and to defeat De Rouen meant as much to them as anything of the kind could ever mean.

ROUGH WRESTLING IN TURKEY MAHMOUT KILLED OPPONENT

That wrestling in America, generally confined to the catch as catch can style, is merely child's play in comparison to that in vogue in Bulgaria and Turkey, is the statement of Antonio Pierri, the man who brought Noureddin Yusuff and last, Yussif Mahmout to the United States. Pierri is at present managing the last named "unspeakable."

Mahmout will meet Frank Gotch American champion wrestler of the world, in a match for the world's championship in Chicago April 14.

The men will wrestle catch as catch can style.

"In this country it is indeed an unusual occurrence for a high-class wrestler to be injured let alone killed" said Pierri. "In Bulgaria and Turkey it is nothing remarkable for a man to die from the result of injuries received in a match. Mahmout has killed his man. That is, he did not kill his opponent outright but the grappler was so badly hurt that he died in two hours from the effects of the gruelling contest."

Mahmout has beaten Charles Olsen, Fred Beell, Americus, Tom Jenkins, and practically every wrestler of note in this country. He has never used rough tactics. In fact he seems as docile as a lamb even in a match. In almost every city where he has wrestled since coming to this country, about three years ago he has always put up a clean exhibition no matter if his opponent did try unfair tactics on him.

Pierri is a Bulgarian. He declares that there are few men in this country who know the styles of wrestling under which the Turks and Bulgarians compete.

"In the first place, have you ever noticed that Turkish and Bulgarian wrestlers always have their hair clipped. The reasons is that in Bulgaria and Turkey the wrestlers oil themselves from head to foot. Their only article of clothing is a pair of leather trunks that do not quite reach to the knees. These leather trunks are soaked in oil so that they are as slippery as a man's body.

"The wrestlers wear no shoes. You might think it impossible for one man to hold another. It is hard, but there is where the punishment came in. Two years ago Mahmout met a man, known as Little Yousuff, at Geni Foejar, Bularia. The men wrestled for three hours and 40 minutes, when Mahmout finally gained a fall. Yousuff was carried away from the scene of battle. In two hours he was dead.

"They do not think much of human life in Turkey. Take the case of Mahmout. When he was young he contracted smallpox. They turned him out of house and home. He was left to wander about the farm to get well or die as he might. Mahmout became delirious. He scratched his head and that is responsible for numerous scars there.

"Any style of wrestling goes once the men are oiled and have on their leather trunks. There is only one difference to the American style, and that is a fall is constituted as soon as one shoulder touches the ground. The men naturally have to inflict great punishment or wear out opponents to win, for the reason that they cannot get a firm grip.

"In Bulgaria and Turkey I should say that there are at least 1500 first class heavyweight wrestlers. Each ruler has his own staff of wrestlers, who act in a measure as his bodyguard. Only the best of these wrestlers are allowed to wear the sultan's decoration. The prizes for most of the big wrestling tournaments which are held in the big open fields, on the bare ground, are sheep, horses or cattle. Sometimes for an important match a cash prize is awarded

FRED SIMPSON'S RACE IN BRANTFORD DECLARED OFF

Brantford, Ont., April 1.—The twelve-mile race between Fred Simpson, the Ojibway Indian, and a relay team composed of Bill Cumming and Henry Jackson, scheduled for this city to-night, has been postponed until April 12th.

Simpson has the most important engagement of his career on Good Friday, a 20-mile race with Fred Appleby, the English wonder, at Rosedale grounds, Toronto, in connection with the baseball game and he does not want to risk the chance of accident by competing here before that date.

Brantfordites are somewhat disappointed at the postponement but in view of the circumstances think he has made a wise move.

APPLEBY AT ROSEDALE.

Fred Appleby, the English runner, who will run Fred Simpson at Rosedale on Good Friday, in connection with the baseball game, holds the world's record of 1.20.04 2-5 for 15 miles, but after that the Indian will have it on him. Appleby may have defeated Shrubb at fifteen miles, but Simpson defeated the former in the Olympic Marathon. The present race just splits the difference between the two distances, and it remains to be seen who is the greater at twenty miles, the speedy fifteen-miler or the strong Marathon man.

Appleby is at present in New Jersey but will come to Toronto on Monday to prepare for his first race as a professional. He has been very anxious to meet either Longboat or Shrubb, but their other engagements made it impossible for him to enter into a contract with either of them for some time to come. He seems to have regarded the Ojibway Thunderbolt as the next best thing and he should be able to judge as he met him in London.

JACK JOHNSON WAS ARRESTED

New York, March 31.—The law is after Johnson. It seems that last year about this time, he was circulating in the Tenderloin and lost some jewellery. He caused the arrest of two women. They, in turn, caused his arrest on a charge of indecent conduct. Johnson has been out on $1,000 bail since his arrest.

Assistant District-Attorney Dana appeared in the Court of Special Sessions yesterday, and moved that the trial of Johnson be called on Thursday morning. Frank Wheaton, a negro lawyer, representing Johnson, had no objection.

ROLLER WILL MEET ROGERS

Seattle March 31.—Dr. B. F. Roller is preparing himself carefully for a hard campaign on the mat this summer. He and Joe Carroll are working out every day and they are both feeling fine. Roller is matched to wrestle Lundin the Swedish giant, at the Seattle theatre next Tuesday night, and then he goes to Portland, to meet John Berg, the night of April 2nd.

That is a month's job for any man but is only a beginning for Roller. He is matched to meet Jess Westergaard after his match with Berg. A little later he expects to tackle Fred Beel in Kansas City. He also expects to get some matches in Chicago and will undoubtedly go to Buffalo where the game is good, to meet Yankee Rogers and other good ones.

So Roller knows that he has got to get in tip-top shape to keep up with the programme he has mapped out for himself. He has never had experience going out on the road wrestling one one town one night and then jumping several hundred miles to engage in a match a few nights later. That sort of thing hurts some athletes and it may prove the undoing of Roller but he is going to take a chance.

MIDLAND LEAGUE ON SATURDAY

Footballers Will Meet at Y. M. C. A. for Organization

The Midland Football League will be organized on Saturday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock, when a meeting of representatives of the various clubs will be held at the Y.M.C.A. here. Besides the local club it is expected that Lakefield, Lindsay, Bowmanville and Cobourg will all have representatives here and probably one or two other towns. The prospects for the league are very bright and there should be some good football seen here this spring.

ATHLETICS

Local lovers of athletics are looking forward with interest to the athletic events to be pulled off at the roller rink on Monday evening next. The programme will consist of the following:

Two mile relay race with four men in team.

Two mile distance race.

Quarter mile race.

Potato race.

The meet is arousing considerable enthusiasm amongst local sprinters, and it is expected that representatives from the Collegiate Institute, CLS, YMCA, and Press Clubs will figure in the events.

It is expected as a result of this meet, that greater interest will be taken in athletics and who knows but that a live local athletic association may follow.

The prizes for the different events are on exhibition in the window of Mr McCarty's jewelry store—Post.

A Toronto despatch says;

Appleby beat Shrubb twice at fifteen miles, Simpson beat Appleby at 26 miles 385 yards, and Shrubb beat Simpson at 12 miles. What will happen with Appleby and Simpson at 20 miles?

SPORTING TALK

Jack Johnson indignantly denies that he is yellow. He probably wants it understood that he is black.

BOXING

The New York World expert writes:

It is the Lord help Johnson if he ever meets Jeffries. Because why!

I have seen Jeffries work and have watched his every move.

I know of his determination to go in the ring and meet Johnson or anybody else in the heavyweight line for whatever may be handed to him in the way of a scrap for the heavyweight title.

I know that Jeffries has his heart set on getting back that heavyweight title for the white man.

I saw Johnson work yesterday afternoon. He is not and never can be a genuine heavyweight champion.

He lacks the punch. He lacks the stamina. He hasn't any ring sense. How such a man got away with poor but plucky little Tommy Burns is a mystery to me. He showed nothing yesterday, and I don't believe he ever had anything to show.

BOWLING

Two games were played in the Ten Pin League one on Wednesday night when the Iroquois took three from the Hams, and one last night when the Indians took two from the Bankers. The Bankers and Pacifics are now tied for first place.

The scores were;

WRESTLING

Mohl and Rogers are at it continuously. The following is from the St Thomas Times;

There can be no doubt that Manager William Devine is alert to most things in the show business, and he pulled off a great card last night when he signed the world-famous Yankee-Rogers here in St. Thomas. The clever Buffalo boy will wrestle here at the Grand Opera House on Saturday night, April 3 and his opponent will be one of the most clever men in the business, Fritz Mohl the German giant of 245 pounds. Mohl came over to this country with George Hackenschmidt and is the biggest man in the business and is also one of the cleverest. Rogers, who is playing to capacity houses in Toronto, where his clean, clever work has made him a great favorite with press and public alike, stands 6 feet 2 inches tall and draws the scale at 207 pounds and there is never a moment of quietness when he is on the mat. Out of 41 matches this season he has only lost one and that was by default when he dislocated a rib in his match with Hassan Abdallah the Terrible Turk, after each man had got a fall. The doctors forbid him to go on with the bout although he was quite willing. The injury was not serious and he is now well and ready for his first appearance here. A big crowd is sure to be on hand to see the coming world's champion and they can rest assured they will get plenty of excitement for their money as both men are ready and willing to mix things at all times.

Rogers and his manager, W. B. Naylor, the well known promoter, will arrive here on Saturday morning from Toronto.

ORIENTAL PARAGONS.

Japan's Four and Twenty Models of Filial Piety.

Filial piety, as is well known, is the special virtue of China and Japan. From it springs loyalty to the emperor, who is regarded as "the father and mother of his people." There are no greater favorites with the Japanese than the "four and twenty paragons of filial piety," whose acts of virtue are the subjects of Chinese legend.

One of the paragons had a cruel stepmother, who was very fond of fish. Never repining at her cruel treatment of him, he lay down on the frozen surface of a lake. The warmth of his body melted a hole in the ice, at which two carp came up to breathe. These he caught and took home to his stepmother.

Another paragon, who was of the female sex, clung to the jaws of a tiger that was about to devour her father until the latter escaped.

The drollest of all these stories is that of Rorashi. This paragon, though seventy years old, used to dress in baby's clothes and crawl about on the floor, his object being to delude his parents, who were really over ninety years of age, into the idea that they could not be so very old, after all, as they had such an exceedingly infantile son.—Sunday Magazine.

"Globe" Praises Lulu Glaser

The following is from Tuesday's Toronto Globe:

Lulu Glaser, with that same old infectious giggling, gurgling, chuckling laugh of hers, is back at the Princess Theatre after a four years' absence.

Her new offering is "Mlle. Mischief," and it's by long odds the best piece she has had since the days of "Dolly Varden." She so captivated her big audience at the Princess last night that they gave her curtain calls galore, and finally demanded a speech.

Vienna gave us "The Merry Widow," and Vienna has given us "Mlle. Mischief." Though lacking the feature of one great waltz hit, such as "The Merry Widow" has, this new operetta is far and away above the average. It is light, almost farcial, in plot, cleverly written with many bright lines, and the music, though not brilliant, is pleasingly tuneful.

Sydney Rosenfeld has Americanized the book from the Austrian of Kraatz and Von Sterk, and Carl M. Ziehrer wrote the score. J. C. Huffman and Ned Wayburn, past masters in the art of staging, deserve credit for staging this in excellent style.

The chief beauty of "Mlle. Mischief" is that it gives Lulu Glaser a fine chance to show what a delightful comedienne she is. She masquerades as a young man, and it's safe to say that there's no better stage girl-boy in the business to-day. To win a big wager, Mlle. Mischief dons male attire and remains in Fremstadt barracks for twenty-four hours as a result, and her troubles in hiding the secret of sex create much of the comedy. When the Colonel gives orders that this new mollycoddle be given hot baths and cold baths and scoured and scrubbed until feathered properly, her predicament may be imagined. But she manages by diplomacy to get out of her troubles.

There are a dozen musical numbers, and special mention should be made of Miss Gertrude Darrell's solo in the first act. She had the style of a grand opera artist, and acts as well as sings her song "The Army Corps" is a well-rendered male chorus. Mr. Alexander Clarke, in his song, "Ladies, Beware," performs an osculatory feat that challenges the admiration of the whole audience. He has to kiss half a dozen stunning stage beauties, and he does it so artistically that the audience insists on several repetitions.

Mr. Clarke, as Millionaire Meline, Roy Atwell as Freddy Meline, his dudish son, William Rosell, as Andre Claire, the artist, W. P. Carleton as Lieut. Berner, and Robert Broderick as Col. Romber, all sustain the action of the comedy. Frank Farrington, as the irascible sergeant, gets many a laugh, and his whistling is a hit.

A word about the chorus. In looks, gowns and voices it is above par. The musical numbers go with a swing, and a verve that is really refreshing. The stage is simply a riot of color in the ensemble scenes.

An augmented orchestra, under Albert Krause's baton, interprets the score pleasantly.

SOCIAL EVENING AT ST. ANDREW'S

A successful social evening was spent in St. Andrew's Guild Hall last night under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Mission Band. An unusually large number were present and the evening was one of the brightest and most enjoyable that has been held in the church for a long time. One of the most amusing features of the programme was discovered while refreshments were being served. Cream puffs were passed around and instead of the cream being inside there was a slip of paper with "April Fool" printed on it.

The programme was as follows;—

Piano Duet—Misses L. Shearer and M. Potter.

Vocal Solo—Miss Rea. Potter.

Vocal Duet—Misses Georgina and Prudy Long.

Piano Duet—Misses Phyllis Dawson and Helen Henry.

Solo—Miss Bella King.

Solo—Mr. J. Mercier.

Piano Solo—Misses Dawson and E. Tully

Dialogue—"Mr. Brown the only man in town."—Mr. E. Dormer took the part of Mr. Brown and Misses E. Mathieson, C. Montgomery, G. Mowat, Jean Kennedy, C. Mowat also took part. Mr. Staunton was the director.

Solo—Mr. Jas. Browne.

Piano Solo—Miss Myrtle Kennedy.

Solo—Mr. Gordon Wright.

Refreshments were served and during this time Miss Jean Girven rendered several instrumental selections.

Rev. Mr. Potter expressed his thanks upon behalf of the Mission Band to all those who had taken part in the programme.

The Misses Long gave another duet and the gathering closed with the doxology.

Loss Will Reach $1000

Mr. Arthur Bell whose house was destroyed by fire yesterday was in the city today and informed the Review that his loss will be in the neighborhood of $1000. Mr. Bell stated that he was up all night, watching the barns for fear that sparks from the fire would alight on them and thus cause some more damage. Happily the fire died out and all that remains is a few pieces of elm logs.

COPYRIGHT, 1908, BY HARPER & BROTHERS

This is a tale of Alaska, a bleak land where men and women fight each other and the relentless elements for the precious gold that lurks beneath the icy soil. Here is told a story of wild ambition, of uncontrolled passion, of men who know no law other than that of their own making; a story of a girl whose beauty and purity plunge her into deepest peril; a story of big men, big events, big thoughts and big hopes. Read of Necia, the fascinating heroine, who loves and is loved; of Gale, the man of mystery; of Stark, the killer of men; of Runnion, prince of scoundrels; of "No Creek" Lee, who comes into his own at last; of simple souled, big hearted Poleon Doret; of Lieutenant Burrell, the gallant Kentuckian who carries law and justice into the Yukon wilds and forces desperate men to recognize him as their master.

CHAPTER I.

THE LAST FRONTIER.

MANY men were in debt to the trader at Flambeau, and many counted him as a friend. The latter never reasoned why, except that he had done them favors, and in the north that counts for much. Perhaps they built likewise upon the fact that he was ever the same to all end that in days of plenty or in times of famine his store was open to every man, and all received the same measure. Nor did he raise his prices when the boats were late. They recalled one bleak and blustery autumn when the steamer sank at the Lower Ramparts, taking with her all their winter's food, how he eked out his scanty stock, dealing to each and every one his portion month by month. They remembered well the bitter winter that followed, when the specter of famine haunted their cabins and when for endless periods they cinched their belts and cursed and went hungry to sleep, accepting day by day the rations doled out to them by the grim, gray man at the log store. Some of them had money belts weighted low with gold washed from the bars at Forty Mile, and there were others who had wandered in from the Koyukuk with the first frosts, footsore and dragging, the legs of their skin boots eaten to the ankle and the taste of dog meat still in their mouths. Broken and dispirited, these had fared as well through that desperate winter as their brothers from up river and received pound for pound of musty flour, strip for strip of rusty bacon, lump for lump of precious sugar. Moreover, the price of no single thing had risen throughout the famine.

He mixed in no man's business. He took and paid his dues unfalteringly. He spoke in a level voice, and he smiled but rarely. He gazed at a stranger once and weighed him carefully; thereafter his eyes sought the distances again, as if in search of some visitor whom he knew or hoped or feared would come.

This day he stood in the door of his post staring up the sunlit river, absorbing the warmth of the arctic afternoon. The Yukon swept down around the great bend beneath the high, cut banks and past the little town, disappearing behind the wooded point below, which masked the upcoming steamers till one heard the sighing labor of their stacks before he saw their smoke.

The sound of shouting caused him to turn his head. Downstream, a thousand yards away, men were raising a flagstaff made from the trunk of a slender fir, from which the bark had been stripped, heaving on their tackle as they sang in unison. They stood well out upon the river's bank before a group of well made houses, the peeled timbers of which shone yellow in the sun. He noted the symmetrical arrangement of the buildings, noted the space about them that had been smoothed for a drill ground and from which the stumps had been removed, noted that the men wore suits of blue and noted in particular the figure of an officer commanding them.

The lines about the trader's mouth deepened, and his heavy brows contracted.

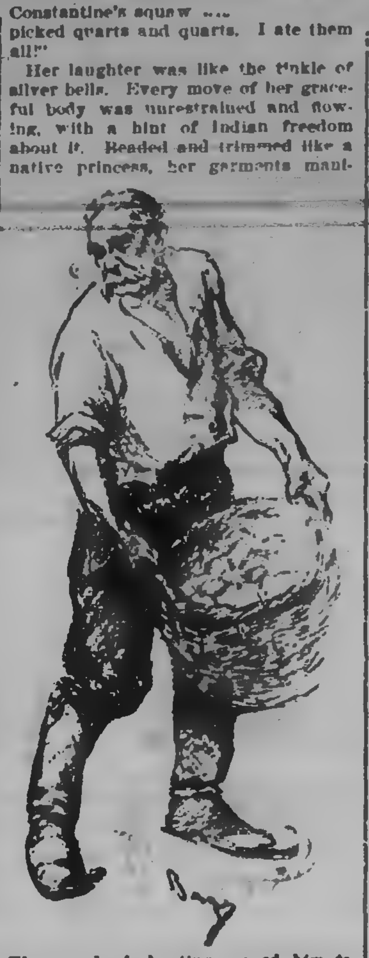
"That means the law," he murmured half aloud.

He stood so, meditating somberly, till the fragment of a song hummed lightly by a girl fell pleasantly on his ears, whereupon the shadows vanished from his face, and he turned expectantly, the edges of his teeth showing beneath his mustache, the corners of his eyes wrinkling with pleasure.

The sight was good to him, for the girl approaching down the trail was like some wood sprite, light footed, slender and dark, with twin braids of hair to her waist framing an oval face colored by the wind and sun. She was very beautiful, and a great fever surged up through the old man's veins till he gripped the boards at his side and bit sharply at the pipe between his teeth.

"The salmon berries are ripe," she announced, "and the hills back of the village are pink with them. I took Constantine's squaw .... picked quarts and quarts. I ate them all!"

Her laughter was like the tinkle of silver bells. Every move of her graceful body was unrestrained and flowing, with a hint of Indian freedom about it. Beaded and trimmed like a native princess, her garments manifested an ornature that spoke of savagery, yet they were neatly cut and held to the pattern of the whites.



The sound of shouting caused him to turn his head.

"Constantine was drunk again last night, and I had to give him a talking to when we came back. Oh, but I laid him out! He's frightened to death of me when I'm angry."

She furrowed her brow in a scowl—the daintiest, most ridiculous pucker of a brow that ever man saw—and drew her red lips into an angry pout as she recounted her temperance talk till the trader broke in, his voice very soft, his gray blue eyes as tender as those of a woman:

"It's good to have you home again, Necia. The old sun don't shine as bright when you're away, and when it rains it seems like the moss and the grass and the little trees was crying for you. I reckon everything weeps when you're gone, girl, everything except your old dad, and sometimes he feels like he'd have to bust out and join the rest of them."

"I missed you dreadfully, daddy," she said. "It seemed as if those days at the mission would never end. Father Barnum and the others were very kind, and I studied hard, but there wasn't any fun in things without you."

"I reckon you know as much as a priest now, don't you?"

"Oh, lots more," she said gravely. "You see, I am a woman."

He nodded reflectively. "So you are! I keep forgetting that."

Their faces were set toward the west, where the low sun hung over a ragged range of hills topped with everlasting white. Beyond were other ranges thrust skyward in a magnificent confusion, while still to the farther side lay the purple valley of the Koyukuk, a valley that called insistently to restless men, welcoming them in the spring and sending them back in the late summer tired and haggard with the hunger of the north.

"When will Poleon get back, do you suppose?"

"Most any day now, unless the Dawson dance halls are too much for him. It won't take him long to sell our skins if what I hear is true."

"What is that?"

"About these Cheechakos. They say there are thousands of tenderfeet up there and more coming in every day."

Gale turned his eyes downstream to the barracks and noted that the long flagstaff had at last been erected. Even as he looked he saw a bundle mounting toward its tip and then beheld the stars and stripes flutter out in the air, while the men below cheered noisily. It was some time before he answered.

"Poleon Doret is like the rest of us men up here in the north. We have taken care of ourselves so far, and I guess we're able to keep it up without the help of a smooth faced Yankee kid for guardian."

"Lieutenant Burrell isn't a Yankee," said Necia. "He is a Blue Grass man. He comes from Kentucky."

Her father grunted contemptuously. "I might have known it. A regular male man with any ginger in him would shed his coat and go to work, instead of wearing his clothes buttoned up all day. It don't take much 'savvy' to run a handful of thirteen dollar a month soldiers." Necia stirred a bit restlessly, and the trader continued: "It ain't man's work; it's—loafing. If he tries to boss us he'll get quite a surprise."

"He won't try to boss you. He has been sent here to build a military post and to protect the miners in their own self government. He won't take any part in their affairs as long as they are conducted peaceably."

The old man grunted again, with added contempt, while his daughter continued:

"This rush to the upper country has brought in all sorts of people, good, bad and worse, and the soldiers have been sent to prevent trouble and to hold things steady till the law can be established. The Canadian mounted police are sending all their worst characters down river, and our soldiers have been scattered among the American camps for our protection. I think it's fine."

"Where did you learn all this?"

"Lieutenant Burrell told me," she replied, at which her father regarded her keenly. She could not see the curious look in his eyes, nor did she turn when, a moment later, he resumed in an altered tone:

"I reckon Poleon will bring you something pretty from Dawson, eh?"

"He has never failed to bring me presents, no matter where he came from. Dear old Poleon!" She smiled tenderly. "Do you remember that first day when he drifted, singing, into sight around the bend up yonder? He had paddled his birch bark from the Chandelar without a thing to eat. Hunger and hardship only made him the happier, and the closer he drew his belt the louder he sang."

"He was bound for his 'new country.'"

"Yes; he didn't know where it lay, but the fret for travel was on him, and so he drifted and sang, as he had drifted and sung from the foot of Lake Le Barge."

"That was four years ago," mused Gale, "and he never found his 'new country,' did he?"

"No; we tied him down and choked it out of him," Necia laughed. "Dear, funny old Poleon! He loves me like a brother."

The man opened his lips, then closed them, as if on second thought, and rose to his feet, for, coming toward them up the trail from the barracks, he beheld a trim, blue coated figure. He peered at the approaching officer a moment, set his jaw more firmly and disappeared into the store.

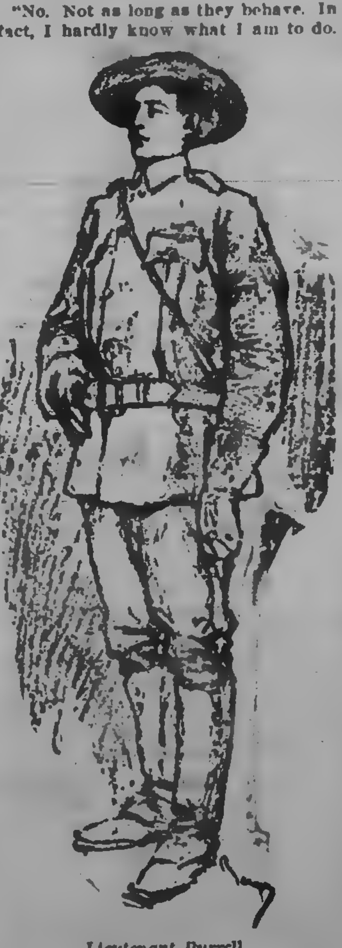
"Well, we have raised our flagstaff," said the lieutenant as he took a seat below Necia. "It's like getting settled to keep house."

"Are you lazy?" inquired the girl.

"I dare say I am," he admitted. "I've never had time to find out. Why?"

"Are you going to boss our people around?" she continued, bent on her own investigation.

"No. Not as long as they behave. In fact, I hardly know what I am to do. Maybe you can tell me." His smile was peculiarly frank and winning. "You see, it's my first command, and my instructions, although comprehensive, are rather vague. I am supposed to see that mining rights are observed, to take any criminals who kindly offer themselves up to be arrested and to sort of handle things that are too tough for the miners themselves."



Lieutenant Burrell.

"I don't believe you will be very popular with our people," Necia announced meditatively.

"Now that I think it over," he continued, "I'd rather have you like me than have the men do so."

"Of course," she nodded. "They do anything I want them to—all but father, and"—

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE DIRECTORS.

Submitted to the Shareholders at the Annual General Meeting, held at the Offices of the Company, in Toronto, on Monday, 29th March, 1909.

Your Directors have pleasure in submitting to the Shareholders the Balance Sheet of the Company as upon the 31st day of December, 1908, the combined Statement of Profit and Loss for the year, and the Certificate of Messrs. Price, Waterhouse and Company, Chartered Accountants.

The past year has been one of world-wide industrial depression and this Company, in common with others, has experienced the disadvantages of a material shrinkage in the volume of business offering, and, in view of the prevailing conditions of trade, it is gratifying to your Directors to be able to submit to the Shareholders so satisfactory a Financial Statement.

The Surplus Account shows a Profit somewhat in excess of the preceding year, and this result was obtained on a decreased output. Owing, however, to a policy of rigid economy, operating expenses were proportionately reduced, and, after ample provision for depreciation and the payment of Interest and Dividends, a substantial sum has been carried forward to the credit of Profit and Loss Account, as a result of the year's operations.

In addition to our usual conservative method of taking our inventory of materials, either at cost or the market price, whichever is the lower, $146,246.48 has been written off for depreciation, in addition to the year's expenses for renewals, repairs and maintenance, which were charged direct to operating account.

During the year the Company's original issue of Preferred Stock, amounting to $300,000.00, was retired at par, plus a premium of 5 per cent., and the maturing Bonds of the Northey Manufacturing Company, amounting to $160,000.00, were paid off.

Current liabilities have been reduced from $2,191,266.99 to $1,093,123.88, as a result of a smaller Inventory of raw materials and finished stock being required for a lesser volume of business, and the Contingent Liability on Notes Receivable discounted has been reduced from $1,161,616.44 to $302,518.17.

During the latter part of the year marked cheques to an aggregate amount of $121,207.00 were required to be deposited with tenders for Government and other contracts, and are included for Statement purposes in the Company's Bank Account, but this amount should be deducted when estimating the amount due on operating expenses.

Notwithstanding the continued industrial depression, this Company have been fortunate in securing several important contracts, which, added to current business, will keep us fairly busy during the year. During the past three months we have secured more orders than during the previous six months, and as present indications point to a material improvement in trade conditions, we look forward to the future with more confidence than at any time during the preceding year.

W. R. BROCK, President.

CERTIFICATE OF CHARTERED ACCOUNTANT.

To the Shareholders of the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited.

We have examined the books and accounts of the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited, and of its subsidiary companies (the Canada Foundry Company, Limited, and the Industrial Realty Company, of Canada, Limited), for the year 1908, and we find that the annexed Consolidated Balance Sheet and Surplus Account are correctly prepared therefrom.

During the year there have been charged to Capital Accounts only expenditures in respect of actual additions, extensions or permanent improvements, plus interest during construction. Proper provision has been made for Depreciation of Plant and Equipment.

The Inventories of Raw Material, Supplies, Work in Progress and Manufactured Products have been taken and certified by responsible officials of the Company, and have been checked by us with the factory records. The valuations have been accurately made at or below cost price, ample allowance being made in respect of goods that are either obsolete or not readily saleable.

Reserves have been made for Doubtful Accounts and Notes Receivable and for all ascertainable liabilities.

We have verified the Cash, the Investments and the Bank Balances by actual inspection or by properly certified statements.

We certify that the annexed Balance Sheet is properly drawn up so as to show the true position of the Company at December 31st, 1908, and that the Surplus Account shows the correct result of the operations for the year.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The Senate has killed the Lancaster crossings bill again.

Jos. W. Bailey of St. Thomas was killed while blasting at Cobalt.

A. D. Elliott of Winnipeg was killed in a runaway accident at Holmfield.

At Sorrento, Italy, Marion Crawford, the novelist, who has been ill for some time past, has developed symptoms of bronchial pleurisy.

At a meeting of citizens at the Windsor last night it was decided to hold an "old home week" in Montreal during the coming autumn.

A gas bag exploded accidentally on King's Wharf, Quebec, about noon yesterday. Two men named Granier and Huppe were mortally wounded.

C. E. W. Smith of Montreal has recovered judgment for $1,250,000 in New York against the Western Pacific Railway as commission on a sale of bonds.

John Evans, an employe of McClary Manufacturing Co., at London, fell 20 feet down an elevator shaft yesterday afternoon and died of his injuries a few hours later.

Mrs. W. Hewes Oliphant of Toronto is the winner of the $400 prize offered by the Navy League of Canada for the best essay on the question, "Shall Canada have a navy of her own?"

Can Restrict Business.

New York, April 2.—The section of the new insurance law of this state which limits to $150,000,000, the amount of business which an insurance company may write in one year, was declared constitutional by Justice O'Gorman in the New York Supreme Court yesterday.

The decision was given in the case of Charles H. Bush, an agent of the New York Life Insurance Co. who brought suit to recover from that company his commission upon a life insurance policy for $25,000 which the company rejected in December last.

The reason given for the rejection was that the company had already accepted enough business to make up the $150,000,000 limit.

Insurance Hearing Is Ended.

Ottawa, April 2.—The banking and commerce committee of the Commons completed the hearing of evidence regarding the insurance bill yesterday morning. The proposed measure will now be considered by the sub-committee.

John R. Reid of Ottawa, president of the Life Underwriters' Association of Canada, presented the case for the agents before the committee. He supported the attitude of the life managers in opposing the abolition of estimates and deferred dividend policies. He objected to the publication of all salaries over $4,000. He thought that was carrying publicity too far.

Liberal In High River.

High River, Alta., April 2.—The recount at High River has elected L. M. Roberts, Liberal, by 10 majority.

The recount in Macleod is not completed so far, but Genge, Liberal, has 14 majority.

Fatal Fall.

Winnipeg, April 2.—Samuel Thompson, an employe of the Dominion Bridge Co., was instantly killed yesterday morning by falling from the new union depot.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

DON'T BREAK DOWN.

Occasional Flights From the Grind Better Than Skilled Specialists.

There would not be so many worn-out, fagged looking women if we learned early the value of that ounce of prevention. With most of us prevention is like thunder—it comes after the danger is past.

So much of the misery of life is preventable that it is pitiful how rarely the effort is made. We lose our looks, break down before our time and either are snuffed out altogether or hang on creaking hinges when we should be in the full flush of living.

Most women act as if they were fatalists—what must be must be. Then they groan when the inevitable occurs instead of living up to the true fatalist spirit of stoicism.

Perhaps you are one of the persons who ever take any rest. You look on life as a race to be run, forgetting that the strongest runner goes slow until the finish.

Have you the foolish idea that to stop a minute to read the papers or to dip into a famous book is stealing time that should be devoted to husband or children? Are you charitable to every one but yourself and look upon letting up in your mad pace as shirking?

Are you one of those misguided beings who think monotonous plodding is duty and crush out young longings for an occasional matinee or social outing lest you fall in some chimerical duty?

If so, readjust things. Learn to look on these things as "that ounce of prevention" without which smashups are inevitable. It is continual plodding that not only makes life stale, but brings wrinkles and narrow minds.

Do you ever stop to think what a breakdown means? How many of the coveted pleasures or longed for rests could have been had for the doctor's hire?

Occasional flight from the grind is better than skilled specialists to keep one well, which is the sensible modern woman's reading of "that ounce of prevention."

A freak oil well at Findlay, Ohio, produced only salt water for a time, then went back to a regular flow of oil.

DWELLING HOUSE OF MR. ARTHUR BELL, IN DOURO, WAS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Went to Town and Returned to Find His Home in Ruins —Cause of Fire Unknown—Barns Close by Narrowly Escaped Destruction—The Loss is Heavy.

A disastrous fire occurred yesterday afternoon about 2.30 o'clock and as a result the home of Mr. Arthur Bell, in Douro, was entirely destroyed.

The house was mostly composed of elm timber and was constructed after the fashion in which the pioneers built their homes. It was only one story but was of a good size. There was a small kitchen and woodshed at the rear, which was composed of timber and these were also destroyed with their contents.

The house was situated on a hill about half a mile east of the Nassau bridge and is on a farm which is worked by Mr. Bell. There are some large barns about one hundred yards from where the house stood, but fortunately these were not burned, although they were in danger on account of the wind that was blowing. The barns contained a large number of cattle and farm produce and had these been destroyed the loss would have been considerably heavier.

CAUSE OF THE FIRE.

How the fire really started it is not exactly known, but it is supposed to have originated near the chimney. Mr. Bell had gone to town after dinner on business and everything was all right when he left. Mrs. Bell and the children were left at home and the blaze was first noticed by Mrs. Bell who had occasion to go out to the yard to put some clothes on the line and her feelings can be easily imagined when she found the roof of the house all afire. Some men who were working in the woods and at the Nassau dam also noticed the fire and quickly arrived on the scene, but the blaze had gained such headway that all help was ggone of saivng the building. The only water that could be secured was from a pump close to the house, but the heat from the flames made it almost impossible for anyone to pump for any length of time, so all that could be done was to try and save some of the household effects, but the willing workers were also handicapped in this by the terrific heat. Word was sent into town to notify Mr. Bell and fortunately he was soon found and immediately set out for the scend of the conflagration, but by the time he arrived, his home was almost burned to the ground.

ALL THAT WAS SAVED.

Consisted of two chairs, a small table, a sewing machine and a dresser and the loss will be heavy. A large quantity of wood close by narrowly escaped being destroyed, and while the destruction of the house is a hard blow to Mr. Bell, he is thankful that no greater loss resulted. There was only a small insurance carried on the house and although Mr. Bell does not know just what his loss amounts to it will be considerably greater than the amount of insurance. Mrs. Bell and the children were taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. DeLisle a short distance away and Mr. Bell wishes to thank them and others who came so readily to the assistance of his family in their misfortune.

RAISED ROW IN RESTAURANT

But Couple of Unreasonable Young Men Cooled Down When Officer Came

A couple of young men were somewhat boisterous in a local restaurant yesterday. The trouble commenced by their knocking over a bottle of catsup on the table where they were having their meal and they refused to settle with the proprietor for what was coming to him.

The police were called and P. C. Newball responded. The offenders decided to pay rather than take a trip to the police station.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

A Despatch Denied

Toronto, March 27, 1909.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Recently there appeared in your paper a Vancouver despatch regarding the suicide of Mr. J. J. Harrison while in a state of depression, which he claimed was the result of Christian Science treatment by Mr. C. A. Varey. Harrison told the police that Mr. Varey had tried to get him to sign over all his property to the church, and further stated; "Varey brought me up to a stage of mental treatment where it would seem that I had to renounce all my connection with any society or party, either political or religious, also cancel all insurance policies wills and other unnecessary encumbrances."

In a letter just received from Mr. Varey he contradicts entirely the allegations made against him. He says; "There is absolutely no truth in the assertion that I influenced the man to give up his money for any purpose whatever. The Attorney-General has been asked by us to make a thorough investigation."

Evidently the police placed no reliance in Harrison's story, for although he told them he would take his own life if the depression continued, they did nothing to prevent him doing so. The things he says Mr. Varey asked him to do are entirely contrary to the teachings of Christian Science and the practic of Christian Scientists.

Recently a medical bill was introduced in the British Columbia legislature, and through the activity of the Christian Scientists was amended, and the clause tending to restrict their practice cut out. It looks as if the present attempt to discredit Christian Science in Vancouver was an effort to retaliate on the Scientists for their action regarding the bill.

Yours respectfully,
C. R. MUNRO.

Object to Empties

A rather suspicious looking receptacle on one end of which tacked the name of a Hastings hotel keeper was found in the yard behind one of the stores in town yesterday morning inferring that some of the thirsty had been "celebrating" the night before. The only evidence in support of this theory, however, is the empty five gallon keg. It might be well for our village constable to ascertain what right Hastings hotelmen have to send their empties up to Norwood. —Norwood Register.

PALM LEAF CROP IS VERY LIGHT

And Distribution in Churches on Palm Sunday Will Accordingly be Curtailed

A Montreal despatch says;

The distribution of palms in the various Catholic churches throughout Montreal on Palm Sunday will be considerably curtailed this year.

In previous years a conservative estimate places the number of stalks used as being well over the 100,000 mark Owing however, to a shortage in this year's supply, the churches will have to be satisfied with about half their usual quantity. The section of Florida where these palms are grown has lately been visited by abnormally heavy rains which did tremendous damage to the young growing shrubs Following close on the destruction wrought by the rains came the forest fires, which completed the devastation. The wonder is that the Catholic churches of this city have been able to secure any at all as most of the churches in the United States and especially in New York will have to practically do without any. Mr Granger, of Granger Freres, who is a large importer of these palms to Montreal is of the opinion that the shortage here will amount to fully fifteen thousand stalks.

NEW ORGANIST AT ST. LUKE'S CHURCH

Mr. Martin A. Kilpack, a Talented Musician Has Assumed the Position

Mr Martin R. Kilpack has assumed the position of organist and choirmaster of St. Luke's church. Mr. Kilpack who is a son of a clergyman of the Church of England is a graduate of the Guildhall School of Music, London, England, and comes highly recommended as a most talented musician. The former organist, Miss English, resigned her position last Sunday, with a request that it should take effect immediately.

HEALTHY EXPANSION

Canada seems to have reached a point of development where there is substantial appreciation of Canadian magazine effort. The Home Journal announces an increase on June 1st from twenty-eight to forty-four pages, with a number of new departments. Miss Jean Graham, at present on the staff of the Canadian Courier and a staff writer also of the Canadian Magazine takes the editorial management on April 1st and is associating with her a number of the best known Canadian writers. The Home Journal when the proposed changes have been inaugurated will be one of the best of its class on the continent. The April number just issued is bright and attractive as usual and has in addition to its very interesting fiction and household departments a number of special Easter features well worth while. The price is to be advanced with the June number but in the meantime subscriptions are being taken at the old figure.

Mr. Eadie intends following up Y.M.C.A. work. —Lindsay Post.

WEST PETERBORO' ELECTION PROTEST

The cross-petition against Mr. Burnham was served upon him today by Mr. W. S. Davidson of Messrs. Hall, Mudd & Davidson, acting on behalf of Watson & Co. Mr. Stratton's solicitors. It includes the usual charges varying from payments with corrupt intent to intimidation personation, etc. Paragraph No. 21 sets out that the respondent had employed as agents men who had been found guilty by a competent court of corrupt practices within eight years previous. The cross-petition was signed by Mr. J. R. Stratton April 1st, 1909. Mr. Burnham's disqualification is asked for and a declaration of his inability to serve the Crown.

"TRUE IRISH HEARTS" AGAIN

The public appears not to have been quite convinced notwithstanding the admirable acting of the "troupe," that Irish hearts are as true as claimed therefore the same cast including Miss Hallahan, Miss Holmes, Miss Kane and Messrs. Geo. Lynch, Fred Durocher and James O'Brien will repeat the performance at an early date by general request.

HUMAN HEARTS

With all the hue and cry about the immorality of the stage, certain plays of the type of "The Old Homestead," "Shore Acres," "Human Hearts" etc., continue to grow in popularity. Instead of receiving adverse criticisms from the pulpit, the management of "Human Hearts" continually receive letters from leading clergymen throughout the country, praising it for its heart interest and beautiful moral story it tells, making an evening well spent for all who see it. The old adage that "a good man should marry none but a good woman" was never more truly illustrated in fiction than in "Human Hearts". No dramatic author has ever given to the stage a more idyllic character than "Tom Logan," a big whole-souled son of the soil, one of "nature's own noblemen," who has fallen into the snare of a city adventuress and is only saved from ruin and destruction through the prayers of a loving mother, a little child, and the love of a pure, innocent girl, the sweetheart of his boyhood days.

"Human Hearts" will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House next Monday, April 5th. Plan now open.
